"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."

Fran Baker:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket.

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, September 13, 1998 12:45 PM
Subject: REPOST Re soc.religion.bahai - brief quotations

Kent Johnson:

"It turns my stomach that they call themselves a Baha'i Group while doing these things so obviously partisan and consciously unjust."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb61.htm>

Ron House:

"I think the following is a clear case of malicious rejection of an article by the worst of the moderators of soc.religion.bahai."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb53.htm>

Timothy Mulligan:

"(Sigh) Fred, I'm beginning to think you're right about those SRB moderators."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb59.htm>

RobertNik:

"these guys are pompous arseholes IMHO."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb54.htm>

Bruce Burrill:

"What are Baha'i afraid of?"
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb60.htm>

Zute flute:

"Frankly I could not see anything in the letter I wrote which would prompt someone to ask whether or not I am a Baha'i."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb50.htm>

YU ZIR:

"But as an outsider, I can perhaps see the point Fred Glaysher is making, and which point none of SRB's defenders seem to address."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb46.htm>

Matthew Cromer:

"The current moderators regulate the contents--posting articles which they agree with...."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb47.htm>

Melissa Boyer Kafes:

"For me, I have posted a couple of times on soc.religion.bahai and have gotten a couple of nasty emails...."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb44.htm>

Harold Shinsato:

"It seems like there is an oppression over the Baha'i Faith."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb33.htm>

Maryam:

"Firstly, there is nothing in Fred's sig. file that mentions CB material."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb22.htm>

Laeterna:

"To say I was flabberghasted at this type of "moderating" was putting it mildly indeed."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/censored2.htm>

Guy Macon"

"Please explain which portion of the charter the following post violates."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/censored1.htm>

Robin Peters:

"I think you're to be commended for your persistence in the face of consistent censorship."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb43.htm>

jgoldberg:

"I refuse to post on soc.religion.bahai because of the arbitrary and mean-spirited manner of censorship practiced by the moderators. "

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb57.htm>

Many other similar messages may be found on my web site under soc.religion.bahai censorship.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Sunday, September 13, 1998 7:05 PM

Subject: srb commits backbiting (Re: Censorship on SRB)

Upon further reflection, it seems to me this message is tantamount to backbiting on the part of the moderators of soc.religion.bahai since I am denied any possibility of replying to this or any other message on srb.

I have already pointed out the questionable circumstances under which this appeared on srb.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Subject:

Re: Censorship on SRB

Date:

1 Sep 1998 22:35:17 -0400

From:

mclark@tpgi.com.au

Organization:

Newsgroups:

soc.religion.bahai

Date sent: Tue, 01 Sep 98 07:12:43 GMT

>At 04:20 24/08/98 -0400, FG wrote: >Deceit and lies in the name of the Faith are wrong.... And so >is censorship for the same specious reasons....

True. It sounds like you have had some bad experiences in this regard.

I don't know how long you have been associated with the Faith, or how you feel about it at the moment. After 20 years as a Baha'i, I have seen most of what goes down, but I have also become aware that a mechanism exists within the Faith that sooner or later deals with abuses. I believe it is one of the mechanisms referred to in the quote about "there is a power in this cause ... " Many Baha'is are aware of it. The problem with some is that they believe that because they recognise the Cause, they automatically understand it. Situations develop where people, sometimes without realising it, exercise authority which they do not possess. Only the elected have authority, and only then as members of an Assembly, not as individuals. Persons _appointed_ to positions may have responsibilities, but do not have authority. The Faith has no priesthood, but there are a few would-be Mullahs and Cardinals running around within it.

Regards,

Martin Clark

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:23 AM
Subject: fw Ron House Re: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

-----Original Message-----

From: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>
To: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Date: Sunday, September 13, 1998 11:01 PM
Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

>FG wrote:
>>
>> [This is a rough draft only. You may not vote at this time.]
>>

>> REQUEST FOR DISCUSSION (RFD)
>> unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai
>>
>
>Whoops! Spotted another one. Three paragraphs near the >start have a ">" character at the start, which seems to >serve no purpose.
>
>--
>Ron House house@usq.edu.au
>
>Speed bumps are installed in the belief that if a road is >unsafe at 50, we should make it unsafe at 30.
>
>
>-----
>Subscribe, unsubscribe, opt for a daily digest, or start a new e-group >at <https://www.eGroups.com> -- Free Web-based e-mail groups.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:24 AM
Subject: fw Ron House 2 Re: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

-----Original Message-----
From: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Sunday, September 13, 1998 11:04 PM
Subject: Re: [bahai-faith] 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

>FG wrote:
>
>Looks like a small typo, Fred: This:
>
>> As Baha'u'llah taught, a free press has both rights and >> responsibilities. Therefore some Baha'is might fear misuse of >> the facility, especially postings by covenant-Breakers. However, >> Shoghi Effendi has addressed this question:
>>
>> "First, the civil rights of Covenant-breakers must be scrupulously >> upheld."
>> >From a letter written on behalf of the Universal House of Justice >> to a National Spiritual Assembly, October 29, 1974. Lights of >> Guidance, Page: 186.
>
>should be replaced with:
>
>> As Baha'u'llah taught, a free press has both rights and >> responsibilities. Therefore some Baha'is might fear misuse of >> the facility, especially postings by covenant-Breakers. However, >> the Universal House of Justice has addressed this question:
>>
>> "First, the civil rights of Covenant-breakers must be scrupulously >> upheld."
>> -From a letter written on behalf of the Universal House of Justice >> to a National Spiritual Assembly, October 29, 1974. Lights of >> Guidance, Page: 186.
>
>Note two changes above.
>
>--
>Ron House house@usq.edu.au
>
>Speed bumps are installed in the belief that if a road is >unsafe at 50, we should make it unsafe at 30.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:27 AM
Subject: Re: AOL Bahai threats

These were among the threatening messages from Bahais that convinced AOL to remove the fraudulently alleged TOS from my account....

FG wrote in message

<1998090911084500.HAA10771@ladder01.news.aol.com>...
>Baha'is on the AOL Message Boards under Keyword search Bahai are >attempting to employ the same Baahai techniques of intimidation >and insinuation that have been so amply demonstrated by >soc.religion.bahai and a number of Bahais on alt.religion.bahai.
>I include two of their messages here....
>
>FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> See alt.religion.bahai,
>talk.religion.misc, or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>
>
>Subject: Re: Literal-minded Bahai ignorance
>Date: Tue, Sep 8, 1998 14:17 EDT
>From: Ecominer
>Message-id: <1998090818173900.OAA01117@ladder03.news.aol.com>
>
>Thank-you...do you know, or can you discover who this guy's Auxillary Board
for >Protection is? I think it is time to talk to that person about this situation
>and put this very angry, hurt soul into the proper hands????
>
>
>
>Subject: Re: Literal-minded Bahai ignorance
>Date: Tue, Sep 8, 1998 16:05 EDT
>From: Bennachti
>Message-id: <1998090820050400.QAA11750@ladder03.news.aol.com>
>
>Debbie, if you feel that is the right course of action, you can just forward
>the postings to your own Auxiliary Board Member and that person should be able >to take it from there.
>
>Love
>Zaynab
>
>
>No man shall attain the shores of the ocean of true understanding except he be >detached from all that is in heaven and on earth.
> - Bahá'u'lláh -
>
>
>My Bahá'í Faith website: Camphor Fountain
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:31 AM
Subject: Re: On AOL- Re: ARB more harm than good?

kate_mccolloch_bodi@my-dejanews.com wrote in message

<6td0gg$gb3$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
>Interestingly,
>
>I have had a group of Baha'is sitting together over a cup of tea in my living >room discussing how Baha'is can effectively use the media and the internet, >specifically to promote the Faith while at the same time restricting annoying >distractions of detractors and dissidents.

>
>However, in all fairness this was some five years ago. I would assume that >these types of gatherings no longer occur.

Kate, permit me to say, nothing negative intended, that it would just be plain naive to assume such "gatherings no longer occur."
Given the battle over trb, it's quite realistic to believe they occur over the Internet.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

>
>kate
>
>In article <6tbc31$3vh6$1@newssvr04-int.news.prodigy.com>,
> "loriann" <OKOBOJI@prodigy.net> wrote:
>> Frederick,
>>
>> Perhaps you ought to write Oliver Stone (the director) and see if he can't >> come up with a Jim dandy movie including all of your conspiracy theories >> surrounding the newsgroup ARB. I'm sure the movie would be a block buster.
>> Maybe even bigger than Water World by Kevin Costner.
>>
>> Dude, find a different cause before you have a mental breakdown. Life is too >> short.....
>>
>> -Loire
>>
>> FG babbled once again:
>> >This is exactly what's happening on America Online from >> >my observing for more than a month now. The largest ISP >> >is being used and manipulated by Bahais in the very same >> >way as they have approached the interest polls for >> >talk.religion.bahai and as described in "The Bahai technique."
>>
>>
>
>-----== Posted via Deja News, The Leader in Internet Discussion ==----- >https://www.dejanews.com/rg_mkgrp.xp Create Your Own Free Member Forum

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:38 AM
Subject: Re: On AOL- Re: ARB more harm than good?

AOL's removing the TOS from my account ought to be food for thought, I would think, for many....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

loriann wrote in message <6tbc31$3vh6$1@newssvr04-int.news.prodigy.com>...
>Frederick,
>
>Perhaps you ought to write Oliver Stone (the director) and see if he can't >come up with a Jim dandy movie including all of your conspiracy theories >surrounding the newsgroup ARB. I'm sure the movie would be a block buster.
>Maybe even bigger than Water World by Kevin Costner.
>
>Dude, find a different cause before you have a mental breakdown. Life is too
>short.....
>
>-Loire
>
>FG babbled once again:
>>This is exactly what's happening on America Online from >>my observing for more than a month now. The largest ISP >>is being used and manipulated by Bahais in the very same >>way as they have approached the interest polls for >>talk.religion.bahai and as described in "The Bahai technique."
>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 6:41 AM
To: Kent Johnson
Subject: Re: the censorship that wasn't

You might want to look now at what's happened on AOL....

-----Original Message-----

From: Kent Johnson <comp2k@javanet.com>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai
Date: Saturday, September 12, 1998 9:57 PM
Subject: Re: the censorship that wasn't

>If you are interested in real evidence of censorship for no good reason, I >have some. I see no reason to put it here publicly, but it happened and >there is plenty of evidence, at least where it concerns me.

>
>Warm Baha'i Love. --Kent

>
>
>rlittle@nils.com wrote in message <6tceu5$nr$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
>>Dear friends:

>>
>>There has been discussion recently concerning a plot or conspiracy to >cancel
>>email messages to alt.religion.bahai in an attempt to censor vocal critics
>of >>either the Baha'i Faith or some adjunct or agency of that Faith. Some few >>individuals expressed the opinion in very strong and unmistakable language >>that they believed these canceled posts to be the work of Baha'is.

>>
>>Inasmuch as one of the alleged victims of this "plot" has publicly come >>forward...

>>The source of the cancelled emails was not an individual Baha'i, or a >>group of Baha'is, nor was it any agency or arm of the Baha'i Faith.

>

>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 8:14 AM
To: Kate Bodi
Subject: Bennatichi found

I've put the AOL messages on my web site and found two messages from Bennatichi in the process.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL8.htm>
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL9.htm>

For the entire exchange of messages:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

Hope this helps. If appropriate, report them to the TOSGeneral@aol.com!!!

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 8:16 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: fw Barthaman Re: Bahai accusation of TOS on AOL

-----Original Message-----

From: Barthaman@aol.com <Barthaman@aol.com>
To: FG@hotmail.com <FG@hotmail.com>
Cc: Talisman@umich.edu <Talisman@umich.edu>
Date: Saturday, September 12, 1998 11:15 PM
Subject: Re: Fw: AOL removes TOS - Bahai accusation

>Dear Frederick,
>
>Some of us (Baha'is who think like I do) read you loud and clear. You're not >alone,
>obviously, in your observations. We know exactly what you're talking about.
>It's out there. It's true. Juan Cole and Denis MacEoin (both first-class >scholars in my humble >opinion) have said just as much in years past.
>
>Because the Universal House of Justice won't come down from its elitist hill
>top long enough to listen to common sense (too bad they don't have women >members) and because the general Baha'i community has been indoctrinated
from >day-1 not to question religious authority, one will have to reach influential >minds >outside the Faith.
>
>An informed general public will not condone Baha'i institutional abuses of >power, >and will hold Baha'i expansion in check (through both indifference and public >criticism) as long as it's leadership thumbs its nose at the democratic ideals
>this country was founded on. People come to America from around the world
to >experience freedom. Why would they embrace a religion that gives them less

of >it? The Baha'is, apparently, haven't learned anything from the history of the >Mormons, their distant spiritual cousins.
> --Barthaman
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 8:17 AM
Subject: Bahai TOS on AOL now on web site

All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL
can now be found at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 3:27 PM
To: Barthaman@aol.com
Subject: Re: Fw: AOL removes TOS - Bahai accusation

Thanks for your message. I don't receive too many word of encouragement and am grateful for them....

Would you consider recommending me for the Forum Leader (absurd title)? I've applied with AOL but fear the fundamentalists are going have me burned at the stake on this one too....

.....
ubj: Baha'i Faith Forum Application
Date: 98-09-09 15:03:43 EDT
From: FG
To: RBCF Mark
CC: RBCF Admin

Spirituality Forums Volunteer Community Leader Application

(v1.01 - 8/21/98)

CONFIDENTIALITY WILL BE MAINTAINED FOR ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED HEREIN.
APPLICANT ALSO AGREES TO HOLD CONFIDENTIAL ALL INFORMATION LEARNED AS PART
OF THE APPLICATION PROCESS AND, IF ACCEPTED, AS AN AMERICA ONLINE VOLUNTEER
STAFF MEMBER. APPLICATION FOR A VOLUNTEER POSITION IMPLIES PERMISSION IS GRANTED TO RESEARCH YOUR PAST AND RECENT AMERICA ONLINE ACCOUNT HISTORY AND INFORMATION.

~::~::~ Personal Information~::~::~ Required

First name:Frederick
Last name: Glaysher

-----Original Message-----
From: Barthaman@aol.com <Barthaman@aol.com>
To: FG@hotmail.com <FG@hotmail.com>
Cc: Talisman@umich.edu <Talisman@umich.edu>

Date: Saturday, September 12, 1998 11:15 PM
Subject: Re: Fw: AOL removes TOS - Bahai accusation

>Dear Frederick,
>
>Some of us (Baha'is who think like I do) read you loud and clear. You're not >alone,
>obviously, in your observations. We know exactly what you're talking about.
>It's out there. It's true. Juan Cole and Denis MacEoin (both first-class >scholars in my humble >opinion) have said just as much in years past.
>
>Because the Universal House of Justice won't come down from its elitist
hill
>top long enough to listen to common sense (too bad they don't have women >members) and because the general Baha'i community has been indoctrinated
from >day-1 not to question religious authority, one will have to reach influential >minds
>outside the Faith.
>
>An informed general public will not condone Baha'i institutional abuses of >power,
>and will hold Baha'i expansion in check (through both indifference and public >criticism) as long as it's leadership thumbs its nose at the democratic ideals
>this country was founded on. People come to America from around the world
to >experience freedom. Why would they embrace a religion that gives them less
of >it? The Baha'is, apparently, haven't learned anything from the history of
the >Mormons, their distant spiritual cousins.
> --Barthaman
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 3:29 PM
To: Kate Bodi
Subject: Bahai Forum Leader

Kate,

Would you consider recommending me for the Forum Leader (absurd title)? I've applied with AOL but fear the fundamentalists are going have me burned at the stake on this one too....

You're on AOL, right?

.....
ubj: Baha'i Faith Forum Application
Date: 98-09-09 15:03:43 EDT
From: FG
To: RBCF Mark
CC: RBCF Admin

Spirituality Forums Volunteer Community Leader Application

(v1.01 - 8/21/98)

CONFIDENTIALITY WILL BE MAINTAINED FOR ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED HEREIN.
APPLICANT ALSO AGREES TO HOLD CONFIDENTIAL ALL INFORMATION LEARNED AS PART
OF THE APPLICATION PROCESS AND, IF ACCEPTED, AS AN AMERICA ONLINE VOLUNTEER
STAFF MEMBER. APPLICATION FOR A VOLUNTEER POSITION IMPLIES PERMISSION IS GRANTED TO RESEARCH YOUR PAST AND RECENT AMERICA ONLINE ACCOUNT HISTORY AND INFORMATION.

~::~::~ Personal Information~::~::~

Required

First name:Frederick

Last name: Glaysher

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Monday, September 14, 1998 3:46 PM

To: FG

Cc: Ron House

Subject: NEW RELEASE DRAFT

Ron,

Thanks for your honest evaluation. One recent update is now needed. I'm leaving it fairly understated:

"With recent clashes even taking place on America Online, "

You can find the relevant messages now at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

Are the newsgroups you wanted in the RFD okay?

Later, when it's time, can you post the pointers to them?

I feel Frank Baker had plenty of opportunity to get involved if he really wanted to. How do you feel about him? I don't really know anything about him though Fran has been a lot of help. What should we do?

Fred

NEWS RELEASE

For immediate release. . . [or]
For Use the Week of September 20th. . .

Contact: FG (xxx) xxx-xxxx or
FG@hotmail.com

Baha'is Debate Freedom of Speech and Conscience

The third interest poll is beginning for talk.religion.bahai, a proposed unmoderated newsgroup on the part of the Internet known as Usenet. Critics charge members of the Baha'i Faith have opposed its creation now for more than a year and a half because they would not be able to exercise the kind of control they exert over soc.religion.bahai, a moderated newsgroup.

Under the Usenet guidelines for discussion groups, if a newsgroup is moderated, a single moderator or panel of moderators chooses which messages are posted for all subscribers to read. There seems to be a classic struggle between Baha'is and ex-Baha'is of liberal sentiment and the elements of a conservative orthodoxy. With recent clashes even taking place on America Online, both appear ready for another stormy battle on news.groups, the discussion group where the creation of a new forum is always debated.

<<<<

Some critics even go further. Dr. Juan Cole of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, a former Baha'i who withdrew from the Faith after more than twenty years, has asserted there is widespread, pervasive censorship and distortion of information throughout the religion that belies the gentle and tolerant universalism of its Founders. Recently, Dr. Cole has said, "The checks and balances . . . will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without."

This is a formal Request for Discussion (RFD) to create an unmoderated worldwide discussion group called talk.religion.bahai. This is not a Call for Votes (CFV); you cannot vote at this time. Procedural details appear below. All followup discussion should be crossposted to news.groups,alt.religion.bahai.

Newsgroup line:

talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai

Currently, the only newsgroup on the Big 8 heirarchies, which exists specifically for discussion of the Baha'i Faith, is moderated. A need exists for an unmoderated forum, and this proposed newsgroup would meet that need.

From January 17, 1997, the posting of the first proposed RFD, until March 27, 1997, more than 759 messages were posted concerning talk.religion.bahai, 11 messages per day for 70 days.

From April 1, 1997, to September 27, 1997, over 2,863 messages have been posted on alt.religion.bahai from people with highly varying points of view on the Baha'i Faith, resulting in 16 messages per day for 179 days, and 477 messages a month for six months. Since www.dejanews.com does not pick up all postings, an additional conservative 5 percent, roughly 150 messages, have probably been lost from the archive. During this time period, approximately 513 different individuals posted on over 1,200 threads.

From September 28, 1997, to September 11, 1998, over 30,000 messages have been posted to alt.religion.bahai resulting in X messages per day for 331 days and X messages per month for nine months.

These numbers may be verified by searching www.dejanews.com for talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai for the relevant time periods. Please note that despite the poor propagation of the alt.* hierarchy the high rate of posting demonstrates significant interest, justifying the forming of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith on the talk.* hierarchy. It is only reasonable to conclude that the easy accessibility of the talk.* hierarchy will lead to even higher rates of posting by interested people.

As a further indication of interest in an unmoderated newsgroup, it should be noted that the web site "The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience" has had more than 3,000 hits on it since May 8, 1998.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

The proponents intend that talk.religion.bahai will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group soc.religion.bahai, and will provide those without access to alt.religion.bahai, on the less well propagated alt.* hierarchy, the opportunity to participate, especially since many people who voted YES on the first proposal were unable to join in on alt.religion.bahai, their ISPs not carrying the hierarchy. It is anticipated that alt.religion.bahai will evolve along as its users see fit and will complement talk.religion.bahai as an alternative unmoderated newsgroup.

CHARTER: talk.religion.bahai

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. Whilst this allows criticism, including criticism that might be uncomfortable or hurtful to some, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbours by asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question. Talk.religion.bahai also fills the need for the first and only universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. As the Internet is clearly becoming an indispensable part of modern life, such access for those interested in the Baha'i Faith will, in the future, be as important a civil right as the right to free speech in non-electronic forums. Thus talk.religion.bahai is clearly in the spirit of Baha'u'llah's injunctions supporting a free press.

As Baha'u'llah taught, a free press has both rights and responsibilities. Therefore some Baha'is might fear misuse of the facility, especially postings by covenant-Breakers. However, Shoghi Effendi has addressed this question:

"First, the civil rights of Covenant-breakers must be scrupulously upheld."

From a letter written on behalf of the Universal House of Justice to a National Spiritual Assembly, October 29, 1974. Lights of Guidance, Page: 186.

Further, it is permitted for Baha'is to read and post material in an open Internet forum:

"In general, the House of Justice has no objection to Baha'is' participating in public, unmoderated discussions about the Faith, whether those discussions take place in person or through some form of electronic communication."
Department of the Secretariat, DATE: 14 October 1997 U.S.A.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette and voting procedure in their use of this newsgroup and during its creation.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not specifically relevant to the Baha'i Faith is strongly discouraged. Also discouraged are personal messages, large ASCII graphics, binaries, special-format files, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely commercial nature.

Crossposting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers are encouraged to redirect followups to reduce excessive crossposting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

As is true for other groups devoted to discussing a particular religion, including soc.religion.bahai, the talk.religion.bahai newsgroup is not an official organ of any institutional faith.

END CHARTER.

PROCEDURE:

An instructive passage by Russ Allbery might fruitfully be considered by all:

"There is no official 'list of acceptable reasons for voting'; Nothing of the sort is enforced. There's no way of knowing why people vote the way they do. There is, however, a general consensus that certain patterns of voting constitute abuse of the system. Block voting on religious, cultural, ethnic, or political grounds is one of the things that is frowned upon. It is unlikely that even extreme block voting would cause a result to be overturned, but it's practically assured that block voting will earn an extremely bad reputation for the group doing the block voting. In other words, yes, the Baha'i could vote down the newsgroup en masse and be successful. This would, however, also earn the Faith a reputation (fairly or no) amongst those people who followed the proposal as a religion that advocates censorship. I think it's in the best interest of Baha'is and the Baha'i Faith to avoid that."

The process of creating newsgroups is twofold. First is the RFD stage, when someone writes a Request for Discussion (RFD) outlining the purpose of the proposed group. The RFD appears in news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, and other relevant discussion groups. Anyone may publicly comment on the RFD in news.groups for a three-week period. During the discussion phase, proponents may modify the RFD in response to suggestions from posters on news.groups.

The second stage is the Call for Votes (CFV) stage. The proposal must pass a Usenet-wide vote with a 2/3 supermajority -- and at least 100 more votes in favor than against -- to be created. Anyone with an e-mail address may cast a ballot. A neutral votetaker from the Usenet Volunteer Votetakers (UVV) conducts all CFV's.

This RFD attempts to comply with the Usenet newsgroup creation guidelines outlined in "How to Create a New Usenet Newsgroup" and "Writing an RFD" and available for perusal on news.groups or news.announce.newgroups. Please refer to these documents if you have further questions about the process.

DISTRIBUTION:

This RFD has been posted to the following newsgroups:
news.announce.newgroups, news.groups, soc.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc, soc.rights.human and the following three mailing lists:

Talisman
Subscribe via: jsgreen@umich.edu

Bahai Studies
Subscribe via: major@johnco.cc.ks.us

h-Bahai h-Bahai@h-net.msu.edu
Subscribe jrcole@umich.edu

Pointers will appear in the following newsgroups:

soc.religion.unitarian-univ, soc.religion.eastern,
soc.religion.gnosis, soc.religion.hindu,
soc.religion.paganism, soc.religion.quaker,
soc.religion.sikhism, soc.religion.scientology, soc.religion.vaishnava, talk.religion.buddhism, talk.religion.newage, alt.religion.islam, alt.religion,
uk.religion.misc, uk.religion.interfaith,
uk.religion.other-faiths, news.admin.censorship,
alt.atheism, alt.atheism.moderated,
alt.religion.christian.biblestudy, alt.religion.christian.last-days, alt.religion.christian.roman-catholic, aus.religion.christian,
alt.religion.christian.pentecostal, alt.religion.vaisnava, alt.individualism, talk.philosophy.misc, alt.activism, talk.atheism, talk.philosophy.humanism, talk.philosophy.misc,
alt.philosophy.debate

And to the following seven Bahai-only listservs:

Subscribe via bahai-request@bccca.org
Baha'i Campus Forum (BCF)
Baha'i Discuss (Discuss)
Baha'i Singles (Singles)
Baha'i Teachers (Teachers)
Baha'i Women Converse (Women)
Baha'i Youth (Youth - aimed at the 12-18 age group)
Baha'i Announce (Announce)

Proponent: FG

Proponent: Ron House

Proponent: Fran Baker

List Site: <https://www.findmail.com/list/bahai-faith/>
To unsubscribe, send to bahai-faith-unsubscribe@makelist.com

FREE group e-mail lists at <https://www.findmail.com>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 6:57 AM
Subject: Re: On soc.religion.bahai - brief quotations

I would appreciate help on determining who this person is who is posting in my name.

Here are the headers for the person who posted the message below and stole my identity:

Path:
spln!extra.newsguy.com!lotsanews.com!newsfeed.direct.ca!cpk-news-hub1.bbnplanet.com!news.bbnplanet.com!howland.erols.net!news.alt.net!netroplex.com!usen et
From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc
Subject: On soc.religion.bahai - brief quotations
Date: 15 Sep 1998 06:25:13 GMT
Lines: 67
Message-ID: <6tl189$5vu$bt@207.212.27.40>
References: <6ss9qm$4cr$1@clarknet.clark.net>
NNTP-Posting-Host: 207.212.27.40
Xref: spln alt.religion.bahai:8688 talk.religion.misc:200030

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

FG wrote in message <6tl189$5vu$bt@207.212.27.40>...
>Not posted by me - but I have complained to netroplex.com and the guy
>WILL be caught, named and thrown off the server
>
>On 14 Sep 1998 05:30:06 GMT, ipdress7@hotmail.com (Nezumi Kozo) wrote:
>
>>In article <eCryaAC39GA.220@upnetnews03>,
>> "Tony Nitzke" <tony_nitzke@email.msn.com> wrote:
>>
>>
>>
>>> >Because Jesus could endure anything, but the absense of his Father's love.
>>
>>
>>> Couldn't Jesus handle spiritual ups and downs? I've had to. Is he less >>> than me? Haven't you had moments of God's love followed by moments without?
>>> Were you able to handle it without crying tears for yourself?
>>

>>
>>I'm not talking about some 'simple' struggle. I'm not really even talking >>about struggle at all. I'm talking about anguish. Horrible and tormenting >>anguish. It is an anguish that you as a sinful man could never understand.
>>
>>The Lord Jesus Christ, who never sinned, who only knew love and goodness, >>became sin for his children, and suffered the wrath of holiness for that sin, >>that was undeserved and yet accepted in full on behalf of all humanity.
>>
>>On the cross, Jesus cried "My God, why hast thou forsaken me ?"
>>In other words "My Father, why have you left me ?" God the Father had >>left Jesus, because Jesus was paying the penalty of all sin, on behalf of >>all mankind. Alone. Totally and utterly alone. But God had not left Jesus >>from the moment of the cross. No, this abandonment began the night that >>Jesus was calling to his Father in the garden, with no response.
>>
>>It is for this reason that Jesus prays the same prayer three times.
Because
>>God has not answered Jesus. It is for this reason also that Jesus is praying >>with sweating blood. Because he is so seriously and intently calling on
the >>Father that has abandoned him.
>>
>>Jesus foretold that he would be three days and three nights in the 'heart
of >>the Earth' . Yet we can count that Jesus was crucified on Friday and arose >>from the grave on Sunday morning. This would be three "days" but only two >>"nights". The solution to this lies in the evening before. The night he was >>in the garden praying. To be "In the heart of the Earth" is a metaphor for >>being under the judgement of God. When Jesus is "In the heart of the Earth" >>for three days and three nights, it means that Jesus will endure the wrath
of >>God's judgement against sin for three days and three nights. This sin >>judgement began the evening of Jesus' prayer in the garden (hence, no >>response to his prayers) and continued until he rose on Sunday morning.
>>
>>It is one thing to endure God's absence when you know in your heart that you >>deserve it and have yourself abandoned God many times, yet quite another
to >>endure Judgement and separation from God when you have done no wrong, and >>when the love of God had been consistent throughout eternity.
>>
>>Many martyrs have indeed been tortured and killed for the cause of God, yet
>>none but Jesus ever endured that suffering totally alone. The love of Christ
>>for his flock is beyond human comprehension.
>>
>>--
>>CRAIG MAXIM EX-MOONIES PAGE
>>Click Here
>>
>>-----== Posted via Deja News, The Leader in Internet Discussion ----- >>https://www.dejanews.com/rg_mkgrp.xp Create Your Own Free Member Forum
>>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 7:01 AM
Subject: Re: Seriously scrambled messages

A server error can't be doing this. It must be intentional, given the note on the message I've attempted to report to abuse@ clark.net or whoever.

Roger Reini wrote in message <35FE2C56.3A7B8EC2@wwnet.net>...
>There are some seriously scrambled messages currently (9-15, 6 AM ET) on >alt.religion.bahai. They seem to have the following headers in common:
>
>
> Message-ID:
> <6t1186$5vu$br@207.212.27.40>
> References:
> <6ss9qm$4cr$1@clarknet.clark.net>
> NNTP-Posting-Host:
> 207.212.27.40
>
>
>For the record, I did not post the two messages attributed to me around >this period, and the same is likely true about the others.
>
>Roger (rreini@wwnet.net)
><https://fp-www.wwnet.net/~rreini/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 7:19 AM
To: FG
Subject: Wendy1

Subject: Re: AOL removal of Bahai inspired TOS
Date: Mon, Sep 14, 1998 21:56 EDT
From: WScott1995
Message-id: <1998091501562200.VAA16035@ladder03.news.aol.com>

Fred,

This is really interesting. First, you drive everyone up the wall with repetitive announcements of your anti-Baha'i website, then you pout about their reactions and put all their attempts to have you obey the TOS rules on that website to show how nasty the Baha'is are. Well, I have some advice for you:

Get a life! You are in serious need of one. How about some counselling? Or maybe just a cup of tea and a good book and chill out! You are going to end up with some serious regrets (if not an ulcer) if you don't deal with your negative and destructive tendencies. I'm very sorry you are this way. The Baha'is need to pray for you so you can be happy. After all, "if we are not happy in this day, for what day are we waiting?" Do you really think trying to destroy the reputations of the Baha'is will make you happy? Or even that it will work? People can see right through your attempts, you know. It is a fruitless exercise. I hope you will seriously consider the consequences of your actions, both in this life and the next.

Love and peace, Wendy-----<-@

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 7:30 AM
To: Barthaman@aol.com
Subject: Re: FG for forum leader...

Just email the AOL Administration for the RBCF (not quite sure what that is).

CC: RBCF Admin@aol.com

Usually, I'm against casting pearls before swine, but many Bahais constitute a special group of pigs I can no longer tolerate....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

-----Original Message-----

From: Barthaman@aol.com <Barthaman@aol.com>
To: FG@HOTMAIL.COM <FG@HOTMAIL.COM>
Cc: Talisman@umich.edu <Talisman@umich.edu>
Date: Sunday, September 13, 1998 9:10 PM
Subject: Re: FG for forum leader...

>Frederick, you'd make as good a forum leader as anyone I know of.
Certainly,
>I'll recommend you. Who do I need to contact? (About that burning at the stake >idea, I can't quite comment right now because my own pant legs are on fire!)
>
>I think the Baha'is (your critics) should lighten up and give you a >break--they don't recognize your fine talents and what they're losing. Why do >they prefer you as their enemy when being friends is a whole lot better for >the blood pressure? I see a lot of myself in you. If I could speak to myself >as another person, I'd say: "Don't waste your precious life serving people who >don't appreciate you and who don't make you happy." Life is too short. But >since you've already heard all of that before, godspeed.
>
>Warmest regards, Barthaman.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 7:36 AM
To: Fran Baker
Cc: Frank Baker
Subject: news release & Frank....

Frank,

Are you still interested in serving as a proponent?

Revised news release rough draft below, with a slight allusion to what Bahais have just attempted on AOL....

NEWS RELEASE

For immediate release. . . [or]
For Use the Week of September 20th. . .

Contact: FG (xxx) xxx-xxxx or
FG@hotmail.com

Baha'is Debate Freedom of Speech and Conscience

The third interest poll is beginning for talk.religion.bahai, a proposed unmoderated newsgroup on the part of the Internet known as Usenet. Critics charge members of the Baha'i Faith have opposed its creation now for more than a year and a half because they would not be able to exercise the kind of control they exert over soc.religion.bahai, a moderated newsgroup.

Under the Usenet guidelines for discussion groups, if a newsgroup is moderated, a single moderator or panel of moderators chooses which messages are posted for all subscribers to read. There seems to be a classic struggle between Baha'is and ex-Baha'is of liberal sentiment and the elements of a conservative orthodoxy. With recent clashes even taking place on America Online, both appear ready for another stormy battle on news.groups, the discussion group where the creation of a new forum is always debated.

Some critics even go further. Dr. Juan Cole of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, a former Baha'i who withdrew from the Faith after more than twenty years, has asserted there is widespread, pervasive censorship and distortion of information throughout the religion that belies the gentle and tolerant universalism of its Founders. Recently, Dr. Cole has said, "The checks and balances . . . will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without."

A poet and literary critic who remains a Baha'i after more than two decades of membership, FG, one of the proponents of talk.religion.bahai, has developed a web site, "The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience," documenting numerous instances of interference with free speech by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai and the Baha'i Administration: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

Whatever the outcome of the third interest poll, the more than 30,000 messages posted to alt.religion.bahai, a less accessible newsgroup than the one wanted, shows Baha'is and others have a lot to say on the matter!

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 7:39 AM
To: support@extra.newsguy.com
Subject: Fw: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

Something is seriously wrong with many, many messages being all mixed up. Is it originating at newsguy.com?

I include all the headers to help you figure it out:

Path:
spln!extra.newsguy.com!lotsanews.com!Cabal.CESspool!bofh.vszbr.cz!howland.erols.net!news.alt.net!netroplex.com!usenet
From: John Noland <dno543@airmail.net>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc
Subject: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai
Date: 15 Sep 1998 06:25:10 GMT
Lines: 21
Message-ID: <6tl186$5vu$br@207.212.27.40>
References: <6ss9qm$4cr$1@clarknet.clark.net>
NNTP-Posting-Host: 207.212.27.40
Xref: spln alt.religion.bahai:8675 talk.religion.misc:200022

-----Original Message-----
From: John Noland <dno543@airmail.net>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc
Date: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 2:25 AM
Subject: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

>In article <35f725c7.183268556@news.thegrid.net>, >AGENTQ@please.stop.breeding (Soyed Pants) wrote:
>
>> She has no point Susan. She's obviously too damn stupid to look around >> and realize she's in an overcrowded world. Another one who probably >> lives a quality life but has no concern for the conditions others live >> in.
>
>Unlike Soyled Pants who has great concern only for her pocket book and creature >comforts.
>
>To whom "overcrowding" means there might be not enough of something for her.
>
>Soyled Pants, who say's "she doesn't hate kids", as if we fabricated her coments >to make her look bad. All the while she refers to my kids or your kids as >"your brats".
>
>Soyled Pants, who's single note song is "why should you get a tax break >for contributing to this over crowded world", yet is too wimpy and self >centered to make a real contribution to the betterment of others.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:24 PM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: ARB more harm than good?

This is another instances of someone stealing my identity or however you wish to see it. I don't find it amusing.

netroplex.com has notified me that they have deleted his account.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Path:
spln!extra.newsguy.com!lotsanews.com!su-news-hub1.bbnplanet.com!news.bbnplan et.com!newsfeed.wli.net!newspeer.monmouth.com!news.lightlink.com!news.alt.ne t!netroplex.com!usenet
From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc
Subject: ARB more harm than good?
Date: 15 Sep 1998 06:25:26 GMT
Lines: 25
Message-ID: <6tl18m$5vu$ca@207.212.27.40>
References: <6ss9qm$4cr$1@clarknet.clark.net>
NNTP-Posting-Host: 207.212.27.40
Xref: spln alt.religion.bahai:8691 talk.religion.misc:200032

FG wrote in message <6tl18m$5vu$ca@207.212.27.40>...

>> Can Mormons be Mormons without >> believing in Jaredites, etc?

>>
>> Doug

>
>
>
>Can Christians and Jews be Christians >and Jews without believing that Moses >personally stood on the plains of Moab and >delivered the word in the Book of Deuteronomy >to the Children of Israel? If "no" what about >all the excellent biblical scholarship from >learned Christians and Jews who see the work >as the product of the age of Jeremiah? If >"yes" what about Jesus' quotes from the >book?

>
>Maybe, just maybe, there's something of >a parallel between the Israelite restoration >under King Josiah and the coming forth of >Deuteronomy -- and -- (fill in the blank)
>
>Unka Dale >who has yet to meet a Jaredite
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:26 PM
Subject: Re: Help Someone elses post is sent with my name - HOW?

More "Bahai love" in practice?

Fran Baker wrote in message <6tm43e$1fa$1@chaos.crhc.uiuc.edu>...
>dooltracy@aol.com (Dool Tracy) writes:
>
>>THIS POST IS NOT FROM ME!!!!
>>THIS POST IS NOT FROM ME!!!!
>
>>How did this post get posted with my signature name????
>
>>How can this be done???? Is this some some sort mistake????
>>The belowpost was sent under 'Politicas and th faith' a therea started by me.
>>The below posts dont contain anything Ive written however.
>>How?
>
>>Dool Tracy
>
>This just happened to me, too, although the full email address was >not the same, just some of it and the name on the post.
>Pretty creepy. Someone is making trouble/noise, maybe to >prove how ugly an unmoderated newsgroup can be.
>
>--Fran

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:30 PM
Subject: netroplex.com NUT

Obviously, not a Bahai, it would appear?

-----Original Message-----

From: Policy Manager <abuse@netroplex.com>
To: paul M <ipcress7@hotmail.com>; kenb@nidlink.com <kenb@nidlink.com>;
Anton Hein <ahein@xs4all.nl>; jw_eiler@bellsouth.net <jw_eiler@bellsouth.net>; Searles O'Dubhain <odubhain@mindspring.com>;
H4P1A3S1@aol.com <H4P1A3S1@aol.com>; landis.ragon@ibm.net
<landis.ragon@ibm.net>; Gul Agha <agha@cs.uiuc.edu>; Doug Gilliland
<doug@idt.net>; Ken Stoltzfus <kenstoltz@erols.com>; Nidiffer <wnidiffe@bcpl.net>; Empath <empath@skipper.com>; Dawn Reeder <astalis@epsi.net>; Nick S Bensema <nickb@primenet.com>; Roy Johnson <royjohns@hotmail.com>; Ananda das (ISKCON Victoria, B.C.)

<ananda@coastnet.com>; ebear <ebear@direct.ca>; Jeremiah McAuliffe <alimhaq@city-net.com>; Gregory Gyetko <ggyetko@newbridge.com>; diana@n1.net
<diana@n1.net>; Henrik Nilsson <mrmagoo@hem.passagen.se>; Khurram Muhammad <khurram@ecn.purdue.edu>; Gary L King <Oreocat@ETINTERNET.NET>; Mike Spurgeon <mike@spurgeon.net>; Jim Cheesman <mogrim@arrakis.es>; Glen <gft@pacificcoast.net>; Mike Dodd <mdodd@shore.net>; Rick Ellis
<ellis@ftel.net>; Kenneth C. Sherwood <unique@ptd.net>; Matz Bjurstr-m <matz@email.msn.com>; Richard van den Berg <R.vandenBerg@inter.NL.net>;
Oliver Osswald <osswald@mail.com>; John C. 'Buck' Field <operative@applink.net>; Rich <rsmith@aloha.net>; FG <FG@hotmail.com>; David Migicovsky <david@showbuzznet.com>; Darryl L.
Pierce <mcpiarais@usa.net>; Don Kresch <dkresch@execpc.com>; Mark W Brehob <brehob@cse.msu.edu>; Barry T. Dallmann <oddinsgothi@email.msn.com>;
Cornell, David da Silva <CornellD@gtlaw.com>; nurban@vt.edu <nurban@vt.edu>;
Craig Bratcher <jqpublic@netnitco.net>; Rev. Mike Bugal <revmikeb@mindspring.com>; dbgrap@cy-net.net <dbgrap@cy-net.net>;
MariZap@aol.com <MariZap@aol.com>; Thomas R Scudder <tomscud@umich.edu>;
Alan M Dunsmuir <alan@moonrake.demon.co.uk>; Richard Menninger <rem@dante.mh.lucent.com>; Jim McCulloch (by way of Jim McCulloch <ifza600@ccwf.cc.utexas.edu>) <mcculloch@mail.utexas.edu>; Brian J Goggin, Wordwrights, T/F + 353 61 377057 <bjg@wordwrights.ie>; Verre, Leah <leahv@humongous.com>; Skitt <skitt1@rocketmail.com>; Peter <peter@the-upper-room.net>; lshkim@netroplex.com <lshkim@netroplex.com>
Date: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 2:35 PM
Subject: USENET Forgeries

>To all USENET Forgery Victims,
>
>We have identified the user and canceled the service. I called the user >and the phone number is not valid. I assume that the name and the address >are fake, too. As an ISP, we have ZERO tolerance for SPAMMERS. We >apologize for the problem that the user has caused, but we also are a >victim. (We've gotten tons of e-mail regarding this.) It took us a while >to track who the user was since the user was also posting messages using >other e-mail addresses from our users. You won't see any more forgeries >through our network.
>
>
>
>sincerely,
>
>Laurent Kim >Policy Manager >abuse@netroplex.com
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:33 PM
Subject: Re: AOL Bahai threats

All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL
can now be found at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Jules Joubert wrote in message <6tm3oj$3f5$1@news.worldonline.nl>...
>Dear Robert,
>
>Thank you for your opinion. My feelings exactly. But I was wondering what >problem Frederick has or sees.
>So I am asking Frederick for his opinion and try to understand his >position. This does not mean that I agree.
>
>With regards,

>Jules Joubert
>
>rlittle@nils.com wrote in message <6tkeq5$d0u$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
>>Dear Jules:
>>
>>What is needed, in my opinion, is a return to the Writings.
>>
>>What would 'Abdul-Baha' do? What would He say?
>>
>>I think that the Baha'i Writings offer clear guidance in how to behave >towards >>other human beings. I think that the Baha'i Writings also offer very clear >>guidance in problem solving.
>>.....
>>.....
>>.....
>>Do we respond with love, or with bitterness?
>>
>>With respect,
>>
>>Robert A. Little
>>
>
>
>
>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:35 PM
Subject: Re: ARB more harm than good?

All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL
can now be found at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

RMckin6046 wrote in message
<1998091500174100.UAA26624@ladder01.news.aol.com>...
>Kate:
>
>Perhaps I was responding more to Fred's response to your post than I was to >your actual post. There is a tendency here on this newsgroup to see the worst >possible explanation for one's behavior... especially if one is a Baha'i
and >not a cynic. And, I think that perhaps I am feeling a little defensive on >behalf of my AOL friends. I will revisit your post with a more open mind
and >try to read it without the responses coloring my understanding.
>
>In the meantime, we should not be surprised at any number of differences of >opinion. The fact is that this newsgroup can be quite contentious, and more >than a few of us can be judgmental of others' opinions.... not to mention >sarcastic in tone. I think that a reasonable person who does not value the >free-for-all atmosphere can believe that ARB does more harm to teaching the >Faith than it does good. Please, do not mistake that for my opinion. I think >that ARB and SRB and other avenues of discussion and approach all fulfill >reasonable and ultimately helpful ends.
>
>My remark about approaching others with understanding and humility was not >directed solely or particularly at you. It would be good advice for those who >were in the chat room that you visited as well as those of us here on ARB.

My >point there is that we often approach others with pre-conceived notions of >their opinions and immediately question their motivations. [Did this not >happen to you... maybe?] I am guilty of this, and I think it is obvious that >others here are too.
>
>Thanks for your kind reply.
>

>Richard

>-----
>Dr Richard A McKinley
>Fayetteville NC USA
>RMckin6046@aol.com

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:40 PM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: ARB more harm than good?

All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL
can now be found at
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

RMckin6046 wrote in message
<1998091418084000.OAA06037@ladder03.news.aol.com>...
>Gee, Thanks! Fred. Let's make real sure all the non-Baha'is at AOL central >know what horrible "loving" people we really are.

>
>Now what exactly did these loving Baha'is do? Let's see, they "seemed nervous" >at Kate's "few simple honest questions." Despite their nervousness, "they >finally obliged" Kate in answering her questions. Some left the chat room >instead of participating in the Q&A session desired by Kate. Someone -- quite >horribly -- exercised free speech and expressed "their [own] opinion... ARB >does more harm than good."

>
>Now, what TOS violations are described in Kate's post? Did they attack her >personally? Did someone use profanity? Did some one call her names?
Where >was the violation of AOL's TOS [Terms of Service]. By forwarding this >complaint to TOSGeneral and encouraging Kate to report the e-addresses, all
you >have really accomplished is to reveal yourself to TOSGeneral. Crying "wolf" >when there is no wolf will almost certainly backfire. Good going! Keep up
the >good work!

>
>Richard

>
> >Incidentally, I've forwarded Kate's message to >>TOSGeneral@aol.com and advise others who have experienced >>such "Bahai love" to contact them too.
>snip
>> I urge you >>>to reciprocate and contact the TOSGeneral@aol.com immediately.
>>>If you can remember the Bahais involved and their addresses, you >>>should pass that along to him or her too. One or all of them might >>>very well be the same Bahais who are trying to blackball me on >>>AOL!

>>>
>>>FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
>>><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
>>>talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>>>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>></PRE></HTML>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:49 PM
Subject: Re: Censorship at alt.religion.bahai

K. Paul Johnson wrote in message <35fe6f1b.0@vlinvr>...
>Richard Schaut (RSSchaut@email.msn.com) wrote:
>:
>: There's a rather clear principle of justice, Mr. Johnson, a principle that I
>: think you may well have forgotten in your fervor and your desire to be >: considered "liberal" and "free-minded". That principle is: people are >: innocent until proven guilty.

AOL has clearly found the Bahais GUILTY as charged....
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

>Johnson wrote:
>If that principle were followed by Baha'i administration and >individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I >would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i >affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the >preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling >dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan >Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've >"got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some >awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not >character assassination by innuendo, what is?

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 3:55 PM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com; Kent Johnson Subject: Re: the censorship that wasn't

Kent,

In this context, be sure to compare what Bahais have just done on AOL:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Kent Johnson wrote in message <6tf8sh$7bd$1@as4100c.javanet.com>...
>If you are interested in real evidence of censorship for no good reason, I >have some. I see no reason to put it here publicly, but it happened and >there is plenty of evidence, at least where it concerns me.
>
>Warm Baha'i Love. --Kent
>
>
>rlittle@nils.com wrote in message <6tceu5$nfr$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
>>Dear friends:
>>
>>There has been discussion recently concerning a plot or conspiracy to >cancel
>>email messages to alt.religion.bahai in an attempt to censor vocal critics
>of >>either the Baha'i Faith or some adjunct or agency of that Faith. Some few >>individuals expressed the opinion in very strong and unmistakable language >>that they believed these canceled posts to be the work of Baha'is.
>>
>>Inasmuch as one of the alleged victims of this "plot" has publicly come >>forward...
>>The source of the cancelled emails was not an individual Baha'i, or a >>group of Baha'is, nor was it any agency or arm of the Baha'i Faith.
>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 6:09 AM
Subject: Re: Bahai TOS on AOL now on web site

I think of John Milton's sonnet "On the New Forcers of Conscience
under the Long Parliament," especially its final line:

"New Presbyter is but Old Priest writ Large."

Given the techniques of Bahais on AOL, the inescapable
conclusion must read:

"New Bahai is but old Mullah writ Large."

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

FG wrote in message <6tj52t$1d7@news1.newsguy.com>...
>All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL

>can now be found at
><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>
>
>FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
>talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 6:12 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: Censorship at alt.religion.bahai

New Bahai is but old Mullah writ Large.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 6:26 AM
Subject: Srb Bahais' solution - censor EVERYTHING & EVERYBODY! (Re: Signatures on SRB)

New Bahai is but old Mullah writ Large....

After having censored and suppressed any posts from me
for more than three and a half months now, the "moderators" of soc.religion.bahai, in their scintillating wisdom, have come up with what has to be one of the most laughable "policies" on Usenet.... Their timing ought to be carefully noted by observers....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

-----Original Message-----

From: srb-mods@bccca.org <srb-mods@bccca.org>
Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai
Date: Monday, September 14, 1998 1:59 AM Subject: Moderator's Notice

>Moderators' Notice:

>
>As some signature files contain advertising, which is against the >charter for this newsgroup, the moderators have decided that only a >subscriber's name and a return e-mail address will be allowed in >signatures. Longer signatures will be truncated.
>

>
>
Roger Reini wrote in message <35fcfb6e.222489238@news.newsguy.com>...
>It has just been announced on soc.religion.bahai that the only >signatures permitted will be those with only a name and e-mail >address. No URL's. This is because some signatures contained >advertising, which violates the SRB charter. Longer signatures will >be truncated.
>
>Since this applies to every participant, Fred or anyone else can no >longer claim that they are being singled out for an inappropriate >signature.
>
>Roger (rreini@wwnet.net)
><https://fp-www.wwnet.net/~rreini/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 6:37 AM
Subject: Re: fw Juan Cole Re: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology

Alexander Hamilton & James Madison, The Federalist Papers:

"Why has government been instituted at all? Because the passions of men will not conform to the dictates of reason and justice, without constraint."

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

FG wrote in message
<1998090909522700.FAA11217@ladder03.news.aol.com>...
>Date: Fri, 04 Sep 1998 02:08:01 -0400
>To: talisman@umich.edu
>From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu> Save Address Block Sender
>Cc: bahai-faith@makelist.com
>In-Reply-To: <v01540b02b2150f5723f2@[139.80.53.29]>
>Mime-Version: 1.0
>Content-Type: text/plain; charset="iso-8859-1"
>Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable
>Subject: Re: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology
>Reply Reply All Forward Delete Previous Next Close
>
>
>
>Someone asked where Shoghi Effendi spoke of the administrative order being >mutilated without a Guardian. It is World Order of Baha'u'llah p. 148:
>
>"An attempt, I feel, should at the present juncture be made to explain the >character and functions of the twin pillars that support this mighty >Administrative Structure--the institutions of the Guardianship and of the >Universal House of Justice. To describe in their entirety the diverse >elements that function in conjunction with these institutions is beyond the >scope and purpose of this general exposition of the fundamental verities of >the Faith. To define with accuracy and minuteness the features, and to >analyze exhaustively the nature of the relationships which, on the one >hand, bind together these two fundamental organs of the Will of
>'Abdu'l-Bahá and connect, on the other, each of them to the Author of the >Faith and the Center of His Covenant is a task which future generations >will no doubt adequately fulfill. My present intention is to elaborate >certain salient features of this scheme which, however close we may stand >to its colossal structure, are already so clearly defined that we find it >inexcusable to either misconceive or ignore. 13 It should be stated, at the >very outset, in clear and unambiguous language, that these twin >institutions of the Administrative Order of Bahá'u'lláh should be regarded >as divine in origin, essential in their functions and complementary in >their aim and purpose. Their common, their fundamental object is to insure >the continuity of that divinely-appointed authority which flows from the >Source of our Faith, to safeguard the unity of its followers and to >maintain the integrity and flexibility of its teachings. Acting in >conjunction with each other these two inseparable institutions administer >its affairs, coordinate its activities, promote its interests, execute its >laws and defend its subsidiary institutions. Severally, each operates >within a clearly defined sphere of jurisdiction; each is equipped with its >own attendant institutions--instruments designed for the effective >discharge of its particular responsibilities and duties. Each exercises, >within the limitations imposed upon it, its powers, its authority, its >rights and prerogatives. These are neither contradictory, nor detract in >the slightest degree from the position which each of these institutions >occupies. Far from being incompatible or mutually destructive, they >supplement each other's authority and functions, and are permanently and >fundamentally united in their aims."

>
>The uhj tries to interpret this passage away by pointing out that the >Guardianship operated just fine without a house of justice, so obviously >the house of justice can operate without a living Guardian. Moreover, the >lack of a living guardian does not detract from the fact that the >guardianship did exist at one point, leaving a great deal of guidance.

>
>The problem is that the Guardian did think it essential that a house of >justice come to be asap, and he constantly put things off or made rulings >provisional upon their future acceptance. Obviously, this schema cannot >work the other way around--the uhj cannot put things off or rule only >provisionally on issues in hopes of a future guardian arising, since there >can be no further guardians. Moreover, it is also clear from his diction >that he felt that key checks and balances in the Baha'i system were >provided by a living Guardian.

>
>On pp. 154-155 of World Order of Baha'u'llah, Shoghi Effendi continues,
>
>"The hereditary authority which the Guardian is called upon to exercise, >the vital and essential functions which the Universal House of Justice >discharges, the specific provisions requiring its democratic election by >the representatives of the faithful--these combine to demonstrate the truth >that this divinely revealed Order, which can never be identified with any >of the standard types of government referred to by Aristotle in his works, >embodies and blends with the spiritual verities on which it is based the >beneficent elements which are to be found in each one of them. The admitted >evils inherent in each of these systems being rigidly and permanently >excluded, this unique Order, however long it may endure and however >extensive its ramifications, cannot ever degenerate into any form of >despotism, of oligarchy, or of demagoguery which must sooner or later corrupt >the machinery of all man-made and essentially defective political >institutions."

>
>Shoghi Effendi is referring to Aristotle's division of government into rule >by the one, rule by the few, and rule by the many. Aristotle thought each >of these forms of government, in turn, had a virtuous and corrupt form.
>Rule of the one is ideally a virtuous monarchy, but it could deteriorate >into despotism. Rule of the few is ideally a noble aristocracy, but it >could deteriorate into oligarchy (we would say a junta). Rule of the many >is ideally a just Republic or Polity that protects the rights of >minorities; but it could deteriorate into demagoguery and a tyranny of the >majority.

>
>Shoghi Effendi was saying that the Baha'i system had all three elements:
>rule of the one was the Guardianship, rule of the few was the Hands (?), >and rule of the many was the elected officers of the houses of justice >(including NSAs and LSAs).

>Now, according to Aristotle, the rule of the many, i.e., the rule of the >houses of justice, was liable to deteriorate into demagoguery and the >>Date: Fri, 04 Sep 1998 02:08:01 -0400

>>To: talisman@umich.edu
>>From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu> Save Address Block Sender
>>Cc: bahai-faith@makelist.com
>>In-Reply-To: <v01540b02b2150f5723f2@[139.80.53.29]>
>>Mime-Version: 1.0
>>Content-Type: text/plain; charset="iso-8859-1"
>>Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable
>>Subject: Re: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology
>>Reply Reply All Forward Delete Previous Next Close
>>
>>
>>
>>Someone asked where Shoghi Effendi spoke of the administrative order being >>mutilated without a Guardian. It is World Order of Baha'u'llah p. 148:
>>
>>"An attempt, I feel, should at the present juncture be made to explain the >>character and functions of the twin pillars that support this mighty >>Administrative Structure--the institutions of the Guardianship and of the >>Universal House of Justice. To describe in their entirety the diverse >>elements that function in conjunction with these institutions is beyond
>>the >>scope and purpose of this general exposition of the fundamental verities
>>of >>the Faith. To define with accuracy and minuteness the features, and to >>analyze exhaustively the nature of the relationships which, on the one >>hand, bind together these two fundamental organs of the Will of
>>'Abdu'l-Bahá and connect, on the other, each of them to the Author of the >>Faith and the Center of His Covenant is a task which future generations >>will no doubt adequately fulfill. My present intention is to elaborate >>certain salient features of this scheme which, however close we may stand
>>to its colossal structure, are already so clearly defined that we find it >>inexcusable to either misconceive or ignore. 13 It should be stated, at
>>the >>very outset, in clear and unambiguous language, that these twin >>institutions of the Administrative Order of Bahá'u'lláh should be regarded >>as divine in origin, essential in their functions and complementary in >>their aim and purpose. Their common, their fundamental object is to insure >>the continuity of that divinely-appointed authority which flows from the >>Source of our Faith, to safeguard the unity of its followers and to >>maintain the integrity and flexibility of its teachings. Acting in >>conjunction with each other these two inseparable institutions administer >>its affairs, coordinate its activities, promote its interests, execute its >>laws and defend its subsidiary institutions. Severally, each operates >>within a clearly defined sphere of jurisdiction; each is equipped with its >>own attendant institutions--instruments designed for the effective >>discharge of its particular responsibilities and duties. Each exercises, >>within the limitations imposed upon it, its powers, its authority, its >>rights and prerogatives. These are neither contradictory, nor detract in >>the slightest degree from the position which each of these institutions >>occupies. Far from being incompatible or mutually destructive, they >>supplement each other's authority and functions, and are permanently and >>fundamentally united in their aims."
>>
>>The uhj tries to interpret this passage away by pointing out that the >>Guardianship operated just fine without a house of justice, so obviously >>the house of justice can operate without a living Guardian. Moreover, the >>lack of a living guardian does not detract from the fact that the >>guardianship did exist at one point, leaving a great deal of guidance.
>>
>>The problem is that the Guardian did think it essential that a house of >>justice come to be asap, and he constantly put things off or made rulings >>provisional upon their future acceptance. Obviously, this schema cannot >>work the other way around--the uhj cannot put things off or rule only >>provisionally on issues in hopes of a future guardian arising, since there >>can be no further guardians. Moreover, it is also clear from his diction >>that he felt that key checks and balances in the Baha'i system were >>provided by a living Guardian.
>>
>>On pp. 154-155 of World Order of Baha'u'llah, Shoghi Effendi continues,

>>
>>"The hereditary authority which the Guardian is called upon to exercise, >>the vital and essential functions which the Universal House of Justice >>discharges, the specific provisions requiring its democratic election by >>the representatives of the faithful--these combine to demonstrate the truth
>>that this divinely revealed Order, which can never be identified with any >>of the standard types of government referred to by Aristotle in his works, >>embodies and blends with the spiritual verities on which it is based the >>beneficent elements which are to be found in each one of them. The admitted
>>evils inherent in each of these systems being rigidly and permanently
>>excluded, this unique Order, however long it may endure and however >>extensive its ramifications, cannot ever degenerate into any form of >>despotism, of oligarchy, or of demagoguery which must sooner or later corrupt
>>the machinery of all man-made and essentially defective political >>institutions."
>>
>>Shoghi Effendi is referring to Aristotle's division of government into rule
>>by the one, rule by the few, and rule by the many. Aristotle thought each >>of these forms of government, in turn, had a virtuous and corrupt form.
>>Rule of the one is ideally a virtuous monarchy, but it could deteriorate >>into despotism. Rule of the few is ideally a noble aristocracy, but it >>could deteriorate into oligarchy (we would say a junta). Rule of the many >>is ideally a just Republic or Polity that protects the rights of >>minorities; but it could deteriorate into demagoguery and a tyranny of the >>majority.
>>
>>Shoghi Effendi was saying that the Baha'i system had all three elements:
>>rule of the one was the Guardianship, rule of the few was the Hands (?), >>and rule of the many was the elected officers of the houses of justice >>(including NSAs and LSAs).
>>Now, according to Aristotle, the rule of the many, i.e., the rule of the >>houses of justice, was liable to deteriorate into demagoguery and the >>tyranny of the majority (a sort of populist fascism, we might say).
Shoghi
>>Effendi says explicitly that it is the hereditary principle of the >>Guardianship (i.e. the Baha'i equivalent of monarchy) that keeps this >>deterioration from occurring. Obviously, in the absence of a living >>Guardian and with the end of the institution of the hands of the cause,
the >>Baha'i system no longer has a living, breathing representative of the >>monarchical principle nor of the aristocratic. This means that the houses >>of justice have become a Republic. And according to Shoghi Effendi's >>analysis, this Republic is open to going bad and becoming demagogic.
>>Notice that he does not say that what prevents the uhj from becoming >>tyrannical is its own infallibility, or divine guidance, or anything so >>airy fairy. He is concrete and explicit. It is the simultaneous presence >>of the monarchical, aristocratic and republican forms of governance that >>act as institutional brakes on one another. That institutional brake is no >>longer effectively present.
>>
>>And this is the only way I can understand how things have gone so wrong in >>the Baha'i faith. Things are so corrupt that people like Firuz Kazemzadeh >>go about publicly and explicitly identifying the elected officials of the >>faith with an "aristocracy!" This does so much damage to both Aristotle >>and Shoghi Effendi (not to mention common sense) that one cringes. I >>suppose it must be nice for Firuz, though. And one of the reasons I left >>was that in spring of 1996 the uhj mangled the interpretation of this >>passage by insisting that it is the 'rule of the one'! Well, of course, >>they aren't authorized to interpret things, though, are they?
>>
>>What would replace the role of the Guardian in keeping the elected >>officials from becoming demagogues? Well, maybe nothing can. But maybe >>public opinion could. Just the censure of ordinary Baha'is. And the >>wonderful thing for the Baha'i faith at this juncture, and the thing that >>gives even me hope for those still clinging to the crimson ark, is that >>cyberspace is creating a Baha'i public opinion, and the uhj and the nsa's >>are beginning to feel pressure from it. They hate it. They had liked >>thinking of themselves as 'aristocrats' (or actually oligarchs given how >>they often have behaved). But they had better shed the velvet robes and >>dump the silver wine goblets, with the $200 million palaces, and get back >>to being plain democratic representatives of the Baha'i Republic or >>eventually they will lose all their power and perquisites, altogether.

>>
>>
>>cheers Juan
>>
>>
>>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 6:40 AM
To: Juan Cole
Subject: Nash?

You wrote recently:

"And given what happened to Denis MacEoin, Abbas Amanat, Steven Scholl, Linda Walbridge, Bill Garlington, Geoffrey Nash, "

I haven't anything about Nash. I'd appreciate it if you could fill me in on what happened in his regard....

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 7:03 AM
To: Ron House
Subject: Fw: news release & Frank....

Ron,

I'll go with your point of view, but, between ourselves, I feel uneasy and distrustful....

-----Original Message-----
From: Frank Baker <fbaker@ncsa.uiuc.edu>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Cc: Frank Baker <fbaker@ncsa.uiuc.edu>; Fran Baker <fran@crhc.uiuc.edu>
Date: Tuesday, September 15, 1998 6:50 PM
Subject: Re: news release & Frank....

>Dear Fred,

>

>First of all, thanks for inquiring; I appreciate it. Second, yes, >I am still interested in serving as a proponent. That said, I feel >that I owe you an apology and an explanation.

>

>First the explanation: My interest is in the establishment of an >open forum and I will argue positively and constructively in its >favor. I do not, however, wish to be personally associated with >the negative side of the arguments, e.g., the various accusations >of censorship or suppression. I would rather let the facts of >such cases speak for themselves and let thinking people draw their >own conclusions. Don't get me wrong, though; I am not saying that >I feel that those cases should not be discussed. Even "thinking >people" cannot draw reasonable conclusions if the facts are >suppressed.

>

>And the apology: I have not been able to achieve the level of >"presence" on the news groups as I would like ... and as is >necessary if I am to be effective as a proponent. In part, this >is because my work as a technical writer keeps me in front of a >computer anywhere from 6 to 12 hours a day. While I do indeed >wish to support the TRB effort, pressures are often such that I >cannot engage in such activity during the workday and I find that >at the end of such intense days, a "busman's holiday" on the computer >in the evening very close to the last thing I want need. (The past >several weeks has seen one of those intense pushes at work.) The >result is that my participation is likely to be somewhat episodic >-- Between pushes, I will be able to participate; during a serious >push, especially as we approach deadlines, I will tend not to be >around very much.

>
>Regards,
>-- Frank

>
>
>
>
>At 08:36 AM 9/15/98 -0400, FG wrote:

>>Frank,
>>
>>Are you still interested in serving as a proponent?
>>
>>Revised news release rough draft below, with a slight allusion >>to what Bahais have just attempted on AOL....
>>
>>...
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 7:10 AM
To: Ron House
Subject: bcca mailing lists

Ron,

What should be done about the bcca mailing lists?
I can't subscribe to them in order to post the pointers.
Can you subscribe? I've mentioned a few times it would be helpful for someone trustworthy like yourself to do so. Bahai-discuss last year was used to mobilize some people against the proposal....

You can find all the bcca files from last year at <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

FROM THE RFD:
And to the following seven Bahai-only listservs:

Subscribe via bahai-request@bcca.org
Baha'i Campus Forum (BCF)
Baha'i Discuss (Discuss)
Baha'i Singles (Singles)
Baha'i Teachers (Teachers)
Baha'i Women Converse (Women)
Baha'i Youth (Youth - aimed at the 12-18 age group)
Baha'i Announce (Announce)

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:26 AM
To: Juan Cole
Subject: Re: Nash?

In about 1990, I had exchanged a letter or two with him, in one of which he had commented:

We can see by what has happened to dialogue that even if people are ready to read an independent style magazine, there are others who do not wish them to, and are prepared to make it virtually impossible for them to do so. Sorry to sound so bleak, but that is the reality of the situation.

Print or electronic, the situation remains the same....

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 12:58 PM

Subject: Re: Nash?

>

>Dear Fred:

>

>I don't have details, but he was just gradually disgusted by the behavior >of the Baha'i Far Right in the UK, and the crackdown on Dialogue magazine >appears to have been the last straw for him.

>

>

>cheers Juan

>

>

>

>

>

>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:28 AM

Subject: fw Juan Cole Re: Checks & Balances (was Re: fw Juan Cole Re: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology)

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: Richard Schaut <RSSchaut@email.msn.com>

Cc: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>

Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 2:06 PM

Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: Checks & Balances (was fw Juan Cole mutilation theology)

>

>Dear Rick:

>

>I wish you would spend more time getting rid of those 'fatal protection >faults' that make us Microsoft users' lives hell (which somehow don't seem >to be a problem for Apple users) and less time expounding Aristotle. :-)

>

>I thank you for your comments on my note, which I hope to expand as a >paper, and, of course, the process of dialogue and criticism can only make >it a better paper.

>I am sorry you used the word 'absurdities,' however, since I do not believe >my perspective is absurd even if it may need refinement, and I do not >believe that my studies of Baha'i texts have ever been frivolous in such a >way as would legitimately call for such an insult.

>

>You wrote:

>

>>>From a political science perspective, the existence of some form of checks

>>and balances requires a tension between powers and authorities granted to >>various branches of government. Specifically, it requires two or more >>separate institutions to have authority to limit each other's functions.

>

>But the Guardian himself said what prevents the various elements of the >Baha'i system (rule of the one, rule of the few, and rule of the many) from >deteriorating from their good form (monarchy, aristocracy, republicanism) >to their bad form (despotism, oligarchy, demagoguery). That is, when he >says on WOB p. 154 that the administrative order cannot degenerate into >despotism, oligarchy or demagoguery, this is coming as the conclusion of an >argument earlier in the paragraph: the reason for which it cannot >degenerate is because the administration "embodies and blends with the >spiritual verities on which it is based the beneficent elements which are >to be found in each one of them"--that is, it embodies the beneficent >elements of monarchy, aristocracy and republicanism.

>
>Now, obviously, logically speaking, should the system cease to "embody" all >three of these "beneficent elements", and instead be left with only one of >them (rule of the many via their elected representatives), then we would >have a different system. With the end of the guardianship, that is what >has happened. (The fiction that rule of the one continues through the >Guardian's writings is just propaganda; those writings can be interpreted >in many ways, and when they are misinterpreted for narrow institutional >purposes they can't talk back the way a living Guardian would.) The rule >of the many, as we all know, is in constant danger of becoming demagogic >and a tyranny of the majority. And there is no 'beneficent' rule of the >on--the Guardian--to offset this tendency.
>
>Note that in the U.S. system, the Supreme Court also could not come in and >make foreign policy, 'over-ruling' the Cabinet. It would have to respect >the executive sphere of authority. I doubt it could even rule a foreign >policy unconstitutional. But in other respects the existence of an >independent judiciary that interprets the laws does limit the ability of >the executive branch to act in a despotic fashion.
>
>It is certainly the case that a living Guardian would have been in a >position to deter the other 8 members of the universal house of justice >from acting in a dicatorial fashion. As Interpreter of the text, he could >simply tell them that his interpretation of the scriptures ruled out >falsely accusing college professors of covenant breaking as a way of >silencing them or discrediting them in the community. The latter sort of >action, of which the present universal house of justice has been >egregiously guilty, clearly violates not only enormous numbers of >scriptural texts guaranteeing freedom in thought, speech and intellectual >inquiry, but violates the constitution of the universal house of justice >itself, which constrains that body to protect the rights of individual >Baha'is. (Ha!). A living Guardian could not have over-ruled such a >malicious, mad and slightly stupid plan, but he could have weighed in, >using his charisma and interpretive authority, to prevent the Hyppolyte >Dryfuses and Auguste Forels of a later time from being railroaded by >fundamentalist electrical engineers and narrow-minded failed businessmen >and actors. And I firmly believe he would have.
>
>I think Rick Schaut knows very well that there are areas of corruption and >unjustified repression in the Baha'i administration. He has a faith that >all will be well nevertheless. I have had that faith shattered by >witnessing my universal house of justice, in which I used to repose such >high hopes, act like a group of ayatollahs or inquisitorial cardinals, >falsely accusing decent, energetic, loving Baha'is like Linda Walbridge of >verbal covenant breaking as a way of silencing their voices. They don't >have the right or the legitimate authority to silence individual Baha'is >from their expression of individual interpretation. This is something >Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi guaranteed the Baha'is. They are acting >like despots. And whether my explanation of how this could have come to be >is completely correct or not, some explanation of it is required.
>
>cheers
>
>Juan Cole
>Professor >History
>U of Michigan
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>at <https://www.eGroups.com> -- Free Web-based e-mail groups.
>
Richard Schaut wrote in message ...
>
>FG wrote in message <6to7u6$k7p@news1.newsguy.com>...
>>Alexander Hamilton & James Madison, The Federalist Papers:
>>
>>"Why has government been instituted at all? Because the passions >>of men will not conform to the dictates of reason and justice,
>>without constraint."
>
>
>I can see that it's time to point out some of the absurdities of Dr. Cole's >arguments regarding "Checks and Balances" within the structure of the >Administrative Order of the Baha'i Faith. Dr. Cole asserts that the >presence of a living Guardian is some form of "balance" of the "rule of >one"
>against the "rule of many" embodied in the institution of the Universal >House of Justice.
>
>In support of this assertion, Dr. Cole quotes Shoghi Effendi's letter dated >8 February 1934 and addressed to the Baha'is of the West (i.e. Europe and >North America). The letter is often referred to as "The Dispensation of >Baha'u'llah", and is quoted in its entirety in "The World Order of >Baha'u'llah"--a collection of selected letters from Shoghi Effendi.
>
>In this regard, however, Dr. Cole fails to quote the most important passage >we might find with respect to any form of checks and balances within the >Administrative Order. Speaking of the complimentary functions of the >institutions of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice, Shoghi >Effendi states:
>
>"Though the Guardian of the Faith has been made the permanent head of so >august a body [The Universal House of Justice] he can never, even >temporarily, assume the right of exclusive legislation. He cannot override >the decision of the majority of his fellow-members, but is bound to insist >upon a reconsideration by them of any enactment he conscientiously believes >to conflict with the meaning and to depart from the spirit of Baha'u'llah's >revealed utterances." (World Order of Baha'u'llah, p. 150)
>
>From a political science perspective, the existence of some form of checks >and balances requires a tension between powers and authorities granted to >various branches of government. Specifically, it requires two or more >separate institutions to have authority to limit each other's functions.
>For example, in the United States, the Courts have the power and authority >to declare a law of Congress unconstitutional--i.e. to bindingly state
the >Congress have stepped outside their bounds.
>
>Contrast this with Shoghi Effendi's remarks above, in which, at most, the >Guardian can only "insist upon a reconsideration by" the other members of >the Universal House of Justice, yet cannot override the majority's decision.
>
>Shoghi Effendi goes even further in this regard. In the paragraph >immediately preceeding the paragraph quoted above, Shoghi Effendi states,
>
>"The interpretation of the Guardian, functioning within his own sphere, is >as authoritative and binding as the enactments of the International House
of >Justice, whose exclusive right and prerogative is to pronounce upon and >deliver the final judgement on such laws and ordinances as Baha'u'llah has >not expressly revealed. Neither can, nor will ever, infringe upon the >sacred and prescribed domain of the other. Neither will seek to curtail
the >specific and undoubted authority with which both have been divinely >invested." (Ibid, p. 150)
>
>Clearly, there are no "checks and balances" in the form of contravening >powers and or authorities. The authority of the Guardianship compliments >that of the Universal House of Justice, and "Neither will seek to curtail" >the operations of the other.

>
>Having shown the absence of any specific provisions that would engender the >common notions of "Checks and Balances" as we've come to know them, we can >now return to the passage that Dr. Cole quotes:
>
>"The admitted evils inherent in each of these systems being rigidly and >permanently excluded, this unique Order, however long it may endure and >however extensive its ramifications, cannot ever degenerate into any form
>of >despotism , of oligarchy, or of demagogy which must sooner or later corrupt
>the machinery of all man-made and essentially defective political >institutions." (Ibid, p. 154)
>
>Dr. Cole asserts that Shoghi Effendi's remarks in this paragraph, >particularly regarding demagogy, hinge upon the hereditary authority that >the Guardian exercises. Yet, as we have seen above, the Guardian's >authority does _not_ include the authority to override any decision of the >Universal House of Justice. At best, the Guardian can insist that the >members of the Universal House of Justice reconsider a decision, but he >cannot override that decision.
>
>What, then, prompts Shoghi Effendi to assert that this Order "cannot ever >degenerate into any form of depotism, of oligarchy or of demagogy"? To >answer that, let's take a closer look at the sentences that precede those >quoted above:
>
>"The hereditary authority which the Guardian is called upon to exercise,
>the >vital and essential functions which the Universal House of Justice >discharges, the specific provisions requiring its democratic election by
>the >representatives of the faithful--these combine to demonstrate the truth
>that >this divinely revealed Order, which can never be identified with any of the >standard types of government referred to by Aristotle in his works, >embodies >and blends with the spiritual verities on which it is based the beneficent >elements which are to be found in each one of them." (Ibid, p. 154)
>
>Note that it is not merely the hereditary authority which the Guardian >exercises, but also the specific provisions requiring the democratic >election of the membership of the Universal House of Justice, combine to >distinguish the Administrative Order from any of the forms of government >identified by Aristotle.
>
>A demagogy is a system whereby leadership is conducted via appeal to the >emotions of the populace. The specific aspect of any democracy that would >give rise to any tendency to become such a "tyranny of the majority" is the >fact that the elected representatives in a democracy must answer to the >views of those who have elected them.
>
>In the Baha'i System, however, members of these institutions do not answer >to the whims of those who elect them. Further, the absence of any form of >electioneering implies that members are elected based upon their character >and recognized ability to make sound decisions. They are not elected based >upon their "political" views. Within such a system, there can be no >mandate >from the populace, as there are no platforms upon which candidates would >run >for office.
>
>The feature, then, of the Baha'i System that precludes its degeneration >into >any form of demagogy is not the Guardian's hereditary authority. Rather, >the feature is in the specific provisions regarding the election of members >of the Houses of Justice.
>
>Lastly, to see just how absurd Dr. Cole's assertion is, consider his >concluding remarks:

>
>"What would replace the role of the Guardian in keeping the elected >officials from becoming demagogues? Well, maybe nothing can. But maybe >public opinion could."
>
>What an astounding remark! The very thing that _creates_ a demagogue is
the >appeal to public opinion. Yet, somehow, public opinion is to be the means >that prevents the Universal House of Justice from becoming demagogues!
This >is so twisted that it boggles the mind.
>
>
>Regards,
>Rick Schaut
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:38 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: On soc.religion.bahai - brief quotations

Schaut wrote:
>>Not a single demonstrable fact in this one, just opinions. He's entitled >>to his opinions, but his opinions do not, of themselves, constitute >>evidence.
>
>
>You are on the wrong side here. You want facts I can supply them. But for >what purpose?
>
>--Kent

The purpose would not be for convincing fundamentalists Bahais.
Nothing anyone can say can reach or help most of them.... But it could help people of a more open mind who can still think for themselves, especially when added to the already overwhelming evidence of censorship and duplicity....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:53 AM
Subject: Re: Censorship at alt.religion.bahai

K. Paul Johnson wrote in message <35ffc677.0@vlinsvr>...

K. Paul Johnson wrote:
>I can assure you, Rick, that your continual personal hostility, >calling me "Mr. Johnson" repeatedly, and now making an implicit >threat, might be winning you points with your own constituency >but does not make a positive impression of Baha'i for outsiders >who read it.

Someone has recently said to me in email that Rick is the one who is doing all the "shouting."

Johnson wrote:

>That's "weasel" and not the argument at all. What I'm saying is >that you are hassling me, for thousands of words now, for a >speculation about possible persons who may have done something, >and have been silent to the best of my knowledge in cases where >specific people have been maligned.

Rich himself, a month or so ago, was extremely derisive and insulting to Timothy Mulligan. All the "good" Bahais stood by and said nothing.... A fine demonstration of Bahai "unity."

Johnson wrote:

>It's clear to me that you're in a "win/lose" mindset with all >critics of the Baha'i institutions, and that this struggle to vindicate >them has a pretty high priority for you. Whereas among my >interests, Baha'i affairs are way down the list, even if we just >count religious movements. Thus I don't have the interest or the >will to continue debating you. If that strikes you as a victory, >so be it. Congratulations.

It's usually victory enough, for many Bahais.... Wear them down, drive them out, hector them to hell and back, but get rid of them.... Uh, duh, where are the missing 105,000 Bahais in the USA? The tens of thousands the NSA claims in the unsuspecting media?

But in all sincerity, I would urge >you to consider in future, when you are facing a critic in a >public forum, that your tone reflects on the cause you think you >are defending. I don't think you are winning any points for that >cause in the eyes of onlookers, however much your coreligionists >might encourage you to take this approach.

>
>Sincerely,
>
>PJ

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:56 AM
Subject: fw Ron House 3 Re: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

-----Original Message-----

From: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 10:25 PM
Subject: Re: rfd

>Hi Fred,
>
>Is it too late to suggest we drop a couple? I am not sure whether >these are groups I suggested or someone else, but I find myself >having doubts as I read the list now:
>
>> soc.religion.sikhism,
> Too parochial, not very open-minded.
>
>> soc.religion.scientology,

> Better to leave to their own devices
>
>> soc.religion.vaishnava, > Same as sikhism
>
>> alt.religion.islam,
> I think the Moslems are causing too much trouble for innocent
> Baha'is to consider giving them more ammo.
>
>> alt.religion.vaisnava,
> As above.
>
>--
>Ron House house@usq.edu.au
>
>Speed bumps are installed in the belief that if a road is >unsafe at 50, we should make it unsafe at 30.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:58 AM
Subject: fw Ron House 4 Re: 3rd ROUGH DRAFT - RFD talk.religion.bahai

-----Original Message-----
From: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 10:52 PM
Subject: Re: bcca mailing lists

>FG wrote:
>>
>> Ron,
>>
>> What should be done about the bcca mailing lists?
>> I can't subscribe to them in order to post the pointers.
>> Can you subscribe? I've mentioned a few times it >> would be helpful for someone trustworthy like yourself >> to do so. Bahai-discuss last year was used to mobilize >> some people against the proposal....
>
>Hi Fred,
>
>I'd rather stick to the newsgroups. I am finding that email >is a big problem for me as it is, as I have various non-Baha'i >lists that I have to subscribe to for other reasons. I am >trying to get out of all email discussions if I possibly can >at present.
>

>--
>Ron House house@usq.edu.au
>
>Speed bumps are installed in the belief that if a road is >unsafe at 50, we should make it unsafe at 30.
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 6:59 AM
To: Ron House
Subject: Re: Fw: news release & Frank....

Okay, Ron, I'll try to hope for the best....
Not easy for me to do. We may have to cut the mailing lists if we can't find someone else to post to them.

-----Original Message-----

From: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>

To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 10:49 PM

Subject: Re: Fw: news release & Frank....

>FG wrote:

>>

>> Ron,

>>

>> I'll go with your point of view, but, between ourselves, I feel >> uneasy and distrustful....

>>

>Hi Fred,

>

>I wouldn't worry. It's much less important to do things >perfectly than to find friends and gladden their hearts

>(after all, this is what we complain about the standard >Baha'is NOT doing!).

>

>--

>Ron House house@usq.edu.au

>

>Speed bumps are installed in the belief that if a road is >unsafe at 50, we should make it unsafe at 30.

>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 7:08 AM

Subject: The Bahai technique - May 4,1992

I've stumbled on to a letter I wrote in May of 1992 which, to my surprise, seems to have already identified "The Bahai technique" so thoroughly demonstrated here online:

The leap you talk about, however, is different from Kierkegaard's and not as simple as it is made out to be. Shoghi Effendi writes somewhere that the administrators of Baha'u'llah must be worthy of the trust of the Baha'i community. Undeniable experience has shown me that is not always the case. It seems to me the Baha'i administration, or what passes for it, is well on its way to becoming its own form of clergy, with all the abuses and seductions of the past. The worst distortions of the Jesuits or mullahs seem suggestive. If God has given us a mind to use, I don't see how ignoring or lying about the situation serves any purpose, except the acquisition of further power and control.

The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth.

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, September 17, 1998 7:26 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Antinomies sublime....

Plato, The Republic, Parable of the Cave:

In like manner, when anyone by dialectic attempts through discourse of reason apart from all perceptions of sense to find his way to the very essence of each thing.... he arrives at the limit of the intelligible, as the other in our parable came to the goal of the visible.

* * *

And may we not also declare that nothing less than the power of dialectic could reveal this, and that only to one experienced in the studies we have described....

* * *

Do you agree, then, said I, that we have set dialectic above all other studies to be as it were the coping stone--

* * *

And it is also, said I, the chief test of the dialectic nature and its opposite. For he who can view things in their connection is a dialectician; he who cannot, is not....

Baha'u'llah, the Most Great Dialectician, understood all this....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 5:35 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: Definition of a follower of Baha'u'llah

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

rlittle@nils.com wrote in message <6trkrj$gci$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...

>Dear Friends:

>

>I quickly read through the messages posted to alt.religion.bahai this morning

>and discovered not one single message which reflected in any substantive way >the love and devotion and purity of thought which Baha'u'llah inculcated in His followers, and which 'Abdul-Baha', His Perfect Exemplar and the Center of His Covenant, so wonderfully exemplified.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to discover that the Baha'i Faith exists, >even today, although it is getting easier, as the Faith grows and becomes more visible.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to learn about the Baha'i Faith, once one >becomes apprised of its existence, for the Baha'is do not seem to have the media resources so necessary in this electronic society for the propagation of >knowledge and information.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to become a Baha'i today. It is actually >quite difficult. For most of us, we must struggle against the "common knowledge" of what Religion is, and we must struggle against ingrained habits >of thought and feeling, and we must struggle to embrace a Faith which is still >largely unknown, and frequently "uncool" to belong to, as it is outside of the >cultural centers of power.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to become an expert at being a Baha'i, as >the Teachings require profound changes in our fundamental attitudes towards other races, Religions, peoples, cultures, sexes, ages, and so on. We must acquire not only a knowledge of the Baha'i Faith, in itself a life-long task, >but we must also acquire knowledge of all the other Faiths and cultures as well. Finally, we must transform ourselves into radiant, loving, devoted servants of humanity, and of God.

>

>With all this said, I find it strange that there should be so much negativity >found here on a newsgroup dedicated to discussion of Baha'u'llah and His Faith and Teachings. As I understand it, Baha'u'llah has called on humans to >grow up, become mature, loving adults, to create a society whose foundation is justice, to abolish the childish pastimes of the past, such as war, drugs, >and violence, and take up those pursuits which lead to the ennoblement of the soul.

>

>When one becomes a Baha'i, how are her co-religionists supposed to act towards her? It is to be expected that there will be tests and difficulties, >that there will be setbacks. As these all too human attributes surface, are the other members of her community supposed to point out her faults, criticize her efforts, mistrust her motives and backbite against her?

>

>Most assuredly not, if one is to be obedient to God.

>

>There has been given us the Perfect Standard by which we can judge our own behavior, and the Perfect Exemplar to assist us in understanding that >Standard, and the tools with which to modify that behavior. If we are truly following Baha'u'llah, we should not have the time or the inclination to seek >out the mote in our neighbors eye. We should be concerned with acquiring the >virtues of God, such as patience, understanding, love, honesty, integrity, >truthfulness, forbearance, kindness, and in general a rectitude of conduct >such that a stranger, upon meeting us for the first time, would cry out,

>"There is a Baha'i!".
>
>I would like to request that the participants and the visitors and the lurkers
>who come here please focus on the beauty which is present in all of us, the >glory which is found in all Faiths, the love which exists in all hearts,
and >write and talk about these elements which ALONE will bring us together.
>
>In the final analysis, we (you and I), are either part of the problem, or we >are part of the solution. Which side do you want to be one?
>
>Choose wisely.
>
>With love,
>
>Robert A. Little
>
>
>-----== Posted via Deja News, The Leader in Internet Discussion ==-----
>https://www.dejanews.com/rg_mkgrp.xp Create Your Own Free Member Forum

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 5:35 AM
Subject: Re: Definition of a follower of Baha'u'llah

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

rlittle@nils.com wrote in message <6trkrj$gci$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...

>Dear Friends:

>

>I quickly read through the messages posted to alt.religion.bahai this morning

>and discovered not one single message which reflected in any substantive way

>the love and devotion and purity of thought which Baha'u'llah inculcated in >His followers, and which 'Abdul-Baha', His Perfect Exemplar and the Center >of His Covenant, so wonderfully exemplified.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to discover that the Baha'i Faith exists,

>even today, although it is getting easier, as the Faith grows and becomes more >visible.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to learn about the Baha'i Faith, once
one >becomes apprised of its existence, for the Baha'is do not seem to have the >media resources so necessary in this electronic society for the propagation

of >knowledge and information.

>

>It is not particularly easy for one to become a Baha'i today. It is actually >quite difficult. For most of us, we must struggle against the "common >knowledge" of what Religion is, and we must struggle against ingrained habits >of thought and feeling, and we must struggle to embrace a Faith which is still >largely unknown, and frequently "uncool" to belong to, as it is outside of

the
>cultural centers of power.
>
>It is not particularly easy for one to become an expert at being a Baha'i,
as
>the Teachings require profound changes in our fundamental attitudes towards >other races, Religions, peoples, cultures, sexes, ages, and so on. We must >acquire not only a knowledge of the Baha'i Faith, in itself a life-long task, >but we must also acquire knowledge of all the other Faiths and cultures as >well. Finally, we must transform ourselves into radiant, loving, devoted >servants of humanity, and of God.
>
>With all this said, I find it strange that there should be so much negativity >found here on a newsgroup dedicated to discussion of Baha'u'llah and His >Faith and Teachings. As I understand it, Baha'u'llah has called on humans
to >grow up, become mature, loving adults, to create a society whose foundation >is justice, to abolish the childish pastimes of the past, such as war, drugs, >and violence, and take up those pursuits which lead to the ennoblement of
the >soul.
>
>When one becomes a Baha'i, how are her co-religionists supposed to act >towards her? It is to be expected that there will be tests and difficulties, >that there will be setbacks. As these all too human attributes surface, are >the other members of her community supposed to point out her faults, >criticize her efforts, mistrust her motives and backbite against her?
>
>Most assuredly not, if one is to be obedient to God.
>
>There has been given us the Perfect Standard by which we can judge our own >behavior, and the Perfect Exemplar to assist us in understanding that >Standard, and the tools with which to modify that behavior. If we are truly >following Baha'u'llah, we should not have the time or the inclination to seek >out the mote in our neighbors eye. We should be concerned with acquiring
the >virtues of God, such as patience, understanding, love, honesty, integrity, >truthfulness, forbearance, kindness, and in general a rectitude of conduct >such that a stranger, upon meeting us for the first time, would cry out,
>"There is a Baha'i!".
>
>I would like to request that the participants and the visitors and the lurkers
>who come here please focus on the beauty which is present in all of us, the >glory which is found in all Faiths, the love which exists in all hearts,
and >write and talk about these elements which ALONE will bring us together.
>
>In the final analysis, we (you and I), are either part of the problem, or we >are part of the solution. Which side do you want to be one?
>
>Choose wisely.
>
>With love,
>
>Robert A. Little
>
>
>-----== Posted via Deja News, The Leader in Internet Discussion ==-----

>https://www.dejanews.com/rg_mkgrp.xp Create Your Own Free Member Forum

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 5:56 AM
To: FG
Subject: REPOST - alt.religion.bahai FAQ

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) for
Alt.Religion.Bahai and bahai-faith@makelist.com
September 18, 1998
This FAQ will be reposted approximately every two weeks.

Please note that crossposting your messages to talk.religion.misc makes it possible for some people without access to the alt.*
hierarchy to follow along with the discussion on alt.religion.bahai.

Similarly, crossposting or sending a courtesy copy, "cc," to
bahai-faith@makelist.com also allows people with only email access to participate. Currently, 23 individuals are subscribed.

Other people with web access might use www.dejanews.com or www.reference.com They both offer reading and posting capabilities, including free email accounts, for people who can't directly access alt.religion.bahai.

Though these stopgap measures may appear cumbersome or repetitive, they really do compensate a little for the lack of talk.religion.bahai, which would be an unmoderated newsgroup on a major hierarchy that most people ought to be able to use.

Alt.Religion.Bahai is now available on America Online (AOL).

NOTE: Not all people agree on the interpretations given below.

Question #1 "what would be the difference between the proposed newsgroup talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai?"

ANSWER: The alt.* hierarchy is not widely available, while the talk.* hierarchy is, since it is on what's called the Big 8 hierarchy of Usenet. Many more Bahais and non-Bahais would be able to access talk.religion.bahai.

Question #2 "Isn't ARB also unmoderated?"

ANSWER: Yes. Alt.religion.bahai is unmoderated and talk.religion.bahai would be too. Though not a newsgroup, the mailing list bahai-faith@makelist.com is also unmmoderated.

Question #3 "Why create a t.r.b.?"

ANSWER #1: Because many people believe they experienced or are continuing to experience censorship when attempting to post to soc.religion.bahai. See the quotations from Abdul-Baha:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #2: Because the Bahai writings support free speech and religious conscience.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #3: [fill in the blank according to your own opinion.]

Question #4: "Why do the srb moderators oppose trb?"

ANSWER: [Perhaps they'll supply us with an answer to place here]

Question #5: "Are Bahais opposed to freedom of speech and conscience?"

ANSWER: Despite glowing words of love and support for other people's opinions, despite the Universal House of Justice stating at least publicly it is not opposed to an unmoderated forum, the record of actual behavior by Bahais and on soc.religion.bahai and the experience of many Bahais and people who have left the Bahai Faith give reason for concern.

Chronology of major events: talk.religion.bahai

January 17, 1997: The 1st proposal for talk.religion.bahai was submitted to news.announce.newgroups.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/1stRFD.htm>

Early March 1997: Mark Towfiq, chairman of the BCCA, the Bahai Computer and Communication Association, posts to three Bahai-only mailing lists a call for Bahais to vote NO against talk.religion.bahai.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Towfiq.htm>

March 1997: soc.religion.bahai bans all discussion of talk.religion.bahai from its newsgroup. This ban is still in effect more than a year and a half later.

March 31, 1997: The 1st proposal was defeated 157 YES to 691 NO.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/1stRESULT.htm>

April 3, 1997: Jonathan Grobe, a non-Bahai, creates alt.religion.bahai.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/arb.htm>

October 14, 1997: The Universal House of Justice releases a message stating it has no objection to unmoderated newsgroups:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJ1.htm>

November 1997: At a time when discussion was highly favorable in support of talk.religion.bahai, the BCCA deprives FG of access to the private Bahai-only mailing list bahai-discuss and all of its other lists, inflaming Bahai passions against trb. See bahai-discuss archived files and correspondence between FG and the BCCA committee:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

December 19, 1997: The Universal House of Justice releases a message that suggests it does not understand the nature of Usenet interest polling:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJ2.htm>

January 12, 1998: The 2nd proposal for talk.religion.bahai was submitted.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/2ndRFD.htm>

February 22, 1998: The 2nd proposal was defeated 109 YES to 65 NO.
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/2ndRESULT.htm>

May 25, 1998: srb bans all messages from FG that contain his signature file:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb23.htm>

September 9, 1998: America Online (AOL) places a Bahai-inspired TOS against FG; AOL removes the TOS after considering both sides of the issue, i.e., Bahai messages attacking and threatening FG:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

September 14, 1998: soc.religion.bahai extends its ban on FG's signature file to include all URLs from all posters, allowing only email addresses and name of the poster:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srbban.htm>

The 3rd proposal scheduled to be submitted before the end of September.

For past discussion of censorship on soc.religion.bahai and other issues, including censorship within the Bahai community, see the Web site below.

WEB SITE:

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

MAILING LIST:

bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts) For Web subscription

& List Archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

To Subscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-subscribe@makelist.com

To Unsubscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-unsubscribe@makelist.com

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 6:00 AM
To: FG
Subject: NEWS RELEASE

NEWS RELEASE

For immediate release. . . [or]
For Use the Week of September 20th. . .

Contact: FG (xxx) xxx-xxxx or
FG@hotmail.com

Baha'is Debate Freedom of Speech and Conscience

The third interest poll is beginning for talk.religion.bahai, a proposed unmoderated newsgroup on the part of the Internet known as Usenet. Critics charge members of the Baha'i Faith have opposed its creation now for more than a year and a half because they would not be able to exercise the kind of control they exert over soc.religion.bahai, a moderated newsgroup.

Under the Usenet guidelines for discussion groups, if a newsgroup is moderated, a single moderator or panel of moderators chooses which messages are posted for all subscribers to read. There seems to be a classic struggle between Baha'is and ex-Baha'is of liberal sentiment and the elements of a conservative orthodoxy. With recent clashes even taking place on America Online, and soc.religion.bahai now banning any links to any web sites, both appear ready for another stormy battle on news.groups, the discussion group where the creation of a new forum is always debated.

Some critics even go further. Dr. Juan Cole of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, a former Baha'i who withdrew from the Faith after more than twenty years, has asserted there is widespread, pervasive censorship and distortion of information throughout the religion that belies the gentle and tolerant universalism of its Founders. Recently, Dr. Cole has said, "The checks and balances . . . will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without."

A poet and literary critic who remains a Baha'i after more than two decades of membership, FG, one of the proponents of talk.religion.bahai, has developed a web site, "The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience," documenting numerous instances of interference with free speech by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai and the Baha'i Administration:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

Whatever the outcome of the third interest poll, the more than 30,000 messages posted to alt.religion.bahai, a less accessible newsgroup than the one wanted, shows Baha'is and others have a lot to say on the matter!

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 6:22 AM
To: FG
Subject: REPOST The Bahai Technique

During the last year and a half, a number of observers have noted several common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:
"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:
"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 6:31 AM
To: bahai-faith@makelist.com
Subject: Timeline for posting RFD

I'd like to bring this stage of discussion of the RFD to a close by about the end of the next week, let's say Friday, September 25th, and post it about then to news.announce.newgroups, if no one has any objections.

Ron's made some suggestions for dropping a few newsgroups and a few other things that I've noted and will incorporate in the next draft.

All the numbers and statistics need to be revised here and there and updated.

After that kind of thing, the fine tuning can really be done on news.groups with the news.groupies help and consultation, it seems to me....

Anyone willing to handle the crossposting of pointers to the BCCA mailing lists? Since the BCCA denied me access to them during the last interest poll, I shan't be able to post this time around. More on that for those interested at <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

Looks good to me!

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Friday, September 18, 1998 6:47 AM
To: FG
Subject: REPOST - The Bahai Technique

During the last year and a half, a number of observers have noted several common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:
"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:
"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions.

At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 4:42 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: Srb Bahais' solution - censor EVERYTHING & EVERYBODY! (Re: Signatures on SRB)

Note this person fails to comment on the fact that srb has EXTENDED its censorship of MY signature file to EVERYONE's signature file. His approach is basically to ignore and change the subject to derogatory intimations of my character or psychology. His approach conforms quite well to the "Bahai technique":
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/technique.htm>

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Chess Hazlett wrote in message <#be9VJx49GA.286@upnetnews05>...

>FG wrote:

>>After having censored and suppressed any posts from me
>>for more than three and a half months now, the "moderators"
>>of soc.religion.bahai, in their scintillating wisdom, have come >>up with what has to be one of the most laughable "policies" on >>Usenet.... Their timing ought to be carefully noted by observers....
>
>God in Heaven, Fred! Does SRB exist solely to keep you from posting there?
>Do you think someone just wanted an electronic "No-Fred" club?
>I can't imagine that the moderators of that newsgroup sit around all day
and >think of better ways to censor you. Anyway, you can post here, and I'm glad >to read them; but sometimes you remind me of a cornered politician more than >anything else. Relax; the world isn't against you.
> --ChessH
>
>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 4:52 AM
Subject: fw K. Paul Johnson re Relentlessly aggressive cult apologists

Relentlessly aggressive cult apologists Author: K. Paul Johnson author profile
Email: pjohnson@vlinsvr.vsla.edu
Date: 1998/09/18
Forums: talk.religion.misc

There's a particular toxic type of person who hangs out in religious/spiritual newsgroups and lists, and I think that the common features of this type are more important than the particularities. Most of my unpleasant encounters with them have involved Theosophists, with Baha'is and Eckists in second and third place. But for each of my own such interactions I've witnessed dozens more involving others, with a wide range of groups.

The chief preoccupation of this type is to use the Net to defend a belief system against criticism. But that in itself doesn't make a person a RACA. Reasoned debate about the merits and demerits of a religion is a good thing, and many honorable people do it. It's the relentlessly aggressive nature of the cult apologia-- sometimes rather passive aggressive-- that marks the particular type I'm talking about. The aggressive part of the "defense" means that the topic of discussion is always immediately shifted from the belief system itself to the person who criticizes it. The relentless aspect of the type is that they place a very high priority on having the last word, consistently take a "win/lose" approach to discussion, and will go on and on indefinitely, exhausting their opponents who usually have far less invested in the subject and a lower threshold for giving up the debate as hopeless.

What is most mysterious to me about such people is that they are relentlessly and personally aggressive to those they debate, yet are in complete denial of this behavior. Indeed, anyone who points out that they are being RACA will be told that this is imagination, there is nothing personal or aggressive about their style of argumentation, blah, blah. The funniest and most mind-blowing part of it all is that they use this very denial as part of a further strategy of RACA. That is, turning discussion of their own behavior into an attack on the mental health of their victims, saying that you must be crazy if you think they're behaving like hateful bastards. Do they really believe this? Are they fooling themselves but no one else? Or is there a conscious, cynical strategy here? Who knows? What I do know is that they behave as if they were thinking this: "My chief goal is to stifle all criticism of My True Religion by being so unpleasant to anyone who dares criticize it that they eventually give up and go away saying 'I'll never mess with a _____ again.'"

Several strange paradoxes characterize the dynamics of interaction with such people. One is that they manage to arrange things, in their own minds at least, so that they "win" no matter what. If you give up and say "I've had it trying to talk to you, forget it," their response is "I WIN!! My peerless logic and overwhelming evidence has so cowed you that you have no choice but to give up." But if you keep arguing with them, they win in another way-- tying up your energy and time in a fruitless endeavor to make some kind of breakthrough that can never ever happen with such people. Damned if you do walk away, damned if you don't. But another paradox is that their self-perceived victories are usually defeats for the belief system they espouse, in terms of the impression they make on outsiders. How many people read them and think "YUCK! If that's what [Baha'is, Eckists, Theosophists, etc.] are like, to hell with them!"

I welcome comments from anyone who has engaged in fruitless discussion with RACAs, or better yet who has ever seen one evolve into a decent human being capable of open, give-and-take interchange. Is it possible?

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 4:53 AM
Subject: REVISED - The Bahai Technique

During the last year and a half, a number of observers have noted several common methods many Bahais use to avoid various issues or discredit people who hold opinions other than their own:

FG, May 12, 1992:

"The Baha'i Faith has become very oppressive and manipulative of the individual. That to me is merely a statement of fact, as I have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now [over 22]. The usual stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual life isn't what it should be, he doesn't understand the nature of unity, or he's accused of trying to obtain power for himself, which at times seems merely a calculated way of discrediting the person, and so on. Another common strategy used to acquire control over the individual is to humor the person by letting him pour himself out, etc., and then self-righteously giving him the Truth."

Ron House, November 14, 1997:

"I know what you mean. I've found over the years that there is a technique used by traditional Baha'is and others to squash dissension: harry the dissenter so much he says something intemperate, then point out how 'loving' and 'compassionate' they are and how nasty the dissenter is. The trouble is that this technique works, so I've been making a conscious effort not to fall for it. Also, when they get the dissenter discouraged and miserable enough, he invariably makes a slip-up sooner or later that they can REALLY let loose the venom over. IMHO, they did this to you when you misread Sharon's intentions. At any other time, they would overlook faults, as Baha'u'llah says, but when they're in this mode they go for the jugular. Very sad."
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/House2.htm>

FG, June 1998:

"Some of the most striking methods demonstrated repeatedly by many Bahais during the last year and a half of discussion about an unmoderated newsgroup is their refusal to listen and respond to the criticisms of those who are in favor of talk.religion.bahai, ignoring their concerns, never responding analytically to their messages and reasoning and logic and evidence, attacking them through character assassination and ad hominem, ganging up on individuals, and "circling the wagons" around every action of the srb moderators or others who are opposed to talk.religion.bahai."

"More than twenty different people on my web site have posted messages explaining their experience with srb censorship yet many srb Bahais NEVER address their concerns. Ignoring such charges will not make them go away. NO ONE has to "try" to link the trb interest poll with censorship on srb; the moderators themselves have done that by suppressing droves of people for years. There are many people who believe such suppression is part and parcel of the Bahai community as it exists today. A YES vote need not necessarily support such a belief. There are other reasons Bahais might vote YES."

Fran Baker, May 1998:

"Just have to say that in my experience this is a common technique of manipulative people in general; it is especially effective with thoughtful people who are willing to see both sides of things, i.e., their own fault. I consider this brow-beating technique to be a form of abuse. The only way to deal with it is to call them on it every time and to refuse to let yourself be beat up, i.e., not to do your part of the "tango." This can be very hard to do, but it works. You can break this pattern in a personal relationship. I don't know whether it's possible when a group acts this way. Very scary."

Dr. Juan Cole, June 12, 1998:

"Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? ...The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

"Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Cole10.htm>

K. Paul Johnson, September 15, 1998:

"If that principle [people are innocent until proven guilty] were followed by Baha'i administration and individuals in their condemnations of their fellow believers, I would have very little to complain about regarding Baha'i affairs. But character assassination by innuendo is the preferred way of dealing with anything remotely resembling dissidence. Seems like that's exactly what you're doing to Juan Cole in your message. Saying I don't want to know what you've "got" on him, thus attacking me but insinuating you have some awful proof of unspecified guilt on his part. If that's not character assassination by innuendo, what is?"

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson18.htm>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 5:03 AM
To: K. Paul Johnson
Subject: Re: The Bahai technique - May 4,1992

Paul,

Excellent post on RACAs! Let's see now, where have I experienced such things.... It's very much the procedure, technique, if you will, of the literal-minded among Bahais.

I've added similar comments from you in another posts to the "REVISED - The Bahai Technique." Hope you don't mind. Put a few more things from you on the web too at

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Johnson.htm>

Let me say thanks. Thanks for your speaking your mind.
It's only you and a few other people who have had the courage to do so that keeps me from cracking up under all the "Bahai love" I'm so often treated to.... That and your independent corroboration of what's really taking place, so often, so often....

Do you have any ideas on how to get trb passed this time? I'd appreciate hearing from you if you do. The RFD will probably be posted now this coming week by Friday.

Fred

-----Original Message-----

From: K. Paul Johnson <pjohnson@vsla.edu>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Friday, September 18, 1998 3:00 PM
Subject: Re: The Bahai technique - May 4,1992

>In article <6tqu5i$r0k@news3.newsguy.com> you wrote:
>: I've stumbled on to a letter I wrote in May of 1992 which, to
>: my surprise, seems to have already identified "The Bahai technique"
>: so thoroughly demonstrated here online:

>:
>:snip
>: have experienced it, for nearly sixteen years now. The usual
>: stratagem in dealing with anyone who would express his conscience
>: in good faith is to pretend the Cause is above any kind of >: criticism whatsoever while intimating that anyone who would speak
>: honestly must have something wrong with him, i.e., his spiritual
>

>Dear Fred,

>
>
>Baha'is have no monopoly on this kind of behavior. Shifting the discussion >from the belief system or institutions to the individual raising the >questions is a universal way of avoiding unwanted topics. See my >post on "relentlessly aggressive cult apologists," immediately inspired by >very recent events, but based years of observations of fanatics >in a number of different groups.

>
>Cheers,

>
>Paul

>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 5:06 AM
Subject: REVISED - alt.religion.bahai FAQ

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) for
Alt.Religion.Bahai and bahai-faith@makelist.com
September 18, 1998
This FAQ will be reposted approximately every two weeks.

Please note that crossposting your messages to talk.religion.misc makes it possible for some people without access to the alt.*
hierarchy to follow along with the discussion on alt.religion.bahai.

Similarly, crossposting or sending a courtesy copy, "cc," to
bahai-faith@makelist.com also allows people with only email
access to participate. Currently, 23 individuals are subscribed.

Other people with web access might use www.dejanews.com or www.reference.com. They both offer reading and posting capabilities, including free email accounts, for people who can't directly access alt.religion.bahai.

Though these stopgap measures may appear cumbersome or repetitive, they really do compensate a little for the lack of talk.religion.bahai, which would be an unmoderated newsgroup on a major hierarchy that most people ought to be able to use.

Alt.Religion.Bahai is now available on America Online (AOL).

NOTE: Not all people agree on the interpretations given below.

Question #1 "what would be the difference between the proposed newsgroup talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai?"

ANSWER: The alt.* hierarchy is not widely available, while the talk.* hierarchy is, since it is on what's called the Big 8 hierarchy of Usenet. Many more Bahais and non-Bahais would be able to access talk.religion.bahai.

Question #2 "Isn't ARB also unmoderated?"

ANSWER: Yes. Alt.religion.bahai is unmoderated and talk.religion.bahai would be too. Though not a newsgroup, the mailing list bahai-faith@makelist.com is also unmoderated.

Question #3 "Why create a t.r.b.?"

ANSWER #1: Because many people believe they experienced or are continuing to experience censorship when attempting to post to soc.religion.bahai. See the quotations from Abdul-Baha: <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #2: Because the Bahai writings support free speech and religious conscience. <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

ANSWER #3: [fill in the blank according to your own opinion.]

Question #4: "Why do the srb moderators oppose trb?"

ANSWER: [Perhaps they'll supply us with an answer to place here]

Question #5: "Are Bahais opposed to freedom of speech and conscience?"

ANSWER: Despite glowing words of love and support for other people's opinions, despite the Universal House of Justice stating at least publicly it is not opposed to an unmoderated forum, the record of actual behavior by Bahais and on soc.religion.bahai and the experience of many Bahais and people who have left the Bahai Faith give reason for concern.

Chronology of major events: talk.religion.bahai

January 17, 1997: The 1st proposal for talk.religion.bahai was submitted to news.announce.newgroups. <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/1stRFD.htm>

Early March 1997: Mark Towfiq, chairman of the BCCA, the Bahai Computer and Communication Association, posts to three Bahai-only mailing lists a call for Bahais to vote NO against talk.religion.bahai. <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/Towfiq.htm>

March 1997: soc.religion.bahai bans all discussion of talk.religion.bahai from its newsgroup. This ban is still in effect more than a year and a half later.

March 31, 1997: The 1st proposal was defeated 157 YES to 691 NO.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/1stRESULT.htm>

April 3, 1997: Jonathan Grobe, a non-Bahai, creates alt.religion.bahai.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/arb.htm>

October 14, 1997: The Universal House of Justice releases a message stating it has no objection to unmoderated newsgroups:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJ1.htm>

November 1997: At a time when discussion was highly favorable in support of talk.religion.bahai, the BCCA deprives FG of access to the private Bahai-only mailing list bahai-discuss and all of its other lists, inflaming Bahai passions against trb. See bahai-discuss archived files and correspondence between FG and the BCCA committee:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/archive.htm>

December 19, 1997: The Universal House of Justice releases a message that suggests it does not understand the nature of Usenet interest polling:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/UHJ2.htm>

January 12, 1998: The 2nd proposal for talk.religion.bahai was submitted.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/2ndRFD.htm>

February 22, 1998: The 2nd proposal was defeated 109 YES to 65 NO.

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/2ndRESULT.htm>

May 25, 1998: srb bans all messages from FG that contain his signature file:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srb23.htm>

September 9, 1998: America Online (AOL) places a Bahai-inspired TOS against FG; AOL removes the TOS after considering both sides of the issue, i.e., Bahai messages attacking and threatening him:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

September 14, 1998: soc.religion.bahai extends its ban on FG's signature file to include all URLs from all posters, allowing only email addresses and the name of the poster:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/srbban.htm>

The 3rd proposal is scheduled to be submitted before the end of September.

For past discussion of censorship on soc.religion.bahai and other issues, including censorship within the Bahai community, see the Web site below.

WEB SITE:

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

MAILING LIST:

bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts) For Web subscription

& List Archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

To Subscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-subscribe@makelist.com

To Unsubscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-unsubscribe@makelist.com

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 6:04 AM
To: Michael McKenny
Subject: talk.religion.bahai

Michael,

The third talk.religion.bahai RFD ought to be posted to news.groups by about Friday. Anything you might be able to do would be highly appreciated.

Hope all is well....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 6:28 AM
To: FG
Subject: NEWS RELEASE

NEWS RELEASE

For immediate release. . . [or]
For Use the Week of September 20th. . .

Contact: FG (xxx) xxx-xxxx or
FG@hotmail.com

Baha'is Debate Freedom of Speech and Conscience

The third interest poll is beginning for talk.religion.bahai, a proposed unmoderated newsgroup on the part of the Internet known as Usenet. Critics charge members of the Baha'i Faith have opposed its creation now for more than a year and a half because they would not be able to exercise the kind of control they exert over soc.religion.bahai, a moderated newsgroup.

Under the Usenet guidelines for discussion groups, if a newsgroup is moderated, a single moderator or panel of moderators chooses which messages are posted for all subscribers to read. There seems to be a classic struggle between Baha'is and ex-Baha'is of liberal sentiment and the elements of a conservative orthodoxy. With recent clashes even taking place on America Online, and soc.religion.bahai now banning any links to any web sites whatsoever, both appear ready for another stormy battle on news.groups, the discussion group where the creation of a new forum is always debated.

With three Americans and an Australian proponent, the controversy has become truly international with people contributing from Scotland, England, Poland, and elsewhere around the world. Many have pointed out that the very nature of the discussion about the Bahai Faith has only become possible because of the far-flung and open nature of the Internet.

One such critic even goes further. Dr. Juan Cole of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, a former Baha'i who withdrew from the Faith after more than twenty years, has asserted there is widespread, pervasive censorship and distortion of information throughout the religion that belies the gentle and tolerant universalism of its Founders. Recently, Dr. Cole has said, "The checks and balances . . . will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without."

A poet and literary critic who remains a Baha'i after more than two decades of membership, FG, one of the proponents of talk.religion.bahai, has developed a web site, "The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience," documenting numerous instances of interference with free speech by the moderators of soc.religion.bahai and the Baha'i Administration:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm>

Whatever the outcome of the third interest poll, the more than 30,000 messages posted to alt.religion.bahai, a less accessible newsgroup than the one wanted, shows Baha'is and others have a lot to say on the matter!

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 8:08 AM
To: K. Paul Johnson
Subject: Fw: NEWS RELEASE

Paul,

Any ideas for improving this news release? I'll be emailing it to about 75 major and local US newspapers.

Rick's an unbelievably dense ass.... You've handled him well! I seldom respond to any of them any more.... People have finally helped me to understand it's best for me not to do so, not being able to control myself enough.

Fred

-----Original Message-----

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Saturday, September 19, 1998 7:28 AM
Subject: NEWS RELEASE

> NEWS RELEASE
>
>For immediate release. . . [or]
>For Use the Week of September 20th. . .

>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 19, 1998 8:14 AM
To: bn872@freenet.carleton.ca
Subject: Re: talk.religion.bahai

Michael,

You might find interesting the recent attempt of Bahais to get me kicked off AOL:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>

It's all the same lies and deceit....

-----Original Message-----

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: FG@hotmail.com <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Saturday, September 19, 1998 7:41 AM
Subject: Re: talk.religion.bahai

>Greetings, Frederick.

> If you are well, it is well.

> Many thanks for letting me know this. I'll try to follow the thread >concerning this. My opinion is that the best chance for quick effective >change was last time. Personally, I have really reached the conclusion >that the extreme authoritarianism of the Baha'i leadership combined >with its unethical and fundamentalist nature make it more dangerous than >Christianity of the Dark Ages. Fortunately, it seems unable to progress >in the democratic countries in this form.

I worry about this too and feel all the more that a more accessible and open forum must be created for the good of both the Bahais and society in general....

> Nevertheless, I will continue to do whatever I can to ameliorate the >situation. This is limited not only by the many other demands on my time, >but by the way I played the game, if you'll forgive the term. It was my >move, if you will, in response to the apparent innovation (as I presented >it) of freedom of speech on the Baha'i Internet (i.e. my reading of the >letter from the UHJ which did not instruct Baha'is to vote NO and the fact >hundreds of NO voters first time did not oppose second time round) to say >now that there was such freedom of speech, then I could disappear from >Baha'i cyberspace. I don't think it would be appropriate for me to post >new material unless there is new evidence of efforts to suppress freedom >of speech.

See AOL....

> Nothing, however, prevents you from retrieving past posts of mine and >placing these into the discussion this time round, if these seem to fit.
>Also, I would be delighted to receive any and all evidence of attempts >by the UHJ since February to suppress freedom of speech. You may send >this as personal e-mail. I have moved on to such an extent that I'm not >at all up to date on what's going on. I'd be happy to have a look at the >Ridvan message from the UHJ or any other recent material from them, if >there are indications therein that they are seeking to suppress free >speech.

It's all undercover with the lackies up front.... I don't believe I could post your old messages. The real value of your opinions would be what they are now currently to most readers after considerable time for reflection or the wounds to heal or scab over....

Sincerely best wishes,

Fred

> Again, many thanks for keeping me informed of this.
>
> Thrive Ever, > Michael
>
>
>>Michael,
>>
>>The third talk.religion.bahai RFD ought to be posted to >>news.groups by about Friday. Anything you might be >>able to do would be highly appreciated.
>>
>>Hope all is well....
>>
>>FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
>><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
>>talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>>
>>
>
>
>--
>"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
> (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, September 20, 1998 5:29 AM
To: Timothy F. Mulligan
Subject: Re: Censorship at alt.religion.bahai

-----Original Message-----
From: Timothy F. Mulligan <tmulligan@Central.UH.EDU>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Date: Saturday, September 19, 1998 4:53 PM
Subject: Re: Censorship at alt.religion.bahai

FG wrote:

> Rich himself, a month or so ago, was extremely derisive > and insulting to Timothy Mulligan. All the "good" Bahais stood > by and said nothing.... A fine demonstration of Bahai "unity."

I wouldn't say that he was derisive and insulting. Snide, yes. Rick twice insinuated that I was "avoiding an issue"; first, he said (or rather, hinted) it was my homosexuality, and toward the end of our ongoing exchange, he said it was the alleged self-evident divine origin of Baha'u'llah's writings. In neither case was he correct. I found this tactic to be more annoying than insulting.

Glaysheer:

(Little arrows aren't going in. Sorry.) You're forgetting or missed in the heat of the battle a sentence or two in which he said - I can't remember the exact words - something like you were an idiot etc.... I wish I had save it at the time because it was a rare slip up.

You:

What also annoyed me about Richard is the way he moves the goal post. I've seen this in his exchanges with others, as well. He will invariably claim that his opponent makes insufficient or superficial arguments, or that an argument lacks supporting evidence. And he'll just keep saying that, over and over and over.

It's called the Bahai technique, you see.... It's a game, Tim, you've got to understand, because they've got you playing it. READ the REVISED version of "The Bahai Technique" on arb or on my web site, if you haven't already.... Schaut in more than a year and a half has never posted a single word otherwise than the kind of fundie attack you're refering to....

The RFD will be posted by Friday. Hope you stay around. You've been through a lot lately. We need you.

Fred

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, September 20, 1998 6:03 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: Bahai TOS on AOL now on web site

I had somehow neglected to put the most important message regarding the AOL incident on my web site. It is now available there:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOLremove.htm>

FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

FG wrote in message <6to696$jp8@news1.newsguy.com>...
>I think of John Milton's sonnet "On the New Forcers of Conscience >under the Long Parliament," especially its final line:
>
>"New Presbyter is but Old Priest writ Large."
>
>Given the techniques of Bahais on AOL, the inescapable
>conclusion must read:
>
>"New Bahai is but old Mullah writ Large."
>
>FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
>talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>FG wrote in message <6tj52t$1d7@news1.newsguy.com>...
>>All the relevant messages to this incident on AOL
>>can now be found at
>><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>
>>
>>FG....The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
>><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
>>talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
>>Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Sunday, September 20, 1998 6:20 AM
To: bn872@freenet.carleton.ca
Subject: Re: talk.religion.bahai

Michael,

Somehow I failed to put the most important message on the AOL page! Thanks for bringing it to my attention:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOLremove.htm>

On other matters, I understand how you feel....

-----Original Message-----

From: McKenny Michael <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
To: FG@hotmail.com <FG@hotmail.com>
Cc: bn872@freenet.carleton.ca <bn872@freenet.carleton.ca>
Date: Saturday, September 19, 1998 6:06 PM
Subject: Re: talk.religion.bahai

>Greetings, Frederick.

> If you are well, it is well.

> Many thanks for your message.

> I went to the URL you provided and quickly scanned some of the >material there. I don't understand the message from AOL if that's >who it is. It seemed to me they said after a review of the material >they saw no reason to remove the warning, but that this would >automatically vanish at the end of six months.

> Reading the material from Baha'i sources has me realizing how far >these are from my current position. The Baha'is have always stressed >authority. It is the foundation of the religion. I can recall that I >did it myself in the old days. I would say to non-Baha'is who wished >to begin with whether or not there was a god, "No, first we assess the >claim by Baha'u'llah to be a Manifestation of God; if he is, then, >there has to be a god."

> The covenant, the line of infallibly correct spiritual guidance, >makes sense only if there are altruistic and spiritual leaders. Yet, in >reality if you have altruistic and spiritual leaders the influence of >their lofty thoughts and noble deeds do not require the kind of power >over conscience which this covenant grants. When I began to present in >very convincing language the case for women on the Universal House of >Justice, the men holding and preparing to hold such power saw the threat >of my reasoning. It permitted them to allow women on the UHJ, but they >did not want that.

> Also, they did not want the kind of world where the influence of >ethical behaviour or principled action could cause a reversal of the >ruling of the supreme council. They want a religion whose believers >will unquestioningly obey any command soever from the UHJ. How better >to identify such believers than to present them with an intolerable >belief, and say this must be accepted.

That's it. You've got it....

> Also, power for the guys at the top is better assured through the >existence of others, enemies. This is completely contrary to the new >way of all-inclusiveness possible to perceive in the Baha'i Revelation.
>All-inclusiveness is something quite necessary for any effective and >ethical adoption of the Baha'i world view by humanity as a whole. Yet, >the current members of the UHJ and the other high leaders are not at >all interested in this. They seek to rule today a religion, and it is >more effective if some number of people can be convinced to obey any >and all commands, and if these believers can feel threatened by some >evil enemies.

> I am aware of this mentality in the Baha'i Faith. I do not agree to >bolster their hold on power by playing the role of an enemy.

Food for thought, for me.... I too do not wish to play the enemy....
I do not consider myself an enemy of the Bahai Faith. I even, still, hope that it could change, become less oppressive and manipulative and more open and accepting of diversity of views.
That's all I basically ask. The response I've received for more than a year and a half now is deafening.... I don't know how it will end for me. They may denounce me officially as a covenant breaker when they think the moment's right, as some have warned me....
Yet I do not consider myself a covenant breaker. Indeed, I believe I have tried to defend the covenant from the grossly fanatical distortion it is for the fundamentalists.... I have sacrificed so much time and energy and made so little headway with Bahais. Very discouraging....

However, alt.religion.bahai has become very firmly established and can never be removed now and my web site will continue.
It's in all the search engines. So even if talk.religion.bahai is defeated a third time, I feel some progress has been made and the fanaticism of Bahais is on record where those who can think for themselves can find it and consider it....

There's a chance, though, vote YES, if you would, and bring any friends you have along with you.

> They have demonstrated the inappropriateness of their religion to >serve humanity. If someday there are women on the Universal House of >Justice and an abandonment of the present immoral insistence that any >command at all by those at the top has to be obeyed, regardless of >morality and conscience, then perhaps this religion will be worthy of >consideration.

> I do not criticize you. The universe is a wonderful place, because >it has such vast diversity. Personally, I believe the Baha'i Faith was >potentially of great benefit, and that it has withered and died. This >goes back further. Actually, religious intolerance is almost wholly >the result of dogmatic insistence derived from monotheism. Those guys, >Moses, Muhammad, Jesus, who insisted, or whose followers insisted on >their behalf, that there was only one god and only one valid spiritual >path are wrong, IMHO, both in their theology and in the consequences >this had for humanity.

> Yet, within whatever context you choose to labour, may your efforts >be blessed.

> Be very sure to let me know of any official action by Auxiliary >Board Members etc to silence you or anyone else. I am also interested >in other attempts, such as Wendy's to silence you. However, it is the >official action which has my keenest interest.

They always use the lackies in the front lines and hide behind them, you see....

> I will have to reflect very carefully on what action to take in >response to open attempts by Baha'i authorities to squash freedom of >speech.

They don't make open attempts but always much more ambiguous. Srb has just banned all URLs in signature files, for instance.... They banned in May any message from me that contained my signature file because it pointed to my web site which has a link to Yahoo's Bahai page which has links on it to covenant breaker's sites! Completely absurd, but that's where fanaticism is getting them....

As you can see from the above, I really have moved quite far >from the context of the Baha'i Faith, and I do not really believe it is >effective for me to play the role of an enemy to these people, whom I >now see as inconsequential, anyway.

> May this find you very well, and may the future be ever better than >we can imagine.

> All the Best,

Michael

>
>
>>
>>Michael,
>>
>>You might find interesting the recent attempt of >>Bahais to get me kicked off AOL:
>><https://members.tripod.com/~FG/AOL.htm>
>>
>>It's all the same lies and deceit....
>>
>>
>>
>
>--
>"My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard."
> (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)

May the gods bless you....

Fred

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 21, 1998 5:04 AM
To: bahai-faith @ makelist.com
Subject: Re: On soc.religion.bahai - brief quotations

Why don't you email it to each one of them then? You can easily tell what people need to read it.... I won't recite all their names here.... It probably won't do any good, but, who knows, miracles supposedly even happened in this religion.

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

Kent Johnson wrote in message <6u006r$1ttl$1@as4100c.javanet.com>...
>I have the information. It convinced me, but I am reserving it for those >who defend the behavior of those partisan Baha'is who run the srb. If they >say it isn't true, well, I can show them it is.
>
>Other than that, I see no reason to drag their names through the mud. In >fact, I only have personal experience with three of the moderators. Maybe >the rest are okay.
>
>Regards, --Kent
>
>
>>The purpose would not be for convincing fundamentalists Bahais.
>>Nothing anyone can say can reach or help most of them.... But >>it could help people of a more open mind who can still think for >>themselves, especially when added to the already overwhelming
>>evidence of censorship and duplicity....
>>
>>FG....
>
>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]

Sent: Monday, September 21, 1998 5:13 AM
Subject: Moonies & Bahais

Anyone watch 60 Minutes last night? There was a fascinating segment on about "reverend" Moon, Leader of the Moonies. His former daughter-in-law has written a book titled In the Shadow of the Moon, about her life with Moon's drug addict, philandering, abusive son and watching Moon from the inside duping people of millions. A real holy experience. She mentioned at one point that Moon too had a son from an adulterous relationship while preaching the sanctity of matrimony and the family.

It all reminded me of Iranian Bahais I know of....

FG...The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/index.htm> AOL: alt.religion.bahai,
talk.religion.misc; or bahai-faith@makelist.com (accepts all "cc" posts)
Subscription & archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 21, 1998 5:54 AM
To: FG
Subject: 4th ROUGH DRAFT - talk.religion.bahai

[This is a rough draft only. You may not vote at this time.]

REQUEST FOR DISCUSSION (RFD)
unmoderated group talk.religion.bahai

This is a formal Request for Discussion (RFD) to create an unmoderated worldwide discussion group called talk.religion.bahai. This is not a Call for Votes (CFV); you cannot vote at this time. Procedural details appear below. All followup discussion should be crossposted to news.groups,alt.religion.bahai.

Newsgroup line:
talk.religion.bahai Discussion of the Baha'i Faith.

RATIONALE: talk.religion.bahai

Currently, the only newsgroup on the Big 8 heirarchies, which exists specifically for discussion of the Baha'i Faith, is moderated. A need exists for an unmoderated forum, and this proposed newsgroup would meet that need.

From January 17, 1997, the posting of the first proposed RFD, until March 27, 1997, more than 759 messages were posted concerning talk.religion.bahai, 11 messages per day for 70 days.

From April 1, 1997, to September 27, 1997, over 2,863 messages have been posted on alt.religion.bahai from people with highly varying points of view on the Baha'i Faith, resulting in 16 messages per day for 179 days, and 477 messages a month for six months. Since www.dejanews.com does not pick up all postings, an additional conservative 5 percent, roughly 150 messages, have probably been lost from the archive. During this time period, approximately 513 different individuals posted on over 1,200 threads.

From September 28, 1997, to September 21, 1998, over 31,000 messages have been posted to alt.religion.bahai resulting in 90 messages per day for 341 days and 2,583 messages per month for nine months.

These numbers may be verified by searching www.dejanews.com for `talk.religion.bahai` and `alt.religion.bahai` for the relevant time periods. Please note that despite the poor propagation of the `alt.` hierarchy the high rate of posting demonstrates significant interest, justifying the forming of an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith on the `talk.` hierarchy. It is only reasonable to conclude that the easy accessibility of the `talk.*` hierarchy will lead to even higher rates of posting by interested people.

As a further indication of interest in an unmoderated newsgroup, it should be noted that the web site "The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience" has had more than 3,680 hits on it since May 8, 1998:
<https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>

The proponents intend that `talk.religion.bahai` will complement, rather than supplant, the existing moderated group `soc.religion.bahai`, and will provide those without access to `alt.religion.bahai`, on the less well propagated `alt.*` hierarchy, the opportunity to participate, especially since many people who voted YES on the first proposal were unable to join in on `alt.religion.bahai`, their ISPs not carrying the hierarchy. It is anticipated that `alt.religion.bahai` will evolve along as its users see fit and will complement `talk.religion.bahai` as an alternative unmoderated newsgroup.

CHARTER: `talk.religion.bahai`

All topics or ideas relevant to the Baha'i faith -- its history, teachings, theology, etc. -- would be appropriate areas for discussion.

Postings may take any point of view with regard to the Baha'i Faith. Whilst this allows criticism, including criticism that might be uncomfortable or hurtful to some, it also fully opens the door for enquirers to see with their own eyes and not through the eyes of their neighbours by asking questions and reading replies from anyone who is interested in their question. `Talk.religion.bahai` also fills the need for the first and only universally accessible Internet forum about the Baha'i Faith. As the Internet is clearly becoming an indispensable part of modern life, such access for those interested in the Baha'i Faith will, in the future, be as important a civil right as the right to free speech in non-electronic forums. Thus `talk.religion.bahai` is clearly in the spirit of Baha'u'llah's injunctions supporting a free press.

As Baha'u'llah taught, a free press has both rights and responsibilities. Therefore some Baha'is might fear misuse of the facility, especially postings by covenant-breakers. However, Shoghi Effendi has addressed this question:

"First, the civil rights of Covenant-breakers must be scrupulously upheld."

From a letter written on behalf of the Universal House of Justice to a National Spiritual Assembly, October 29, 1974. Lights of Guidance, Page: 186.

Further, it is permitted for Baha'is to read and post material in an open Internet forum:

"In general, the House of Justice has no objection to Baha'is' participating in public, unmoderated discussions about the Faith, whether those discussions take place in person or through some form of electronic communication."
Department of the Secretariat, DATE: 14 October 1997 U.S.A.

Readers are asked to observe standard netiquette and voting procedure in their use of this newsgroup and during its creation.

Readers are asked to observe Baha'i standards of conduct and not to start or prolong flamewars in the group, but to focus instead on articles and threads written in more moderate terms.

The posting of articles not specifically relevant to the Baha'i Faith is strongly discouraged. Also discouraged are personal messages, large ASCII graphics, binaries, special-format files, pornography, spam, and any postings of a purely commercial nature.

Crossposting to irrelevant groups is also discouraged, and readers are encouraged to redirect followups to reduce excessive crossposting. Readers may also post articles that have been rejected from soc.religion.bahai, so long as they conform to this charter.

As is true for other groups devoted to discussing a particular religion, including supposedly soc.religion.bahai, the talk.religion.bahai newsgroup is not an official organ of any institutional faith.

END CHARTER.

PROCEDURE:

An instructive passage by Russ Allbery might fruitfully be considered by all:

"There is no official 'list of acceptable reasons for voting'; Nothing of the sort is enforced. There's no way of knowing why people vote the way they do. There is, however, a general consensus that certain patterns of voting constitute abuse of the system. Block voting on religious, cultural, ethnic, or political grounds is one of the things that is frowned upon. It is unlikely that even extreme block voting would cause a result to be overturned, but it's practically assured that block voting will earn an extremely bad reputation for the group doing the block voting. In other words, yes, the Baha'i could vote down the newsgroup en masse and be successful. This would, however, also earn the Faith a reputation (fairly or no) amongst those people who followed the proposal as a religion that advocates censorship. I think it's in the best interest of Baha'is and the Baha'i Faith to avoid that."

The process of creating newsgroups is twofold. First is the RFD stage, when someone writes a Request for Discussion (RFD) outlining the purpose of the proposed group. The RFD appears in news.announce.newsgroups, news.groups, and other relevant discussion groups. Anyone may publicly comment on the RFD in news.groups for a three-week period. During the discussion phase, proponents may modify the RFD in response to suggestions from posters on news.groups.

The second stage is the Call for Votes (CFV) stage. The proposal must pass a Usenet-wide vote with a 2/3 supermajority -- and at least 100 more votes in favor than against -- to be created. Anyone with an e-mail address may cast a ballot. A neutral votetaker from the Usenet Volunteer Votetakers (UVV) conducts all CFV's.

This RFD attempts to comply with the Usenet newsgroup creation guidelines outlined in "How to Create a New Usenet Newsgroup" and "Writing an RFD" and available for perusal on news.groups or news.announce.newsgroups. Please refer to these documents if you have further questions about the process.

DISTRIBUTION:

This RFD has been posted to the following newsgroups:
news.announce.newsgroups, news.groups, soc.religion.bahai,
alt.religion.bahai, talk.religion.misc, soc.rights.human and the following four mailing lists:

Talisman
Subscribe: jsgreen@umich.edu

Bahai Studies
Subscribe: major@johnco.cc.ks.us

h-Bahai h-Bahai@h-net.msu.edu
Subscribe: jrcole@umich.edu

bahai-faith bahai-faith@egroups.com Subscribe: bahai-faith-subscribe@makelist.com or <https://www.eGroups.com>

Pointers will appear in the following newsgroups:

soc.religion.unitarian-univ,soc.religion.eastern,
soc.religion.gnosis,soc.religion.hindu,
soc.religion.paganism,soc.religion.quaker,
talk.religion.buddhism,talk.religion.newage,
uk.religion.misc,uk.religion.interfaith,
uk.religion.other-faiths,news.admin.censorship,
alt.atheism,alt.atheism.moderated,
alt.religion,alt.religion.christian.biblestudy, alt.religion.christian.last-days, alt.religion.christian.roman-catholic,
alt.religion.christian.pentecostal,alt.individualism, talk.philosophy.misc,alt.activism,talk.atheism,
talk.philosophy.humanism,talk.philosophy.misc, alt.philosophy.debate,aus.religion.christian

Proponent: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Proponent: Ron House <house@usq.edu.au>

Proponent: Fran Baker <fran@crhc.uiuc.edu>

Proponent: Frank Baker <fbaker@ncsa.uiuc.edu>

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Monday, September 21, 1998 6:04 AM
Subject: 4th ROUGH DRAFT - talk.religion.bahai

[This is a rough draft only. You may not vote at this time.]

REQUES

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Archive

(50+ megabytes)

Please feel free to download and store these archives for study by future Bahai scholars.

Download My Entire Website:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/BahaiCensorship.zip>

Includes All Archives Below

Successfully Scanned with Anti-Virus Software before and after zipping

Google Archive for

alt.religion.bahai

<https://groups.google.com.au/group/alt.religion.bahai/about?hl=en>

talk.religion.bahai

<https://groups.google.com.au/group/talk.religion.bahai/about?hl=en>

Many of the messages for alt.religion.bahai and talk.religion.bahai, since for 1997, can be recovered from the files below included in the BahaiCensorship zip file.

Not all Individual Files below are available via this menu.
Download Entire Website and unzip them with one click!

Talk.Religion.Bahai - Passed on the third vote - January 10, 1999

Available:

talk.religion.bahai arb83198-103198

talk.religion.bahai 1199-22899

talk.religion.bahai 3199-43099

talk.religion.bahai 10-24-99

Alt Religion Bahai January 1, 1998-February 28, 1998

These files cover extensive efforts by Bahais to suppress talk.religion.bahai after it finally passed following three years of relentless opposition. Talk.Religion.Bahai 1 - 1 megabyte. 1/1/99 to 2/28/99.

Talk.Religion.Bahai 2 - 1/2 megabyte. 3/1/99 to 4/30/99.

Talk.Religion.Bahai 3 - 1.2 megabytes. 5/1/99 to 8/31/99.

Talk.Religion.Bahai 4 - 851kb. 2/8/99 to 1/31/00.

Talk.Religion.Bahai 5 - 895kb. 2/1/00 to 8/1/00.

Bahai Censorship on AOL - During Early 1999

AOL Censorship 1/1/99 to 2/28/99 Half a megabyte. Ascending order.

This file contains extensive evidence of the Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster and Susan Maneck's targeting me in order to result in the suspension of my AOL account.

Alt.Religion.Bahai Archive - April 1997 to October 1998

The first three ascii text files are not arranged in chronological order and date from approximately early April to late August 1997. They can be searched with any text editor.

Alt Religion Bahai 1 1.1 megabytes

Alt Religion Bahai 2 860k

Alt Religion Bahai 3 744k

Alt Religion Bahai 4 322k (Ascending chronologically: September 9, 1997-November 4, 1997)

Alt Religion Bahai 5 1.4 megabytes (Descending chronologically: Sept 22, 1997-Dec 31, 1997)

Alt Religion Bahai 6 800k (Ascending chronologically: September 10, 1997-January 7, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 7 600k (Ascending chronologically: January 1, 1998-February 28, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 8 1.2 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: March 1, 1998-April 30, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 9 1.2 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: May 1, 1998-June 30, 1998.)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 10 1.1 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: Sept 11, 1997-June 28, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 11 1.39 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: July 1, 1998-August 30, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 12 1.4 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: Aug 31, 1998-Oct 31, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 13 1.5 megabytes (Assorted files from January 1, 1998 to December 31, 1998.)

Bahai-Discuss Archive - Fall of 1997 - ALL FILES AVAILABLE ONLINE

This archive contains all postings to the Bahai mailing list Bahai-Discuss that had anything to do with the second interest poll for talk.religion.bahai during the approximately two months prior to my being deprived of my right of access by the BCCA. I believe the files below reveal most convincingly the fanaticism and involvement of the BCCA in attempting for more than two years to scuttle talk.religion.bahai and thereby the involvement of the Bahai administration itself. Ascii text format. Messages appear in chronological order.

Bahai Discuss Archive September to early November 1997. 1.1 megabytes. All discussion re trb

Bahai-discuss-sampler1 9/21/97 22k A selection from the full Archive of fanatic opposition to trb

Bahai-discuss-sampler2 9/22/97 14k A selection from the full Archive of fanatic opposition to trb

BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association) 33k. My pleading with BCCA to intervene

BCCA vows "steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility" 1k 11/10/97 BCCA ignores my pleas and expels me from its lists

Talk.Religion.Bahai Archive - Fall 1996 to March 1997

Discussion prior to the creation of alt.religion.bahai, that related to the first interest poll on talk.religion.bahai. These ascii text format (*.txt) files are not arranged in chronological order. They can be searched with any text editor.

Talk Religion Bahai 1 1 megabyte

Talk Religion Bahai 2 1.2 megabytes

Talk Religion Bahai 3 1.4 megabytes

Talk Religion Bahai 4 1.2 megabytes

Bahai-Faith@coollist.com Archive

This unmoderated mailing list served as a transition from approximately the end of the second vote for talk.religion.bahai to early May 1998 when it was superceded by bahai-faith@makelist.com which eventually changed its name to bahai-faith@egroups.com. The egroups.com list and its archive were deleted shortly after talk.religion.bahai was created in January of 1999. Most of its messages were crossposted to alt.religion.bahai and may be found scattered throughout the respective archives here.

bahai-faith@coollist.com 26k

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Archive

(20+ megabytes)

Please feel free to download and store these archives for study by future Bahai scholars.

All Archives Below Combined in One Searchable 25 megabyte Text File to 7-31-2000

Or Entire Website: BahaiCensorship10-27-01.Zip 17 megabytes

Individual Files below no longer available. Download Entire Website and unzip them:: BahaiCensorship10-27-01.Zip 17 megabytes

Talk.Religion.Bahai - Passed on the third vote - January 10, 1999

These files cover extensive efforts by Bahais to suppress talk.religion.bahai after it finally passed following three years of relentless opposition.

Talk.Religion.Bahai 1 - 1 megabyte. 1/1/99 to 2/28/99.
Talk.Religion.Bahai 2 - 1/2 megabyte. 3/1/99 to 4/30/99.
Talk.Religion.Bahai 3 - 1.2 megabytes. 5/1/99 to 8/31/99.
Talk.Religion.Bahai 4 - 851kb. 2/8/99 to 1/31/00.
Talk.Religion.Bahai 5 - 895kb. 2/1/00 to 8/1/00.

Bahai Censorship on AOL - During Early 1999

AOL Censorship 1/1/99 to 2/28/99 Half a megabyte. Ascending order.

This file contains extensive evidence of the Bahai Forum Leader Mark Foster and Susan Maneck's targetting me in order to result in the suspension of my AOL account.

Alt.Religion.Bahai Archive - April 1997 to October 1998

The first three ascii text files are not arranged in chronological order and date from approximately early April to late August 1997. They can be searched with any text editor.

Alt Religion Bahai 1 1.1 megabytes

Alt Religion Bahai 2 860k

Alt Religion Bahai 3 744k

Alt Religion Bahai 4 322k (Ascending chronologically: September 9, 1997-November 4, 1997)

Alt Religion Bahai 5 1.4 megabytes (Descending chronologically: Sept 22, 1997-Dec 31, 1997)

Alt Religion Bahai 6 800k (Ascending chronologically: September 10, 1997-January 7, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 7 600k (Ascending chronologically: January 1, 1998-February 28, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 8 1.2 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: March 1, 1998-April 30, 1998)

Alt Religion Bahai 9 1.2 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: May 1, 1998-June 30, 1998.)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 10 1.1 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: Sept 11, 1997-June 28, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 11 1.39 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: July 1, 1998-August 30, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 12 1.4 megabytes (Ascending chronologically: Aug 31, 1998-Oct 31, 1998)

Alt.Religion.Bahai 13 1.5 megabytes (Assorted files from January 1, 1998 to December 31, 1998.)

Bahai-Discuss Archive - Fall of 1997

This archive contains all postings to the Bahai mailing list Bahai-Discuss that had anything to do with the second interest poll for talk.religion.bahai during the approximately two months prior to my being deprived of my right of access by the BCCA. I believe the files below reveal most convincingly the fanaticism and involvement of the BCCA in attempting for more than two years to scuttle talk.religion.bahai and thereby the involvement of the Bahai administration itself. Ascii text format. Messages appear in chronological order.

Bahai Discuss Archive September to early November 1997. 1.1 megabytes. All discussion re trb

Bahai-discuss-sampler1 9/21/97 22k A selection from the full Archive of fanatic opposition to trb

Bahai-discuss-sampler2 9/22/97 14k A selection from the full Archive of fanatic opposition to trb

BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association) 33k. My pleading with BCCA to intervene

BCCA vows "steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility" 1k 11/10/97 BCCA ignores my pleas and expels me from its lists

Talk.Religion.Bahai Archive - Fall 1996 to March 1997

Discussion prior to the creation of alt.religion.bahai, that related to the first interest poll on talk.religion.bahai. These ascii text format (*.txt) files are not arranged in chronological order. They can be searched with any text editor.

Talk Religion Bahai 1 1 megabyte
Talk Religion Bahai 2 1.2 megabytes
Talk Religion Bahai 3 1.4 megabytes
Talk Religion Bahai 4 1.2 megabytes

Bahai-Faith@coolist.com Archive

This unmoderated mailing list served as a transition from approximately the end of the second vote for talk.religion.bahai to early May 1998 when it was superceded by bahai-faith@makelist.com which eventually changed its name to bahai-faith@egroups.com. The egroups.com list and its archive were deleted shortly after talk.religion.bahai was created in January of 1999. Most of its messages were crossposted to alt.religion.bahai and may be found scattered throughout the respective archives here.

bahai-faith@coolist.com 26k

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Excerpts from:

AREOPAGITICA
by John Milton 1644

Analysis of the Order of Parliament (June 14, 1643), Against which the Areopagitica was Directed

- 1. The Preamble recounts that "many false...scandalous, seditious, and libellous" works have lately been published, "to the great defamation of Religion and government"; that many private printing-presses have been set up; and that "divers of the Stationers' Company" have infringed on the rights of the Company.
- 2. "It is therefore ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament,"
(1) that no Order "of both or either House shall be printed" except by command; (2) that no Book, etc., "shall from henceforth be printed or put to sale, unless the same be first approved of and licensed by such person or persons as both or either of the said Houses shall appoint for the licensing of the same"; (3) that no book, of which the copyright has been granted to the Company, "for their relief and the maintenance of their poor," be printed by any person or persons "without the license and consent of the Master, Warden, and assistants of the said Company"; (4) that no book, "formerly printed here," be imported from beyond seas, "upon pain of forfeiting the same to the Owner" of the Copyright, "and such further punishment as shall be thought fit."
- 3. The Stationers' Company and the officers of the two Houses are authorised to search for unlicensed Presses, and to break them up;

to search for unlicensed Books, etc., and confiscate them; and
to
"apprehend all authors, printers and others" concerned in publishing unlicensed books and to bring them before the Houses "or the Committee of Examination" for "further punishments," such persons not to be released till they have given satisfaction and also "sufficient caution not to offend in like sort for the future."
4. "All justices of the Peace, Captains, Constables and other officers" are ordered to give aid in the execution of the above.

A SPEECH FOR THE LIBERTY OF UNLICENSED PRINTING, TO THE PARLIAMENT OF ENGLAND (1644)

THEY, who to states and governors of the Commonwealth direct their speech, High Court of Parliament, or, wanting such access in a private condition, write that which they foresee may advance the public good; I suppose them, as at the beginning of no mean endeavour, not little altered and moved inwardly in their minds: some with doubt of what will be the success, others with fear of what will be the censure; some with hope, others with confidence of what they have to speak. And me perhaps each of these dispositions, as the subject was whereon I entered, may have at other times variously affected;
and likely might in these foremost expressions now also disclose which of them swayed most, but that the very attempt of this address thus made, and the thought of whom it hath recourse to, hath got
the power within me to a passion, far more welcome than incidental to a preface.
Which though I stay not to confess ere any ask, I shall be blameless, if it be no other than the joy and gratulation which it brings to all who wish and promote their country's liberty; whereof this whole discourse proposed will be a certain testimony, if not a trophy. For this is not the liberty which we can hope, that no grievance ever should arise in the Commonwealth-that let no man in this world expect; but when complaints are freely heard, deeply considered and speedily reformed, then is the utmost bound of civil liberty attained that wise men look for.

If ye be thus resolved, as it were injury to think ye were not, I know not what should withhold me from presenting ye with fit instance wherein to show both that love of truth which ye eminently profess, and that uprightness of your judgment which is not wont to be partial to yourselves; by judging over again that Order which ye have ordained to regulate Printing:-that no book, pamphlet, or paper shall be henceforth printed, unless the same be first approved and licensed by such, or at least one of such, as shall be thereto appointed.

Last, that it will be primely to the discouragement of all learning, and the stop of Truth, not only by disexercising and blunting our abilities in what we know already, but by hindering and cropping the discovery that might be yet further made both in religious and civil Wisdom.

Many a man lives a burden to the earth; but a good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life.

In Athens, where books and wits were ever busier than in any other part of Greece, I find but only two sorts of writings which the magistrate cared to take notice of; those either blasphemous and atheistical, or libellous. Thus the books of Protagoras were by the judges of Areopagus commanded to be burnt, and himself banished the territory for a discourse begun with his confessing not to know "whether there were gods, or whether not." And against defaming, it was agreed that none should be traduced by name, as was the manner of Vetus Comoedia, whereby we may guess how they censured libelling. And this course was quick enough, as Cicero writes, to quell both the desperate wits of other atheists, and the open way of defaming, as the event showed. Of other sects and opinions, though tending to voluptuousness, and the denying of Divine Providence, they took no heed.

The Romans also, for many ages trained up only to a military roughness resembling most the Lacedaemonian guise, knew of learning little but what their twelve Tables, and the Pontific College with their augurs and flamens taught them in religion and law....

Except in these two points, how the world went in books, the magistrate kept no reckoning.

By this time the emperors were become Christians, whose discipline in this point I do not find to have been more severe than what was formerly in practice.

And that the primitive Councils and bishops were wont only to declare what books were not commendable, passing no further, but leaving it to each one's conscience to read or to lay by, till after the year 800, is observed already by Padre Paolo, the great unmasker of the Trentine Council. After which time the Popes of Rome, engrossing what they pleased of political rule into their own hands, extended their dominion over

men's eyes, as they had before over their judgments, burning
and prohibiting to be read what they fancied not; yet sparing in their censures, and the books not many which they so dealt with: till Martin
V., by his bull, not only prohibited, but was the first that excommunicated the reading of heretical books; for about that time Wickliffe and Huss, growing terrible, were they who first drove
the Papal Court to a stricter policy of prohibiting. Which course Leo X. and his successors followed, until the Council of Trent and the Spanish Inquisition engendering together brought forth, or perfected, those Catalogues and expurging Indexes, that rake through the entrails of an old good author, with a violation worse than any could be offered to his tomb. Nor did they stay in matters heretical, but any subject that was not to their palate, they either condemned in a Prohibition, or had it straight into the new Purgatory of an Index.
To fill up the measure of encroachment, their last invention was to ordain that no book, pamphlet, or paper should be printed (as if
St. Peter had bequeathed them the keys of the press also out of Paradise) unless it were approved and licensed under the hands
of two or three glutton friars.

And thus ye have the inventors and the original of book-licensing ripped and drawn as lineally as any pedigree. We have it not, that can be heard of, from any ancient state, or polity or church; nor by any statute left us by our ancestors elder or later; nor from the modern custom of any reformed city or church abroad; but from the most anti-christian council and the most tyrannous inquisition that ever inquired. Till then books were ever as freely admitted into the world as any other birth; the issue of the brain was no more stifled
than the issue of the womb....

But some will say, What though the inventors were bad, the thing for all that may be good? It may be so; yet if that thing be no such deep invention, but obvious, and easy for any man to light on, and yet best and wisest commonwealths through all ages and occasions have foreborne to use it, and falsest seducers and oppressors of men were the first who took it up, and to no other purpose but to obstruct and hinder the first approach of Reformation....

The worthy man, loth to give offence, fell into a new debate with himself what was to be thought; when suddenly a vision sent from God (it is his own epistle that so avers it) confirmed him in these words: Read any books whatever come to thy hands, for thou art sufficient both to judge aright, and to examine each matter. To this revelation he assented the sooner, as he confesses, because it was answerable to that of the Apostle to the Thessalonians, Prove all things, hold fast that which is good. And he might have added another remarkable saying of the same author: To the pure, all things are pure; not only meats and drinks, but all kind of knowledge whether of good or evil; the knowledge cannot defile, nor consequently the books, if the will and conscience be not defiled. For books are as meats and viands are; some of good, some of evil substance; and yet God, in that unapocryphal vision, said without exception, Rise, Peter, kill and eat, leaving the choice to each man's discretion. Wholesome meats to a vitiated stomach differ little or nothing from unwholesome; and best books to a naughty mind are not unapplicable to occasions of evil. Bad meats will scarce breed good nourishment in the healthiest concoction; but herein the difference is of bad books, that they to a discreet and judicious reader serve in many respects to discover, to confute, to forewarn, and to illustrate.

I conceive, therefore, that when God did enlarge the universal diet of man's body, saving ever the rules of temperance, He then also, as before, left arbitrary the dieting and repasting of minds; as wherein every mature man might have to exercise his own leading capacity.

For those actions which enter into a man, rather than issue out of him, and therefore defile not, God uses not to captivate under a perpetual childhood of prescription, but trusts him with the gift of reason to be his own chooser....

Good and evil we know in the field of this world grow up together almost inseparably; and the knowledge of good is so involved and interwoven the knowledge of evil, and in so many cunning resemblances hardly to be discerned, that those confused seeds which were imposed upon Psyche as an incessant labour to cull out, and sort asunder, were not more intermixed. It was from out the rind of one apple tasted, that the knowledge of good and evil, as two twins cleaving together, leaped forth into the world. And perhaps this is that doom which Adam fell into of knowing good and evil, that is to say of knowing good by evil. As therefore the state of man now is; what wisdom can there be to choose, what continence to forbear without the knowledge of evil? He that can apprehend and consider vice with all her baits and seeming pleasures, and yet abstain, and yet distinguish, and yet prefer that which is truly better, he is the true wayfaring Christian.

I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat. Assuredly we bring not innocence into the world, we bring impurity much rather; that which purifies us is trial, and trial is by what is contrary. That virtue therefore which is but a youngling in the contemplation of evil, and knows not the utmost that vice promises to her followers, and rejects it, is but a blank virtue, not a pure; her whiteness is but an excremental whiteness. Which was the reason why our sage and serious poet Spenser, whom I dare be known to think a better teacher than Scotus or Aquinas, describing true temperance under the person of Guion, brings him in with his palmer through the cave of Mammon, and the bower of earthly bliss, that he might see and know, and yet abstain. Since therefore the knowledge and survey of vice is in this world so necessary to the constituting of human virtue, and the scanning of error to the confirmation of truth, how can we more safely, and with less danger, scout into the regions of sin and falsity than by reading all manner of tractates and hearing all manner of reason? And this is the benefit which may be had of books promiscuously read.

And again, if it be true that a wise man, like a good refiner, can gather gold out of the drossiest volume, and that a fool will be a fool with the best book, yea or without book; there is no reason that we should deprive a wise man of any advantage to his wisdom, while we seek to restrain from a fool, that which being restrained will be no hindrance to his folly. For if there should be so much exactness always used to keep that from him which is unfit for his reading, we should in the judgment of Aristotle not only, but of Solomon and of our Saviour, not vouchsafe him good precepts, and by consequence not willingly admit him to good books; as being certain that a wise man will make better use of an idle pamphlet, than a fool will do of sacred Scripture.

'Tis next alleged we must not expose ourselves to temptations without necessity, and next to that, not employ our time in vain things. To both these objections one answer will serve, out of
the grounds already laid, that to all men such books are not temptations, nor vanities, but useful drugs and materials wherewith to temper and compose effective and strong medicines, which man's life cannot want.

If we think to regulate printing, thereby to rectify manners, we must regulate all recreations and pastimes, all that is delightful to man. No music must be heard, no song be set or sung, but what is grave and Doric. There must be licensing dancers, that no gesture, motion, or deportment be taught our youth but what by their allowance shall be thought honest; for such Plato was provided
of;
it will ask more than the work of twenty licensers to examine all the lutes, the violins, and the guitars in every house; they must not be suffered to prattle as they do, but must be licensed what they may say. And who shall silence all the airs and madrigals
that whisper softness in chambers? The windows also, and the balconies must be thought on; there are shrewd books, with dangerous frontispieces, set to sale; who shall prohibit them, shall twenty licensers? The villages also must have their visitors to inquire what lectures
the bagpipe and the rebeck reads, even to the ballatry and the gamut of every municipal fiddler, for these are the countryman's Arcadias, and his Monte Mayors.
Next, what more national corruption, for which England hears ill abroad, than household gluttony: who shall be the rectors of our daily rioting? And what shall be done to inhibit the multitudes that frequent those houses where drunkenness is sold and harboured? Our garments also should be referred to the licensing of some more sober workmasters to see them cut into a less wanton garb. Who shall regulate all the mixed conversation of our youth, male and female together, as is the fashion of this country? Who shall still appoint what shall be discoursed what presumed, and no further?

Lastly, who shall forbid and separate all idle resort, all evil company? These things will be, and must be; but how they shall be least hurtful, how least enticing, herein consists the grave and governing wisdom of a state.
To sequester out of the world into Atlantic and Utopian polities which never can be drawn into use, will not mend our condition;
but to ordain wisely as in this world of evil, in the midst whereof God hath placed us unavoidably. Nor is it Plato's licensing of books will do this, which necessarily pulls along with it so many other kinds of licensing, as will make us all both ridiculous and weary,
and yet frustrate; but those unwritten, or at least unconstraining, laws
of virtuous education, religious and civil nurture, which Plato there mentions as the bonds and ligaments of the commonwealth, the pillars and the sustainers of every written statute; these they be which will bear chief sway in such matters as these, when all licensing will be easily eluded. Impunity and remissness, for certain, are the bane of a commonwealth; but here the great art lies, to discern in what the law is to bid restraint and punishment, and
in what things persuasion only is to work.
If every action, which is good or evil in man at ripe years, were
to be under pittance and prescription and compulsion, what were virtue but a name, what praise could be then due to well-doing, what grace to be sober, just, or continent? Many there be that complain of Divine
Providence for suffering Adam to transgress; foolish tongues!
When God gave him reason, He gave him freedom to choose, for reason is but choosing; he had been else a mere artificial Adam, such an Adam as he is in the motions. We ourselves esteem not of that obedience, or love, or gift, which is of force: God therefore left him free, set before him a provoking object, ever almost in his eyes; herein consisted his merit, herein the right of his reward, the praise of his abstinence. Wherefore did He create passions within us, pleasures round about us, but that these rightly tempered are the very ingredients of virtue?

They are not skilful considerers of human things, who imagine
to remove sin by removing the matter of sin; for, besides that it is a huge heap increasing under the very act of diminishing, though some part of it may for a time be withdrawn from some persons, it cannot from all, in such a universal thing as books are; and when this is done, yet the sin remains entire. Though ye take from a covetous man
all his treasure, he has yet one jewel left, ye cannot bereave him of his covetousness. Banish all objects of lust, shut up all youth into the severest discipline that can be exercised in any hermitage, ye cannot make them chaste, that came not thither so: such great care and wisdom is required to the right managing of this point.
Suppose we could expel sin by this means; look how much we thus expel of sin, so much we expel of virtue: for the matter of them both is the same; remove that, and ye remove them both alike.
This justifies the high providence of God, who, though He commands us temperance, justice, continence, yet pours out before us, even to a profuseness, all desirable things, and gives us minds that can wander beyond all limit and satiety. Why should we then affect
a rigour contrary to the manner of God and of nature, by abridging or scanting those means, which books freely permitted are, both to
the trial of virtue and the exercise of truth? It would be better done,
to learn that the law must needs be frivolous, which goes to restrain things, uncertainly and yet equally working to good and to evil.
And were I the chooser, a dram of well-doing should be preferred before

many times as much the forcible hindrance of evil-doing. For God sure esteems the growth and completing of one virtuous person more than the restraint of ten vicious.

...we may easily foresee what kind of licensers we are to expect hereafter, either ignorant, imperious, and remiss, or basely pecuniary. This is what I had to show, wherein this Order cannot conduce to that end whereof it bears the intention. I lastly proceed from the no good it can do, to the manifest hurt it causes, in being first the greatest discouragement and affront that can be offered to learning, and to learned men.

If therefore ye be loth to dishearten heartily and discontent, not the mercenary crew of false pretenders to learning, but the free and ingenuous sort of such as evidently were born to study, and love learning for itself, not for lucre or any other end but the service of God and of truth, and perhaps that lasting fame and perpetuity of praise which God and good men have consented shall be the reward of those whose published labours advance the good of mankind, then know that, so far to distrust the judgment and the honesty of one who hath but a common repute in learning, and never yet offended, as not to count him fit to print his mind without tutor and examiner, lest he should drop a schism, or something of corruption, is the greatest displeasure and indignity to a free and knowing spirit that can be put upon him.

When a man writes to the world, he summons up all his reason and deliberation to assist him; he searches, meditates, is industrious, and likely consults and confers with his judicious friends; after all which done he takes himself to be informed in what he writes, as well as any that writ before him. If, in this the most consummate act of his fidelity and ripeness, no years, no industry, no former proof of his abilities can bring him to that state of maturity, as not to be still mistrusted and suspected, unless he carry all his considerate diligence, all his midnight watchings and expense of Palladian oil, to the hasty view of an unleisured licenser, perhaps much his younger, perhaps far his inferior in judgment, perhaps one who never knew the labour of bookwriting, and if he be not repulsed or slighted, must appear in print like a puny with his guardian, and his censor's hand on the back of his title to be his bail and surety that he is no idiot or seducer, it cannot be but a dishonour and derogation to the author, to the book, to the privilege and dignity of Learning. And what if the author shall be one so copious of fancy, as to have many things well worth the adding come into his mind after licensing, while the book is yet under the press, which not seldom happens to the best and diligentest writers; and that perhaps a dozen times in one book? The printer dares not go beyond his licensed copy; so often then must the author trudge to his leave-giver, that those his new insertions may be viewed; and many a jaunt will be made, ere that licenser, for it must be the same man, can either be found, or found at leisure; meanwhile either the press must stand still, which is no small damage, or the author lose his accuratest thoughts, and send the book forth worse than he had made it, which to a diligent writer is the greatest melancholy and vexation that can befall. And how can a man teach with authority, which is the life of teaching, how can he be a doctor in his book as he ought to be, or else had better be silent, whenas all he teaches, all he delivers, is but under the tuition, under the correction of his patriarchal licenser to blot or alter what precisely accords not with the hidebound humour which he calls his judgment? When every acute reader, upon the first sight of a pedantic licence, will be ready with these like words to ding the book a quoit's distance from him: I hate a pupil teacher, I endure not an instructor that comes to me under the wardship of an overseeing fist. I know nothing of the licenser,

but that I have his own hand here for his arrogance; who shall warrant me his judgment? The State, sir, replies the stationer, but has a quick return: The State shall be my governors, but not my critics;
they may be mistaken in the choice of a licenser, as easily as
this licenser may be mistaken in an author; this is some common stuff;
and he might add from Sir Francis Bacon, That such authorised books are but the language of the times. For though a licenser should happen to be judicious more than ordinary, which will be a great jeopardy of the next succession, yet his very office and his commission enjoins him to let pass nothing but what is vulgarly received already.

Henceforth let no man care to learn, or care to be more than worldly-wise; for certainly in higher matters to be ignorant and slothful, to be a common steadfast dunce, will be the only pleasant life, and only in request.

Truth and understanding are not such wares as to be monopolised and traded in by tickets and statutes and standards. We must not think to make a staple commodity of all the knowledge in the land, to mark and licence
it like our broadcloth and our woolpacks. What is it but a servitude like that imposed by the Philistines, not to be allowed the sharpening of our own axes and coulters, but we must repair from all quarters

to twenty licensing forges?

And lest some should persuade ye, Lords and Commons, that these arguments of learned men's discouragement at this your Order are mere flourishes, and not real, I could recount what I have seen and heard in other countries, where this kind of inquisition tyrannises; when I have sat among their learned men, for that honour I had, and been counted happy to be born in such a place of philosophic freedom, as they supposed England was, while themselves did nothing but bemoan the servile condition into which learning amongst them was brought; that this was it which had damped the glory of Italian wits; that nothing had been there written now these many years but flattery and fustian. There it was that I found and visited the famous Galileo, grown old a prisoner to the Inquisition, for thinking in astronomy otherwise than the Franciscan and Dominican licensers thought.

That this is not therefore the disburdening of a particular fancy, but the common grievance of all those who had prepared their minds and studies above the vulgar pitch to advance truth in others, and from others to entertain it, thus much may satisfy. And in their name I shall for neither friend nor foe conceal what the general murmur is; that if it come to inquisitioning again and licensing, and that we are so timorous of ourselves, and so suspicious of all men, as to fear each book and the shaking of every leaf, before we know what the contents are; if some who but of late were little better than silenced from preaching shall come now to silence us from reading, except what they please, it cannot be guessed what is intended by some but a second tyranny over learning: and will soon put it out of controversy, that Bishops and Presbyters are the same to us, both name and thing.

Well knows he who uses to consider, that our faith and knowledge thrives by exercise, as well as our limbs and complexion. Truth is compared in Scripture to a streaming fountain; if her waters flow not in a perpetual progression, they into a muddy pool of conformity and tradition. A man may be a heretic in the truth; and if he believe things only because his Pastor says so, or the Assembly so determines, without knowing other reason, though his belief be true, yet the very truth he holds becomes his heresy.

For if we be sure we are in the right, and do not hold the truth guiltily, which becomes not, if we ourselves condemn not our own weak and frivolous teaching, and the people for an untaught and irreligious gadding rout, what can be more fair than when a man judicious, learned, and of a conscience, for aught we know, as good as theirs that taught us what we know, shall not privily from house to house, which is more dangerous, but openly by writing publish to the world what his opinion is, what his reasons, and wherefore that which is now thought cannot be sound? Christ urged it as wherewith to justify himself, that he preached in public; yet writing is more public than preaching; and more easy to refutation, if need be, there being so many whose business and profession merely it is to be the champions of Truth; which if they neglect, what can be imputed but their sloth, or inability?

There be who perpetually complain of schisms and sects, and make it such a calamity that any man dissents from their maxims.

'Tis their own pride and ignorance which causes the disturbing, who neither will hear meekness, nor can convince; yet all must be suppressed which is not found in their Syntagma. They are the troublers, they are the dividers of unity, who neglect and permit not others to unite those dissevered pieces which are yet wanting to the body of Truth. To be still searching what we know not by what we know, still closing up truth to truth as we find it (for all her body is homogeneous and proportional), this is the golden rule in theology as well as in arithmetic, and makes up the best harmony in a Church; not the forced and outward union of cold and neutral, and inwardly divided minds.

Where there is much desire to learn, there of necessity will be much arguing, much writing, many opinions; for opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making. Under these fantastic terrors of sect and schism, we wrong the earnest and zealous thirst after knowledge and understanding which God hath stirred up in this city.

What would ye do then? should ye suppress all this flowery crop of knowledge and new light sprung up and yet springing daily in this city? should ye set an oligarchy of twenty engrossers over it, to bring a famine upon our minds again, when we shall know nothing but what is measured to us by their bushel? Believe it, Lords and Commons, they who counsel ye to such a suppressing do as good as bid ye suppress yourselves; and I will soon show how. If it be desired to know the immediate cause of all this free writing and free speaking, there cannot be assigned a truer than your own mild and free

and humane government. It is the liberty, Lords and Commons, which your own valorous and happy counsels have purchased us, liberty which is the nurse of all great wits; this is that which hath rarefied and enlightened our spirits like the influence of heaven; this is that which hath enfranchised, enlarged and lifted up our apprehensions degrees above themselves.
Ye cannot make us now less capable, less knowing, less eagerly pursuing of the truth, unless ye first make yourselves, that made us so, less the lovers, less the founders of our true liberty. We can grow ignorant again, brutish, formal and slavish, as ye found us;
but you then must first become that which ye cannot be,
oppressive, arbitrary and tyrannous, as they were from whom ye have freed us. That our hearts are now more capacious, our thoughts more erected to the search and expectation of greatest and exactest things, is the issue of your own virtue propagated in us; ye cannot suppress that, unless ye reinforce an abrogated and merciless law, that fathers may despatch at will their own children. And who shall then stick closest to ye, and excite others? not he who takes up arms for coat and conduct, and his four nobles of Danegelt. Although I dispraise not the defence of just immunities, yet love my peace better, if that were
all. Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties.

And now the time in special is, by privilege to write and speak what may help to the further discussing of matters in agitation. The temple of Janus with his two controversial faces might now not unsignificantly be set open. And though all the winds of doctrine were let loose to play upon the earth, so Truth be in the field, we do injuriously, by licensing and prohibiting, to misdoubt her strength.
Let her and Falsehood grapple; who ever knew Truth put to the worse,

in a free and open encounter?

For who knows not that Truth is strong, next to the Almighty?
She needs no policies, nor stratagems, nor licensings to make her victorious; those are the shifts and the defences that error uses against her power.

How many other things might be tolerated in peace, and left to conscience, had we but charity, and were it not the chief stronghold of our hypocrisy to be ever judging one another?

In the meantime if any one would write, and bring his helpful hand to the slow-moving Reformation which we labour under, if Truth have spoken to him before others, or but seemed at least to speak, who hath so bejesuited us that we should trouble that man with asking licence to do so worthy a deed? and not consider this, that if it come to prohibiting, there is not aught more likely to be prohibited than truth itself; whose first appearance to our eyes, bleared and dimmed with prejudice and custom, is more unsightly and unpalatable than many errors, even as the person is of many a great man slight and contemptible to see to. And what do they tell us vainly of new opinions, when this very opinion of theirs, that none must be heard, but whom they like, is the worst and newest opinion of all others; and is the chief cause why sects and schisms do so much abound, and true knowledge is kept at distance from us; besides yet a greater danger which is in it?
For when God shakes a Kingdom with strong and healthful commotions to a general reforming, tis not untrue that many sectaries and false teachers are then busiest in seducing; but yet more true it is,

that God then raises to His own work men of rare abilities, and more than common industry, not only to look back and revise what hath been taught heretofore, but to gain further and go on some new enlightened steps in the discovery of truth.

. . .seeing no man who hath tasted learning, but will confess the many ways of profiting by those who, not contented with stale receipts, are able to manage and set forth new positions to the world. And were they but as the dust and cinders of our feet, so long as in that notion they may yet serve to polish and brighten
the armoury of Truth, even for that respect they were not utterly to be cast away. But if they be of those whom God hath fitted for the special use of these times with eminent and ample gifts, and those perhaps neither among the Priests nor among the Pharisees, and we in the haste of a precipitant zeal shall make no distinction, but resolve to stop their mouths, because we fear they come with new and dangerous opinions, as we commonly forejudge them ere we understand them, no less than woe to us, while, thinking thus to defend the Gospel, we are found the persecutors.
There have been not a few since the beginning of this Parliament,
both of the Presbytery and others, who by their unlicensed books, to the contempt of an Imprimatur, first broke that triple ice clung about our hearts, and taught the people to see day.

For this authentic Spanish policy of licensing books, if I have said ought, will prove the most unlicensed book itself within a short while. . . .

But of these sophisms and elenchs of merchandise I skill not.
This I know, that errors in a good government and in a bad are equally almost incident; for what Magistrate may not be misinformed, and much the sooner, if Liberty of Printing be reduced into the power of a few? But to redress willingly and speedily what hath been erred, and in highest authority to esteem a plain advertisement more than others have done a sumptuous bribe, is a virtue (honoured Lords and Commons) answerable to your highest actions, and whereof none can participate but greatest and wisest men.

THE END

Full text available at Areopagitica

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

ATTENTION Investigators, Journalists, Editors > Be Alert

At the very least, as background, if you're unfamiliar with the Baha'i Faith, I recommend you read the two articles below, especially Professor Cole's, and skim Karen Bacquet's.

It's essential if you're trying to understand the possible role of the Baha'i Faith in the David Kelly affair that you be on your guard against the distortions and self-serving misrepresentations of the fundamentalists who now control the bahai administration:

Professor Juan R. I. Cole, University of Michigan, Dept. History, "Fundamentalism in the Contemporary U.S. Baha'i Community," Religious Studies Review, Vol. 43, no. 3 (March, 2002):195-217:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2002/fundbhfn.htm>

Karen Bacquet, "Enemies Within: Conflict and Control in the Baha'i Community." Published in American Family Foundation's

Cultic Studies Journal*, Volume 18, pp.109-140:
<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/enemies.html>

I then suggest you read "The Baha'i Technique," a collection of observations, stretching back more than a decade, by baha'is, ex-bahais, and non-bahais on the techniques used by bahai fundamentalists to discredit, marginalize, and demonize anyone with a more liberal or moderate opinion other than the acceptable, official, fundamentalist view:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Various other documents on my website may be of interest.

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

talk.religion.bahai on the Web:

Free reading and posting, including the largest Usenet archive:

https://groups.google.com/groups?

hl=en&group=talk.religion.bahai

Outside observers should be especially careful and alert to Hikmat & Taqiya, "wisdom" and dissimulation, key Baha'i concepts

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Karen Bacquet

See her website, especially these articles:

"Enemies Within: Conflict and Control in the Baha'i Community" 2001

Karen Bacquet Cultic Studies Journal

Net Games: Fallacies, Gambits, and Maneuvers in Baha'i Cyberspace

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Netgames.html>

2002

Selected Messages for 2002

2001

Selected Messages for 2001

2000

Selected Messages for 2000

Karen Bacquet, My Life in the Baha'i Community

Karen Re: My "Ex-Baha'i" Story 11/8/99 Eye witness of NSA denunciation of Dialogue magazine

Karen Re: My "Ex-Baha'i" Story 11/6/99

Karen Personal testimony of a recent ex-Baha'i. 10/18/99

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

FG comments on the uhj message to Maneck regarding conscience.

----- Original Message -----From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Sent: Monday, May 06, 2002 10:02 AM
Subject: Re: Individual conscience...

Randy Burns <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message
news:bipB8.12961\$3.9770@nwrddc01.gnilink.net...
> Do you have a statement from Martin that disavows this quote? If not then > tough luck, he is pretty much stuck with this quote on his back. Maybe he > would like to take it back now? Feel free to directly quote him on this > subject.

Dear Randy,

This isn't an idea that Martin just recently came up with; he's been saying it for years.

I found this in that little series called "The Power of the Covenant" published by the NSA of Canada in 1977. The authors were Douglas Martin, Peter Khan, and Jane Faily. This idea connecting Christianity with the belief in individual conscience is repeated in Part 3: The Face of Opposition, on page 28. It says that the Christian idea of the Holy Spirit allows every individual to claim inspiration and therefore, opens the door to sectarianism. The passage continues:

"The result was to create in the minds of most Christians a vague assumption that, when the individual prays directly to God, he receives guidance through his private conscience. Many times, the promptings of conscience contradict the apparent meaning of Christian scriptures (as in the case of St. Paul's statements on celibacy) or the explicit teachings of a particular church (as with race relationships). Increasingly, however, it is conscience which is regarded as the reliable guide, a guide which has no objective check on it."

Even more striking on p. 30:

"This system of belief has had many admirable results in the individual spiritual life. Its unrestrained influence on social history, however, reveals many limitations. It permitted the growth of the conviction not only that personal conscience is the ultimate authority in life, but also that personal freedom is the highest good. The rise of a democratic political philosophy and democratic processes in the West gave the final blessing to this doctrine of individualism. "Christianity" and "Democracy" in time blended in the public mind as one vaguely defined, but immensely influential popular cult of individualism, embracing people of all religious denominations. Such a cult differs in several important ways from the Teachings of Baha'u'llah".

While, of course, this is not a direct quote from Martin himself, and he was not the only author here, the similarity to the notes taken from his talk pretty strongly suggests that this is, indeed, his attitude about Christianity, Democracy, and the conscience of the individual. And the fact that this came out in an official publication of the NSA carries some weight -- this was part of an effort to deepen people on the Covenant, so presumably it reflects what they think is "correct" Baha'i teaching. There have also been remarks in more recent UHJ letters disparaging the role of individual conscience.

Love, Karen

<https://www.bacquet.tk>

>
> Cheers, Randy
>
> --
>
> Jordan Rager <jrager@chat.carleton.ca> wrote in message
> news:ab40bs\$e0n\$1@driftwood.ccs.carleton.ca...
> Look: Mr. Martin did not say those words, so why quote him as doing such?
> Find out what exactly he has said and then argue with that. No one is > trying > to dodge a bullet here. I just think it is silly to hold a man to words > that do not belong to him. Moreover, I think it is wrong to slander an > individual or a body. Why do you consistently try to defame and malign the Universal House of Justice? What part of the covenant did you opt out of when you > > professed your belief in it initially?
> >
> > >
> > > Member of the uhj:
> "We have inherited a dangerous delusion from Christianity that our > individual conscience is supreme. This is not a Baha'i belief. In the > end, in the context of both our role in the community and our role in the > greater world, we must be prepared to sacrifice our personal convictions or opinions. The belief that individual conscience is supreme is equivalent to "taking partners with God" which is abhorrent to the Teachings of the Faith." -Doug Martin
> > > https://www.bahai-library.org/talks/martin.watson.html (Find > > > "conscience")
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > FG
> > > The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

> > >

<https://members.fortunecity.com/bahaicensorship>

> > >

> > >

> > > "Jordan Rager" <jrager@chat.carleton.ca>

wrote in message

> > >

news:ab03cc\$a1u\$1@driftwood.ccs.carleton.ca...

> > > > I think the key to Mr. Sylvester's point is that he is paraphrasing > > > > sections of Mr. Martin's talk and that nothing has been transcribed > > > > verbatim.

----- Original Message -----

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Wednesday, May 08, 2002 2:02 AM

Subject: Re: Individual conscience...

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . . " --

Baha'u'llah

Bahai Faith <BI*P*GS@liberty.com> wrote in message

news:ab67ve\$fnoat\$1@ID-75545.news.dfncis.de...

> "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

wrote in message

> <news:udd3787ql6j0f3@corp.supernews.com>...

> >

> > There have also been remarks in more recent UHJ letters disparaging > > the role of individual conscience.

>

> Karen,

>

> When you have a chance, could you quote those disparaging uhj letters?

>

> I'm sure I would not be alone in finding them interesting.

Dear Fred,

I was thinking of the following passage from the Feb. 8, 1998 letter to Susan Maneck, which I'm sure she has quoted here before. I'm including the whole context -- one the on hand they uphold freedom of conscience, then on the other speak about how limited it is. There is again, in this passage

the disparagement of Christianity that we saw in the other quotes mentioned here. Basically, the only real "freedom" that Baha'is have is the freedom to leave the Faith.

Love, Karen

This brings us to the specific points raised in your email of 17 November 1997. As you well understand, not only the right but also the responsibility

**-----
-----

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 3

". . . of each believer to explore truth for himself or herself are fundamental to the Baha'i teachings. This principle is an integral feature of the coming of age of humankind, inseparable from the social transformation to which Baha'u'llah is calling the peoples of the world. It is as relevant to specifically scholarly activity as it is to the rest of spiritual and intellectual life. Every human being is ultimately responsible to God for the use which he or she makes of these possibilities; conscience is never to be coerced, whether by other individuals or institutions.

Conscience, however, is not an unchangeable absolute. One dictionary definition, although not covering all the usages of the term, presents the common understanding of the word "conscience" as
"the sense of right and wrong as regards things for which one is responsible;
the faculty or principle which pronounces upon the moral quality of one's actions or motives, approving the right and condemning the wrong".

The functioning of one's conscience, then, depends upon one's understanding of right and wrong; the conscience of one person may be established upon a disinterested striving after truth and justice, while that of another may rest on an unthinking predisposition to act in accordance with that pattern of standards, principles and prohibitions which is a product of his social environment. Conscience, therefore, can serve either as a bulwark of an upright character or can represent an accumulation of prejudices learned from one's forebears or absorbed from a limited social code.

A Baha'i recognizes that one aspect of his spiritual and intellectual growth is to foster the development of his conscience in the light of divine Revelation -- a Revelation which, in addition to providing a wealth of spiritual and ethical principles, exhorts man "to free himself from idle fancy and imitation, discern with the eye of oneness His glorious handiwork, and look into all things with a searching eye". This process of development, therefore, involves a clear-sighted examination of the conditions of the world with both heart and mind. A Baha'i will understand that an upright life is based upon observance of certain principles which stem from Divine Revelation and which he recognizes as essential for the well-being of both the individual and society. In order to uphold such principles, he knows that, in certain cases, the voluntary submission of the promptings of his own personal conscience to the decision of the majority is a conscientious requirement, as in wholeheartedly accepting the majority decision of an Assembly at the outcome of consultation.

In the discussion of wisdom in your email of 21

September 1997, you observe that maybe "Baha'i academics all too often have not recognized that to a great extent failure to exercise wisdom represents a failure of love."

The House of Justice agrees that the exercise of wisdom calls for a measure of love and the development of a sensitive conscience. These, in turn, involve not only devotion to a high standard of uprightness, but also consideration of the effects of one's words and actions.

A Baha'i's duty to pursue an unfettered search after truth should lead him to understand the Teachings as an organic, logically coherent whole, should cause him to examine his own ideas and motives, and should enable him to see that adherence to the Covenant, to which he is a party, is not blind imitation but conscious choice, freely made and freely followed.

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 4

In many of His utterances, `Abdul-Baha extols governments which uphold freedom of conscience for their citizens. As can be seen from the context, these statements refer to the freedom to follow the religion of one's choice. In the original of a passage to which you refer in your email of 17 November 1997, He gives the following analysis of freedom.

There are three types of freedom. The first is divine freedom, which is one of the inherent attributes of the Creator for He is unconstrained in His will, and no one can force Him to change His decree in any matter whatsoever....

The second is the political freedom of Europeans, which leaves the individual free to do whatsoever he desires as long as his action does not harm his neighbour. This is natural freedom, and its greatest expression is seen in the animal world. Observe these birds and notice with what freedom they live. However much man may try, he can never be as free as an animal, because the existence of order acts as an impediment to freedom.

The third freedom is that which is born of obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Almighty. This is the freedom of the human world, where man severs his affections from all things. When he does so, he becomes immune to all hardship and sorrow. Wealth or material power will not deflect him from moderation and fairness, neither will poverty or need inhibit him from showing forth happiness and tranquillity. The more the conscience of man develops, the more will his heart be free and his soul attain unto happiness. In the religion of God, there is freedom of thought because God, alone, controls the human conscience, but this freedom should not go beyond courtesy. In the religion of God, there is no freedom of action outside the law of God. Man may not transgress this law, even though no harm is inflicted on one's neighbour. This is because the purpose of Divine law is the education of all -- others as well as oneself -- and, in the sight of God, the harm done to one individual or to his neighbour is the same and is reprehensible in both cases. Hearts must possess the fear of God. Man should endeavour to avoid that which is abhorrent unto God. Therefore, the freedom that the laws of Europe offer to the individual does not exist in the law of God. Freedom of thought should not transgress the bounds of courtesy, and actions, likewise, should be governed by the fear of God and the desire to seek His good pleasure.

Education of the individual Baha'i in the Divine law is one of the duties of Spiritual Assemblies. In a letter to a National Assembly on 1 March 1951, Shoghi Effendi wrote:

The deepening and enrichment of the spiritual life of the individual believer, his increasing comprehension of the essential verities

Dr. Susan Stiles Maneck
U.S.A. 8 February 1998
Page 5

underlying this Faith, his training in its administrative processes, his understanding of the fundamentals of the Covenants established by its Author and the authorized Interpreter of its teachings, should be made the supreme objectives of the national representatives responsible for the edification, the progress and consolidation of these communities.

Such is the duty resting on the elected institutions of the Faith for the promotion of the spiritual, moral and ethical lives of the individual believers. Parallel with this, the Baha'i Faith upholds the freedom of conscience which permits a person to follow his chosen religion: no one may be compelled to become a Baha'i, or to remain a Baha'i if he conscientiously wishes to leave the Faith. As to the thoughts of the Baha'is themselves -- that is those who have chosen to follow the religion of Baha'u'llah -- the institutions do not busy themselves with what individual believers think unless those thoughts become expressed in actions which are inimical to the basic principles and vital interests of the Faith.

With regard to the accusation that to make such distinctions borders on restriction of the freedom of speech, one should accept that civil society has long recognized that utterance can metamorphose into behaviour, and has taken steps to protect itself and its citizens against such behaviour when it becomes socially destructive. Laws against sedition and hate-mongering are examples that come readily to mind.

It will surely be clear to you from the above comments that the categories of "issues of doctrinal heresy which must therefore be suppressed" and "the imposition of orthodoxy on the Baha'i community", to which you refer, are concepts essentially drawn from the study of Christianity and are inapplicable to the far more complex interrelationships and principles established by the Baha'i Faith."

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Subject: Re: loyal opposition in Baha'i
Date: Monday, January 03, 2000 1:07 PM

> Dear Dave,

I have very much wanted to respond to the issues you raise here, but I've only had sporadic access to the Net lately (like on short visits to my in-laws'). I'm hoping the persuasiveness of my reply will outweigh its lateness.

I'm not claiming that we have unlimited freedom; certainly we are required to restrain our behavior in accordance with what Baha'u'llah has given us. But the kind of absolute obedience that you are describing seems, to me, that I am being asked to leave my own conscience in the hands of the institutions, and behave as if whatever they do is right by definition, even if they violate the standards given us by Baha'u'llah Himself. God does, as you say, ask us to do some very difficult things, and sometimes standing against the tide is one of them.

The sad truth is that I have never seen much result from using the "proper channels" of dissent. At least not on anything very important. Mostly what I see is that people with a complaint get told why the complaint has no merit, or an explanation why things won't be changed. In this situation, I can simply dissolve into disillusionment and walk away from the Faith altogether, as many do, or I can protest openly. Or I can become a sort of nonperson that has no will or vision or conscience of my own, which would be virtually impossible for me to do even if I thought that were a desirable goal. Where do we draw the line between obedience and cult-like mindlessness? I have no brilliant answers, but to me that line has to be the standard of behavior given to us by Baha'u'llah, and to which I expect the institutions of the Faith to conform: honesty, trustworthiness, justice, compassion. And if the institutions of the Faith would rather violate this standard than allow a diversity of voices, then I can't support them.

I was reading something the other day which spoke about how the practice of Shi'ih Islam was less obedience to the principles of the Qur'an, and more the merging of one's will with that of the "Imam of the Age", who just happens to be represented by the religious authorities. I've lately had the thought that perhaps that's the context for Baha'u'llah's continual insistence on independent thought. I don't think Baha'u'llah demands that I merge my will with that of an institution; in fact, it is entirely possible that's something He was warning us against.

Another problem is the secret and surreptitious way these heresy cases you mention have been handled. There is no real due process. A Counsellor or ABM shows up and investigates/interrogates/intimidates, then reports back, and a decision is made. There is little opportunity for a person to defend himself and the rest of us are just supposed to assume that justice was served. Well, now people who have undergone this process have a forum for presenting their own side. That isn't going to go away.

As far as the history of opposition goes: the Faith, since the time of 'Abdul-Baha has expelled covenant-breakers. I know of no lesser crime for which a person has ever been expelled from the Faith, until Michael McKenney in 1997, who was found not to meet the "requirements for membership in the Baha'i community." All the other cases which have become notorious in recent times have essentially involved the resignation or lapse into silence and inactivity, of a person under the threat of being called a covenant-breaker. This is not "removal from the community" of a person "opposing the Faith"; this is the intimidation and harassment of believers who have yet to be proven guilty of anything. These people are not covenant-breakers, but the threat of being named so hangs over their heads like the sword of Damocles.

Yes, of course we must, as 'Abdul-Baha said "be obedient to the commandments of God and the laws of the House of Justice." But before a person is removed from the Baha'i community, or is threatened so severely that he removes himself, I think that justice demands that we know exactly what commandments and laws have been broken, and exactly what evidence exists proving this. If the wounds in our community are to be healed, then justice must be seen to be done by the friends, so that all of us can know exactly why believers in Baha'u'llah have deserved such severe treatment. It is not enough to say "The institutions did this, therefore it must be right." It is not enough to say "They said some bad stuff on email." It is not enough to say "They are part of a materialist conspiracy." There needs to be specific charges concerning specific laws, backed up by concrete evidence. And if heresy is to be one of those charges, this needs to be clearly known so that the UHJ's policy can be clear to all, and the Baha'i Faith can cease its pretense of being the open and tolerant religion promoted by its Founder.

But justice takes time and effort, and it's probably just easier to threaten people into shutting up or leaving. Evoke the name "covenant-breaker" and you can make all dissent go away, and you never have to change anything. That's what passes for justice in the Baha'i community.

Baha'u'llah suffered for 40 years under a system where justice was arbitrary and the accused had no rights. I do not believe He intended to found such a system.

Love,
Karen Bacquet

>

> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

> Before you buy.

>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

From: <kalamity@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Liberalism
Date: Wednesday, January 19, 2000 12:54 PM

In article <8622u6$b5n$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
dfiorito@my-deja.com wrote:

> In article <85ikd6$fhe$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, > kalamity@my-deja.com wrote:

>

> <SNIP MY OLD POST>

>

> > Dear Dave,

> >

It seems we have very different ideas about what unity means. I find it a little odd that you would point to Catholicism, or any Christian denomination as an example of unity. A repetition of Christian history is precisely what I fear: the definition of orthodoxy and heresy which leads to the creation of sects. Drawing such lines is the very opposite of unity, but if the orthodox insist, the "heretic", who is just a sincere believer with another viewpoint, has no place to go. In Christianity, people have few scruples about just setting up their own church if they don't like where they're at; Baha'i cannot do that without violating the covenant, but the division exists nevertheless. Allowing different schools of thought to exist is unity in diversity, so long as everyone recognizes the central authority. Imposing a uniform opinion has the opposite effect, saying "You can't be part of the faithful unless you are silent about what you conscientiously believe."

To force people out in that way creates a division. A person doesn't stop being a Baha'i just because they aren't on the rolls.

I find myself existing in a sort of religious no-man's-land. I am a believer in Baha'u'llah, so I can't just hook up with another religion.

Yet I can't be part of the Baha'i community, either, without supporting actions that I believe to be wrong. (To be honest, the roots of my alienation from the Faith is more complex than that, but to explain it all would lead us rather far afield.)

You are quite right when you say that I don't trust the institutions. I have said so before on this very forum. They broke my trust. I do believe, however, in trying to see both sides, and I've read as much as I can find from the UHJ on the controversies we've mentioned. I'm not convinced. In fact, I find the attitudes about scholarship pretty appalling. And I just can't find it in myself to leave my conscience in their hands, and let them define what justice is for me. That is not what Baha'u'llah said about the nature of justice.

I have had the odd thought, though, that in a backhanded sort of way, I actually have been obedient to the House of Justice. They have said in more than one letter that anyone who doesn't like their policies is free to resign "with no discredit attached". So, by leaving, I did exactly what they wanted. And in joining the ranks of unwanted Baha'is, it looks like I'm in pretty good company.

By the way, what is the difference between vigorous debate and "an active attempt to convince and convert others"? After all, everybody likes people to agree with them. It would be pretty hard to discuss any issue within the Baha'i community if doing so exposes us to the accusation that one is trying to "convert" others to a point of view.

I don't quite understand your last comment about Baha'u'llah's breadth of vision not being borne out in the Writings. It seems we have very different ideas about what it means to be a Baha'i. That's what this is all about. For example, I don't think your comment about Juan Cole valuing academic freedom above Baha'u'llah's definition of true liberty is accurate. I think his opinions come from a whole different vision of what Baha'u'llah meant. You could just as easily accuse me of placing my individual conscience about Baha'u'llah's teachings. But I believe He allows me freedom of conscience, that He insists I examine things for myself, and that the condemnations of liberty in the Aqdas have a lot more to do with moral laxness than individual rights. "We approve of liberty in certain circumstances, and refuse to sanction it in others."

You will notice that I have refrained from giving unflattering names to more conservative views, yet I have had some very harsh words for actions I believe to be immoral. I believe that to be consistent with what Baha'u'llah taught.

The point is that it should not be such a problem that we have different visions of what the Writings mean. That's what the search for truth is all about.

Love, Karen

>

> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

> Before you buy.

>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: <kalamity@my-deja.com>

From: <kalamity@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: loyal opposition in Baha'i

Date: Monday, January 03, 2000 4:19 PM

In article <84qv0$5i$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,

Carol <cajc@my-deja.com> wrote:

>

>

> So far as I can tell from my readings the UHJ has no authority to > declare anyone a heretic, nor to declare anyone a covenant breaker.

The

> Hands appointed by Abdul-Baha had that authority while Shoghi Effendi > was a minor, then Shoghi Effendi specifically forbade them to do so, > and said that only the Guardian could declare anyone a covenant breaker.

 > I think that was pretty definite. What was done after Shoghi
 Effendi's
 > death is pretty confusing and unclear as to whether it was correct > according to the evolution of the Covenantal understanding as described > by him.
 >
 > The UHJ's purview is to enforce temporal laws in the Aqdas, and to > create or eliminate temporal laws not delineated in the Aqdas as needed.
 > There is no evidence that they are the Guardian or have the authority
 of > the Guardian.
 >
 > --
 > Best regards,
 >
 > Carol Ann

Of course, Carol, you are quite right. What I'm saying is that when people are bullied and threatened because of their opinions, then a de facto class of heretics is created. My challenge is that if heresy, the holding of unorthodox opinions, is going to be the subject of punitive action by the institutions, then they should just say so, pass a law about it and deal with it according to due process. Such a law would be completely contrary to the teachings of Baha'u'llah, but so is the action of pushing people out of the Faith for heresy, whether it is termed so or not.

It would be a whole lot better if a broad diversity of views, including those of liberal academics and writers, were just accepted as part of many ways of viewing the Baha'i Faith. I personally have a hard time seeing what's so darn threatening about these guys. But then, I suppose, I'm something of a heretic myself.

Love, Karen
 > "We have met the enemy and he is us." Pogo
 >
 > Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
 > Before you buy.
 >

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: <kalamity@my-deja.com>
 Subject: Re: loyal opposition in Baha'i
 Date: Wednesday, January 05, 2000 2:26 PM

In article <s72a0lep5k287@corp.supernews.com>,
 "Patrick Henry" <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
 > Ditto.
 >
 > You're probably right that you will now be branded > a heretic and harassed until you go away or withdraw > from the Bahai faith; that is, if the uhj doesn't suddenly have > its sycophants tell you one day that you are no longer on the > "roles," bogus as they are....
 > Dear Fred,
 You've forgotten my story. I'm not on the roles, which I why I can be so bold in saying what I think. But what else do you call a Baha'i who is not part of the administrative order and not a covenant-breaker? I refer to myself as a "heretic" in a sort of tongue-in-cheek way, because the UHJ denies that it is creating heretics by its actions. By the way, my understanding is that the word "heretic" comes from the Greek meaning "to make choices" as opposed to orthodox or "right thinking" people. From that perspective, the label is not so bad to wear.
 Love, Karen
 > --
 > Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"

> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
> <https://members.tripod.com/~FG/bahai.htm>
>
> <kalamity@my-deja.com> wrote in message news:84r3o2$qqc$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > In article <84qvf0$n5i$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
> > Carol <cajc@my-deja.com> wrote:
> > >
> > >
> > > So far as I can tell from my readings the UHJ has no authority to > > > declare anyone a heretic, nor to declare anyone a covenant > > > breaker.
> > The
> > > Hands appointed by Abdul-Baha had that authority while Shoghi > > > Effendi > > > was a minor, then Shoghi Effendi specifically forbade them to do > > > so,
> > > and said that only the Guardian could declare anyone a covenant
> > > breaker.
> > > I think that was pretty definite. What was done after Shoghi
> > > Effendi's
> > > death is pretty confusing and unclear as to whether it was correct > > > according to the evolution of the Covenantal understanding as > > > described > > > by him.
> > >
> > > The UHJ's purview is to enforce temporal laws in the Aqdas, and to > > > create or eliminate temporal laws not delineated in the Aqdas as > > > needed.
> > > There is no evidence that they are the Guardian or have the > > > authority
> > > of
> > > the Guardian.
> > >
> > > --
> > > Best regards,
> > >
> > > Carol Ann
> > >
> > > Of course, Carol, you are quite right. What I'm saying is that when > > > people are bullied and threatened because of their opinions, then a > > > de > > > facto class of heretics is created. My challenge is that if heresy,
> > > the > > > holding of unorthodox opinions, is going to be the subject of > > > punitive > > > action by the institutions, then they should just say so, pass a law > > > about it and deal with it according to due process. Such a law > > > would be > > > completely contrary to the teachings of Baha'u'llah, but so is the > > > action of pushing people out of the Faith for heresy, whether it is > > > termed so or not.
> > >
> > > It would be a whole lot better if a broad diversity of views, > > > including > > > those of liberal academics and writers, were just accepted as part
> > > of > > > many ways of viewing the Baha'i Faith. I personally have a hard > > > time > > > seeing what's so darn threatening about these guys. But then, I > > > suppose,
> > > I'm something of a heretic myself.
> > >
> > > Love, Karen
> > > > "We have met the enemy and he is us." Pogo
> > > >
> > > > Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> > > > Before you buy.
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

> > Before you buy.
>
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Comments on Doug's Letter Part Three Date: Thursday, September 07, 2000 11:05 AM

In article <8p2l8q$1hi$1@freenet9.carleton.ca>,
bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote:
> Or is it promoting the book that's the serious concern? Pat, I > believe, said Alison Marshall was booted out because she wrote a book > review of this book and posted this book review to cyberspace.
>

Dear Michael:

Alison's expulsion was announced less than a week after she posted her censored book review (which was of Baha'i World, not M&M) and the discussion of it was still going hot and heavy. Initially, many of us assumed that the two events were related. Later, it became clear that the decision to boot Alison was made some time before.

As to the reasons for her disenrollment: She received only a terse letter saying that her "behavior and attitude" made it impossible for her to be considered a member of the Baha'i community. A later letter explained that it was because she was "disseminating" her "misconceptions" of the Teachings to "an international audience" -- in plain English, they didn't like her Talisman postings. (Postings, which, by the way, they should never have seen because list rules prohibit forwarding anyone's posts to Baha'i authorities.) It is not clear which "misconceptions" the House is upset about. I've always suspected that that it was her views on infallibility that caused them to go after her, but that's only a guess on my part.

Of all the people I met when I first subscribed to talisman9 last December, Alison impressed me the most. She is a kind and devoted lady, a mystic who would far rather discuss irfan or do a slow read of a new translation than spend her time shouting across the liberal-conservative divide. That this passionate lover of Baha'u'llah is not considered to be a Baha'i by the powers-that-be is a terrible tragedy and injustice.

Getting back to the original topic: I've never been able to see how the writing of a book is attempt to "foist" views on the community. Exactly how is this "foisting" to occur? It's just a book: the friends can read it or not read it, agree with the ideas presented or disagree. That the mere expression of views that the UHJ doesn't like is somehow considered to be a deep, dark plot indicates, to me, that they are very afraid that Juan's ideas might prove appealing to a great many of the friends. I, personally, don't think there's much of a chance of that, so I'm struggling to understand the whole mindset of people who live in such terror of ideas and free thought.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Uh,oh! Karen's still telling stories . . .
Date: Tuesday, October 24, 2000 2:39 AM

Dear Dave:

I very much appreciate your thoughtful reaction to my history. I have always felt that in spite of our disagreements that you are basically sincere and make an effort to be fair.

You wrote: The only thing I can say is that I have spent a great deal of time with different communities from Long Island NY to Richmond VA, to Fredrick MD, to Danville PA, and I have not encountered the kinds (or the magnitude) of difficulties you mentioned in your essay.

I am aware that my community is probably not typical. However, I really have no experience of what is typical. Recently I discovered that a guy in one of my classes has a Baha'i wife, so I told him what my situation was. When he told her what community I came from she said "No wonder she left!" Apparently she'd come here for convention and was not impressed with the locals. However, I don't get the impression that the problems concerning an over-emphasis on administration and lack of spiritual focus are unique to our area. They seem to be pretty common complaints. And it sounds to me like your community is to be congratulated on having such a positive focus. How many active people do you have there?

> This is my big issue. Someone who declares should never be left to > their own devices unless they want to be. Constant communication is > very important. This means that we should be genuinely supportive and > helpful. We should not worry about administration or teaching right > away. We need to first bring a new believer into the community then > when they say they are ready bring them into the teaching and > administrative aspects of the Faith. When a new believer is the ninth > member of a community I understand that they are official part of the > LSA but and LSA can function on 5 members so we should never pressure > new Baha'is to be at every LSA meeting. We should also make them aware that they can request not to be considered for an LSA office.

Boy, I wish there had been someone of your common sense around when I was a new believer! I got thrown into administration head first, wondering just what had hit me.

(Um, I seem to have lost the rest of the quotes so I'll just have to answer the rest of the points without them. Fortunately, I printed out your post.)

You agreed with me that strong personalities are a problem. It seems that they just don't have the patience to let real consultation happen. They are so caught up in their vision that they can't see the damage they're doing. To them, to slowly build those bonds and focus on community spirituality is "doing nothing" -- when really nothing is going to happen without that foundation first. Or so I think. I've never really seen anything work, but I know the ideal we're shooting for.

As far as the problem of no outside support, I don't know why that happened. Lately, I've had the feeling that this area has been just written off as too troublesome. Not long ago our ABMs were holding meetings all over the region, but never got up this far, not even to the largest community in our area. Of course, hearing some of the stories on the Internet, I'm not so sure I want an ABM around, but for many years my complaint was that we were being neglected. I wish I knew somebody with inside info that could find out the reason. It could be as simple as the territory being too large. Or maybe we've just got some lazy assistants (although I basically like our assistants -- a little leery of the ABM, though.) But we needed help, badly, and never really got any.

You agreed that squelching "John's" teaching project was a mistake. I can't even begin to tell you how badly they hurt this guy; it brings me to tears just to think about it. Juan says that it's fairly common for teaching projects to be stopped, and although I have no way of independently verifying that, I can't help but believe that "upper echelons" were involved in this case. The people that actually told "John" he couldn't do his project would later always ask about how he was doing, and generally acted like they felt badly over what happened. I don't think they really wanted to do that to him. That's just a gut-feeling, of course.

I don't anticipate being in your area, but I thank you for your kind offer. I hope that discussion of some of these issues will yield more than words, and that we'll actually see some changes. I don't know, though. Some days I'm more hopeful, some days less. Just last night an old friend told me he was thinking of resigning, after 30 years in the Faith, because the problems seem so entrenched, so I've been pretty bummed. I'm glad things are working for you in your neck of the woods.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....
Date: Friday, November 17, 2000 12:26 AM

In article <8uuk1a$idi$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, dfiorito@my-deja.com wrote:
> In article <P2AQ5.393$BN.150700@paloalto-snr1.gtei.net>,
> "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote:
> >
> > So this is why she was kicked out of the Baha'i Faith! I wondered > > what she had done wrong. Such vicious criticism!
> >
> > Randy
>
> This is not the reason Alison was removed from the rolls. In fact the > real reason is a private matter between her and the Universal House of > Justice. Any attempt at a detailed explanation would be pure > speculation on our parts.
>
Dear Dave,

My problem with this is that Alison herself has not been told the specific reasons for her disenrollment. Assuming you are correct and that the community at large does not have a right to know, surely you would not suggest that Alison herself should be kept in the dark! They held study classes in her area, hoping she would get the "hint", claiming that this was sufficient warning, then announced that because of her "behavior and attitude" she could no longer be considered a Baha'i, in spite of twenty years in the community. I see no justice here.

And I believe that the community at large has the right to know specifically what type of "behavior and attitude" disqualifies one for membership in the Baha'i Faith. When I became a Baha'i, I was told the only necessary requirement was belief in Baha'u'llah. Apparently, they have decided to tighten up the requirements, which is a bad thing if this Faith is supposed to be open to all mankind.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....
Date: Friday, November 17, 2000 9:23 AM

Yes, Randy, of course. You've been over on talisman, haven't you? But we haven't had the chance to talk directly. With newer participants, I sometimes lose track of who says what. The sad thing is there are people who would say this about Alison, and not be joking.

It's very disturbing that a Faith that I thought was open to all the world is now so very anxious to get rid of people. It's just crazy. Besides, if the aim is to shut people up, they haven't succeeded. Alison is still there, saying the same things she's always said, and still proclaiming her devotion to Baha'u'llah. Only the most rigid-minded would say that she is not a Baha'i.

It seems to me that there is this vicious circle in motion: the AO cracks down and tries to control public discourse, which releases a flood of protest, which only leads to more sanctions imposed, and more protests. If they want the protests to stop, they are going to have to stop treating people like this.

Love, Karen

> Thanks Karen,
>
> Actually the "vicious criticism" was of course a joke, as her review was > very professional. I really had no idea why what happened to Alison > happened, so your information is appreciated. I can't help but think that > changes have occurred in the Baha'i faith, where once we tried to encourage > people who were sincere believers to stay in and now some people will > deliberately encourage those they don't agree with to leave (and actually > have a good laugh about it as well).
>
> Sincerely, Randy
> --
>
> Karen Bacquet <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote in message > news:8v2f5b$otc$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > In article <P2AQ5.393$BN.150700@paloalto-snr1.gtei.net>,
> > "Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote:
> > >
> > > So this is why she was kicked out of the Baha'i Faith! I wondered > > what she > > > had done wrong. Such vicious criticism!
> > >
> > > Randy
> > >
> > Dear Randy,
> >
> > It is very unlikely that the review had anything to do with Alison's > > expulsion. The news of her expulsion came soon after she publicly > > posted her review, but the actual decision was almost certainly made > > before then.
> >
> > Bear in mind that Alison was giving a professional opinion of the > > article; in New Zealand she gets paid to do that. It is not vicious to > > give an honest opinion about the flaws in a piece of writing when you > > are acting as a professional. It's no favor to a writer to be namby-> > pamby about it, and it's no favor to potential readers who are going to > > lay out money for a book to say a book is wonderful if it's not.
> >
> > The House of Justice has not given specific reasons for Alison's > > expulsion, but it has said that it was the dissemination of her > > opinions to "an international audience" that was the problem i.e. her > > postings to talisman. It was something she said there that upset them, > > but it's anybody's guess exactly what that was.
> >
> > Besides, do you really think that someone should be booted out of the > > faith simply on the basis of something they have written or said?

> >
> > Love, Karen
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> > Before you buy.
>
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....
Date: Friday, November 17, 2000 6:56 PM

Dear Dave:

First of all, what law did Alison ever break? Or Michael McKenney? I thought that the penalty for breaking Baha'i law was the removal of voting rights, not expulsion from the community. In fact the reason they insist that their removal from the community is not "expulsion" is because that is a penalty exclusively reserved for covenant-breakers.

Has the UHJ passed a law concerning what is and is not appropriate speech? The "Rights and Freedoms" statement is too vague to be a law -- it basically comes down to "You've got all the freedom in the world to speak until we tell you to shut up." How was Baha'i law broken?

Dave, several months ago, you said you were looking into the penalty of removal from the rolls, what the rationale is etc. Did you ever find out anything useful?

>
> I don't think the AO is trying to silence anyone. Being declared a CB > never silenced Remey. So we have a long history in the Faith of folks > being removed from the Faith in various ways who just kept on talking.
> So if silence is not the motive than what is?

Actually, you are right. They knew they couldn't silence Alison. In fact, I think the reason that no one contacted her is that they knew that any contact would be immediately reported on the Internet. The silencing comes from her example -- they have made it very clear what happens to enrolled Baha'is who speak out on the Internet.

And there were definitely people silenced in the Talisman crack-down. I've had more time to look at all those archives, and I look at the names that have dropped out of sight . . . I know some of them fell silent in order to keep their status in the community. You can only silence a person that has something to lose. The main reason I can be so bold is that I'm not enrolled. If I were, I'd either have to be silent, speak under a pseudonym, or turn into a paranoid maniac waiting for that phone call from the ABM. Besides, I've had people email me after reading my story and they tell me that they are afraid to complain for fear of being "turned in". I do not think Baha'is should have to give up their human rights in order to be enrolled in the community.

You speak of justice. Well justice is not just arbitrary decisions based upon how uppity a person is. Justice requires that the boundaries be crystal clear, that people must have both warning that those boundaries are being crossed and the opportunity to defend themselves, and that the consequences of the prohibited actions are clear. Shoghi Effendi said that Assemblies must exhaust every effort before imposing sanctions. I don't see how this was done in either Michael's or Alison's cases. Michael certainly had no knowledge of what the penalty might be -- it had never been imposed before! Nobody ever said to Alison that she cannot say whatever she said that was offensive, or she would be disenrolled. In fact, they are making the rather unbelievable claim that disenrollment is not a sanction or punishment, just a statement of fact that because of their opinions neither of them can be considered a Baha'i. When were they given the opportunity to defend themselves?

You ask if Alison has contacted the UHJ to find out why she was expelled. I don't know; it is possible that she has. But it's not her responsibility to do that -- the UHJ has the moral obligation to make itself clear. I do know that people from New Zealand have written concerning her case, and so the NZ community got a good scolding from Peter Khan about it.

That's enough for one post. My kids are clamouring for attention. You know the song: Mo--om!:-)

Love, Karen

>

> In my mind it is the simple enforcement of Baha'i Law. In the Kitab-i-

> Aqdas there is a clear admonition that Baha'u'llah's laws to to be > followed and enforced without exception. That is why it is the House > of Justice and not the House of Mercy. Mercy is for God to dispense > and for man He left us His laws so that we could enforce Justice.

>

> So in my view the AO has little choice but to enforce that laws and > ordinances of God. To do otherwise would be to break those very same > laws.

>

> Cheers,

>

> Dave

>

> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

> Before you buy.

>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: My article on Alison Marshall's expulsion

Date: Friday, December 01, 2000 1:41 AM

Dear Dave:

As I told you, I'll address the issues concerning Alison and the covenant a little later. The only thing I will say now is that to some extent my lack of disapproval of Alison's posts is probably, to some extent, an indication of just how far I've traveled from traditional Baha'i thinking. I just had another guy I was talking basically say to me "You don't believe in the Covenant" and I think, from his tone he's closing the conversation. Now, I don't think I don't believe in the Covenant, but he saw it that way. I made a rather short remark to him, and now I wish I had explained it more. My head is just in a different place now, and someone who is not accustomed to the thinking of a Baha'i liberal could easily be shocked, and I was insensitive to that, I think.

Anyway, in order to explain my views on Alison really requires that I lay out my view on the Covenant. So let me get my head organized and I'll get back to you on that.

> >

> > Well, that perception is way off. Over on Talisman, I was just > > correcting the misperception that Juan thinks of himself as a "Baha'i

> > Martin Luther". This is simply not true, although I admit that fact > > wasn't really clear to me until I'd been hanging out with these guys > > for a while. On the surface, Juan "looks" like a leader, but among > > the liberals themselves he's really not.

>

> Yes but when do you make the distinction between "looks" and "is"?

> When you meet a strange dog on the street do you wait to see if he will > bite or do you take it at face value and take no chances. So should > the UHJ wait until a person has started an active internal split or do > you act when a person sounds like they are about to take that action?
> Juan acts and speaks like a leader. He claims he will win converts > for "the liberal Baha'i Faith". How is the AO supposed to take that?

Part of the reason Juan appears as a "leader" is that he was the only one left standing after the Talisman crack-down. Birkland contacted five people, presumably the most outspoken liberals on Talisman: Steve Scholl and Linda Walbridge resigned their membership, and mostly fell silent. I see Steve around sometimes, of course, but he's certainly not a busy poster. I have never seen a post from Linda, except in the archives of Talisman I. John Walbridge and Tony Lee both stayed in the Faith but keep a very low profile. Juan resigned, but continued to talk about Baha'i issues, and bring more information to light than had ever been done in the pre-crackdown days. He is a leader rather by default - there used to be other strong liberal voices out there, but they have been silenced.

I think you exaggerate his remark about winning converts. What I recall him saying is that if the conservatives are going to spend their time with trivial stuff (and I can't remember the particular matter being discussed), then the liberals will win converts to the Faith. He has never referred to the "liberal Baha'i Faith" as an entity, only to Baha'i liberals. Juan is absolutely opposed to any form of organization that would be composed only of Baha'i liberals. He does want liberals included within the Baha'i Faith, though.

>
> > And Alison is a mystic. Both Juan and Alison are inner-directed > > cerebral types. They aren't interested in being a "center" of > > authority; they just want to be left alone to do their thing.
>
> Yet they both have websites dedicated to their causes and actively > argue that their positions are correct. They both make open calls for > action. How is any of that inner-directed? If they are not interested > in being at the center then why do they call so much attention to > themselves?

Well, I've got a website, too. And I can't speak to Juan's or Alison's motivation, but I can tell you mine. Because I spent all those years in the Baha'i Faith with no one listening to me. The Internet gives me a voice that I have never had. Even being called a covenant-breaker by right-wing loony-toons is better than simply being tuned out.

Getting one's viewpoint out there is not the same as claiming authority. Neither Alison or Juan is saying "follow me". Both of them say "This is what I believe. This is what happened to me." And in Juan's case, his website also contains the results of his academic research.

And as far as inner-directedness -- yes, the Internet is public, but it's also private as well. One can leave one's opinion and not be directly interfered with it. Example: I have had many discussions with many people who disagree with me. No doubt some have even gotten angry with me. Sometimes I am disturbed, too, or whatever. But it's not like what you get face to face. A friend of mine disagrees with me, too, and he spent hours one evening just going on and on at me about it. Every single thing I said about what I'd been thinking or feeling he turned around and used against me. And I just sat there and took it, because in real life I'm nowhere near as bold as I am out here. People can call me what they like out here and I can bear it. But to have a friend look me in the eyes and tell me I'm not a Baha'i is a thing I still haven't recovered from.

I guess what I'm saying is that the Internet is a "safe" way for the more introverted person to get their views across. Yeah, I'm with you here, Dave, but there's also a sense in which I'm safely by myself.

And there went the last of the quotes. <sigh> It's late and thinking about that particular incident has upset me, so I'd better call it quits for tonight. You know, that happened months ago and it still just rips me up.

I'll give you a response on the other stuff later.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: My article on Alison Marshall's expulsion
Date: Saturday, December 02, 2000 7:29 AM

Dear Dave:

I'm awake in the wee hours this morning, so I thought I'd just give up, put on a pot of coffee, and start giving you my thoughts on what you've said about Alison.

Before I get started I'll tell you that I just published another article on Themestream "But Some are More Equal than Others" about women's exclusion from the UHJ. I haven't really promoted it yet; I'm not sure where the line is between shameless self-promotion and really shameless self-promotion. :-) I don't think the friends would appreciate weekly advertisements from me -- and I'm hoping to get an article out that often until I go back to work. Actually, I really tried to give both points of view on this one, although it's probably pretty clear where my sympathies lay.

The first thing that jumps out at me about your comments on Alison is that my own views are so similar in many ways, that since I think of myself as Baha'i, I can't think of her as "un-Baha'i". The House probably wouldn't think I was qualified for membership, either. But then, I was already unenrolled before making public my unorthodox views, so they can't hurt me like they did Alison. (I find the notion that being booted from a religious community you've been a part of for over twenty years in not a punishment to be both heartless and ridiculous. Not to mention silly double-talk.)

Another thing that really keeps getting rammed home to me the more I talk to people is that one's attitude towards the institutions is very much the fruits of individual experience. People whose experience in the Baha'i community was good think the institutions are just peachy-keen and can't figure out where all this mistrust comes from. And I would be the last person to call such a perspective invalid.

However, as you know from reading my history my experience was not good. As I quipped to someone just lately "What did the AO ever do for me?" Now that's a little flippant, but I do rather feel that for people who want absolute loyalty, they've done darn little to earn it. My community was just left to sit and rot, and some of the policies of upper echelons just made things harder. For most of my Baha'i life, the NSA and the UHJ were just the distant writers of letters (inspiring if you were lucky) and the sources of all the plans and demands I always felt guilty about.

When I first came out on the Internet, I was amazed at some of the passionate exclamations of loyalty to the institutions. I'd never heard people talk like that. I simply don't relate to the idea of "loving" the House of Justice. How does one "love" an institution? I fell in love with the Manifestation; the institutions are just His creation.

Another thing that shaped my views towards the UHJ is our local experience with Remeyite literature, described in my history. It's hard to convey to you the kind of trauma we went through. I don't think any of us old-timers who went through it have the kind of "loyalty" to the Institutions that they think ought to be there. At best, what you get is "This is the only Baha'i Faith we've got and we're stuck with it. I'll keep my mouth shut for the sake of unity."

And it wasn't Remey's claims -- I personally feel the only appeal that he or his various successors could possibly have is that he's the only one who ever claimed the Guardianship after Shoghi Effendi. However, once we looked at the fact that 'Abdul-Baha created a balanced system of Twin Institutions that were supposed to work together, I could hardly see what we've got now as anything other than a patch-up job.

Which would be o.k. One could hardly expect, after Shoghi Effendi's death that everyone would say "We've got no more Guardians, lets just pack it up and not have a Baha'i Faith anymore." It must have been a shattering time for everyone who went through it, and I would totally disagree with anyone who would suggest sinister motives on the part of the Hands or the first elected UHJ.

So it wasn't the patch-up job that bothered me; it was the patch-up theories. I really felt, when our ABM talked to me about this, that I was being treated like a child or an idiot. The notion that the Guardianship somehow mystically exists without a living Guardian is just stupid. But the issue that bears more directly on what I have to say on Alison's statements is interpretation. I find the fine distinction between "interpretation" (the Guardian's job) and the "elucidations" of the UHJ to be just more double-talk.

What jumps out at me, when I read your complaints about Alison's statements is that you are granting the UHJ the scripturally unwarranted right to interpret the Writings.

This post is getting quite long, and I think it would be better if I addressed Alison's specific points in a separate one. Today, if I can.

Love, Karen

dfiorito@my-deja.com wrote:

> In article <90604c$9a4$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,

> Karen Bacquet <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote:

> > Dear Dave:

> >

> > You are seeing things in Alison's posts that I don't see there. And > > you're not the first person I could say that to.

>

> Here are a few examples:

>

> Date: Sat, 18 Apr 1998 13:10:25 +1200

> To: irfan1@umich.edu

> From: Alison and Steve Marshall forumbahai@es.co.nz

> Subject: Re: the covenant

>

> "The letter talks about how the House of Justice went through a process > of trying to get Micheal to see things in the same way as it does. It > says that it even produced writings to back up its view and even this > was to no avail. But what of the writings that I, for example, can > produce to back my opinions on the covenant? Why do their quotes trump > mine? Why do my quotes threaten their authority?

>

> It is my feeling that the House's interpretation of the covenant > removes my covenantal right to express the fruits of my guided journey > towards God. My right to express those fruits is not in any way at > variance with its authority. Surely, the 'mystery' of the covenant is > partly captured by the fact that the expression of my considered > opinions is in fact a demonstration of my support for the House."

>

> The questions in the first paragraph indicate that Alison does not > understand or fails to recognize the authority invested in the UHJ.

In

> the second paragraph she makes it clear that she feels that she can > have the authority to question the validity of the UHJ's infallible > ability to legislate.

>
> Here is another:
>
> To: talisman
> Subject: infallibility
>
> "If Baha'u'llah only intended to describe the House as 'inspired', is > it open to anyone, including Abdul-Baha, to interpret this so widely
as > to say that everything the House says is true?
>
> As I see it, the problem with our popular notion that 'everything the > House says is true' is that it moves away from the ideal of > consultation and its use of reason, and disempowers the community.
> Baha'is are exhorted to consult with the House, but in practice, this > amounts to writing letters and receiving replies. The community punches > in the data and the House processes it and tells us the answers. If > there's any consultation or reasoning going on, then its happening > entirely among the House members. There's no requirement for the > community to use its reason, our job is to provide information and not > question the answers given.
>
> I'm keen to see us move away from 'everything the House says is true' > so that the community can begin to play a meaningful part in the > decision making process at the international level. "
>
> Here Alison Is ignoring the clear - crytal clear - wiritings on the > institution of the Universal House of Justice and its relation to the > greater community.
>
> One more:
>
> Date: Mon, 27 Jul 1998 20:56:30 +1200
> From: Alison and Steve Marshall forumbahai@es.co.nz
> Subject: Re: UHJ and women: "the sound of one wing flapping"
> Cc: irfan1@umich.edu
>
> "As I see it, nowhere does Baha'u'llah actually come out and say that > the House of Justice members must be men. He describes them in passing > as men, but never makes a positive law of it. So, in effect we have > based a positive exclusion on a word that was not even necessary for > the purpose of the passages in which it was used - Baha'u'llah could > have referred to the "women of the House of Justice" and those passages > would not be altered in meaning. IMV, this is bad law. Surely, > justifying an exclusion that prima facie is inconsistent with the > positive principle of equality needs a more solid foundation. Look at > the law relating to polygyny. There 'Abdul-Baha clearly says that > Baha'u'llah meant men to have only one wife, and in doing this, gave a > positive principle to justify his position, that of justice and > treating people equitably. But here there seems to be no principle
that > can be invoked to overturn equality, except perhaps the idea of > gradualism, as suggested by 'Abdul-Baha's position, but this would > last only a limited time.
>
> Given the lack of clarity, I agree with X that we have a situation
that > is not covered in the Book. This means that the House of Justice can > rule on the matter, and change its constitution, which would bring it > into line with modern circumstances. "
>
> Here Alison is ignoring the statements of both Abdul-Baha and the > Gaurdian on this issue. Reason is a wonderful thing. It is a gift of > God but God gave us some pretty strong absolutes to measure our reason > against. In this post Alison is ignoring those in favor of reason.
>
> > Ian Kluge was saying, soon after her expulsion, that she had invented > > a "goddess theology" that denied the centrality of Baha'u'llah in

the

> > Faith -- and all I can figure is that he misinterpreted some of her > > statements concerning the houri tablets. Saying that Baha'u'llah is > > not central to Alison is just crazy; she's passionately in love with > > Him.

>

> Here is a small lesson I have learned about love. I am probably saying > something you already know but bear with me. When I got married I > realized that love was hard. It takes a whole lot of work. You have > to accept those qualities that do not mesh with your own vision of how > things should be. In order to love you must accept the whole and not > just the parts you like.

>

> The same is true in our love for Baha'u'llah. Faith is hard. You need > to accept the whole and not just the parts you like. That is the point > of the Covenant - acceptance of the whole.

>

> > Another example is that Susan Maneck says Alison repeatedly says
that

> > the UHJ is in violation of the Covenant, and I haven't seen that in > > her public posts. (I did get some material sent to me privately that > > had Alison saying that, but it is of doubtful reliability.)

>

> I see it in her posts. She says that the UHJ does not take input from > the community and does not consult with anyone (both untrue) and > therefore are in violation of the "two way" nature of the Covenant.
> Her scriptural position is based on a single passage from the Bab.
> Trouble is that there are two Covenants at work in the Baha'i Faith.
> The first is the Covenant that Baha'u'llah has made with His followers > regarding the chain of authority and unity. The other is the Covenant > between God and His creation - the Abrahamic Covenant. The Bab could
> >

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....

Date: Tuesday, December 05, 2000 2:42 AM

Dear Mark:

Yes, I know I can go back. Anytime I want to abandon my conscience and approve of injustice.

I have no illusions about my ability to change anything. I'm no one,
Mark. I'm just a mom, soon to be schoolteacher, in a little town -- with a Baha'i community so screwed up even the ABM avoids it. I have no power. I was never "prominent" even locally.

But I do have a voice, and I'm not inclined to give that up. What will they ask me to do, Mark? Say that tossing Alison out on her butt was a really great idea? Say that modern scholarship is "materialistic"? Say that threatening people over their emails is their right?

I would love to be part of the Baha'i community. But those in control of it have become so immoral, that I just can't support them. To do so would be to betray everything I ever believed Baha'u'llah's teachings to be about-- the virtues of trustworthiness, justice, and compassion;
the investigation of truth; tolerance, honesty.

I feel I have been lied to in a very profound way -- not just over the "Dialogue" thing. I believed I joined a religion that was open, flexible, tolerant, supportive of the use of reason. And it has been unmasked as a monster. The Baha'i Faith I believed in doesn't even really exist, except maybe in the hearts of some of the believers. The people who would do the things I've seen are not people I can believe
in.

I'll keep Baha'u'llah; you can have the other stuff if you want. They broke my trust. Big changes are going to have to happen for them to earn it again.

Love, Karen

> Dear Karen,
> If you feel that you are still a Baha'i and continue your belief
in > Baha'u'llah..... and realize that there is an administrative order > that is trying to operate within their guidelines then you are probably > still a good candidate to be a Baha'i.
> If you wish to install change within the administrative order and its > members by any public means in an attempt to influence other > Baha'is..... then good luck in no-mans land. The belief in > Baha'u'llah is just the precursor to a willingness to participate within a > community at local, national and international levels. It is obvious
that > you are very close to where you want to be. I personally hope all the best > for you and only wish we were able to deal with this outside this > gladiatorial arena.
> Mark
> "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote in message > news:90gb4$d7$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
> > In article <3A2B399F.5592DFEE@usq.edu.au>,
> > Ron House <house@usq.edu.au> wrote:
> > > Karen Bacquet wrote:
> > >
> > > > We have no option if we resign. The AO doesn't intend for us to > > > have > > > > one. We are Baha'is-in-exile, living in a religious no-man's-land.
> > >
> > > You are not in no-man's-land! You are a lover of all the world, of > > which
> > > 'Abdul-Baha spoke, and therefore a true Baha'i.
> >
> > Thank you, Ron, your kind acceptance and for the reminder -- being on > > somebody's list somewhere doesn't really mean so much in the grand > > scheme of things, does it?
> >
> > Love, Karen
> >
> > > --
> > > Ron House house@usq.edu.au
> > > https://www.sci.usq.edu.au/staff/house
> > >
> > > A rose grows in the Earth's good soil.
> > >
> > >
> > Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> > Before you buy.
>
>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....
Date: Tuesday, December 05, 2000 6:49 PM

In article <D2eX5.33$UI4.2686@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net>,
"Mark Elderkin" <mee@tsn.cc> wrote:
>
> I'm not asking you to abandon anything. Just be fare with us. Bottom > line..... what do you want to acomplish?

I guess you are thinking in different terms than I am. I don't have a practical "goal" in mind, like I'll write this stuff and the AO will react a certain way. I will admit to being politically unsophisticated. I don't really expect to have much of an influence.

Since I have been out in cyberspace, I have done basically two things -- just in different forms and formats: Told the story of my community, and how centering on administration makes it almost impossible to have a satisfying community life. And I have spoken out about how people have been treated unjustly by the Baha'i institutions. Those two things are my main interest. And I really have no power other than to say -- "This is what happened to me" or "This is what happened to someone else and it is wrong." Maybe if enough people see this, change will happen. Or maybe I'll just spend my whole life in exile from my religion. It's in God's hands.

You really are over-estimating me if you think I have a more complicated agenda than that.

> >
> > I have no illusions about my ability to change anything. I'm no one,
> > Mark. I'm just a mom, soon to be schoolteacher, in a little town -- > > with a Baha'i community so screwed up even the ABM avoids it. I have no > > power. I was never "prominent" even locally.
>
> We actually have a lot in common with our communities.....
that's > another story. What does being prominent have to do with this? Here on this > format we all share the same..... the ability to type.....
and
> the ability to weave our way around the internet.

What I meant was, why should anybody listen to me as opposed to anyone else? There are plenty of eloquent voices supporting the AO; it's not like I carry that much weight.

>
> > But I do have a voice, and I'm not inclined to give that up. What will > > they ask me to do, Mark? Say that tossing Alison out on her butt was a > > really great idea? Say that modern scholarship is "materialistic"?
Say
> > that threatening people over their emails is their right?
>
> Can't really comment about Alison's position, but did her situation become > yours or do you have your own? I'm not sure you want to talk about > scholarship with me..... I seem to be rather mean when it comes to > these self-appointed pseudo-intelligent heartless bastards that are looking > for a following in order to achieve their own agendas. OOPs..... sorry. I > am sure that you see these people in a different way than I do, but that is > what makes life interesting. As far as receiving threats, I would encourage > you to post any of these, that you have received , and let us relieve that > situation.

I have never been in direct conflict with the AO, if that's what you mean. There was an investigation of our community in 1987 when a community member ran into some Remeyite material, but the matter was cleared up and dropped. That is the only occasion in which I've ever been in any kind of trouble. Hell, they hardly know I exist up here.

Mark, I gotta run. My son has not come home from school yet, and I have to free up the phone. I'll finish this in a little bit.

Love, Karen

>

> > I would love to be part of the Baha'i community. But those in control > > of it have become so immoral, that I just can't support them. To do so > > would be to betray everything I ever believed Baha'u'llah's teachings

> > to be about-- the virtues of trustworthiness, justice, and compassion;

> > the investigation of truth; tolerance, honesty.

>

> We would all like to be part of the perfect community in a perfect town > doing perfect teaching..... nice concept but may not be practical. We > are at a stage of infancy and have a lot of growing to do. There are problems and they will alleviate themselves over a matter of time. To be a

> Baha'i is apart from anything in the community..... anything > national..... anything international..... it is about developing > the virtues you've listed.

>

> > I feel I have been lied to in a very profound way -- not just over > > the "Dialogue" thing. I believed I joined a religion that was open, > > flexible, tolerant, supportive of the use of reason. And it has been > > unmasked as a monster. The Baha'i Faith I believed in doesn't even > > really exist, except maybe in the hearts of some of the believers.

The

> > people who would do the things I've seen are not people I can believe > > in.

>

> I would hesitate to say that I probably have met several thousand Baha'is > over the last 27 or so years and I believe that the attributes of > flexibility, tolerance, and reasonability exist in all most all of their > hearts. I can state for a fact, that without these attributes most Baha'is > wouldn't have been Baha'is. It would be a lot easier to just fit in with the > regular crowd.

>

> > I'll keep Baha'u'llah; you can have the other stuff if you want.

They

> > broke my trust. Big changes are going to have to happen for them to > > earn it again.

>

> > Love, Karen

>

> Karen, I am sure that you are a very sweet person but I think you have now > missed the point. This is Baha'u'llah's Faith. Trust is only a perception of > those willing to comprehend its' significance. It may have been lost but > surely needs to be regained.

>

> Mark

>

>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....

Date: Tuesday, December 05, 2000 8:21 PM

Dear Mark,

Sorry for cutting the last message short -- Mom stuff, you know. I tried to give you an answer earlier, but when I tried to send it, Deja put me on the sign up page, and I lost everything I'd typed. Is it just me or does Deja have just about the crummiest service around?

Anyway, there are two basic issues left in your post to me. The first comes down basically to the fact that I find some of the arguments of the "heartless bastards" convincing and you do not -- in fact I think there's an enormous amount of heartlessness on the other side. So I don't think there's much point in going back over old ground and thrashing out who was right. The "heartless bastards" you speak of have never been anything but kind to me.

Secondly, the "we're in our infancy" argument gets a little old after a while. Just the other day, a Baha'i of some thirty years standing and who had been elected Treasurer, went to the Chairman and turned all the Treasurer stuff in and said "Don't call me anymore; I'm going fishing, it's a more spiritual thing to do." For thirty years people have tried to establish a community here. Can you blame this guy for not being able to, for the umpteenth time, stand the hassle involved in getting an LSA off the ground? Why should he? It'll just crash again when somebody moves out. And this guy put up with it; a lot of new converts sat in on a LSA meeting or Feast consultation once or twice and said to themselves "I'm outta here." Until we start forming worship communities instead of Assemblies that's the way it's going to be. Everybody here is so burned out I don't think there's much hope of making things better. Maybe higher echelons ought to check into how local communities are doing instead of building impressive structures and worrying about what us heretics are saying on email.

Love, Karen

>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Themestream Articles
Date: Friday, December 15, 2000 9:50 AM

Dear Randy:

No, I don't have any journalism training at all. The only experience I had was doing PR for local non-profit organizations, including the Baha'i community here. I got my first experience with the local arts council.

With the article on Alison, I first asked her permission to write it, then allowed her to check it for accuracy. However, the Talisman article involves a whole lot of people, and I didn't think it was practical or necessary to contact them all -- I don't even know all of them, or how I would contact them. For my source material, I used whatever documentation is available on the web. I thought about not using names, but they were all on the web anyway, and Paul used them in his Gnosis article. Things where there seems to be concern for confidentiality, I was careful of. I did not, for example identify the author of the Majnun post, the recipient of the first Birkland letter, because the recipient is not named on that web page. In fact, I have never identified that person except in private correspondence with people who know who it is already -- even though that's got to be the most open secret in Baha'i cyberspace.

So I have thought about the ethics of all this. However, Randy, we are talking about an online magazine here, where anybody can publish. The only screening of articles that I have seen is that imposed by audience preference -- that is, a bad article will rapidly drop to the bottom of the list, and a good one will stay near the top. It's entirely based on the score the audience gives you. However, there is nothing but the writer's own conscience and ability to ensure accuracy and fairness. If you look around there's some wacky things on Themestream. There are also some really good articles written by professional writers.

Anyway, with anything published online like this, I would expect readers to use some discrimination. I'm doing my best to be accurate, and now that Susan has sent me the material on David, I don't think it would be necessary to make personal contact.

Thank you, Randy, for the kind words about my articles. I'm not going to be able to keep writing at this pace. After New Year, I'm going to be student teaching and that's pretty demanding, and I'll probably have to cut back significantly on my cyberspace activities. For the past couple weeks I've been off, and my kids have still been in school, so I've had the time to hang around. However, I'll still keep writing when I can.

Love, Karen

"Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote:

> Karen

>

> If you want the article to be accurate perhaps you should let David Langness > see and reply to this new material. That would be only fair in a > journalistic sense. Since you are doing some really nice things on > Themestream (I've read several of your articles and enjoyed them), I just > wonder if you have taken any classes on journalistic ethics and the like.

> It's not an area of personal expertise for me, but you read a bit about what > is expected of journalists, the things they do to ensure both accuracy and > fairness. Its not an easy area to deal I would imagine. Anyway, good luck > on more fine articles.

>

> Cheers, Randy

>

>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: Themestream Articles

Date: Thursday, December 14, 2000 11:44 PM

Dear Pat:

I only just learned that John resigned; he didn't resign in the immediate aftermath of the Talisman crackdown, but last year, from what I understand. The Birkland letter is not described as forcing him out of the Faith, but threatening him with shunning. That's why I was confused. I believe the Gnosis article also described John as still being within the community, although Linda had resigned.

I never said the John and Tony stopped posting completely, but that they stopped being active posters. It seems to me they must have been pretty prominent voices if Birkland had to go talk to them; now you don't see them around much. That's all I meant. In any case, because of the confusion, I deleted that sentence from my article.

I also revised the paragraph concerning David Langness. However, I have just got some documentation about his case, and I can see that I'm going to have to revise it further in order to have it completely accurate.(Or as accurate as such a thing can be, when people see the same set of facts so differently.) Since this stuff wasn't on the web, and I was trying to piece together what happened from conflicting stories, and I did the best I could. What happened with him was an important part of the Talisman story and I wasn't going to leave it out.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: A Question from Karen to Mark E.
Date: Tuesday, December 19, 2000 8:42 PM

Dear Mark:

I'm sorry you're so upset about my article "Everybody Wants to Rule the World" about theocratic beliefs in the Baha'i community. But I'm confused on precisely what it is you are upset about -- is it because I say that theocratic beliefs are widespread in the community, or because I'm implying that they are not part of Baha'u'llah's teaching? Or is it because I'm saying openly something that people don't normally find out until they're in the Faith, thus "letting the cat out of the bag" too soon?

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Welcome to unmoderated NGs on BF (was: Roman Catholic ...)
Date: Monday, December 18, 2000 8:18 PM

In article <4XVUfLbP6EAu4@breacais.demon.co.uk>,
Chris Manvell <chris@breacais.NOdemonUCEPLEASE.co.uk> wrote:
> On alt.religion.bahai, Karen Bacquet (mailto:kb4@mail.csuchico.edu) > wrote:
> >The Baha'i > >Faith, you see, has so many extra people in it that it can afford to > >throw them away. It only wants the pure of heart that can stand the > >bullshit for an entire lifetime.
>
> No Karen. The Baha'i Faith is for all -- every soul is precious and no
> individual, no Institution of the Faith has the right to stand between a > seeking soul and its Maker.

Deeds, not words, Chris. If the Baha'i Faith really cared about its members, it wouldn't do so many things to alienate them. Then blame the alienated for being so.

I am quite in sympathy with your ideals, and was being sarcastic, speaking from the anger that I've still got from my experience. You are absolutely right in that no institution has anything to do with my relationship with God. They do, however, have something to do with who belongs with the Baha'i Faith, or does not.

Love, Karen

If one was already "pure of heart" then it > would be like taking a perfectly fit and healthy person to the doctor > for treatment, or a university only accepting students that already knew > the entire content of their desired course. The Faith exists quite > simply because we are NOT "pure of heart". It exists to help us come > nearer to God, to better ourselves. No seeker is "not good enough"
for > the Faith.
>
> What you are writing about is the opinions of a few people who want to > preserve the status quo, the nice little cosy club that the Faith has > become in the North (or West, if you prefer). Is this what the martyrs > sacrificed their lives for? Is this what Martha Root and the other > early heroines and heroes of the Faith sacrificed THEIR lives for? Is > this what the Iranian believers are sacrificing their livelihoods, their > honour, their material possessions, and their very lifeblood for?
That
> we have a cosy time, eating cucumber sandwiches and drinking cups of > teas (or whatever the American equivalent is) and discussing next > month's calendar? The House has told us to go out and teach, and what > do WE do? We talk about teaching. We make plans that we don't keep.

 > We let windows of opportunity pass us by, and we judge those who come
 to > us seeking that which is the most precious gift we can offer. We who > are no better than any other, and just as much in need of succour.
 > Until these cosy comforts are put aside and the believers take up the > banner of the Faith nothing, but nothing, will happen and the Faith of > God will languish, and when Baha'u'llah asks us "How many souls did
 you
 > guide to Me?" what will our answer be?
 > --
 > Chris Manvell <<https://manvell.org.uk/>> email: <chris@manvell.org.uk>
 > Breacais Iosal, Isle of Skye, Scotland. Fax:0870-056 8081
 > Main Web site: <<https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/>>
 > ABS(ESE): /abs/>, DAYSPRING: /dayspring/>, UK BAHAI LINKS: /lynx/> > ISLANDS OF THE NORTH SEA: /islands/>, SAPLING PUBLICATIONS: /sapling/> > SGRIOBTHUREAN CREIDIMH NAM BAHAI (Scots and Irish Gaelic with English > Translations) <<https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/gaelic/>>
 > Baha'is of Skye and Lochalsh <<https://bahai.community.skye.co.uk>>
 >

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
 Subject: Re: Welcome to unmoderated NGs on BF (was: Roman Catholic ...)
 Date: Wednesday, December 20, 2000 11:31 PM

>
 > In a sense, Rick is saying (as I understand it) that her pain comes not > from the community, which, after all, is supposed to give us tests,
 but > from her own fundamental understanding of the nature of our > relationship with God and with other humans. Our relationship as a > Baha'i is directly with God, it is not through other Baha'is.
 > Frequently, routinely, we allow other people to interfere with our > relationship with God, and we blame them for our estrangement.
 >

Dear Robert:

Presumably, I am one of the "ex"s you're talking about (although I prefer the term unenrolled Baha'i, leaving the term ex-Baha'i for those who have left belief in Baha'u'llah behind, not just membership), and you're wrong here.

The fact that I have separated myself from the Baha'i administration and that I grieve over that separation and what has happened to the Faith has nothing to do with my relationship with God. The only time my faith in Baha'u'llah was destroyed was when I saw Him and the institutions as inextricably joined. When I separated them, I became much happier, and actually less angry and frustrated. As I was just telling my friends on another list, the only time in my Baha'i life I did not say my daily prayers was during the six months before I resigned, when I had become so angry and frustrated I just couldn't stand it anymore. When I discovered the truth about what had been done to Dialogue magazine, that acted as a catalyst -- I exploded with all this pressure that had built up and was faced with the task of rebuilding my inner life from scratch. I came out of it with my faith in Baha'u'llah intact. To go back to the community without substantial changes would mean a return to that dead-end, hopeless, helpless frustration. It would also be a violation of my conscience because I object to the unjust way some believers have been treated.

And you know one reason I feel so much less frustration? I had no voice before. No one listened before. I had no chance to ever make anything different; I was stuck in an endless round of Assemblies being created and falling apart. The frustration of the lack of simple competence that I was supposed to accept with good humor while I was dying inside. Well, you know what? People are listening now; I am making a difference now; I have ties of real spiritual community now. Do you really want me to go back to the hell I was in before?

You know, people join spiritual communities so they can have community, not so they can experience all those lovely tests that are supposed to be so great for our spiritual development.

What the Baha'i Faith needs to do is take a look at why people are estranged and do something to stop it.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: common ground
Date: Friday, December 22, 2000 1:15 PM

Dear Dave,

I have some comments on our last exchange --

> >

Karen: That's the thing. Nobody really understands Baha'u'llah. We all have > > different levels of understanding. These differences are inevitable > > and the result of our individual investigation of truth.

>

Dave: Yes but there is His Revelation. The written Word of God. We also > have the words of Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi but ...

>

Karen: Geez, we don't even have most of the Writings available to us yet.

>

Dave: ... according to the Gaurdian we have all of the most critical works.

> The others are just commentaries or restatements of words we already > have translated. Besides Baha'u'llah continually says that if we were > to understand the spirit of just one letter of His Revelation then we > would understand it all. This Faith is meant for all and can be > understood by all even if they can not read a single word.

Now this is an attitude I don't understand at all. I'm always hungry to know more, insatiably curious. I want to dive into that ocean, and could never be content with just a cupful. If I had my way, Juan would be doing nothing but turning out those lovely translations, morning, noon, and night. I am tremendously grateful when someone explains the nuances of the original language, or puts the Revelation into its historical context. I want to understand those things

>

> So what are we to do. Some have decided to blame it on the Universal

> House of Justice. How is it their fault? And even worse - how can > anyone say it is their fault without clearly crossing the line the > Covenant tells us not to cross?

Your way out of this mess, Dave, would be to strip me of all hope and faith. The House of Justice has done things that are wrong. If I believed that Baha'u'llah had intended for them to operate this way, then I couldn't believe in Him.

Your way is to leave me voiceless, silent, and in despair.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: common ground
Date: Saturday, December 30, 2000 12:23 PM

In article <#BYK1cicAHA.268@cpmsnbbsa09>,
"Thirinel" <thirinel@email.msn.com> wrote:
> Mark -- why do you backbite and slander Juan Cole? There is no such thing
> as jcoleism and if you wanted to tar and feather him with that why not write > to him directly.

Dear Alma,

Mark already tried to tar and feather Juan; that's what got him kicked off talisman9. I'm still only getting Mark's responses from your quotes, Alma, so I appreciate your responding to him.

Mark,

The person calling themselves "Baz" was posting disillusionment all over Baha'i and Friends way before the post referring to my article.
S/he called the arguments in the Kitab-i-Iqan a logical fallacy. S/he posted a picture of Baha'u'llah and compared His looks to those of Charles Manson. This person was in real doubt about the Faith before my article. Now, you took this one quote from his post out of context in order to slam me with it. Are you careless, or are you being deliberately dishonest? I don't think baz is lying, but I think there's a real possibility that you are being deliberately misleading.

My readers give me all kinds of positive responses, not only agreeing with my point of view, but saying that they are going to make more effort in reading the Writings, and in spiritualizing community life.
Why should I take responsibility for a person who quite obviously doesn't believe in Baha'u'llah anymore and wants to leave the Faith?
As I said, I am always careful to separate Baha'u'llah from the things that have gone wrong in the Faith. I always direct people towards the Writings.

I don't know what jcoleism is. I really don't. In a recent discussion on Talisman we were talking about "mentoring" in the Faith, and someone thought both Juan and Nima acted as "mentors" and both of them strongly rejected the idea. Juan, especially, was preaching self-reliance. I certainly didn't ask his permission before writing my articles, and would have written them even if he didn't like them. In fact, one complaint you occasionally run into is that liberal Baha'is aren't organized enough. This notion that we all just are followers of Juan Cole is ludicrous. Juan hasn't even been around lately, yet talisman goes on, diverse and independent bunch that we are.

Mark, it is clear that you are reading into my articles some kind of motivation. I have explained my motives, but you don't believe me.
Since you seem to think yourself so informed about my motives, why don't you explain to me what they are.

Karen

>

> Alma

>

> Mark Elderkin wrote in message <3a4bd982@appserver.>...

> >

> >> For some reason, Mark seems to want to impute some sort of sinister > >> motives to me. Well, I can't stop him from doing so, and if I'm going > >> to speak out on controversial issues then I have to expect that certain > >> people aren't going to like me, and some will think the worst.

> >> Truthfully, I am the most politically unsophisticated person you can > >> imagine. I haven't got a devious bone in my body. Believe it, or don't > >> believe it.

> >

> >>Dear Karen,

> > It seems that you have missed the point..... I haven't imputed > any > > sinister motives to you, I have just reposted either what baz posted and > > what your response was. I also never said anything to you about having a > > political agenda. As far as being devious..... it will be the > > articles that you posted that will determine that. Someone has taken what > > he/she has found in one of your articles and decided to leave the > community.
> > I don't know baz and I haven't communicated with baz. As I said before 'I > > calls em like I sees em'.
> >
> > I have never recommended that > > people leave the Faith.
> >
> > When it happens and it is attributed to your writing, then 'what'? Or are > > you implying that baz is lying here about what the reasons were? Is it > > possible that your motives are made more clear by reading your Themestream > > articles then relying on your description you give here? At what point are > > you going to accept responsibility for what you write and not rely on > > jcoleism to be your substantial point of view?
> >
> > Mark
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/> From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: not-so common ground
Date: Sunday, December 31, 2000 12:10 AM

In article <e9Bq$qtCzAHA.281@cpmsnbbsa07>,
"Thirinel" <thirinel@email.msn.com> wrote:
> Mark (and I respond so that Karen can see your post)

Thank you very much, Alma, but for some reason Deja had Mark's last post on there. The reason the ad hominem attack has such appeal is that a person doesn't have to address the issues involved. Just call somebody egotistic and you can walk away in a huff feeling like you've won the day. Whether or not I am egotistic is a subjective judgement and irrelevant, really.

Did you notice, "baz's" last post on B & F, Alma? Nobody can blame me for that one. It looks like the last straw was a conventional pat answer from somebody who is quite AO-friendly.

However, I'm glad to see the end of this thread. It becomes tiresome having to defend your existence all the time, and I'm starting back in the classroom on Tuesday, so I just am not going to be able to keep up with all this stuff.

Thank you for your help.

Love, Karen

>
> Where in the writings does it say you can slander someone? What do you know > about Karen's ego or her state of her spiritual perception of the Faith?

> Faith includes ALL believefrs in Baha'u'llah. If you mean the Community of > those covenantly bound to the AO, why don't you say so?

>

> Alma

> markelder@my-deja.com wrote in message <92lq1k$1h7$1@nnrp1.deja.com>...

> >

> >

> >> Mark, it is clear that you are reading into my articles some kind of > >> motivation. I have explained my motives, but you don't believe me.

> >> Since you seem to think yourself so informed about my motives, why > >> don't you explain to me what they are.

> >

> >Dear Karen,

> > All I did was present what was written. You read them and I read > >them and everyone else read them. Your motives are rather evident but > >if I were to list them you would only tell me that I was wrong. No > >point in that. Your articles are 3-star and are ambiguous of someone > >whos' ego has overcome any spiritual perception of this Faith. Let's > >just drop it here. There is no more progress to made in futhering this > >thread. I expect you will continue to write and I will continue to read.

> >Mark

> >

> >

> >Sent via Deja.com

> ><https://www.deja.com/>

>

>

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Thursday, December 28, 2000 2:52 PM

For some reason, I'm only getting Mark's responses through the quotes attached to Alma's messages. Another example of the fine service we can expect from Deja, I suppose.

For some reason, Mark seems to want to impute some sort of sinister motives to me. Well, I can't stop him from doing so, and if I'm going to speak out on controversial issues then I have to expect that certain people aren't going to like me, and some will think the worst. Truthfully, I am the most politically unsophisticated person you can imagine. I haven't got a devious bone in my body. Believe it, or don't believe it.

If "baz" wants to leave the Baha'i community, then my advice was to ensure that s/he can do so with a minimum of hassle. In fact, in his/her initial post s/he says that s/he doesn't want to deal with the bureaucracy. So, if you don't want some ABM calling you up and asking you about your beliefs, then don't mention them in your letter. If you want to make sure your name gets taken off the rolls, then go straight to National. I personally know of someone who was inactive for fifteen years, finally got around to asking to be removed from the rolls, but was not because it would leave the LSA jeopardized. It happens. This woman thinks she has resigned, but she exists as a Baha'i on the rolls, and is, in fact, an Assembly member. Maybe "baz" doesn't want to be an assembly member in abstentia.

I have no vested interest in seeing people leave the Faith. What possible advantage could that be to me? I have never recommended that people leave the Faith.

Mark has several times asked me what my "agenda" is. I don't think of myself as having one. But since he is so sure I've got one, I will tell you what I'd like to see happen in the Faith:

1. First, and most important to me, is to see communities that are spiritually-centered (by which I mean mashriq-centered) instead of administratively centered. My history is one of watching LSAs be created and inevitably collapse. I just want to stop the futile effort to build LSAs when there aren't even enough believers around to need administration, and center the community on the Writings of Baha'u'llah.

2. I want to end the policy of believers being sanctioned and otherwise punished for the public expression of their opinions.

3. I want to see some sort of due process for those believers accused of wrongdoing.

There are other issues in which I have an interest, but none that are important to me as these three. If we don't have freedom of expression, any other reform talk is just flatus in the wind.

So there you have it, my evil, sinister and dastardly motives. Tie me to the pillory and go for it.

Karen

"Thirinel" <thirinel@email.msn.com> wrote:

> Dear Mark,

>

> I don't think I said that baz must necessarily leave the Baha'i Faith. I > think I said Community which is a subsegment of the Faith. The Faith > includes all and I do mean ALL who believe in Baha'u'llah regardless of any > misconceptions the person may have. We all have misconceptions about > Baha'u'llah's Faith and I include myself there. The Community consists of > those Baha'is who have accepted the Covenant (whatever that means). They > are often called disparagingly BIGS (Baha'is in good standing). I happen to > be a BIGS and will remain so unless and until there are efforts to remove me > from the Community and I won't cross that bridge unless I need to. Why do I > remain a BIGS? Because I don't know at this point why Baha'u'llah called me > to enroll and there may be some task that we want me to do as a BIGS.

>

> I no more know the particulars --- or even gender -- of baz. But there are > certain situations which can be intolerable. The most obvious is if one is > Gay. (I really don't know why so much effort of the AO is spent making life > unbearable for the gays but they do.)

>

> Whether you like it or not, there are many ways of believing in Baha'u'llah > and I feel privileged to investigate a few on an email list. Some of these > are mind-boggling for me but they do make sense if I read and ponder.

>

> As for the 'short jab' about some LSA's not passing it on. This is true -- > particularly if the loss of a member endangers the LSA because it is a small > community. And there are other known instances when a LSA has not passed on > something. Like anything else human, there are flaws in the members of the

> LSA and sometimes these flaws are of such a nature that the LSA acts in > non-Baha'i ways. Sometimes there are very good LSAs.

>

> Why write directly to the NSA? Because it is that level of the AO which has > the ability to disenroll. It may well be that informing the LSA leads to > shunning, etc., of the one who wants to be disenrolled. WHY would anyone > want to chance that?

>

> In peace,

>

> Alma

> Mark Elderkin wrote in message <3a4afbba@appserver.>...

> >

> >"Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote in message

> >news:92edn1$gaa$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> >> Dear Mark and Alma:

> >>

> >> I wrote a response to "baz" discouraging him/her from leaving the > >> Faith, if s/he felt there was any way at all to improve the situation.

> >> However, after looking at the rest of what "baz" has posted, it is > >> clear we are dealing with a person who is very cynical about > >> Baha'u'llah Himself, and all the teachings of the Faith. For example, > >> calling the sort of argument used in the Kitab-i-Iqan "begging the > >> question". Now, I can't be blamed for that. It is clear that this > >> person was getting down on the Faith before ever reading my articles.

> >>

> >> I am always careful, in my articles, to separate Baha'u'llah from the > >> current problems in the Faith. When people write me privately, I > >> invariably direct them towards the Writings. I would never encourage > >> anyone to leave the Faith.

> >>

> >> I do think, however, the option of being an unenrolled Baha'i is a > >> viable one, and for some people may be the best solution.

> >>

> >> Ultimately, people are responsible for their own spiritual decisions.

> >>

> >> Love, Karen

> >

> >Fair enough Karen..... the response hadn't been posted yet. Here is > >your response:

> >

> >From: Karen Sent: 12/28/2000 9:39 AM 3 of 3

> >Dear friend:

> >You must write to the NSA. I've heard of people trying to disenroll > >locally, or even thought they did disenroll, but the LSA doesn't send it > on,

> >especially if losing someone means the LSA will be jeopardised.

> >Traditionally, it was necessary to renounce belief in Baha'u'llah to > >disenroll. However, some of those who resigned in the wake of the Talisman > >crackdown positively affirmed belief in Baha'u'llah, but their resignations > >were accepted anyway. Shoghi Effendi instructed assemblies not to accept > >resignations unless if they affirmed belief in Baha'u'llah. You might just > >say you want to leave the community and not mention your belief.

> >By the way, I do not necessarily endorse people leaving the community.

> Just

> >because I did doesn't mean I think it's always the best solution. I would > >think about it very carefully first. If you think you have any chance at > >all of improving your community situation, or whatever your problems are, I > >think you ought to stay and try. Of course, I'm not walking in your shoes > >and don't know what you are facing. However, I hope that able and devoted > >people will be able to make improvements in community life, and would > rather > >see them stay in if they possibly can.

 > >
 > >Love, Karen
 > >
 > *****
 > >Mark Said: Karen..... It was nice of you to offer such explicit > details > >in disenrolling. Even the short jab about LSAs not passing it on.
 Even the > >advice "not to mention your belief" is rather clear. I realise that you > >covered your tracks in the last paragraph(not necessarily), but it doesn't > >need a rocket scientist to realise what the desired goal is here:
 > >
 > >From 'Baha'is and Friends'
 > > Started by: baz Sent: 12/28/2000 4:36 AM > > I just read Karen's articles including "Exit By Troops" and am > seriously
 > > considering formally unenrolling as a member of the Bahai religion as > > defined by the Administrative Order, etc.
 > >
 > >Mark Said: Karen this wasn't my thread. This is a clear statement by 'baz' > >that after reading your articles he is considering unenrolling. Your > >comment was also to first tell 'baz' how to go about it. Your Themestream
 > >articles are clear and certainly not about making improvements in one's own > >local community. Maybe it's about time you set out your agenda and quit the > >Bullstuff.
 > >
 > >Alma,
 > > You asked me if there was anything wrong with leaving the Baha'i > Faith.
 > >No..... is my answer. I have accepted several resignations and did it
 > with > >the pain that usually accompanied it. It is always a tragic loss.
 But in
 > the > >grand scheme of things it is going to happen. At least if the Baha'i Faith > >doesn't suit..... get on with it. Don't stick around and try to mess > >with everyone else. I have been here for over a year now and seen just > about > >every type of attempt to try and create disunity among the Baha'is.
 If
 > >that's your objective, just realise that some of us will be here in your > >face and calling it like we see it.
 > > I'm not particularly clever, I'm probably not good looking, I don't > >express myself well in written form..... but I have the ability to > >distinguish between Baha'i rhetoric and plane anti-Baha'i sentiments.
 > Where
 > >do you see yourself..... Alma?
 > >
 > >

> >
> >Mark mee@tsn.cc
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: Rollcall of bahai Victims....
Date: Friday, November 17, 2000 12:19 AM

In article <P2AQ5.393$BN.150700@paloalto-snr1.gtei.net>,
"Randy Burns" <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote:

>
> So this is why she was kicked out of the Baha'i Faith! I wondered what she > had done wrong. Such vicious criticism!
>
> Randy
>
Dear Randy,

It is very unlikely that the review had anything to do with Alison's expulsion. The news of her expulsion came soon after she publicly posted her review, but the actual decision was almost certainly made before then.

Bear in mind that Alison was giving a professional opinion of the article; in New Zealand she gets paid to do that. It is not vicious to give an honest opinion about the flaws in a piece of writing when you are acting as a professional. It's no favor to a writer to be namby-pamby about it, and it's no favor to potential readers who are going to lay out money for a book to say a book is wonderful if it's not.

The House of Justice has not given specific reasons for Alison's expulsion, but it has said that it was the dissemination of her opinions to "an international audience" that was the problem i.e. her postings to talisman. It was something she said there that upset them, but it's anybody's guess exactly what that was.

Besides, do you really think that someone should be booted out of the faith simply on the basis of something they have written or said?

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: bahai - Re: Uh,oh! Karen's still telling stories . . .
Date: Wednesday, October 18, 2000 9:32 AM

> (Perhaps I missed it....but.....how many phone calls/ letters/ visits did > you get from the community/AO with a simple....."Hey Karen, I hear you are > leaving after all these years....how come sister?....anything I can do to > help)?"
>
> Curious.
>

Dear Curious:

The reactions I got varied. Two friends stayed close to me and helped me with the emotional aftermath of leaving, other inactive people were sympathetic, one tried a lot of emotional manipulation to try to get me back in the Faith (or, as Plan B, to get me completely away so that I wouldn't influence anybody). The funniest incident was a phone call I got from the "City" community about six months after I resigned, asking me to help with convention. Apparently the fact that I do retain my local ties gave the impression that I would be coming back, and they were desperate for help. I thought that was typical -- nobody gives a damn about how I'm doing spiritually, but they sure need my help with an administrative event. I was polite about it, though.

The way I see it, our local experiences really define what our Baha'i experience is all about, at least as far as community life goes. We lost people here just because nobody could get their act together. I stuck it out so long simply because I love Baha'u'llah -- otherwise I wouldn't have put up with most of this nonsense for five minutes. If Baha'is don't learn how to build real communities instead of fake assemblies, the Faith is never going to amount to anything.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA.
Date: Saturday, January 27, 2001 3:27 PM

Dear Jenifer:

It's so nice to hear from you!

**>
> First, the individuals in my local community handled the situation > very well. I have seen them occasionally in the time since I left, > such as at a town interfaith celebration, and we remain on very good > terms, just like old friends ought to be! One of them has since had > trouble with the Faith and spoke to me about it -- I'm afraid I wasn't > of much help to him, but apparently he's been dealing with some of > the same issues, and maybe my letter helped him work them out.
>
> I have not encountered any hostility. None. That speaks so well of > the Baha'is, doesn't it?

I've had the same experience, mostly. There was one guy who put a lot of pressure on me either to come back to the Faith officially, or to stay away completely. Actually, just last night I went to gathering, and saw people I haven't seen in nearly two years. My feelings were mixed. Everyone was very welcoming to me (not everyone was aware of my rather ambiguous status), but some things were just same old, same old,
just like I left it.

Most of the hostility I have encountered has been in cyberspace, and that is because I have been openly critical of the Institutions and some of their actions.

**>
> On the other hand, no institution has responded to any of my specific > points. In fact, National never send me any acknowledgement of
the > letter at all (though the local LSA did) -- I just stopped receiving > mail from them, and that was that. Odd, but typical, I thought:
> wonderful individuals and community, yet unresponsive institutions.

It took months before the NSA responded to my resignation letter, although The American Baha'i stopped coming immediately, which I thought somewhat amusing. (Can't have a "non-Baha'i" reading all those deep, dark secrets in our national newsletter! :-)
>

- >
- > I am still learning so much about the Christian revelation that it
- > sometimes makes my head spin. One of our parishioners is a Harvard
- > professor who studies the Gospel of Mary. (Did you know that existed?
- > Along with the Gospel of Thomas, and other non-canonical books.
- > Fascinating stuff.) And our priest finds interpretations of old,
- > familiar stories that stand the traditional meanings on their heads.
- > It's confusing, and it's wonderful.

Yes, I've done some looking into the Nag Hammadi texts, and it is quite amazing stuff.

- >
- > Another blessing is the new freedoms I have. For instance, I no
- > longer feel any hesitation about taking sides on political issues.
- > In fact, I feel now that if we don't take part in the political - > process -- both individually and corporately -- we're not living up to
- > our responsibility to do God's work in this world. (I'm talking more
- > about social justice, peace, and environmental issues than the nastier
- > right-wing stuff, don't worry. But, ironically, I understand the
- > religious right better now.)
- >
- > Oh -- and good wine tastes fabulous. In moderation, of course. :-)

You know what I miss? Margueritas, that's what I miss. :-) I have not, since leaving, done much in terms of becoming involved in politics I still follow Baha'i law in my personal life, but the prohibition on politics is more community policy than law, and would not feel bound by it. But I'm not all that politically-oriented. I am troubled, however, that Baha'is go around talking about how we have the answers to the world's problems, yet are prevented from doing so much that is practical about them.

- > I have been better able to reconcile my love of the outdoors with
- > Christian theology than with Baha'i theology. I won't go into the
- > details of that here, but I find God's Word written into the woods,
- > rock, snow, and mountains as much as it is written into Revelation.
- > That's a personal thing; I don't doubt there are Baha'is who feel the - > same way.

Baha'u'llah refers to "The Book of Creation" as well as "The Book of Revelation". St. Paul calls it "general revelation" as opposed to "specific revelation" -- in the Epistle to the Romans, I think.

- >
- > I don't read the Writings that often anymore, though occasionally, in
- > meditative moments, the daily obligatory prayer comes unbidden.
- > (Christian prayers do, too, sometimes.) Now that I think about it, I - > do miss the Writings. But I can't read them in quite the same way now
- > that I used to. Nevertheless, I am willing to believe I was wrong
- > about them having "pat answers for everything," and I'm reading

this
> netnews discussion with eagerness...

Honey, you get out in Baha'i cyberspace, you'll see perspectives you've never thought of. Not to mention new translations of Tablets you've never seen.

>

> I'm not sure what God was trying to tell me that day. It might have been, "Come back to the Faith," but it might also have been, "It's OK > to be where you are. This Faith will always be here if you need it, > even if you remain outside it for a while."

It has always been my belief that no one who seeks God with sincerity will ever end up in the wrong place.

Love, Karen

>

>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington. Massachusetts

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 12:00 AM

In article <957rra079q@news1.newsguy.com>, "Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>

> "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:957n47$54b$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> > I have told the truth, exactly as I see it. You may disagree with me > > all you like; you cross the line when you call me dishonest.

>

> Correction, Karen. I said that I _could_ have called you dishonest. I > didn't, and, quite frankly, I would chastise anyone who did.

>

> What I also said, however, is that such an accusation would be roughly > parallel to some of the things you've said about Baha'i institutions and/or > members thereof. For example, you stated that members of the U.S.

National

> Spiritual Assembly were acting on hate for a group of people and were > looking for ways to oust them. Not even any mention of the fact that they

> at least claim to be upholding Baha'i principles in the letters that are > available to us on the web, or that the principles they cite have basis in > Baha'i texts.

Rick,

Exactly where is it a "Baha'i principle" that someone under suspicion by the institutions can be publicly humiliated. By the way, the only particular individual I have even mentioned has been Dr. Kazemzadeh, who I am angry at because I was there for his big snit fit about "A Modest Proposal", and I feel like I was lied to. That's the thing Rick, I trusted my National Spiritual Assembly. I am now deeply ashamed that I believed such accusations just based on the mere word of an NSA member. He used me, Rick, and I just don't take kindly to that. He used me to destroy that magazine. That's the difference between what I say and what Kazemzadeh says. He had power over people; I am no one. What he did tore my faith away from me in one of those most traumatic experiences of my life; but I'm no more trouble to our eminent ex-Secretary for External Affairs than a pimple on his behind, assuming he even knows I exist. He knew that when he denounced Dialogue that most Baha'is would immediately either cancel their subscriptions, or not renew them. I threw my copies away; I sure wish I had them now. We all followed like a bunch of sheep.

Now how is that a Baha'i principle, Rick? That a National Spiritual Assembly member can denounce somebody and force the closure of a publication? I thought the institutions were supposed to work by consultation; I thought they were supposed to have due concern for a person's honor, which is one reason Shoghi Effendi gives for not making Spiritual Assembly meetings public. Why denounce an article that could have been easily and quietly censored in the prepublication review process, unless you wanted the people involved to be tarred with an unsavory reputation?

Yeah, I trusted my National Spiritual Assembly, and they lied to me. I won't make that mistake again.

Karen

>

> Now, Karen, how is your characterization any different from someone accusing > you of dishonesty? Figure out the answer to that question, and you'll > understand why I regard some of your remarks with such a high degree

of > contempt.

>

> With that, I think it's time I go throw a few darts...

>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>
>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington.
Massachusetts

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 1:13 AM

Dear Rick,

Here's my response to your last post. I'm sorry that I took so long, but I do have a life beyond cyberspace.

> Well, yes. Documenting the stuff you've written, with particular attention > to information regarding the views expressed by Baha'i Institutions, would > have gone a long way toward remedying the omissions in your articles. Case > in point:
>
> 'While administrators have been powerless to prevent freedom of expression > in Baha'i cyberspace (a phenomenon the Universal House of Justice has called
> "a campaign of internal opposition")...'
>
> Had you quoted more than a phrase out of the April 7 letter, it would be > more clear that the issue isn't about freedom of expression at all.

Well, they don't like some of the opinions expressed on email forums.
That sure looks like a freedom of expression issue to me.

It's

> not even apparent that the goal of the Institutions is to prevent freedom of > expression.

I think some of their actions speak pretty loudly about their motivations.

That's an inferred motive, but no one, anywhere, can find that > documented in any explicit way. Moreover, if their goal is to silence > people, going around and handing people their membership cards back seems > like a monumentally idiotic means of doing so.

On the contrary, it is very effective at silencing those who might not be willing to risk the loss of their membership cards. It also undermines the effectiveness of someone who, it can be said, is no longer a Baha'i, or "disgruntled" or whatever. There is also the possibility that the person so targeted will become less of a presence in Baha'i cyberspace after being booted. For example, Mike McKenny found another spiritual home and pops in only occasionally. There is no way to guarantee any individual's silence, but booting them out of the Faith is likely to, at least, alter their voice somewhat. It also provides a cautionary example to anyone who might consider speaking out in a similar fashion.

>
> Above all that, however, one is at least obligated to point out what these > institutions say is their motive, and to state it as accurately as possible.
> People can figure out for themselves whether or not the institutions are > being upfront in their various letters.

Actually, the entire April 7 letter is available on Themestream Baha'i in Robin Peters' article "What is This Supposed to Mean?" and it has been discussed a little in some of the "Talk Back" columns. I actually recommended to my readers that they read that letter. I have a link to it from my webpage on the Faith, too. I dislike putting (or for that matter, reading) long quotes in an article, but I do put short ones in wherever it seems appropriate.

>
> > I should point out that there is a > > recommended 1500 word limit for Themestream articles, and most of mine > > come close to that. I hit a few main points, mostly, but I suppose it > > is inevitable that some readers will think of things I should have > > included.
>
> First of all, you haven't missed a few minor details. In some cases, you > miss the entire issue that's at the center of the controversy.
>
> Secondly, the word limit strikes me as a poor excuse. So break the articles > up into separate parts. Or, spend more time discussing facts and less time > drawing conclusions.

No, I'm sure it isn't much of an excuse. However I did publish an article (A Religion Out of Balance) in two parts, and it's awkward.

The two of them are rated separately, and the second half is ranked #2, and the first half is something like #15. I've had people confused about where the other half of the article is.

Anyway, I'm not convinced that I've left out much of importance; all I know is that I've left out some things you consider important. I think part of the appeal of my articles is that they're short, punchy, to-the-point, without a lot of detours, and I'm disinclined to make them anything different than that. I do my best to give the official side -- you will recall that this whole thing started because I put information about the Dec. 28 letter into my mashriq article and was fool enough to believe some people might think that was a good idea.

I balance Juan's claim that he was threatened with being named a covenant-breaker with the official denial that this ever happened. I also quote from the Birkland letters, since that's the only publicly available written record of the crackdown. I've got short quotes from a UHJ letter all over the article about Alison.

>
> > Well, first of all, the main thrust of that article is the prevalence > > of theocratic views within the Baha'i community, and the fact that this > > view is not the only way of looking at Baha'u'llah's teachings.
>
> But you got the context all wrong, Karen. I dare say you couldn't have > gotten the context any more wrong.

Well, I don't understand what you are talking about. First, I said that Baha'i teaching have a lot to say about social issues, but individual Baha'is are prevented from achieving those goals through political means. I name a few ways that we do express our social concerns. I say that there exists the expectation of a future Baha'i theocracy among some elements of the community, while admitting some uncertainty as to just how prevalent they are. I mention the April 7 letter's condemnation of the separation of church and state, and I note that there are differing views on the matter based upon differing interpretations of Baha'i scripture. I'm still not convinced that any of those things are false, misleading, or inaccurate. The only legitimate complaint I can see you might have here is that I didn't talk up SED, and I can stick a sentence in there to remedy that. As I said, I didn't think of it, because it never touched my Baha'i life that much.

>
> > Actually, it never occurred to me to go into the Social and Economic > > projects done throughout the world. For one thing, it's not the main > > thrust of my article. I could easily add a sentence about it if it > > will make you feel better, but it really doesn't change anything.
>
> Your introduction to the subject asks, "The natural question is, if Baha'is > can't work politically towards the realization of their social ideals, how > do they expect to achieve them?" And the introduction is what gives your > subject relevance. Since the only basis for the subject's relevance is > undercut, the article would appear to require a complete rewrite. Without > that introduction, what's the point in talking about Baha'i views on > theocracy?

The reason that I wanted to talk about theocracy is because, like the exclusion of women from the UHJ, it's one of those things that gets pulled out like a rabbit out of a hat, after you've signed a card.

It's not fair to do stuff like that to people. Also, after maintaining the uncomfortable belief that the expectation of a future theocracy was just part and parcel of being a Baha'i, I found out that there were other ways of looking at it. It's only fair that people know that, too.

Rick, the rest of your quotes seem to have disappeared. I'll complete the rest of my response in a separate post.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington. Massachusetts

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 1:41 AM

Dear Rick,

To continue:

>

> Karen wrote:

>

> "Baha'i fundamentalism shows an absolute contempt of traditional democratic > values such as the right to free speech, the necessity of a free press as a > check on institutional power, or the right for a person accused of > wrongdoing to have knowledge of the evidence against them and face

their > accusers."

>

> I've been around the Baha'i Faith for nearly my entire life. Nowhere have I > seen "absolute contempt" for any of those things. I _have_ seen absolute > contempt toward misguided attempts to incorporate some of the more unsavory

> elements of those values into the structure of Baha'i Administration,

O.K. how about prepublication review imposed on everything Baha'i authors write about the Faith, whether for a Baha'i publisher or not -- a policy that can be enforced by the threat of taking administrative rights away if the writer doesn't cooperate? What about the right to face one's accuser? Does Alison Marshall have the right to know who was turning in her emails to Haifa? Does Juan Cole or Steve Scholl have access to the reports written about their cases? Can you give me an answer that doesn't show contempt for democratic values? Or is the right to know about the evidence held against you, evidence that influences the decisions that Baha'i institutions make about a person's life, one of those "unsavory" elements of democracy?

but

> that's a completely different matter. It's not at all unreasonable to > object to people trying to change something they don't entirely understand
> in the first place,

I'm always amazed that anyone who doesn't agree with certain views is considered to have a "lack of understanding" rather than a different viewpoint.

>

> > The "fact" is that the Institutions did not like some of the opinions > > being expressed on Talisman.

>

> I think the institutions couldn't care less about the opinions themselves.

> What concerned them was that these opinions were being expressed by

Baha'is

> and that these opinions happened to be diametrically opposed to statements > made in authoritative Baha'i texts. If you don't convey that aspect of the > controversey, then you haven't told the whole truth.

The people who express those opinions do not believe that they are diametrically opposed to the texts. Neither do I. Besides the UHJ does not have the authority to interpret the texts and decide what is or is not "diametrically opposed" to them.

>

> The actual opinions, and their relationship to statements in authoritative

> Baha'i texts, do matter, Karen. That's why you have an obligation to tell > the whole truth, and not just part of the truth.

So basically what you are saying is that I'm not telling the truth if I don't say that the people who got into trouble with the AO were expressing opinions contrary to the Writings. I can't say that, because I do not believe it is true.

> > while at the same time excluding them from the Universal House of > > Justice.

>
> If you want to discuss the subject, I would suggest that you begin by noting > that the central principle of the Baha'i Faith is the oneness of humanity.
> There are a number of principles that arise out of that central principle;
> the equality of women and men and the specific provisions of Baha'u'llah's > Covenant are but two of them. In other words, I would say that the Baha'i > Faith stands for the oneness of humanity rather than say that the Baha'i > Faith stands for equality between women and men. At least I would say that > this would be a more accurate statement of the Baha'i teachings on the > subject.

Here, I would agree. I would far rather the Faith stop telling everyone that it stands for equality than to look so hypocritical. In fact, I tell Dave that in the "Talk Back" column following that article. The only problem with that approach is that Baha'u'llah did say it was a feature of this Dispensation.

> > I don't think you understand what a shock that is to > > discover, as I did, after the card is signed.
>
> Now you're being presumptive. Also, you're moving into the realm of > personal opinions and away from the discussion of facts that can be > documented.

I think it's very telling, the fact that you can dismiss this. One reason people respond to my articles is that I don't dismiss feelings as irrelevant, and my readers identify with the feelings I express. I'm telling you, Rick, it's a kind of betrayal to be brought into a religion, told that it stands for a certain principle, then told something directly contrary to that principle once you've been hooked.

The Baha'i Faith does that to people; it hurts them. It's one of the big reasons people leave. It was ultimately the reason I left, because I was under the impression that the Baha'i administration supported Baha'u'llah's principle of the independent investigation of truth, but I discovered I was wrong. It hurts to discover that you've been deceived.

Love, Karen

>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: That may be the road of becoming a Real Baha'i.

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 10:50 PM

In article <20010201150024.17523.00000456@ng-mi1.aol.com>, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck) wrote:

> >She was kicked out after many years in the > >community and despite a deep faith in its founder!

>

> Dear Ian,

>

> It isn't enough to believe in the founder to be a Baha'i. According to Shoghi

> Effendi the qualifications for membership in the Baha'i community include:

> "steadfast adherence to every clause of our Beloved's sacred Will; and close > association with the spirit as well as the form of the present day Bahá'í > administration throughout the world." (BA 90) Now when that passage was brought > to Alison's attention she didn't even pretend she could adhere to this, she > only stated she was under the impression you no longer had to believe those > things. :

Susan, in Alison's statement of faith on her website she includes the clause about administration.

>

> For the record, I have been excluded from Zuhur, and other lists run by these > people. I have not excluded them from anything.

As has been said before, the Zuhur list was created in the wake of Alison's disenrollment as a refuge for those who might fear that they could be "turned in" for what they express in their email messages. You have a record of reporting on people for Baha'i authorities. Quite frankly, to include you on that list would cause a good many of its participants to leave. I have seen expressions of nervousness when the possibility of leaks from the list are discussed.

I personally think it's sad that Baha'is must live in such fear of their institutions.

Karen

>
 > >You have made > >enemies of them
 >
 > Be fair, Ian and look at the posts which have written about me on this list.
 > Then tell me, who made who an enemy?
 >
 > warmest, Susan
 >
 > "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
 > left to start again . . ."
 > Don McLean's American Pie
 > <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
 >
 >

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
 is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington.
 Massachusetts

Date: Thursday, February 01, 2001 11:40 PM

In article <95c8ld01fa9@news2.newsguy.com>,

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>
 > "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:95aqi6$qj6$1@nnrp1.deja.com...
 > > Exactly where is it a "Baha'i principle" that someone under suspicion
 > > by the institutions can be publicly humiliated.
 >
 > Where does this "under suspicion" bit come from? This is exactly what > I've been talking about. The extent to which those individuals had been > behaving contrary to Baha'i principles, and in some cases Baha'i Law, had > been well documented. The pattern of on-going activity was well > established. The phrase "under suspicion" is totally misleading.

Well, I don't know what else to call it, since at the time of the Convention in 1988, none of these people had been found guilty of anything or sanctioned in any way. Besides, I don't think it's a Baha'i principle for even a person who has been sanctioned by the institutions to be publicly humiliated.

Really, Rick, if you're trying to get me to say that what happened at Convention was that certain dangerous and guilty persons were denounced

for the safety of the community -- I have looked at the history of this pretty carefully, and I just can't see that's what happened.

>

> Secondly, the likely reason anything at all was stated publicly was because > members of the National Spiritual Assembly were under the impression that > the document had been distributed among delegates at that Convention.

Maybe they should have asked the delegates how many of them got a copy before launching into an attack. They were all assembled there; all they had to do was have a show of hands. My friend who was delegate never heard of the article until Kazemzadeh brought it up.

>

> Understand the point here. The distribution of that document at convention, > whatever that distribution might have been, wasn't the issue that constituted the primary wrong-doing carried out by the editors of Dialogue.

> The primary wrong-doing was the ongoing campaign of dissent, of attempting > to incorporate the notion of a "loyal opposition" into Baha'i administrative > practice, of attempting to change the Baha'i Faith to fit their own agenda > of social and political activism and trying to do so outside the normal > administrative channels for accomplishing those ends.

I've never seen any evidence of this; all I've seen is the oft-repeated charge.

>

> Now, it shouldn't be necessary to quote Baha'u'llah, `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi

> Effendi as to what they had to say about such dissention, conflict and > contention. I believe "categorically forbidden" is a phrase one of them > used. The texts are clear.

It is not at all clear that the "LA group" was causing contention. What it looks like to me was that when the newsletter got in the hands of more conservative Baha'is, it freaked them out, and they went tearing off to the authorities. It looks also like something of the kind happened on the first Talisman. In fact, I'm not sure how much of the stuff that happens is due to monitoring by the institutions and how much is a result of people who think a new idea might cause brain damage and must be squelched immediately.

>

> But, of course, none of that is recounted when critics want to discuss the

- > "Dialogue affair". Rather, people use such phrases as "under suspicion" as
- > a means of obscuring the fact that the individuals involved had long since
- > started on a course of action inimical to the very core of the Faith to
- > which they had professed their allegiance. Also obscured is the fact that
- > the Institutions had, all along the way, taken great pains to point out to
- > these individuals precisely what they were doing wrong and had cited
- clear,
- > authoritative texts as the basis for the concerns they expressed.

What is clear is that the institutions were upset about some of the ideas that were expressed. I have not seen any "course of action inimical" to the Faith. Again, the accusation exists, but not proof of the supposed wrongdoing.

- >
- > > By the way, the only
- > > particular individual I have even mentioned has been Dr. Kazemzadeh,
- > > who I am angry at because I was there for his big snit fit about "A
- > > Modest Proposal", and I feel like I was lied to.
- >
- > I have no doubt that you _feel_ like you were lied to. The facts, however,
- > suggest something completely different.

I was told that "A Modest Proposal" was written by people disrespectful to the Institutions. I found a politely worded, thought-provoking article expressed concerns about the slow growth of the Baha'i community and provided some suggestions for reform that might have helped. I was lied to.

I've told again and again that "A Modest Proposal" was actually incidental to the "real" crimes of the Dialogue editors. That can be said now that the article is on the web and anyone can read how innocent it really was. Back in 1988, however, they were denounced for writing it. Kazemzadeh wasn't up there talking about the history of the LA study group; he was denouncing that article, the magazine, and the editors, calling them "dissidents". In fact, at the time, I thought he said "self-described dissidents". I didn't even really understand, from his talk, that the article actually was a reform proposal. I thought it was some kind of satire, like Swift's "A Modest Proposal". Yeah, I was lied to, all right.

Karen

- >
- > > Yeah, I trusted my National Spiritual Assembly, and they lied to me. I
- > > won't make that mistake again.
- >
- > Quite obviously--even to the point of assuming that they're lying to

you
> even when they've told the truth.
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: For Michael: "Rebels Within the Cause?"

Date: Wednesday, February 07, 2001 6:13 PM

In article <95ru52$iq3$1@freenet9.carleton.ca>,
bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote:

> Greetings, Karen.
> Many thanks for letting me read this article. It was fascinating.
> What a sad tale. You may not be aware that one of the accusations
that > was hurled at liberals on Talisman was that we'd been infected by this
> LA study class. I replied at the time that the closest I'd been to LA > was Edmonton, Alberta (April 1972) and Chicago (July 1975), so Juan
and > I couldn't have been having tea together in LA at the time of this > study class (an allusion to Muslim allegations that Baha'is were > putting something in the tea and this explained conversions).
> FreeNet claims Themestream articles are improperly addressed,
so > I'm not able to read them. I would thus be grateful if you posted the > ones about the expulsion of Alyson Marshall and Talisman.
> Many thanks for this. I think it's a story that should be as > widely known as possible. Having independent investigation of truth > as an essential principle, declaring this is the age for the maturity > of humanity and adopting the slogan of "Unity in Diversity" are not > compatible with an imposed doctrine of uniform, thoughtless obedience > to each and every dictate of Council, including the rule of censorship.
> To Glastnost and Perestroika Within Baha'i, > Michael

Dear Michael,

I'm glad you enjoyed my article, and I will get you the other ones as soon as I have a chance. Both of them mention your case briefly -- I became familiar with it before I ever came on the newsgroups, and was moved to tears by your letter to the UHJ, knowing as I read it, what the end of the story would be.

The principle of independent investigation of truth, along with that of the unity of religions was what first drew me to the Baha'i Faith in the first place. To find that principle so violated by Baha'i Institutions was a terrible blow to me. It was such a betrayal of everything I ever believed to be true about the Faith.

I am aware of how people link the LA study group to Talisman; in fact it was the continual dark references to the activities of the LA group that led me to do the article.

I'm going to take some time off from this place. The unending hostility is getting to me; I haven't even read today's posts yet and I feel like I have to brace myself for a bashing. I'll get you your articles, but I'm going to do my best not to drawn into further discussions about them until I've had chance to take a breather for a while. There are days when one doesn't much feel like being brave.

Nice talking to you, Michael. Hope to have the pleasure again soon.

Love, Karen

>
> Dear Michael,
>
> Thank you for your interest in my article. I pasted this straight
from > my rough draft, and although I looked it over, there still may be some > slight discrepancies between this and the final published version.
>
> Other group members might note that I don't get paid my two cents
from > Themestream when people read my articles on a newsgroup. It is my hope > that this will put the silly charge that I'm doing it for the money to > rest.
>
> It is, however, an even greater hope, Michael, that you will enjoy
the > article. Did you get to see my articles on Alison Marshall's expulsion > and the Talisman crackdown? If you are interested and have time
to > read them, I would be happy to post those for you as well.
>
> Love, Karen
>
> --
> "The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
> is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah
>
> <https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>
>
> Sent via Deja.com
> <https://www.deja.com/>
> --
> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard." > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>
>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"](https://www.deja.com/From: Karen Bacquet)

<karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Subject: Karen's Statement on RD and BA

Date: Wednesday, June 27, 2001 7:16 PM

Dear friends,

As most of you are now aware, I am currently taking a short vacation from Baha'i cyberspace, after an incident in which an email I intended to forward was instead sent back to the list that was its original sender. This is an easy mistake to make, and an impossible one to undo.

However, the fact remains that I had no business forwarding any posts from that list. While there is not a clear no-forwarding policy, it is a list for enrolled Baha'is only, and I was only allowed to continue there through the leniency of the list's moderators, something for which I repaid them rather poorly. I realize that I have damaged my own reputation and credibility through this action, and that I have left myself open to a number of charges from which I am completely unable to defend myself: that I am a hypocrite, that I have been spying, that I am more sorry for getting caught than for the original action etc. No matter what account I give, it is quite likely that I will not be believed, and I really have no one to blame but myself. In my opinion, it is an error for anyone here to lay the responsibility on anyone else.

I have been unable to resist checking into the aftermath, and I see that the events surrounding this has given rise to a rather ugly exchange here on trb, with charges and accusations, insults and lies. I very much regret my part in all of this, and feel that perhaps some clarification from me might be in order.

First, concerning the Religious Debate list: This list is operated by a 15-year-old non-Baha'i, a young girl whose primary religious interest is in Wicca and Paganism. The Baha'i wars have been raging there since nearly the very beginning, with most non-Baha'is on the list being rather more sympathetic to the liberal side of things. This young lady, Crystal, in fact had grown so tired of the Baha'i domination of her list that she created another one that was specifically geared towards her interests.

From her perspective, Mark's presence was a disruption to the harmony of the list, and she was shocked to learn that emails find their way to Haifa, and have been used in the past to threaten and sanction people. So she threw him off her list, and also refused to allow other AO-defenders there. Where I am not satisfied that these decisions were entirely fair, I understand Crystal's reasons -- the Baha'i wars are not her problem; she just wants some peace on her list.

I was very much dismayed and outraged to see Mark's letter to her threatening her with legal action. This is a child, one who is rather emotionally fragile, and subscription to a list is simply not worth such strong-arm tactics. My own advice to her was to close it down. No score in the battles raging here is worth Crystal's well-being, as far as I'm concerned.

Secondly, concerning my presence on the Baha'i Apologetics list: I subscribed to that list some months ago, with no intent of informing anyone but myself. No one knew I was on that list. I had no intention of posting anything, even to defend the liberal perspective, but when Susan responded to my critique, I assumed that she must know I was there, and that her post was addressing me. So I responded, and engaged Mark and Susan in debate. Nima's request that I forward any posts concerning him was more a matter of taking advantage of existing circumstances rather than a deliberate plan to "spy".

What happened was an accident. I was tired, having been intensely engaged in cyberspace on both lists the day before -- both my lack of judgment and my Majnun-like error was largely due to that. It seems like I've gone from one thing into another, engaging in intense, grueling, and sometimes emotionally-draining debates with people in several forums. I acted without thinking, and I blew it.

I sympathize with Milissa's complaint about "meanness", but the unfortunate fact is that's just the way cyberspace is. No amount of anyone standing here and saying "Now kids, play nice" is going to make that any different. There's just no point in standing in the middle of the fire and complaining about how hot it is. . For a people ostensibly committed to peace and unity, we Baha'is have created quite a little war for ourselves -- a war that seems to stretch above and beyond those specific issues on which we disagree. All too often, discussions go beyond debate about issues within the Faith, to demonizing, accusations, and, yes, backbiting. It gets real personal. Religious belief is a key part of a person's outlook and identity, and it is not surprising that arguments get heated. But Baha'is in cyberspace have a lot of hurt and anger, issues of trust and betrayal, personal grudges and loyalties, all thrown into that mix -- and all of those things have affected my interactions in cyberspace as well.

And I'm not really planning on jumping into the fire now. I have said my apologies, and explained the circumstances. The state of my soul, my relationships to the parties concerned, and my future intentions are no one's business but my own, and I do not plan on commenting on any of those things.

You may now go back to your regularly scheduled war games.

Love, Karen

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: No Room for "Dialogue"
Date: Monday, July 09, 2001 7:53 PM

Since the topic of Dialogue magazine has come up, I thought I'd share this with you, for the sake of those not familiar to the story. It's a section of a much longer article that tells the entire story of the conflict between Baha'i liberals and the AO.

Love, Karen

The rise and fall of dialogue

In May 1985 Steve Scholl and Payam Afsharian sent out a memorandum to remnants of the LA class still in the area, as well as other young intellectuals that there had been a trend towards "fuller discussion of vital issues facing the Baha'i community", which needed "an adequate literary forum." Scholl was an Oregonian who adopted the Baha'i Faith in 1971 at the age of 16. After graduate work in Islamic Studies at McGill University, and a year in Egypt, he came to Los Angeles working part time at bookstores, and the independent Baha'i publisher, Kalimat Press. The two co-founders of Kalimat Press, Payam Afsharian and Tony Lee, were also involved with the proposed magazine from the first meeting. Afsharian was of Iranian extraction, but had been brought up in England. Lee had also been brought up as a Baha'i, and his mother was a longtime member of the Los Angeles Spiritual Assembly. At this time he was a graduate student in African history at UCLA. Juan Cole called him "the sort of committed young person who might well end up on the NSA", but he had already accumulated something of a bad record with the Baha'i institutions as secretary of the LA study class, the author and circulator of the notorious newsletter.

A meeting was set to launch the project. Attendees were mostly young, some still doctoral students or just recently graduated. The group at first did not give much thought to the possible hindrance of prepublication review, but the recent publication of Circle of Unity which contained essays very similar to the articles planned for the magazine seemed reason for hope. There was also some hope that the Local Spiritual Assembly of Santa Monica could be the reviewing agency. In spite of the possible difficulties, Scholl announced that dialogue: A Baha'i Journal of Commentary and Opinion would appear beginning fall 1985. The first dispute with the NSA concerned the title, and the fact that Scholl had taken action without first consulting the institutions. Kazemzadeh insisted that the word "Baha'i" could not appear in the title, because that would imply that the articles represented the official point of view. Scholl pointed out where Shoghi Effendi had allowed the publication of an independent magazine, using the name "Baha'i" in the title. He also pointed out how unfair it was to both deny dialogue the use of the name "Baha'i" while simultaneously demanding that all of its articles would be vetted by the NSA. The Universal House of Justice backed the American NSA on the issue of the name, and called upon Scholl and the editorial board to "achieve unity with the decision of the National Assembly".

There were several disputes over articles: about a dozen were censored outright and dialogue was required to excise phrases in and alter the titles of others. The often slow and cumbersome review process also created real difficulties for the publication schedule.

The first major battle occurred over an article about the anti-apartheid movement. While Baha'i scripture teaches racial equality, Baha'is are expected to abstain from any political involvement. Scholl was warned that to criticize the South African policy of apartheid might endanger the Baha'i community in that country, even though the Baha'is' failure to oppose this institutionalized racism created the impression that they supported it. In the end, the article was allowed to appear after several changes had been made.

While Baha'i officials were unhappy with the magazine, dialogue rapidly became popular in the community. By the end of its two-year life it became the largest paid subscription periodical in the Western Baha'i world. However, the magazine never entirely emerged from debt and finding good material that would pass through the official censors was a continual challenge.

In May of 1987, Steve Scholl, Tony Lee, Payam Afsharian, and Richard Hollinger were summoned to Wilmette to meet with the members of the National Spiritual Assembly. This meeting has been described as a "trial" with Firuz Kazemzadeh, in particular, laying out a series of charges against the magazine, and the "LA group" in general. He clearly felt that they represented a radical sub-group bent upon "undermining the authority of the NSA." Scholl later felt that they had done "a bang-up job" of defending themselves, and the meeting ended on a fairly positive note. The tension between the magazine and the NSA continued, however, with Baha'i authorities continuing to censor articles.

The final crisis was precipitated by an article written by David Langness called "A Modest Proposal: Nine Recommendations for the Revitalization of the American Baha'i Community." The second draft was co-signed by seven others, (an act that would later be seen as "an effort to raise a petition") and presented to the National Spiritual Assembly for review. The article pointed out that growth had slowed considerably since the youth influx of the early 70s, and the community had a large number of inactive and alienated people on the rolls. The reforms proposed to remedy this situation included: the establishment of a "teaching" fund, an end to prepublication review, term limits on elected office-holders, the establishment of regional boards, the publication of a complete fiscal report prior to Convention and more emphasis on humanitarian projects.

According to Scholl, the NSA reacted in "an extreme manner" and members Jim and Dorothy Nelson met with Dialogue editors to go over it line by line. The editors revised the article in accordance with NSA concerns and so positive was the feeling at this meeting that he contacted the Office of the Secretary asking if the article could be circulated, with NSA approval. Shortly after this call, in early April 1988, he received a phone call telling him "they wanted to set up the inquisition.". At a hotel near the Los Angeles airport, three members of the NSA, Robert Henderson, Bill Maxwell, and William Davis met with twelve staff members, questioning them one by one. In outrage over this investigation, Scholl and the Dialogue staff each wrote individual letters of appeal and protest to the UHJ. Just before National Convention a letter was circulated among some Baha'i administrators "disparaging" dialogue, but none of editors were prepared for what happened next.

At the 1988 National Convention, Firuz Kazemzadeh brought forward the article "A Modest Proposal" and denounced it with the claim that it had circulated to "dozens" of delegates, an act that was regarded as "electioneering".(Campaigning of any kind is forbidden in Baha'i elections.) He explained the satirical origin of the name of the article(Jonathan Swift's "A Modest Proposal" suggested, in tongue-in-cheek fashion, the eating of Irish children as a cure for poverty), and read from the letters that Scholl and other dialogue editors had written to the Universal House of Justice. Few delegates knew anything about the magazine or about the LA group's history of conflict with the NSA. The author was present at this Convention, and came away with the impression that "A Modest Proposal" was a savage satire attacking the Baha'i institutions. The discovery that it was, in fact, a set of politely worded reform proposals, was the catalyst for my resignation from the Baha'i Faith in 1999.

In the face of this hostility, dialogue ceased publication. While Baha'i officials are quick to point out that no Baha'i institution directly called for the magazine to shut down, the religion's history of "shunning" those perceived as internal enemies meant that the magazine had no chance of survival. Between the constant publication delays and censorship caused the NSA's review policy, which they suspected was deliberate harassment, and the open denunciation of the editors by Baha'i leaders, the Dialogue staff felt that continuing the magazine was impractical financially and unhealthy spiritually. The closing of a successful and popular magazine was devastating to the editors and staff, some of whom would never get over their perception of being the victims of an outrageous injustice.

In the end, four people associated with dialogue were sanctioned with the loss of the right to travel to Haifa as Baha'i pilgrims: Editor-in-Chief Steven Scholl, Publisher Payam Afsharian, staff member Anthony Lee, and David Langness, the author of "A Modest Proposal". This was a unique punishment, probably intended to be somewhat milder than the full loss of administrative rights that would be the typical punishment for clear violations of Baha'i law. Both Langness and Scholl would openly confess confusion about why they were sanctioned. In a letter to Scholl, the UHJ identifies their crime as "the un-Baha'i marshalling of a group working to bring pressure on the institutions of the Cause, and the intemperate criticism employed", but there is no indication that, before the dialogue episode that either of these things were punishable offenses. Criticism of Baha'i institutions was, indeed, discouraged by Shoghi Effendi, but he never imposed sanctions for it. In fact, it is difficult to find where, in the pages of dialogue, or the proposed article, the criticism becomes "intemperate." As far as "bringing pressure" both petitions and appeals for change by individuals have historically been allowed in the Faith, and both Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha responded to them. In the wake of the dialogue episode, the Universal House of Justice released to the American Baha'i community a statement titled "Individual Rights and Freedoms in the World Order of Baha'u'llah." Intended to clarify the House's position on the limits of public discourse within the Baha'i community, it reviews the importance of the Covenant and the administrative order, confirms that freedom of expression is upheld in the Baha'i writings, reminds the Baha'is that Baha'u'llah warned of the consequences when liberty was carried to excess, and essentially places the burden of responsibility on the individual to make sure that his discourse does not cause "contention".

The suggested reforms are dismissed in this way:

"But occupation with the mechanics of Baha'i Administration, divorced from the animating spirit of the Cause, leads to a distortion, to an arid secularization foreign to the nature of the Administration. Equally significant to the procedures for election -- to further extend the example -- is the evocation of that rarefied atmosphere of prayer and reflection, that quiet dignity of the process, devoid of nominations and campaigning, in which the individual's freedom to choose is limited only by his own conscience, exercised in private in an attitude that invites communion with the Holy Spirit. In this sphere, the elector regards the outcome as an expression of the will of God and those elected as being primarily responsible to that will, not to the constituency which elected them. An election thus conducted portrays an aspect of that organic unity of the inner and outer realities of human life which is necessary to the construction of a mature society in this new Age. In no other system do individuals exercise such a breadth of freedom in the electoral process."

However, by simultaneously upholding freedom of speech and punishing those, such as the Dialogue editors, who were seen as taking that freedom too far, the Baha'i administration gave the community a mixed message concerning the limits of acceptable expression. The dialogue editors had followed the established Baha'i procedure, and had no indication that their activities were illegitimate until they were denounced and punished. It appears as if the rules by which the Baha'i administrative order was operating were ad hoc, and highly personalized.

Several statements on the Dialogue incident indicate that Baha'i authorities believed they were containing the influence of a political faction that threatened their authority and the well-being of the community. For example:

"It is important for the editors of "dialogue" to recognize that source of difficulties does not lie primarily in specifics of the proposed publication of "A Modest Proposal". This incident was merely the latest episode in a history of problems going back some twelve years, originating with the study groups in Los Angeles and its promotion of the wide circulation of the records of its discussions, continuing through some of the publications of Kalimat Press, and being developed through certain of the articles appearing in "dialogue". It is clear that many different individuals were involved over the years in the study group, Kalimat Press and "dialogue". However, certain believers have been prominently associated with all three and form a connecting link in the minds of many of the friends. . . .

In the Baha'i community methods and mechanisms are provided within the Administrative Order to elicit and make the best use of the ideas and hopes of individual believers in ways that enrich the pattern of Baha'i life without disrupting the community. There may be many occasions on which individuals believers are permitted or even encouraged by their Assembly to promote their ideas, but independent attempts by individual Baha'is to canvass support for their views among their fellow believers are destructive of the unity of the Cause. To attempt, in opposition to the institutions of the Faith, to form constituencies for certain proposals and programmes may not necessarily lead to Covenant-breaking, but it is a societal factor for disruption against which the Covenant is designed to protect the Faith. It is the process by which parties are formed and by which a religion is riven into contending sects.

Thus, in the case of "A Modest Proposal" it was not the questions that were raised or the proposals put forward that were primarily at fault, but rather the implicit manner in which it was proposed to accomplish change in the community. . . ."

Langness and Scholl however, regarded themselves as devoted Baha'is who were making positive contributions to their community. It is, in fact, impossible to pin down any particular Baha'i law that was broken by those sanctioned in the dialogue affair. (In any case, Baha'i laws mostly address matters of worship and personal morality.) Langness would later say, in spite of the statements of the Baha'i institutions to the contrary, he was "punished for writing and 'distributing' a dialogue magazine article on reinvigorating the American Baha'i community." Scholl would bitterly complain that every attempt he made to smooth over differences were rebuffed, attributing the difficulty to officials, most particularly Kazemzadeh, who he felt regarded the "LA group" as insincere and incorrigible. The rest of the Baha'i community, even most Dialogue subscribers, would have no idea what had happened to the magazine until the story was discussed on the Internet.

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: No Room for "Dialogue"
Date: Tuesday, July 10, 2001 12:56 AM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

Susan Maneck <smaneck@aol.com> wrote in message news:20010709212259.11556.00006457@ng-fc1.aol.com...

> Dear Karen,

>

> The most striking thing about your article here is that there is no evidence of > any real independent journalism. What you have presented is a second-hand

> regurgitation of Steve Scholl's version of what happened.

Hey, if the powers-that-be won't talk to me, that's hardly my fault.
That's

why the long quotes from the UHJ letters, to make sure their side is represented. Quotes like that are scattered all throughout the whole article; one person I showed it to recommended I cut them down, but I won't.

If the Institutions or their members want their point of view in my writing,

all they have to do is tell me their side. You yourself told me that if I was honest about telling them I was writing an article they wouldn't talk to me. I've done the best I could with what I've got, and clearly tell the audience that the people associated with Dialogue were regarded as disruptive and a threat to unity by the institutions.(The completed article, which tells the story "from LA to Alison" has a long section explaining

the administration and the Covenant.) Are you saying that I got the sequence of events wrong? Or are you just upset that the people from Dialogue appear sympathetic? Or do you just figure that, because I'm an amateur writer,

you'll do what you can to shake my confidence and/or discredit me?

If there is evidence I'm lacking, point me to it. Indeed, I insist on it, because I don't want any gaps that will come back and bite me on the butt later

-- in fact, in one case, I toned down what somebody wanted me to say because I felt there wasn't enough to back it up. I want this story to be as airtight

as I can make it.

There isn't a way to tell that story without Baha'i liberals appearing sympathetic. A non-Baha'i friend of mine commented that the story was

"difficult to read" -- and I feared the story was too convoluted to follow.

He said "No, it's emotionally difficult to read, because of what happened to those people." That's how human beings react to this story -- real human beings with hearts.

Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Thursday, January 11, 2001 8:53 PM

If Dr. Maneck would care to condescend to look through the recent archives of this newsgroup, she would see that I have, in fact, enumerated my motives, since they were so recently called into question. In fact, I think that post may be somewhere in this "common ground" thread.

I don't think my critics care much about my motivation at all. I think they just don't like the fact that I write articles about current Baha'i issues. The questioning of my motives is just an attempt to destroy my credibility. It's a whole lot easier than writing articles expressing the opposite point of view, or facing that what I have to say makes sense to a whole lot of people. (My articles have over 1000 hits now.) I am currently the highest rated author in Themestream's Baha'i category, with seven of the top ten articles being mine. And I didn't do that -- the readers did that, because they are the ones that rated me. If people didn't like what I was saying, those articles would sink like a rock to the bottom of the list and be heard from no more.

I think there are some people here who, if they are concerned about motives, would benefit from consulting a mirror.

Karen

bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote:

> Greetings, Susan.

> This is a fascinating position. You seem to argue that the UHJ judges > individuals on the basis of the motives of these individuals and that the > individuals themselves do not know what their own motives are.

> This justification of inappropriate behaviour by authority is a Most > Great Unacceptability for any decent society.

> And with that this green Druid slips back into the verdant woods.

> To Life,

>

Michael

>

> Susan Maneck (smaneck@aol.com) writes:

> >

> > Yeah, it mostly has to do with motive which is sometimes not all that easy to > > discern.

> >
> > Well, since Karin has removed herself from the Baha'i community she really > > isn't subject to Baha'i standards of conduct anyhow, so I don't know that it > > much matters. As for Karin's motives, I'm not sure she knows what they are.
> >
> > warmest, Susan
> >
> >
> >
> > "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
> > left to start again . . ."
> > Don McLean's American Pie
> > <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
> >
>
> --
> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard." > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>
>
>

Sent via Deja.com
[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"](https://www.deja.com/From: Karen Bacquet)
<karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: No Room for "Dialogue"
Date: Tuesday, July 10, 2001 11:52 AM

>
> Speaking for myself, I usually find Karen's style and tone quite powerful > and affecting - she reminds me somewhat of Jane Austen, in that she > seems to be careful to write only what she knows about because she > saw it, or someone she trusts told her it was true.
>
> I like it a lot - I must have read this before - I think on Themestream -
> but it was a real pleasure to read it again here.

Dear Paul,

Thank you for the kind words. I've never written an article on the Dialogue
episode before, but the other episodes in the conflict between liberals and the AO that I've outlined in the entire article were taken from my Themestream articles. (I incorporated the one on the LA study group almost without changes.) The charge of bias really means nothing more than I'm saying stuff they don't want me to say. Conservatives constantly whine

about the "liberal bias" in the media -- and it just means that the stories these journalists present don't support the conservative point of view.

If I am successful at getting published, I have to expect that I will take some major hits. It is inevitable.

>in that she > seems to be careful to write only what she knows about because she > saw it, or someone she trusts told her it was true.>>

It's not so much a matter of "someone I trust". Steve Scholl's perspective is incredibly important, because he was the founding editor of Dialogue -- he's a source that no journalist would ignore. It would be better if I could get Kazemzadeh's perspective as well, or that of other NSA members. But I do have the official communications about Dialogue, and I think I have adequately presented that perspective. However, there really is no way to make it look good to the non-Baha'i world --the only way to make conservatives happy is not to write at all, or to write the sort of article that would only be of interest within the Baha'i community. ("Longsuffering institutions reluctantly sanction perverse dissidents" is not a story anybody's going to care about.)

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: A Modest Revision (was No Room for "Dialogue")
Date: Saturday, July 14, 2001 8:28 PM

Dear Michael,

Here is the entire satire. As I mentioned, that isn't my usual style, but I pondered the question "Well, how would a person write it from the institutions' point of view?" and a bit of devilry and humor took over. I call it "A Modest Revision"

Love, Karen

Believing that uncontrolled free expression is destructive of unity, and symptomatic of the inferior "Old World Order" that prevails in Western society, Baha'i institutions strictly control print media concerning the Faith and have attempted to limit the discussion of community concerns to internal venues. Taking advantage of the American NSA's patience and goodwill, the left-wing radicals behind Dialogue plotted to expose the Baha'i community to dangerous and subversive ideas in order to undermine

the institutions and to impose their own political agenda.

Since the subversive activities of the LA Study class had lapsed, a hardline remnant gathered in an unauthorized meeting in May 1985 to strategize on other ways to expose the Baha'i community to these alien and destructive ideas, including the possible evasion of prepublication review. This cadre of plotters audaciously proposed that this vehicle of dissident propaganda be called a "Baha'i Journal", a falsehood that was immediately vetoed by the NSA. The Universal House of Justice supported the NSAs decision that even though this radical publication could not bear the name "Baha'i", all articles must be submitted to the review process in order to ensure accuracy and dignity in the presentation of the Faith. The review process weeded out the most dangerous articles, something made ever more crucial as the magazine grew in popularity.

The alarming success of this underhanded project aimed at casting aspersions on the integrity of Baha'i teaching caused the National Assembly to arrange for consultation with the errant editors. While clearly warned about the tone of the magazine, it continued to spread its poison throughout the Baha'i community. Clearly, something had to be done.

The final straw which compelled the longsuffering Spiritual Assembly to take action was the article "A Modest Proposal", which tried to convince the happy and thriving community that it was not growing as it should and that certain reforms alien to Baha'i teaching were necessary, like the establishment of a Teaching Fund, the expansion of humanitarian projects, and giving delegates a fiscal report prior to Convention. The sneering title, boldly taken from Jonathan Swift's satire, clearly showed the dissidents' disrespect for institutional authority. While some of the more broad-minded members met with these plotters to convince them to tone down aspects of this article laying out the radicals' political agenda, wiser members of that body felt that even allowing it to fail review was insufficient to protect the Baha'i community. One of the editors had threatened to circulate this subversive set of proposals at National Convention, therefore the delegates had to be warned of its disrespectful and destructive nature, lest they find such alarming ideas as the abandonment of prepublication review and term limits worthy of consideration. A careful investigation of those associated with the magazine had been launched. Instead of understanding the grave

nature of their offense and being properly repentant, these people dared to exercise their right of appeal, attempting to undermine the House of Justice Itself
by claiming to be innocent.. These letters were read to the delegates assembled at National Convention in order to prove the perfidious nature of this dangerous publication.

Soon afterwards, in a decision completely independent from any action by any Baha'i institution, Dialogue ceased to publish, and there were no further unsettling outbreaks of free expression until the advent of the dark age of the Internet.

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: No Room for "Dialogue"
Date: Wednesday, July 18, 2001 11:44 PM

>
> There is far more evidence that review was the central issue. And, given > the amount of exchange that had already gone on between these individuals > and the institutions regarding the prospects for any change in the policy
of > review, "A Modest Proposal" could easily be seen as yet another attempt to > buck the policy of review dressed up with a bunch of innocuous proposals
for > change in the community.>>

Every single article ever published in Dialogue magazine was submitted to passed review. About a dozen other articles were not published because they failed review. The Dialogue editors put up with review even though it caused tremendous headaches, since the review system wasn't set up to deal with a quarterly publication. "A Modest Proposal" was submitted to review,
and still in the review process when it was denounced. This is in an independent magazine that wasn't even allowed to call itself a "Baha'i Journal"! A whole lot of Baha'i intellectuals and writers heartily dislike review, even while remaining obedient to it -- or do you mean everyone is just supposed to be completely silent on the issue and lie and say it's a terrific idea and essential to the Faith?

That's back to the notion that you aren't a good Baha'i unless you sit down, shut up, and let them screw you. From that perspective, the Dialogue folks must have been very good Baha'is, because that's exactly what they did. Oh, I know what their crime was: it was having the very, very bad * thought * that maybe freedom of expression is a good idea and completely compatible with Baha'i teaching. That, and the fact they wanted to revitalize the Baha'i community.

Karen

>
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: If there were a free Baha'i press...
Date: Monday, July 23, 2001 3:37 AM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah
Dr. Herbert West <whooptee51@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:CgQ67.6641$wM5.1192625323@newssvr17.news.prodigy.com... > all of the back and forth about what did and didn't happen regarding
"A > Modest Proposal" would be a moot point. Indeed, were the actions of the > persons involved held up for public scrutiny at the time of the events,
this > issue would have long been settled.

Yes. If I had read "A Modest Proposal" in the pages of Dialogue in 1988, instead of on the web eleven years later, I would still be an enrolled Baha'i today. In fact, one thing that keeps the issue alive is that people still don't know what happened until they get on the Internet. It is the suppression of free expression within the community that creates these problems in the first place.

Love, Karen

>
> John
>
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Friday, January 12, 2001 8:36 AM

In article <93mjoo$vp9$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, rlittle95@my-deja.com wrote:

> Dear Karen

>

> If you would "care to condescent to look" at what Dr. Maneck wrote, you > would find that she did not question your motives, but rather, wrote > that she surmised that you might not be fully self-aware of your own > motives. I do not believe that she implied, and she certainly did not > say, that she feels she is better aware of your motives than you.

Dear Robert:

I am aware of what Susan meant, and I felt that she was taking an attitude of superiority and that I was being patronized. Is anyone "fully self-aware" about their motives about anything? Of course not, but I have been through experiences connected with my spiritual life which have caused me to examine them very closely. Are any human being's motives entirely selfless? Of course not, but I do not feel obliged to share to results of my self-examination here on a newsgroup.

I did not say that Susan was claiming to understand my motives better than I do. What I do believe she was saying was that I don't know what I'm doing.

One thing, however, that I will share here is that I find that as I spend more time defending myself on these newsgroups that it is taking a certain toll. To put it simply, I'm not as nice as I once was, or even than I was a couple of months ago. Of course, where Susan herself is concerned, she blew it with me very early on, and I've been suspicious of her ever since. Which is too bad, because she's an impressive person in some ways.

But since going through all this stuff about my articles, I find my own attitude hardening. It's wearing on a person to have to justify their existence all the time. However, the alternative is to just allow these people to shut me up, and that's not going to happen.

Love, Karen

>

> For my part, I believe that a pivotal trait or characteristic which a > follower of Baha'u'llah must possess is love - love of God, love of > mankind. This love must be the foundation of everything which they do > and say and feel.

>

> There is a unity of heart and mind and soul, a certain type of > simplicity, which is found in some Baha'is which set them apart from > the rest of us. The Hands of the Cause of God, for example, were all > very distinctively different from each other, yet they were all very > similar in the utter simplicity of their character, their unity of > being. They demonstrated one overriding motive in all their words

 and > actions, whereas most of us possess a variety of motives, each > competing for dominance, and these motives sometimes interfere with our > desire to love God, and His creation.
 >
 > It is within the bounds of reason to suppose that that love of God > which Baha'u'llah inculcates in His followers must constantly struggle > to overcome some few basic, lower motives for dominance.
 >
 > It is my opinion that Dr. Maneck would fervently pray that you always > win these battles, and it is my hope that you would pray thusly for her.
 >
 > Robert A. Little
 >
 > In article <93lo32$9k5$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
 > Karen Bacquet <kb4@mail.csuchico.edu> wrote:
 > > If Dr. Maneck would care to condescend to look through the recent > > archives of this newsgroup, she would see that I have, in fact, > > enumerated my motives, since they were so recently called into > > question. In fact, I think that post may be somewhere in this "common > > ground" thread.
 > >
 > > I don't think my critics care much about my motivation at all. I > think > > they just don't like the fact that I write articles about current > > Baha'i issues. The questioning of my motives is just an attempt to > > destroy my credibility. It's a whole lot easier than writing articles > > expressing the opposite point of view, or facing that what I have
 to > > say makes sense to a whole lot of people. (My articles have over 1000 > > hits now.) I am currently the highest rated author in Themestream's
 > > Baha'i category, with seven of the top ten articles being mine.
 And I > > didn't do that -- the readers did that, because they are the ones
 that > > rated me. If people didn't like what I was saying, those articles > > would sink like a rock to the bottom of the list and be heard from no
 > > more.
 > >
 > > I think there are some people here who, if they are concerned about > > motives, would benefit from consulting a mirror.
 > >
 > > Karen
 > >

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"](https://www.deja.com/From: Karen Bacquet)

<kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Saturday, January 13, 2001 4:00 PM

In article <20010113014849.09479.00003996@ng-ch1.aol.com>,

smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck) wrote:

> >The hell I don't, Susan. Haven't you been listening? I am an > >unenrolled Baha'i.

>

> I heard you say that you still believed in Baha'u'llah. But I figured in > unenrolling you were stating you no longer wished to be a part of the > community.

Baha'i

>

> >As for Baha'i officialdom, I have no idea how they view me, or even

if

> >I have come to their attention at all.

>

> Oh, I'm sure you have.-} But if they accepted your resignation, it means they > do not consider you a Baha'i.

>

Dear Susan,

Just to clarify: At the time I resigned, I actually did not know what I believed. I was just furiously angry, and felt lied to and betrayed. What I actually said in my resignation letter was that if this was the administration that Baha'u'llah wanted, then He could not be a Manifestation of God. If anyone had ever told me that it was possible for the AO to treat people the way they do, I would have said, "No, that can't happen, because it is completely opposed to Baha'i principles." Yet these things did happen, and because Baha'u'llah is not supposed to be separated from the Institutions my faith in Him was destroyed for a brief while. So it is accurate to say that when I sent in my resignation, I was not a Baha'i.

However, over the course of the next few months, I found that I really could not walk away from Him, but I could not in good conscience support the kinds of actions I have seen from the Baha'i administration. So I did not seek to re-enroll in the community, nor do I have any plans to do so. Locally, there is nothing here for me to go back to. Technically, I was an isolated believer anyway because of the way the lines are drawn. The two "communities" that are here are just pathetic.

I wish I could have a Baha'i community, but that's been a pipe dream for most of the years I've been a Baha'i. I've got my email contacts and a few local friends and that's fine. And I haven't seen a lot of reason yet for me to change my position on how I view the higher-up administration.

So, as I said, I'm an unenrolled Baha'i.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Karen Bacquet"

<kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Saturday, January 13, 2001 8:12 PM

Dear Susan:

I appreciate you sharing your side of the story. You are aware, of course, that I have heard bits and pieces of the other side. However, I like having as much information as I can get -- each piece gives a clearer picture of the whole.

In the middle of formulating an answer I lost my Internet connection, so I think I'll just make some quick comments rather than try to dredge up the energy for a detailed response.

>

> This doesn't precisely parallel Karen's experiences, for in her case it seemed > to involve mostly problems in her local community. But I expect that for her, > like me, there had come a time when the Faith no longer seemed to have any > terms for her existence. I'd been feeling that for nearly two decades before > Juan resigned, but when that happened I imagined my own worst fears had been > realized.

The point I reached, Susan, was just that something finally snapped and

I didn't care if I was involved in the community or not. I was tired of the lack of just basic organization locally. There was no one around who shared my interests in comparative religion and religious history, but I had always been pretty much isolated intellectually. When I ran into questions, I mostly just kept my mouth shut, and investigated on my own the best I could. I had no idea of the extent of the conflict between intellectuals and the AO, and when I did discover it, it came as a terrible shock. I already had a great deal of frustration and anger built up, and when I ran into "A Modest Proposal" and I discovered how I'd been lied to, it was like throwing a match into gasoline. My leaving the community was not a calm and careful decision; it was an explosion of all the built-up pressure, frustration, resentment, anger etc.

A good example of that > kind of hypocrisy is the following description of your own Zuhur list:

Susan, I don't really see hypocrisy in this. What is so terrible about liberals having a place to go where they don't have to deal with fundamentalist attacks? There are times when Talisman seems like little more than shouting across the liberal/conservative divide. Of course, a liberals-only list has its disadvantages, too. But the point is, there is room for both, and an exclusive list does not necessarily mean hypocrisy. Aren't there lists that are for enrolled Baha'is only?

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"](https://www.deja.com/From: Karen Bacquet)

<kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Sunday, January 14, 2001 1:41 AM

In article <20010114001451.29728.00002555@ng-cs1.aol.com>, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck) wrote:

> >What is so terrible about > >liberals having a place to go where they don't have to deal with > >fundamentalist attacks?

>

> Dear Karen,

>

> If it is personal attacks one is worried about then one bans personal attacks.

> What this list is basically doing is banning the expression of any ideas it > chooses to label as "fundamentalist."

Oh come on, Susan! Talisman bans personal attacks, and still the ideological split ends up dominating things a good deal of the time. There was a while there where it just seemed like an endless procession of conservatives showed up to duke it out with Juan. That can be interesting sometimes, but there are times you need a break from it.

And, as Nima said, there are those who are justifiably afraid of being reported to the Institutions. There are security measures, like the no-forwarding rule. I personally will not mention any particular person as being a member of the list, especially if they are an enrolled Baha'i. I don't see why it would be so hard to understand why people want to get away from that, to speak without the risk that something they post is going to end up in the files of some member of the Institution of the Learned. I find that sort of reporting behavior absolutely despicable, as you know. I have no problem at all with protecting the friends from those who would do them harm. Remember that list was created in the wake of Alison's disenrollment. I sure wish she'd had some protection on a secure list.

I think there's a certain amount of hypocrisy on the part of conservatives who object to being denied access to liberal lists. Ian Kluge is going around huffing and puffing about not being able to get on Paul Johnson's new list. Now these two guys are like oil and water, so why does Kluge want on a list that consists of liberal Baha'is, A.R.E. members and Theosophists? My guess is he tried to subscribe just so he could spout lots of righteous indignation about liberal "hypocrisy" when he was denied a subscription.

However, there are times I wish the oil and water would mix -- I think the recent discussion about Juan's translation of 'Abdul-Baha's letter on jurisprudence would have been better if I hadn't had to hop in between three lists to get all sides. Yeah, I know the sparks would have flown, but occasionally from sparks you can get a bit of light.

>
> >Aren't there lists that are for enrolled Baha'is only?
>
> Sure. That's quite different from saying that only one Baha'i theology can be > expressed by those belonging to it.

Since when do Baha'i liberals have "one Baha'i theology"? You used to hang with these guys, Susan. Surely you know what a diverse bunch they are, unless things have changed a good deal since then.

Love, Karen

>
> warmest, Susan
>
> "And we were gathered in one place, a generation lost in space, with no time
> left to start again . . ."
> Don McLean's American Pie
> <https://bahaistudies.net/susanmaneck/>
>
>

Sent via Deja.com
[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"
<kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>
Subject: Re: common ground
Date: Sunday, January 14, 2001 10:55 AM](https://www.deja.com/From:Karen%20Bacquet%20%3Ckb4@mail.csuchico.edu%3ESubject:Re:common%20groundDate:Sunday,%20January%2014,%202001%2010:55%20AM)

Dear Juan:

Thanks for presenting your side of the story. I'd heard bits and pieces before, but I'm not sure I've ever seen it just all put together like this.

It's really quite outrageous that things you said in the aftermath of leaving the Faith are being used against you. It doesn't take an enormous amount of sensitivity to understand what you must have been going through. I, for one, would be inclined to overlook just about anything you said then, no matter how wild and crazy, because I know how black and terrible the experience of losing your faith is. I wrote all kinds of wild speculations when I went through that, but I wasn't on the Internet with moles lurking in the shadows, so nobody will ever see the angry, confused, and sad things I was thinking.

When Susan tells me these things, I know I am getting a skewed version of events, and that she's out to discredit you if she can. I just like having the information, even if I know I can't swallow it whole. She's probably telling the truth when she talks of her feelings, but the picture she presents of you and other Baha'i liberals doesn't jive with my experience with you all.

Love, Karen

>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

<kb4@mail.csuchico.edu>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Monday, January 15, 2001 11:07 AM

In article <20010115041736.29351.00003397@ng-cs1.aol.com>, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck) wrote:

> >Maneck posts private messages from me from > >that period occasionally in order to discredit me.

>

> Sorry, the stuff about Peter Khan being of fundamentalist Christian background > or Mr. Arbab having a chauffer-driven Mercedes were all public postings, not > private.

Susan,

I think Juan is not referring here to these specific instances, besides he admitted being wrong about Khan's background, and I think his post-resignation anger is enough explanation for complaints about House members' lifestyle. However, you did try to discredit Juan to me by referring to and posting private messages, apparently believing me naive enough to fall for something like that.

I actually am pretty trusting, reluctant to believe the worst about someone, but once I see evidence that someone is untrustworthy, they are not likely to be given a second chance without overwhelming signs of a change of heart. Juan has never given me reason to doubt his trustworthiness; you have.

But that's not the only way I judge this stuff. It is possible for Juan to be wrong, after all, he relies other people for his information. Even eyewitnesses can be mistaken, and time alters memory.

There may be the temptation on the part of Juan's friends to tell him what they think he wants to hear. All these things are factors. It would be nice if incidents within the Faith could be better documented, but that's just not the way it works. I do not believe, however, that he invents things out of thin air.

When it comes to Juan himself and the things that are said about him, I just have to trust my gut. I have been out here in cyberspace for over a year now. I've seen hundreds of Juan's posts, several of his articles and read his book. I think I have a pretty good feel for what sounds like Juan and what doesn't. If I hear that Juan said such-and-such about some high muckety-muck in the Faith, then I figure that's probably true, because he has been critical about various Baha'i officials.

However, when you tell me that H-Bahai was being used to promote a particular ideological agenda, then that's just bogus. There are conservatives on H-Bahai, and you know it, because one of them was taking pot-shots at Juan's translations and posting H-Bahai digests on Baha'i Studies. Conservative Baha'is post there all the time. Liberal Baha'is are always being accused of imposing some kind of ideology, and

I have never seen any evidence of that whatsoever. In fact, I think Juan shows remarkable patience with these people who are always attacking him. Juan has more than once expressed his view that he'd rather everything just be open and above board, and that all perspectives should be heard.

I have never had any liberal Baha'i try to push me in any particular direction. There is no ideological litmus test in any liberal Baha'i group I've been on. The notion that there is some kind of liberal party line just strikes me as sour grapes, and just another attempt at trying to discredit Baha'i liberalism.

Karen

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: quastion about conflicts among Bahais
Date: Sunday, January 28, 2001 1:01 AM

In article <9506b4$vhps$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, libertarian@nukeworker.com wrote:

> I see a lot of conflict between Bahais on this NG. I think the basic > religion is fantastic! What is the reason for all this conflict. I want > to hear all sides.

>

> L1

Dear Libertarian:

Probably the simplest way of putting it is that the conflict centers on disagreements about certain actions and policies of the Baha'i Institutions.

Love, Karen

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee
is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington.
Massachusetts
Date: Saturday, January 27, 2001 3:49 PM

In article <20010127101716.00302.00002787@ng-ch1.aol.com>, smaneck@aol.com (Susan Maneck) wrote:
> > The "crime" here was in writing an article and > > submitting it for prepublication review, something that no one would > > have thought was a crime, since Baha'i writers do it all the time.
>
> Dear Karen,
>
> It was a little more complicated than that and some of it seems to have been a > result of a misunderstanding. The NSA had been led to believe that this > document was being distributed to Convention delegates with the intent of > swaying the election.

Yes, I am aware of that. But Dave was complaining that the "method" was somehow worthy of punishment. And I've got bit problems with people being denounced when the authorities don't even have solid evidence about what's going on. That article was not distributed at Convention; that idea was discussed, but it didn't happen. Unless I'm mistaken, the only delegates who saw it were those who were in the LA area and associated with Dialogue.

The reason they were denounced at Convention is because Kazemzadeh hates those guys.

But obviously the House saw the document itself as > problematic as well, or they would not have endorsed the NSAs decision to > remove their right to pilgrimage. I think the NSA originally wanted to do far > worse, and the House wouldn't let them.

That may be so, but I have trouble seeing the justice of the situation. They wrote an article. That's not a sin, especially since it was never published. And a whole lot of ill feeling came out of that incident.

And now that people like Jenifer and myself can see what the article really said, the Baha'i powers that be just look like paranoid asses.

Love, Karen

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/> bacquet
8/6/01 2:48 PM 1 out of 22

Dave,

I just did a quick search of the Writings on liberty and freedom. 'Abdul-Baha had a lot to say about it, and I think he liked it.

Love, Karen

. Truly, this is a great and revered nation. Here liberty has reached its highest degree. The intentions of its people are most praiseworthy. They are, indeed, worthy of being the first to build the Tabernacle of the Most Great Peace and proclaim the oneness of mankind. I will supplicate God for assistance [PUP p.36-37]

You are living upon the great continent of the West, enjoying the perfect liberty , security and peace of this just government. There is no cause for sorrow or unhappiness anywhere; every means of happiness and enjoyment is about you, for in this human world there is no greater blessing than liberty. [PUP p.52]

This is the century of new and universal nationhood. Sciences have advanced; industries have progressed; politics have been reformed; liberty has been proclaimed; justice is awakening. [PUP p.143]

. . .opinions of men are not free, and development is stifled, whereas in democracy, because thought and speech are not restricted, the greatest progress is witnessed. It is likewise true in the world of religion. When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable. [PUP p.197}]

Praise be to God! The standard of liberty is held aloft in this land. You enjoy political liberty; you enjoy liberty of thought and speech, religious liberty, racial and personal liberty. Surely this is worthy of appreciation and thanksgiving.[PUP p.390]

But when they removed these differences, persecution, and bigotries out of their midst, and proclaimed the equal rights of all subjects and the liberty of men's consciences, the lights of glory and power arose and shone from the horizons of that kingdom in such wise that those countries made progress in every direction [TN p.91]

These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of creation, and manifestation of the hidden verities of the contingent world. [TN p. 91]

When meeting for consultation, each must use perfect liberty in stating his views and unveiling the proof of his demonstration. [BWF p.406]

The third candle is unity in freedom which will surely come to pass. [SWA p.32]

The honoured members must with all freedom express their own thoughts, and it is in no wise permissible for one to belittle the thought of another,[SWA p.88]

[To insure] freedom of conscience and tranquility of heart and soul is one of the duties and functions of government, and is in all ages the cause of progress in development and ascendancy over other lands. [TNp87]

The Constitutional Government, according to the irrefutable text of the Religion of God, is the cause of the glory and prosperity of the nation and the civilization and freedom of the people[TAB p. 492]

bacquet

8/6/01 6:52 PM 5 out of 22

Gee, and I thought Juan was over the top when he said Baha'i fundamentalists don't like 'Abdul-Baha. I guess they really don't.

Dear Dave,

As I said earlier, it is clear that there are passages that support liberty and freedom and passages that disparage it. Baha'u'llah said clearly that He grants freedom in some instances, and refuses to grant it in others. Heck, I'm not even enrolled in the Faith and I still feel the constraints of Baha'i law in my personal life -- I still don't drink, gamble, and I say my prayers ever day, and fast in March. I accept those limits on my freedom as part of my love for Baha'u'llah and not because somebody threatens me to do it. "Observe my commandments for the love of My Beauty". My position is not one of antinomian contempt for religious law.

O.K., since liberty and freedom are both praised and condemned, the question is "Under what circumstances is liberty good, and in which circumstances is it bad?" I think 'Abdul-Baha is clearly praising political freedoms, freedom of thought, conscience, and expression. And these are precisely the sort of freedoms that are at issue in recent events.

The idea that man's freedom consists of submission to God is not new with Baha'u'llah -- you find it in the Gospels: "The truth shall set you free". Some things I've read suggest that early Christians regarded the gospel primarily as a message of freedom -- but I digress. That freedom deals with detachment from the world and its constraints; it is not something measurable by an outside authority.

Love, Karen

P.S. As for me being free to "assail the Cause" -- I'm not enrolled and I'm free to do or say anything I like. As 'Abdul-Baha said about such freedom "Praise be to God!" And I do not "assail the Cause"; I am upholding the integrity of the Baha'i teachings in the face of fundamentalism, fanaticism, injustice, and bigotry.

From: "Karen Bacquet" <kalamity@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington. Massachusetts

Date: Sunday, January 28, 2001 3:12 PM

Dear Rick,

Thank you for your perspective. One question that has been in my mind since I first started investigating this stuff has been "Just what the hell did these guys do to earn themselves two decades' worth of enmity from the Institutions?"

I remain unconvinced to this day that this enmity is deserved in any way.

- > Not hatred. Frustration. And the whole issue is way more complicated than
- > just the distribution of "A Modest Proposal". Dr. Kazemzadeh saw the
- > article as a continuation of a pattern of behavior stretching back to the
- > late '70s and early '80s. His frustration was shared by a number of people
- > who were aware of all that had gone on between the NSA and the old LA Study
- > Group. That whole series of events, stretching back more than a decade
- > prior to the incident at Convention, prompted the Universal House of Justice
- > to write the "Individual Rights and Freedoms" letter. No, there was way
- > more afoot there than just the intent to distribute that article.

Maybe. But he did not have to destroy that magazine; he did not have to publicly humiliate the editors. That was mean and uncalled-for. These are supposed to be institutions that handle cases with justice, not vehicles for letting out one's personal frustrations against people you don't like.

- >
- > > And now that people like Jenifer and myself can see what the article
- > > really said, the Baha'i powers that be just look like paranoid asses.
- >
- > Yes. At the same time, I've yet to see anyone provide a fair and honest
- > account of all the stuff the led up to that incident. Perhaps the fact that
- > you see what the article really said but have been given that opportunity
- > devoid of almost any of the context that led to the incident is calculated
- > precisely to lead you to believe that the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly
- > is nothing but bunch of paranoid asses.

I didn't know that when articles were submitted for review that "context" was so important. I thought articles were only judged on "accuracy and dignity". The fact remains that these people were unjustly humiliated for writing an article, then following the rules (however much they disliked them) by submitting it to review.

I will say again: there needs to be some kind of formal due process for those accused of opposition to the Institutions. Otherwise, it's just a personal thing -- "We don't like those guys because they're a bunch of long-haired 60s upstarts who think they're intellectuals. We're going to teach those little snots some respect!" The offense, and its consequences need to be clearly laid out and universally applicable. That is justice.

>
> It's possible to put some of the pieces together. There are notes from that > group on H-Baha'i, but even they don't tell the whole story. One does, > however, get a sense of a pattern that seems to have been repeated even to > this day. The pattern goes like this:

I have noted this pattern as well, not so much in regard to the LA study group, but in the tension evident in cyberspace, although I would describe it differently than you have. It's a vicious cycle. My suggestion is that the Institutions stop cracking down on people, and give the liberals less to complain about. I still don't see why it has been so necessary to try to shut these guys up.

> The group is not particularly well deepened in certain facets of appropriate > Baha'i conduct, particularly with regard to criticism of the elected > institutions.

I really have trouble seeing people like Juan Cole, Steve Scholl, and Tony Lee as "undeeened", even back in those days.

>
> 2) The institutions notice that these notes are getting published without > anyone having taken these issues directly to these institutions. The > distribution of these notes, particularly in so far as they contain > criticisms of a style and tone that's contrary to some basic Baha'i > principles, is problematic. The activity takes on the character of some > form of loyal opposition, and the distribution looks like an effort to > garner support for the criticisms being expressed. The institutions attempt > to bring this issue to the attention of the people who are publishing the > notes. (It's worth noting that "institutions", here, includes the Universal > House of Justice.)

My impression is that the issue was that the newsletter, a little local typed smudgy newslettter, was not being sent in for review -- a completely impractical and ridiculous suggestion. I've read some of the issues of that newsletter, and I'm still left trying to figure out what the NSA was on about.

>
> 3) The folks who have been distributing the notes respond as if the > institutions are trying to silence them rather than strive to understand > what the institutions have actually said.

Well, the demand for review effectively put the kibosh on that newsletter; I'm not surprised these guys felt "silenced". And, you will note, they did not just say "Screw you, we'll publish what we want!" The newsletter stopped. Same thing with Dialogue -- every single article that was published in that magazine was submitted to and passed review. If that was the case, how could that magazine be seen as "opposing" the institutions? They did not mount a public protest about the shabby way they were treated. Few people even knew about it until Talisman came along. All this stuff was kept quiet. Juan didn't put "A Modest Proposal" on the web until they pushed him out of the Faith. Real stupid move, that. They created a critic who has absolutely nothing to lose anymore; that's not very smart.

They push back, but, in doing so, > engage in a behavior that's even further in the direction away from which > the institutions were hoping to deflect them.
>
> And, so begins a cycle of concomitant actions and reactions. That cycle has > repeated itself both on a large scale and on a smaller scale within the > larger cycles.

Yes, that's what I have seen. So maybe the institutions should back off, take the wind out of everybody's sails and stop monitoring people's email traffic looking for heresy. That would be a good thing.

>
> Now, for the irony. One criticism that's been voiced in this thread is that > Feasts are open only to people who are enrolled in the Baha'i Faith. The > reason for this is precisely to facilitate the sense that people should be > free to voice whatever views or criticisms they have of the Assembly's > policies and practices.

In my experience, Feast is not all that "free"; much depends upon who is chairing it. It is a restricted environment. I never saw "big" issues brought up at Feast, although I admit that I live in an administratively underdeveloped area. People get shut up and accused of causing "disunity." How free consultation is depends on how strong you are and willing to fight for your right to be heard. I never felt like I had a voice in anything until I got out in cyberspace.

When I'm in a group that's not restricted to > members of the Faith, I don't feel like I can be quite as open as I can > within the group. One doesn't air one's dirty laundry in front of guests.
>
> It would seem as though Baha'i institutions are damned if they do and damned > if they don't. They're supposed to be open to criticism and complaint, but > the one forum in which Baha'is are most free to do so, the Feast, is > criticised precisely because there is a provision designed to allow that > forum to be as free and open as possible.

I am not advocating that non-Baha'is be allowed at the consultation portion of Feast. What I am advocating is that a non-administrative worship service, where all are welcome, be the center of community life instead of the restricted and exclusive Feast.

Love, Karen

>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is justice . . ." Baha'u'llah

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Sent via Deja.com

https://www.deja.com/From: "Karen Bacquet"

<karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: This is Bahai?

Date: Wednesday, September 19, 2001 10:28 PM

> Is this what has happened to the Bahai faith? This is nothing at all > like I saw and learned a few years ago. What has happened and what is > going on?

To put it simply: The Internet happened. These things had been going on before, but few Baha'is knew about them. The Baha'i administration strictly controlled what information was available and the Faith never attracted outside scrutiny, so these internal problems had never been exposed. Now, you've got Baha'is who are appalled by the fact people could be forced or thrown out of the Faith for their opinions expressed on email, and Baha'is who defend it.

I would caution, however, that talk.religion.bahai is not exactly representative of the Baha'i community. Even though there are serious problems in the administration, there still are a lot of good Baha'is out there, trying to live the ideals that Baha'u'llah taught.

If you'd like to know more, I've written a series of articles on some of these events:

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/themestream.html>

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Impact of Fred's website and efforts
Date: Sunday, September 30, 2001 10:47 PM

> > As explained above - that number means nothing because you cannot > > judge the status of others simply because they do not show up for > > events or have a good mailing address.
>
> An odd conclusion - most religions require adherents to fulfill certain > regular practices to be regarded as in good standing. Obviously Bahaism > doesn't - Karen's a BIGS when it suits to present it as an all encompassing > faith system but not, when it comes to matters to do with the Covenant.
One
> vision for outsiders - one diktat for insiders.

Dear Dermot,

The administration doesn't consider me a Baha'i of any kind, BIGS or not.
Dave, being somewhat more humane than the administration, is willing to concede that I am type of Baha'i. What the administration is doing by keeping people on the rolls that haven't been heard from in years is following the dictate of Shoghi Effendi, who explicitly forbade removing people from the rolls unless they send in a letter renouncing Baha'u'llah.

Personally, I don't think the higher-ups even have a clue as to what's going on out here. I've heard of cases where LSAs don't send on resignation letters, especially if that would jeopardize the Assembly. I don't think they had any idea of the kind of discontent that's out here before the Internet came along -- the new goal in the Plan to reach out to "alienated believers" is almost certainly a reaction to that.

The numbers game is pretty wacky -- suddenly in my Almanac, the number under "churches" went from 1750 to 8000. Why? Well, they almost certainly replaced the number of LSAs with the number of localities -- which leads me to suspect that the number of LSAs has gone down. An independent poll in the early 90s put the number of Baha'is at 28,000 -- which led the Baha'i administration to talk to the people that had done it, who conceded that there may have been an undercount for religious groups "living in a communal setting". Since Baha'is don't live in communes, they must mean families-- but a religion composed of converts actually has fewer families in it.

For example, there are no other Baha'is beside myself in my household.
That's
back when there were supposedly 110,000, and I simply don't believe
that there has been 50,000 converts since then, especially since only 7,000 are giving to the National Fund -- by their own admission. That would be comparable to the number that came in during the 70s, for heaven's sake! So some stretching is definitely going on, along with a blind eye towards those who drift away. I recall seeing a report of the actual numbers in the late 80s when they were claiming 100,000 -- the numbers on the rolls were actually something like 92,000. So they are "rounding up".

That 28,000 may be a undercount, but it isn't much of one. It's a lot more solid, because it numbers those who identify themselves as Baha'i, not just somebody who is on the rolls because they didn't know they had to write a letter in order to get off of it.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Impact of Fred's website and efforts
Date: Tuesday, October 02, 2001 11:00 AM

--
> The trouble with numbers is that they are never truly accurate when it > comes to any population.

Religious statistics are notoriously inaccurate, no matter what religion
you are talking about. Most groups probably inflate their numbers to an extent.
For all I know, I'm probably still counted as a Baptist, because I went
to that church for a while as a kid. I know a local Baha'i who still found out
he was on the rolls of the Catholic church.

I do not think that there are 160,000
> Baha'is in the US. I don't know what the accurate number is and I > don't care. Trouble is Juan came up with this oh so scientific > sounding calculation and it is based on flawed logic. It is flat out > wrong. It is as flat out wrong as the 160,000 number.

Well, I don't know what "flawed logic" you are talking about. I think Juan's estimate is that there are about 60,000 Baha'is in this country.
I think the 28,000 figure is closer to accurate, although somewhat low, because it is based on self-identification, which I figure is the most accurate way to count adherence. It probably is pretty hard to estimate numbers of a small group from a sample like that. I wonder what kind of estimate they got for really tiny groups of 10,000 or less.

>

> My biggest beef is the hypocritical claim from floks like Juan that no one can judge someone else's heart only to have him turn around and judge the hearts of the folks who signed a declaration card then ceased to come to feast.

I don't think it's a matter of judging people's hearts. The likelihood is, especially with those who are "mail returns" is that they have abandoned identification with the Baha'i Faith. A person who stops going to his parents' church might retain a sort of nominal identification -- it's much less likely that a convert will. There's nothing there to keep a person identified with the Faith, once they abandon active involvement. Now, I've known people who have been inactive for years suddenly show up one day, but I think that's the exception rather than the rule. I simply don't believe that there are thousands of lost Baha'is out there; there are probably thousands of ex-Baha'is out there who just never made it official.

The problem I have with the inflated statistics is that it gives a false impression of growth, when there is none. Instead of dealing with the problem of the revolving door, we ignore it and accept it as normal. As I've said many times, the impression that everything was fine with the Baha'i world "out there" always acted as a kind of guilt trip for me. I thought the Faith was growing everywhere but here.

Now, I would not advocate tossing people off the rolls for not coming to Feast just so the count will be accurate -- unless maybe someone has been a mail return for a very long period of time. (I wonder how many dead people we've still got on the rolls? Do we take someone off if they haven't been heard from in 50 years?) I do wish, however, we knew how many mail returns there are (The figure I've heard is about a third), and I'd like to know how many LSAs we've got. The figure was 1750 back in the mid-1980s -- and they've never given another figure since. My guess is that it has gone down. Besides the change in accounting in the Almanac I mentioned, they've also stopped allowing classified ads in the American Baha'i pleading for pioneers to come save jeopardized assemblies. But if things are stagnant, and I believe they are, then we need to take a look at why, and consult on ways to reverse the trend. The major problem I have with the inflated statistics is that it masks a problem -- and you know I'm one who believes in dealing with reality.

Love, Karen

>
> You can't have it both ways.
>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave
>
> P.S. The trouble with statistical samples is that as a population > reaches statistical 0% the probability that you will get an accurate > count reaches 0% as well. The population of Baha'is in the US is > withing the margin of error of any possible survey.

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Impact of Fred's website and efforts
Date: Thursday, October 04, 2001 1:03 AM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

Pat Kohli <kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net> wrote in message news:3BBBE6B2.455D2B5@ameritel.net...

> Allahu Abha!

>

> Karen Bacquet wrote:

>

> >

> > I don't think it's a matter of judging people's hearts. The likelihood

is,

> > especially with those who are "mail returns" is that they have abandoned

> > identification with the Baha'i Faith.

>

> This appears to be purely speculation on your part.

As I told Dave it is equal speculation that they have not abandoned such identification. The fact is, we don't know anything about these people except that they signed a delaration card once upon a time. In a religion
composed largely of converts it is less likely that people will maintain
a nominal adherence, like a cradle Catholic might. Besides, it is not entirely "speculation on my part" when an independent poll could only find 28,000 people identifying themselves as Baha'is-- that may be an undercount,
but I have trouble believing that the undercount could be that drastic.
This was done by independent researchers who had no stake in either inflating or deflating the numbers.

>
> I do believe that others can offer anecdotes where the numbers do not simply > even out. I do wish to try to convince you that some research, not a pants seat > search, would be needed to draw a meaningful guess of what percentage of Baha'is > w/o current addresses at National are active Baha'is and how many are likely to > be active Baha'is in the next tne years. These people should be counted as > Baha'is.
>
> Should someone not be counted as a Catholic if they simply don't go to church > every week?

I would agree that without any kind of research we're guessing, and such research would be pretty hard to do considering we don't even know where a lot of these people are. I think it just isn't sensible to go around believing that all those people are lost Baha'is, who might show up at any time. Most have almost certainly moved on. Yes, I know people can and do show up, but thousands -- I'm doubting it. What I've seen are people that drop out of sight very soon after declaring, and probably don't even think about getting themselves off the rolls.

I'm not advocating that people be tossed off the rolls for not showing up to Feast, for heaven's sake. What I am saying is the fact that such a high rate of people that abandon active involvement with the Baha'i Faith belies the numbers that show continual and bouyant growth. People come in, take a look around and say "I'm outta here!" I think it would be profitable to consider the reasons why that happens, rather than just pretending it doesn't.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Impact of Fred's website and efforts
Date: Thursday, October 04, 2001 1:19 AM

Oh, and besides the high inactivity rate, there has been some plain -- and it has to be deliberate -- inflation of the membership numbers. When I became a Baha'i back in 1985, they were claiming 100,000 Baha'is in

the U.S., which as I noted earlier was a rounding upward. They always put the numbers of declarations in The American Baha'i, which always hovered around 1,000 a year. That means, by 1999, when I left there should have been about 113,000 Baha'is -- that is, if no one withdrew or died during those years.
But I start hearing these figures of 140,000, and now 160,000. Has there been a massive influx of new believers since I left, of nearly 40,000 new believers in the last two years? Where is this happening? Are we having a revival of South Carolina in the 70s style mass teaching? Or is somebody cooking the books?

Love, Karen

> >
> > >
> > > I don't think it's a matter of judging people's hearts. The likelihood
> is, > > > especially with those who are "mail returns" is that they have abandoned
> > > identification with the Baha'i Faith.
> >
> > This appears to be purely speculation on your part.
>
> As I told Dave it is equal speculation that they have not abandoned
such > identification. The fact is, we don't know anything about these people > except that they signed a declaration card once upon a time. In a religion
> composed largely of converts it is less likely that people will maintain a > nominal adherence, like a cradle Catholic might. Besides, it is not > entirely "speculation on my part" when an independent poll could only find > 28,000 people identifying themselves as Baha'is-- that may be an undercount,
> but I have trouble believing that the undercount could be that drastic.
> This was done by independent researchers who had no stake in either
> inflating or deflating the numbers.
>
> >
> > I do believe that others can offer anecdotes where the numbers do not > simply > > even out. I do wish to try to convince you that some research, not a > pants seat > > search, would be needed to draw a meaningful guess of what percentage of

> Baha'is
 > > w/o current addresses at National are active Baha'is and how many are > likely to > > be active Baha'is in the next tne years. These people should be counted
 > as > > Baha'is.
 > >
 > > Should someone not be counted as a Catholic if they simply don't go to > church
 > > every week?
 >
 > I would agree that without any kind of research we're guessing, and such > research would be pretty hard to do considering we don't even know where a > lot of these people are. I think it just isn't sensible to go around > believing that all those people are lost Baha'is, who might show up at any > time. Most have almost certainly moved on. Yes, I know people can and do > show up, but thousands -- I'm doubting it. What I've seen are people
 that > drop out of sight very soon after declaring, and probably don't even think > about getting themselves off the rolls.
 >
 > I'm not advocating that people be tossed off the rolls for not showing up > to Feast, for heaven's sake. What I am saying is the fact that such a high > rate of people that abandon active involvement with the Baha'i Faith belies > the numbers that show continual and bouyant growth. People come in, take a > look around and say "I'm outta here!" I think it would be profitable to > consider the reasons why that happens, rather than just pretending it > doesn't.
 >
 > Love, Karen
 >
 >
 >

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
 Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
 Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 10:34 AM

>
 > One thing that I learned long ago - when there is a conflict, the two > sides are both to blame. I have yet to read anything from Juan,

Fred,

> or anyone on "that side" to fess up to their own mistakes.

You can only "fess up", Dave, if you believe you have done something wrong.

Juan and the others don't believe that they have, and quite frankly, I don't either. That isn't "spin"; that's just a statement of how a person feels about it. All Juan was ever guilty of was having opinions that the powers-that-be don't like, and it isn't even entirely clear what those opinions were that made them come after him. The administration, rather than making it clear what it expects, takes this "you ought to know better" approach, and assumes that a person with unconventional ideas has sinister motives. Through this whole history from the LA study class on you see the administration saying "Your tone isn't right", the liberals saying

"What the heck do you mean?" and the response is "Figure it out; you ought to know."

I guess the assumption is that a real Baha'i wouldn't have an independent thought, or if he did, would never say so out loud.

>

> Fred's site is biased and inaccurate because most of it is out of > context. If people want a more accurate depiction of those kinds of > problems then go read Karen Bacquet's work. I do not always agree

with > it but at least she tries to be more balanced.

Thanks for the plug. :-)

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Disowning and Shunning?

Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 11:53 PM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

Onandagus7 <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message news:20011005225943.21551.00001089@mb-ce.news.cs.com...

> Nimda:

> > Because my parents have absolutely refused > > > to disown me - as the Baha'i administration wished them to (which was

the > > > reason for the defamation published against me in the Australian

Baha'i

> > > Bulletin in the first place) - they have been targetted by the Baha'i

> > > administration (particularly through Peter Khan and his networks),

> >through

> >> > my mothers family, and are now being systematically shunned.

>

> Are the parents of "covenant-breaking" Baha'is encouraged to disown them?

Are

> the spouses of such Baha'is encouraged to leave them? Is shunning really ever > encouraged or practiced?

Encouraged? Heck, it's required, if a person has been declared a covenant-breaker -- the penalty for doing otherwise would be to be shunned oneself. I should clarify, though, that Nima has not been officially declared a covenant-breaker, but the tradition of shunning internal enemies carries over to others perceived as dangerous or disruptive. Not a pretty sight, is it?

And, if so, how is all of this reconciled with the > expansive Baha'i ideals of unity and inclusion beginning at the level of the > family?

The theory goes like this: The practice of shunning schismatics (which are what covenant-breakers generally are) preserves the unity of the Faith, which is considered to be essential to its mission of unifying mankind. The history of it is that Baha'u'llah commanded all Baha'is to turn to 'Abdul-Baha as leader and interpreter of the Faith, but a younger brother disputed his authority and schism threatened. The naming of schismatics as "covenant-breakers" and the practice of shunning began as a way to prevent the Faith from splitting under rather perilous circumstances, but the legacy continues. Most Baha'is view the shunning of covenant-breakers as a fundamental commandment, and see CBs as being spiritually diseased.

>

> If Baha'is do shun and disown, then they are not trying to promote unity

among > humankind, they are trying to promote unity within the faith, which is a > different thing altogether.

Yes, well, Baha'is regard it as being pretty much as a matter of the Faith can't unite the world if it is not united itself.

Every religion does this. I thought that what was > distinctive about the Baha'i faith is that it promoted unity among all

the > children of God, _not_ just among the "faithful."

Well, some Baha'is are more tolerant than others. As in any scriptural religion, commandments can be read in different ways, and some can be stricter or looser about keeping them. Some Baha'is can be downright fanatical about "protecting the Faith" and draw lines between those "firm in the Covenant" and those not. There are others who are more flexible in their attitudes.

>
> Any thoughts?
>
> Matt:
> >Baha'u'llah specifically said not to 'shun the followers of > >other religions'
>
> Is this same tolerance still extended to them if they are ex-Baha'is?
BTW, does > anyone have the source on this?

Yes, the House of Justice recently made a statement on those who have withdrawn from the faith. In general, they are just supposed to be treated with the same tolerance as any non-Baha'is. However, there are some "former members whose actions are seriously destructive" who are to be "left to themselves". That latter comment can be misinterpreted on a popular level as an order to shun.

Love, Karen
>
> Don Bradley,
> investigating the Baha'i faith.

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Unity and Contention
Date: Friday, October 05, 2001 11:26 PM

--
"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah
Onandagus7 <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message
news:20011005224916.21551.00001088@mb-ce.news.cs.com...
> Hi again,
>
> I know that unity is the key principle of the Baha'i faith, so I am surprised > at the ferocity of the disagreements on this list. I'm not saying this list is > more contentious than most - it's probably par for the course considering

it's > an unmoderated list about religion. But I wouldn't have expected this level of > blasting, given the core Baha'i principle. The faith that was intended to be a > cause of unity often obviously is not. How typical is this of Baha'i's > relations with their critics? Do they tend to be as tendentious with their > critics as Muslims and Christians are with one another, or as Mormons and > anti-Mormons are, or as Catholics and Evangelicals? Or are they about as > argumentative over religion as anyone else?

Dear Don,

I think precisely because of our emphasis on unity, many thoughts
and feelings are kind of "buried" in our community life, and face-to-face encounters. On the Internet, though, they've been openly voiced and divisions in opinion and approach to the Faith have been revealed.
Some people are shocked at the opinions; others are shocked about certain actions that the administration has taken -- that they never knew about until getting into cyberspace. Baha'is, in spite of the tolerant principles promoted by their Faith, can be as dogmatic, or even fundamentalist, as the adherents of any other religion. There's no easy road to unity -- some think it means people just have to shut themselves up and assent to what the community decides to do; others feel like the best route to unity is toleration of diversity. As you can see, we're still working on it.
However, I believe this kind of openness about what we think and feel
is healthier than the pretended unity that requires the stifling of the individual.

Love, Karen

>

> Don Bradley

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Unity and Contention

Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 2:42 PM

> >Baha'is, in spite of the tolerant principles > >promoted by their Faith, can be as dogmatic, or even fundamentalist, as
the > >adherents of any other religion.
>
> That's the impression I'm getting. I still think this leaves Baha'is a cut > above, say, evangelical Christians. (Better to be dogmatic in proclaiming world

> unity and human equality than in opposing the new world order and damning > non-believers to eternal fire.) Still, one would hope such an open faith
would > inspire a more open faithful.

Well, that's one reason why, even though I'm on the outside looking in, I'm still hanging around. I'm a believer in Baha'u'llah and in His teachings.
Unfortunately, the dogmatism I mentioned isn't about the social principles, but about authority relationships within the Faith itself. When it comes to our actual beliefs, theology, principles etc. there really isn't all that much difference between different Baha'is -- it all comes down to how you feel about the administrative system. Believe it or not, that's what has Baha'is at each other's throats. Religionists have fought over stupider things, though -- look at Christian history.
>
> So, you're saying unity in diversity is your watchword? Sounds heretical
;-)

Oh, I'm a heretic all right. :-) I'm tolerant of differing viewpoints, a passionate believer in justice, and would rather have issues out on the table rather than shoved under the carpet. Makes a bad Baha'i, according to some people. :-)

Love, Karen

>
> Don Bradley
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: UHJ letter on withdrawals (for Don)
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 10:27 PM

--
"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah
Onandagus7 <onandagus7@cs.com> wrote in message
news:20011006215400.16563.00002399@mb-fb.news.cs.com...
> Thanks Karen.
>
> Is the UHJ generally more reasonable than many in the Baha'i community
itself?

Hoo boy! Have you asked a question! In all fairness, I would have to say
yes. In the particular instances that we've been speaking of, I don't think
the House of Justice approves of people looking for enemies and covenant-breakers under the bed, or in people being treated as CBs that have not been declared so. At least, that's what I see from public statements. The problem is that some of these statements can be taken more than one way. How does one decide who is a "former member whose actions are seriously destructive"? "Leave them to themselves" can be seen as "don't hang around and argue with them" or as "avoid them like the plague." I have also heard of instances where warnings about certain people have circulated in more of a backdoor way -- not through public statements. So some individual members of the UHJ may be less moderate than some of their collective statements would suggest. Sometimes there are wheels within wheels going on, and I honestly don't know very much about how the gentlemen in Haifa think.

However, in the areas of free expression and its attitude towards academics and scholarship, I find the UHJ something less than "reasonable", and have said so many times. Also, since I'm one of those who has resigned membership but still retained my faith, one of those "self-contradictory" types they are talking about, I was less than delighted with this letter when it came out. And, in fact, I think the presence of unenrolled Baha'is on the Internet is one reason they decided to make this statement right now. Some people took it as an outright threat. I don't know what I think, and decided I'm not going to worry about it.

If you're investigating the faith, Don, I would encourage you to go back to Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha and not get caught up in the administrative stuff so much. That can be a downer even for us old-timers.:-)

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: UHJ letter on withdrawals (for Don)
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 2:28 PM

4 April 2001

To all National Spiritual Assemblies

Dear Baha'i Friends,

The International Teaching Centre has sought elucidation of issues concerning the attitude of Baha'is and Baha'i institutions towards those who have withdrawn from the Faith.

In response, we have provided the following comments, which are being sent to you for your information and guidance. You are free to share this letter with the believers under your jurisdiction as you wish.

One's beliefs are an internal and personal matter; no person or institution has the right to exert compulsion in matters of belief. Since there is a wide range of meanings in the Sacred Scriptures, there are bound to be different ways in which individuals understand many of the Baha'i teachings. Nevertheless, it is necessary for the viability of the Baha'i community that its members share a common understanding of essentials. This implies a commitment by each member to function within the framework established by such an understanding.

This framework includes, for example, cognizance of the existence of a Divine Revelation brought by Baha'u'llah, the Manifestation of God for this age, and acceptance of the two primary duties prescribed by God, as expressed in the Kitab i Aqdas, the Most Holy Book of the Baha'i Revelation. These are: "recognition of Him Who is the Dayspring of His Revelation and the Fountain of His laws," and observance of "every ordinance of Him Who is the Desire of the world. These twin duties," the Aqdas firmly states, "are inseparable. Neither is acceptable without the other."

'Abdu'l Baha, Whom Baha'u'llah appointed as the Interpreter of His writings, reaffirms these fundamentals of Baha'i belief. In His Will and Testament He writes: "This is the foundation of the belief of the people of Baha (may my life be offered up for them): 'His Holiness, the Exalted One (the Bab), is the Manifestation of the Unity and Oneness of God and the Forerunner of the Ancient Beauty. His Holiness the Abha Beauty (may my life be a sacrifice for His steadfast friends) is the Supreme Manifestation of God and the Dayspring of His Most Divine Essence. All others are servants unto Him and do His bidding.'"

It is within the context of these statements of basic belief and practice that membership in the Baha'i Faith is determined. Acknowledging that the matter of ascertaining the qualification of a true believer is a delicate and complex question, Shoghi Effendi, the appointee of 'Abdu'l Baha as Guardian of the Cause and authorized interpreter of its teachings, set down for Spiritual Assemblies the principal factors that must be taken into consideration before deciding whether a person may be regarded as a true believer or not: "Full recognition of the station of the Forerunner, the Author, and the True Exemplar of the Baha'i Cause, as set forth in 'Abdu'l Baha's Testament; unreserved acceptance of, and submission to, whatsoever has been revealed by their Pen; loyal and steadfast adherence to every clause of our Beloved's sacred Will; and close association with the spirit as well as the form of the present day Baha'i administration throughout the world...."

Viewed in the light of these texts, a statement that one wishes to withdraw from the Baha'i community, but not from the Faith, is seen to be self contradictory. The Baha'i community must be seen in its proper light. The necessity for its existence as an inseparable element of the Faith itself is explained by the stated purpose of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh: to bring about a Divine Civilization. The embodiment of that purpose and of the spirit breathed by Baha'u'llah into the world is the Order He has ordained, to which He refers in the Most Holy Book in asserting: "The world's equilibrium hath been upset through the vibrating influence of this most great, this new World Order. Mankind's ordered life hath been revolutionized through the agency of this unique, this wondrous System the like of which mortal eyes have never witnessed."

Normally, a Spiritual Assembly is called upon to make a decision in such matters only as the result of an action by an individual, either in declaring his belief in Baha'u'llah, or in stating that he wishes to withdraw from the Faith, or, very rarely, in persistently promoting concepts which are clearly inconsistent with the essentials of membership outlined above.

Acceptance of the Faith is the voluntary act of an individual and is registered by the appropriate Baha'i institution unless it has good reason not to do so. Likewise, a Baha'i is free to leave the Faith voluntarily. When a member of the community informs the Assembly of his wish to withdraw, it would try to help him overcome whatever problems seem to be the cause of his desiring to take such a step. If he persists in his intention, the Assembly would normally accept the withdrawal unless there were grounds for suspecting that he is acting insincerely out of some ulterior motive, such as to violate a Baha'i law with impunity.

In spite of loving encouragement given by their Assemblies, not all Baha'is are active in the work of the community. This does not, of course, necessarily indicate withdrawal. An Assembly should carefully distinguish between those who are not active but still identify themselves with the Faith, and those whose inactivity indicates complete lack of interest and a wish to have nothing more to do with the Cause.

Once a person's resignation from the Faith has been accepted, his status is that of a non Baha'i and except as noted below his relationship with Baha'i institutions and individual believers is the same as that of any other non Baha'i. As in all human relationships, the closeness of this connection, and the warmth of friendship, depend upon personal factors.

Sometimes, after a person's withdrawal from the Cause has been accepted, it becomes evident that his statements were insincere and were made merely in order to evade Baha'i law. The Assembly need not take any overt action in such a case, but would note the matter in its records. In other words, it would have to be cautious about accepting a subsequent declaration of belief from this individual until satisfied that it is made in good faith. Also, depending upon the circumstances, the Assembly might require him to rectify the action, taken in violation of Baha'i law, which was the motive for his withdrawing from the Faith.

An analogous situation arises when a person who is engaged in some activity which he suspects would result in his being declared a Covenant breaker withdraws from the Faith under the impression that this step would prevent such an outcome. The Universal House of Justice may conclude that the withdrawal provides adequate protection of the community from the individual in question. However, if he persists, following his withdrawal, in trying to undermine the Covenant or joins forces with Covenant breakers, he may be judged to have broken the Covenant, and the friends would be told to have no association with him. Each such case would be considered in the context of its specific circumstances.

There is one other condition which should be mentioned. There are certain former Baha'is whose actions do not necessarily constitute Covenant breaking, but are seriously destructive. Where such people have shown that they are impervious to explanations or exhortations from the Baha'i institutions, continued association with them can be burdensome and can exert a spiritually corrosive effect on the faith of believers. In such cases the Head of the Faith may simply advise the Baha'is to leave them to their own devices.

Thus, there are exceptional cases in which a former believer's spiritual attitude to the Faith may, to various degrees, create an estrangement between him and the Baha'is. In general, however, a person who has withdrawn from the Faith is regarded as being among the generality of humankind with whom the Baha'is are enjoined to associate "in joy and fragrance".

With loving Baha'i greetings,

cc: International Teaching Centre
Continental Boards of Counsellors Counsellors

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Disowning and Shunning?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 2:13 PM

>
> >And, if so, how is all of this reconciled with the > >> expansive Baha'i ideals of unity and inclusion beginning at the level
of
> >the > >> family?
> >
> >The theory goes like this: The practice of shunning schismatics (which are

> >what covenant-breakers generally are) preserves the unity of the Faith, > >which is considered to be essential to its mission of unifying mankind.
>
> LOL. But every faith stigmatizes its "apostates" in order to preserve > internal unity so it can fulfill its God-ordained purpose for humanity.
If > Baha'is make an exception to their unity principles for heretics or > schismatics, then they guarantee that universal unity won't come about by > dividing the families and communities in their own midst

Well, just to clarify -- a covenant-breaker isn't an apostate. There's not supposed to be any stigma on those who leave the Faith; in fact, those who disagree with administration policy are actually encouraged to leave rather than buck the status quo. Covenant-breakers are schismatics who advocate an alternative kind of authority. Most of those regarded as "covenant-breakers" are followers of a person who laid claim to the Guardianship after Shoghi Effendi's death, which are themselves divided into several splinter groups. However, it is not unheard of for a person to be named CB, or threatened with being named so, for other reasons.
>
> Why shouldn't "unity in diversity" be the "watchword" within the faith,
as > well as without?

It's supposed to be the watchword within the Faith. You are exactly right.

>
>
> >> Most Baha'is view the shunning of covenant-breakers as a > >fundamental commandment, and see CBs as being spiritually diseased.
>
> Wow. So much for not dividing humanity into "clean" and "unclean" groups.

Yes, Baha'u'llah explicitly got rid of the idea of ritual uncleanness, especially that with regard to "unbelievers". Indeed, He said that anything which causes human beings to shun one another had been abrogated. But the circumstances that brought about the practice of shunning arose later. It's hard to explain the kind of gut-reaction Baha'is have about covenant-breaking. The CB is a kind of "anti-Baha'i" -- claiming to believe in Baha'u'llah, yet attempting to undermine the unity which is the Faith's mission. It isn't at all rational. Out in the real world, most Baha'is never run into covenant-breakers because these splinter groups are pretty tiny. It is much more common to run into their literature, which, if it causes someone to ask the wrong questions, can throw a community into a panic.

- >
- > The early schisms make it easy to see _why_ shunning got started. But couldn't
- > this just be viewed as a mistake, or a practice necessitated by the early days
- > when the faith was struggling to survive? Nowadays, there are plenty of
- > religious communities that tolerate a broad spectrum of participants without
- > shattering into a thousand splinter groups.

Well, that's the problem. It is written into the texts -- 'Abdul-Baha said to shun covenant-breakers therefore that's what Baha'is do. There is a sense, especially among conservative Baha'is, that a person's spiritual health is measured by "loyalty to the Covenant", which these days means the House of Justice. On one forum, I once related a story that put the administration in a less-than-positive light, and was told that I must be either mentally ill or a covenant-breaker. That's what makes things so difficult for those of us that see problems in the administration -- belief in Baha'u'llah is supposed to be inextricably tied to acceptance to whatever the UHJ says. It's a terrible thing to deal with when you find that body doing things that prove it to be something less than infallible. The assumption is that if you really believe in Baha'u'llah, then you have to accept whatever 'Abdul-Baha', Shoghi Effendi, and the UHJ has said. I finally cut the Gordian knot and practice my faith privately, outside the administration.

As far as shunning -- I don't, although I've never met a covenant-breaker anywhere but on the Internet. But I do refuse to get into extended discussions about the Guardianship. Since that is their main issue, that usually just puts an end to the conversation. Someone like Nima I would never even consider shunning, even when I was an enrolled Baha'i -- he is a critic of the Faith, but he is not a covenant-breaker, and I don't believe in "unofficial" CBs, and never did.

>
> >> If Baha'is do shun and disown, then they are not trying to promote unity > >among > >> humankind, they are trying to promote unity within the faith, which is
a > >> different thing altogether.
> >
> >Yes, well, Baha'is regard it as being pretty much as a matter of the Faith
> >can't unite the world if it is not united itself.
>
> Again, Baha'is seek unity in diversity for the world as a whole, right? So why > not begin by building _that_ sort of unity within the family and the faith
> community?

Sometimes, what it is, that the broad principles of the Faith say one thing, but specific passages in the texts say another. I prefer the broad principles, don't you? Because CBs advocate a different sort of authority
within the Faith, the differences are considered irreconcilable -- by creating a schism, they've done the unforgiveable.

>
> >
> >Yes, the House of Justice recently made a statement on those who have > >withdrawn from the faith. In general, they are just supposed to be treated > >with the same tolerance as any non-Baha'is
>
> Good. Would you happen to know how I can access this?

I can dig it up and post it for you.

Love, Karen

>
> Thanks,
>
> Don Bradley

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Disowning and Shunning?
Date: Saturday, October 06, 2001 8:40 PM

>
> I think the most insidious, paranoid thought that runs through a Baha'is
> head is: "You're doing it wrong."

Dear Craig,

Here I would whole-heartedly agree. It can be stifling sometimes.

>
> I remember once a young gentleman who, in a good-natured mock display of > gallantry, sought to kiss the hand of a middle-aged Persian woman, only > to find she'd yanked her hand away and left the room, more embarrassed > than he. Someone pulled him aside and told him the kissing of hands was > forbidden.

My understanding is that the kissing of hands is forbidden because it was a kind of show of subservience -- you'd kiss the hand of some all-high religious muckety-muck. In a Western context, it is kind of a show of gallantry to kiss the hand of a lady -- it's a cultural mix-up. I'd bet my bottom dollar that gentlemen don't kiss ladies' hands (or anything else) in the Middle East; it could probably get you into big trouble real fast.

>
> So, I can understand why a community would be thrown "into a panic." >>

Well, it actually happened in my community; it was pretty awful.

>
> The word "conservative" seems so incredibly loaded.>>

Baha'i forums are the only place I've ever been where using the terms "liberal" and "conservative" can get you called all kinds of nasty things.

At the mere mention of such terms I've been called "divisive" and accused of trying to "politicize the Faith" -- all I'm really trying to do is describe a situation. If somebody knows better terms, I'd like to hear them.

I know it can be > restrained or cautious, which I think is how you're using it. But it > begs comparison to the term "liberal" which is usually used to describe > those voicing opposition to Baha'i administration. In intellectual > circles, "conservative" connotes dogma and closed mindedness, while > "liberal" connotes exploration and open mindedness. And of course
in > politics, this word can bring conversation to a grinding halt depending > on the company.

Yes, but in politics people will often proudly label themselves liberal or conservatives. Some Christians proudly boast of being fundamentalist. When I use the term, I'm thinking in terms of approaches to religion -- there are liberal Christians and conservative Christians. Conservative Christians tend to be more scripturally literal, antagonistic to certain aspects of modern life and certain the world is falling apart, opposed to evolutionary theory etc. Liberals tend to be more tolerant, flexible, more likely to accept the findings of biblical criticism etc. Putting that in a Baha'i context, it generally centers around (although there are other issues, too) attitudes towards the administration. A liberal tends to see the UHJ's authority as more restricted; a conservative thinks it is infallible in everything it does; a fundamentalist practically worships it and thinks it's the center of the universe.

I see a spectrum of attitudes within the Faith, a continuum reaching from virtually extreme fundamentalism on the right to liberal on the left. Some individuals aren't easy to categorize; it's not always black-and-white.

>
> There are many avenues for consultation, which IMO is the best way to > voice opinions. I have no idea what your specific beef was with the UHJ, > but as you know, backbiting is one of the worst offences there is, and I > hear it every day from Baha'is, and fall into that behavior myself > (ah hem)... once in a very blue moon. I know some folks can get very > touchy about Baha'i criticism, and might even brand it as backbiting if > not couched in the most careful language.

Yes, I know. Nobody backbites as much as Baha'is do; we just piously pretend we don't. One of the unwritten Internet rules that amuses me to no end is that you can talk bad about someone as much as you like as long as you don't use their name. Somebody can mention "a certain Michigan professor" and talk about how terrible he is, but that's not backbiting even though everybody knows who is being talked about. I also don't like the term "backbiting" applied to institutions -- they are institutions; they make policy -- how can you discuss the policy if you can't voice disagreements without being accused of "backbiting"? If I think a certain decision is wrong, and I say so, that is not backbiting, even if I don't "couch it in the most careful language."

>
> I don't think it's said that the body is infallible, but that their > decisions are infallible, meaning that even if they do a complete 180 > down the road, they prayerfully carried out exactly what needed to be > done at the time.

Well, I've seen some decisions that I don't think God had anything to do with.

>
> It's a divinely guided body, and personally I think there's a difference > between strongly urging them to pursue a course of action in future, > even if it's in effect reversing a previous decision, and criticising > what's already been done.

Well, that's more open-minded than some.

>
> But didn't Baha'u'llah say you have to believe in 'Abdul-Baha', Shoghi > Effendi and the UHJ? Believe me, I'm not trying to wage a debate, I just > see the administrative loyalty (aka the Covenant) as part of the package.

Well, I'm not sure I'm in the mood to get into all that, so I'm not debating whether you want to wage one or not. I've explained why I think the way I do numerous times. You can look through the Google archives if you're curious. You can also look at my website:
<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

>
> Ah, that's probably enough on that. I enjoy reading your posts, Karen, > they're straightforward and sincere. I hope nothing I've written comes > off as hostile or self righteous. Wasn't my intention...

Thank you; I don't think you've said anything at all offensive.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Sunday, October 07, 2001 12:06 AM

> >> As the relative success of fundamentalism shows, such an approach has > >appeal
> >> to a number of people.
> >
> >The biggest influx of Baha'is was during the late 60's and early to mid > >70's. Are you saying these people were prone to fundamentalism?
>
> Actually yes! This is the time period when, as one religious scholar put it, we > saw "the revenge of God" - fundamentalist movements emerged or gained > considerable strength in virtually every major religion during this time > period. Despite - or perhaps because of - the counterculture movement of

the > 1960s, fundamentalism emerged as the counter-counterculture.

Don, you are very astute. For every Baby Boomer that dabbled in Eastern and alternative religions, there were ten who became "Jesus Freaks"-- the culture wars are, in a lot of ways, a war between Boomers. My grandmother shakes her head at how tongue-speakers and fundamentalists, once considered rather off-beat and lower-class in her day, are now so prominent and noisy.

The Baha'is have both fundamentalists and liberals -- the thing is, our big test is, can our "Unitarians" and "New Agers" live with our "Southern Baptists"? If you're a Christian, you can just go to the church across the street and don't have to live with those godless modernists and humanists and just stick to "Bible-believing" folks if you like. Or the liberals can leave the Bible-thumpers behind and go to their own church. But if you're a Baha'i, there's only one game in town. Until the Internet, the existence of these differing perspectives were kind of hidden -- now it's all out there in the bright light of day, and only time will tell if we really can accept unity in diversity, or if the Baha'i Faith will limit itself to a narrow perspective.

>

> Besides, even a person with very progressive views can hold those views > dogmatically. For instance, political liberals tend to be about as dogmatic in > holding their views as political conservatives are in holding theirs.

Well, my experience of Baha'i liberals is that they can be strident, but are seldom dogmatic. Their whole trip has been freedom of expression, so they aren't into anyone being shut up, or following a single view.

>

> And, finally, based on my very brief period of observing Baha'i Internet fora,

> I would say that the faith is a fundamentalist one. Any faith in which the > majority of the believers take virtually all the faith claims at face value and > in which they believe the authoritative sources are infallible is certainly > fundamentalist, at least in the broad sense. How is it fundamentalist to > believe _the Bible_ is infallible, but not to believe the decisions of the

UHJ

> (or Abdul-Baha, etc.) are infallible? If the latter is not fundamentalist, > neither is the former, and we would have little ground for describing anyone as > fundamentalist.

Oooo! Very good. The issue of infallibility is very complex; whole papers have been written on that. I'll get back to you on that other thread where you asked about it, when I can.

>
> I
> >heartily disagree. If all that mattered were "converts" and raw numbers, > >the Faith could morph itself into whatever the focus groups recommended > >(if it had the latitude to do so, which by definition of Baha'i Law, it > >doesn't). Besides, such catering to the mores of the time is a trap I > >think we've seen historically in other religions, that has led to > >confusion and division that adversely impacts us to this day.
>
> One of the things that leads to this division of which you speak is that > although there are multiple religions, each tends to hold its authoritative > sources up as infallible, "showing" clearly that the contrary views of the > other faiths are absolutely wrong. How is the Baha'i faith different in this > regard?

Oh my gosh! You are sharp. Again and again, the UHJ has said that an individual can't be allowed to push for his opinion within the Faith because that threatens to cause schism, but they are wrong, wrong wrong! What causes schism is the orthodox drawing lines between acceptable and unacceptable. Nothing will create schism faster than inflexible leadership. By trying to preserve the Faith in some kind of pristine and unchangeable form, they will either stunt it or divide it. Baha'is tend to think that their religion is different somehow, that these bad things that happened in other religions can't happen in ours. That's very dangerous thinking, in my view.

>
> >. IMO there is no more > >comprehensively laid-out set of administrative guidelines on Earth, to > >prevent the kind of infighting and division that effected nearly every > >other religion shortly after the ascension of its Founder.
>
> And yet, ironically, this itself seems to have become a source of infighting.
> The sort of social controls that tout infallible authority, censor publications

> about the faith, and advocate the shunning of certain dissidents are bound to > stir up the very resentments and complaints they seek to prevent.

Yes. Exactly. That's how I got to be on the outside of the Faith. I was horrified to find that the administration had done these things, and could not be part of an organization that supported that. Even worse, it is a betrayal of the teachings of Baha'u'llah that I believed, and still do believe in.

>

>

> >The "independent investigation of truth" calls for all to judge for > >themselves based on a fair and thorough examination of the facts.
In LA,

> >our former Auxiliary Board Member for Protection (who recently passed > >away) told me that oftentimes it's people with great abilities and > >intellect who sometimes let ego get the better of them, who start to > >eschew humility and try to wield intellectual power over others.

>

> This could be true. But it sounds fishy - like an ad hoc explanation that seeks > to avoid a more obvious, but less pleasant, possibility. If the smarter people > are having trouble believing everything they're told to, it's more likely that > something is wrong with those beliefs than that they are simply afflicted with > pride.

Yes. The ego charge is flung at intelligent people, and especially scholars who don't tow the line -- and people buy it just because those pointy-headed intellectual types make them uncomfortable anyway. Besides, how do you prove yourself free of ego? By shutting up and towing the line, of course.

Smart people are curious, they ask questions, they investigate, and they don't always accept an argument based on authority.

>

>

> >> Keep asking those questions, Don. They are most pertinent.

Amen!

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>

Subject: Re: Infallibility? (was Re: Disowning and Shunning?)

Date: Sunday, October 07, 2001 2:39 PM

> What is the basis for the infallibility claim? And how literally and broadly is > it taken? Are they, like the Pope is for Catholics, infallible only on matters > of faith and morals, or on everything? And given the non-prophetic status of > everyone since Bahauallah, and especially the UHJ, what is it that _makes_ them > infallible? Are they believed to operate under divine inspiration?
>
> As a sympathetic outsider, but an outsider nonetheless, this infallibility > claim is the most difficult one for me to swallow. To me it is simply absurd on > the face of it to claim infallibility for any human being. I find it difficult > to imagine even what the basis of the claim could be or how people could accept > it.>>

Dear Don,

As I said earlier, infallibility is a complex concept, and much has been written and said about it. A good explanation can be found both in "Some Answered Questions", and in the tablet of Ishraqat that's in the book I recommended to you before. Or, if you like, you can go to the site I gave you, and just put in "infallibility" in the search engine.

First of all, the term "ma'sum", which is translated as "infallibility" means something different from what the English word would imply. It doesn't so much mean "factual inerrancy" as it does "moral immaculacy" or "sinlessness". The "error" that an the infallible person is preserved from is not an error of fact, but moral error.

The Writings speak of two kinds of infallibility: essential or "the Most Great Infallibility", and infallibility that is described as "conferred" or "acquired". Essential infallibility is a quality of the Manifestation alone. Baha'u'llah clearly says that no one else has a share in it. Without that infallibility, a Manifestation couldn't be a Manifestation. It goes with the territory, so to speak. The sort of infallibility that the authorized interpreters of the revelation have is "conferred" infallibility -- which, as I understand it, is infallibility limited to a certain sphere. For example, 'Abdul-Baha would have that kind of infallibility when interpreting the Writings, but not necessarily when he is speaking in other matters such as science or history. Now, I should point out that many Baha'is do believe that everything that 'Abdul-Baha ever said

must be factually correct. I'm just giving you my understanding. The particular sphere given to the UHJ, for example, is legislation, and its infallibility would be limited to that -- again, that's just my view and there are a lot of Baha'is that would see every decision it makes as divinely guided. To me, to see 'Abdul-Baha, Shoghi Effendi, or the UHJ as completely infallible in all they every did or said is to put them on the level of the Manifestation -- who clearly said that no one has a share in the Most Great Infallibility. I have known Baha'is to put all their statements on virtually the same level -- to say Baha'u'llah said something when it was really 'Abdul-Baha or Shoghi Effendi who said it. Or to view these later interpretations as virtually the same as the Revelation itself.
I tend to make more of a distinction.

It sounds odd to say someone is "less infallible", but I see that as meaning "infallibility limited to a specific sphere of authority." I have known people to voice the opinion that it means only that the head of the Faith is "where the buck stops", i.e. that they have the final authority for making decisions about the Faith.

One interesting aspect is that Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha say that this lesser infallibility is given "to every holy soul" -- so this "conferred" or "acquired" infallibility is not limited to those who are supposed to possess it "officially". It can be seen as a spiritual quality that souls can potentially develop. That only makes sense if you see the word as meaning "freedom from sin" rather than "they never can be wrong".

I hope this helps clarify things.

Love, Karen

>
> >> Again, Baha'is seek unity in diversity for the world as a whole, right?
So
> >why > >> not begin by building _that_ sort of unity within the family and the faith > >> community?
> >
> >Sometimes, what it is, that the broad principles of the Faith say one thing, > >but specific passages in the texts say another. I prefer the broad > >principles, don't you?
>
> Very much. ;-)

>
> Don Bradley

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai
community
Date: Thursday, October 11, 2001 10:16 AM

--
">
> Then we are stuck. If people are mad at you then maybe - just maybe > something _is_ wrong. Take Juan - he is a sweet and intelligent man,
> but his fuse very short, and when riled he flies off the handle.
> Maybe if he controled the anger he would be able to see the other > sides point of view.

Dear Dave,

I don't see Juan's fuse as being all that short, and a good deal of his anger at the system is justifiable. If they had approached him in a rational way instead of assuming he had some kind of nefarious motives and threatening him, I think we'd have seen a whole different reaction.

>
> > That isn't "spin"; that's just a statement of how a person feels about it.
>
> Feel is spin - its emotional, not rational or objective. That does > not mean that it is invalid, but it does mean that it is biased.

Then what are we talking about here? You accused Juan of putting "spin" on his story -- that implies a deliberate kind of distortion. I sure don't find the AO approach as either "spin"-free or rational and objective. They have acted like people that are very afraid.

>
> > All Juan was ever guilty of was having opinions that the > > powers-that-be don't like, and it isn't even entirely clear what those > > opinions were that made them come after him.
>
> Uh, I think the opinion that Baha'u'llah got his ideas from his > contact with a modernist philosophy rather than from God might have > something to do with it.

In other words, writing history like an academic instead of an apologist.
As I have said again and again, academic history doesn't say anything about God one way or the other; that's not the historian's job. If this is really

the reason they went after Juan, then all the UHJ claims that it supports Baha'i scholarship are nothing but lies. Talk about spin! It's just the same old song of fundamentalists everywhere -- write history that defends a religion and you're a good guy; write history that critically examines it from solid historical evidence, then you are a godless secular humanist out to destroy the foundation of people's faith.

>
> > The administration, rather than making it clear what it expects, takes > > this "you ought to know better" approach, and assumes that a person with > > unconventional ideas has sinister motives.
>
> Motives are not important in this case. As to the "you ought to know > better" approach - that comes from our lack of clergy, the call to not > point out the sins of others, and the call to avoid conflict and > contention. If the AO came to Juan and handed him a laundry list of > offenses he would complain that the AO is a bunch of judgemental > so-and-so's who ignore Baha'u'llah's command to not find faults in > others. It's almost a no-win situation.

Well, according to Juan's account there was a "laundry list" of questions he was asked. I was thinking of the LA study class and Dialogue, as well as the disenrollments. Personally, if they are going to come after people like this I'd rather they were upfront about what's bugging them, rather than this vague stuff about "tone". Even better would be for them to leave people alone to think for themselves and exchange ideas freely.

>
> > Through this whole history from the LA study class on you see the > > administration saying "Your tone isn't right", the liberals saying "What
the > > heck do you mean?" and the response is "Figure it out; you ought to know."
> > I guess the assumption is that a real Baha'i wouldn't have an independent > > thought, or if he did, would never say so out loud.
>
> No - independent thought is not the issue. Tone is. They are spot on > about that. Trouble is we often take the "sin-covering-eye-thing" too > far. In any consultation, indeed in any communication, we must follow > Baha'u'llah's exhortations about speech by using tact and wisdom, > words as mild as milk, etc. Tone mattered to Baha'u'llah enough that > he instructed us on how we should use it.

What the hell are you talking about? So, if you can't figure out the right "tone", you can get nailed -- you have to read the minds of the powerful before you dare utter a word. It's one thing to exhort people to use "tact and wisdom"; it's quite another to push people who aren't sufficiently "tactful" out of their religion. Besides, "tact" is very much in the minds of the beholder. I really don't find a great lack of tact in these guys' pre-crackdown statements, at least, for the most part -- afterwards, the tact sort of dissolves. But in judging these cases, I think you need to look at what's said and done before institutional action was taken against someone, not the angry statements afterwards. What astonishes me sometimes, is just how fairly mild statements can be taken as somehow underhanded.

>

> I really mean it Karen - your work is good. I wish you could also > report on the AO's P-O-V but I understand that they won't exactly > welcome your questions.

Yes, I would actually prefer that they did answer my questions. For some things, publicly-released institutional letters are probably sufficient, but in some things the other side just remains hazy. For example, the decision to go after Dialogue; and the administration's side of the Talisman crackdown. But nobody's talking. So, defenders can slam me with "you aren't giving the other side" -- but they can't slam me with not making an effort to get the other side. It galls me though; whenever there is any complaint about any Baha'i official or institution, somebody jumps in with "Well, we don't know the other side" -- that's hardly fair when the "other side" is carefully hidden. We are just supposed to assume, I suppose, that anybody the institutions go after just deserves it.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Friday, October 12, 2001 8:08 PM

,

>

> First off - we do not have a recorded transcript of his conversation > with the folks who came to speak with him. >>

You're damned right we don't! The two people who insisted that any face-to-face interview be tape recorded got turned down. And Birkland sure isn't talking about the incident -- so again, we are just supposed to ignore the accounts of those threatened by him in the name of "we don't know the other side". Sure, two eyewitnesses would be better, and a tape recording would be best of all. I wish they had all, en masse, insisted on having the meetings tape recorded -- but that's 20/20 hindsight. The two who did so already had experience with how Baha'i jurisprudence works; the others were more naive. So far, we've got four public accounts from people who say that they were threatened with being named CBs for their email messages, two letters warning that "the effect would be to bring you into conflict with the Covenant", and one giant "no comment" from the prime investigator of the Talisman posters. That's the information we have to work with.

>
> > > Feel is spin - its emotional, not rational or objective. That does > > > not mean that it is invalid, but it does mean that it is biased.
> >
> > Then what are we talking about here? You accused Juan of putting "spin" on > > his story -- that implies a deliberate kind of distortion. I sure don't find > > the AO approach as either "spin"-free or rational and objective. They have > > acted like people that are very afraid.
>
> Go back and look at the statement and you will find that he chose > words that would invoke a specific mental image of the encounter.
>>

It was his experience, Dave, and a really bad one. What sort of "mental image" was he supposed to evoke?

>
>
> > As I have said again and again, academic history doesn't say anything about > > God one way or the other; that's not the historian's job.
>
> So perhaps it would have been better not to even try. If you want to > do an academic study of Baha'u'llah as a historic figure, as a > believer, then don't try to explain where His ideas came from. Look > at His life and the impact of His teachings. If a Baha'i academic > writes something that patently contradicts the claims of Baha'u'llah > then a problem is sure to arise.
>

> The academic must choose - loyalty to Baha'u'llah or loyalty to the > academy.

This is pure, unadulterated fundamentalism of a kind that leaves me almost speechless with outrage. Maybe somebody should have told these guys about that before they answered Shoghi Effendi's call for the youth to study fields related to the Faith at University. They were fooled into hooking up with a religion that claims to support scholarship and the life of the mind, and free inquiry, only to be told "Uh, uh, you can't go there." Maybe the administration should just be honest about what it is, and tell young people not to study secular humanist history and you can go ahead and build some kind of brainless enclave off-limits to intelligent people. It won't have anything to do with Baha'u'llah, but nobody will be rocking the boat.

>

>

> > So, if you can't figure out the right "tone", you can get nailed -- you have > > to read the minds of the powerful before you dare utter a word.

>

> No, but the wrong "tone" can make any bad situation even worse. Look > at Alison's actions from the P-O-V of the UHJ. She has filed suit > against the Baha'is in spite of the clear instruction to make every > effort to resolve conflicts inside the Baha'i Community. Her "tone" > is causing entrenchment. Others who have met the same kind of > pressure as Juan took a milder "tone" and were able to work out their > differences with the AO.

They booted her out, Dave; they aren't interested in any discussion.

>

>

> Here is a suggestion - try to put yourself in their position. Try to > understand their point-of-view. Talk to folks like Pat or I and ask > us what we think the AO saw. That might help.

I can't, Dave. It's just too idiotic. I've read their letters about these events, and they are just stupid. They are going to look that way to the non-Baha'i world, too, and if I have anything to do with it, the non-Baha'i world will see them.

Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Thursday, October 25, 2001 10:19 AM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

>

> Opinions are not banned. Methods of expressing an opinion that cause

> disunity or the undermining of the AO is the problem.>>

I don't buy this at all. If the opinions being voiced were considered acceptable by Baha'i officialdom, I don't believe that there would be all this complaining about "method" and "parties" to promote them. In Birkland's letter to Steve Scholl's, there were several opinions mentioned that were considered inappropriate.

> > > Anything that is placed in an email on a forum should be considered to > > > be public knowledge. By posting to a group you are essentially giving > > > up privacy. You are publishing. I always assume that what I post

> > > will be read by folks other than my intended audience.>>

> >

> > So, he was just supposed to figure that out ahead of time? And, by the way,

> > he retracted the statement -- and was punished anyway.

>

> That is what happens when you do something wrong - you must accept the > punishment that comes with the transgression. You can't break a > criminal law and then avoid punishment by apologizing.

That wasn't the deal -- the threat was "retract or lose your rights".

He

retracted and lost his rights. Again, the injustice comes in from basically making the punishment ex post facto -- everyone knows one can lose voting rights from clear violations of Baha'i law -- there is no Baha'i law concerning expression. Penalties in this country cannot be imposed ex post

facto, even in criminal law. This guy was just participating in an email discussion, shared a personal experience, then Wham! he's on the carpet for
it.

> > Whether or not we can move forward depends on what they do next. If they > > stop nailing people for their online activities, eventually these events

> > will be far enough into the past where they'll have been all talked out.

>

> Karen - they have stopped. Its been what - nearly 2 years?

About a year and a half. I'm not convinced they've stopped. After all,
it was nearly three years between the disenrollments of Mike and Alison. It's a positive sign, but I'm not ready to breathe a sigh of relief just yet.

>
> > However, if they take action against anyone else, everything from Dialogue > > onward will be regurgitated again and again.
>
> Why open up old wounds like that? What is the point?>>

Because it's all related. It's a pattern of behavior.

.
>
> First of all they are not censors. I object to that characterization.>>

When someone in authority says "No, you can't say that", it's censorship.
Let's call a spade a spade here.

> Pre-publication review was a policy introduced by Abdul-Baha and > endorsed by Shoghi Effendi. It is a temporary measure and is not even > applicable to all media since the Internet is exempt. It helps us all > to present an accurate image of the Baha'i Faith.>>

And whose "image" is accurate, Dave? There are a myriad ways to look at the Revelation -- not just one simplistic "official" way. I've been noticing the conversations on Baha'i Studies about the Ruhi curriculum and how thinking people who won't subject themselves to this kind of mindless rote learning are dismissed as "arrogant", and talented people aren't allowed to teach at Baha'i schools unless they conform to the big push for this program. It's frightening, Dave. They don't want people who think -- they just want a bunch of trained clones like out of some dystopian nightmare. The title "Brave New World" for Baha'i satire is more accurate than I thought.

> >
> > Fine. But they don't have the right to control freedom of expression in > > unofficial venues. I really don't understand this idea that intelligent > > people have to expect that everything they say is somehow an official Baha'i > > statement.
>
> Karen - I am talking about published works and public statements.>>

Dave, you were basically saying that because someone has a Ph.d, that anything they say about the Faith implicitly claims to be authoritative.

Sure, it's public space, and lots of people say lots of things about the Faith, but I don't see anywhere explicitly claiming to have the authoritative viewpoint. Yet this charge is leveled at the people who got into trouble with Talisman. Why? Because they are intelligent and articulate and have credibility. So they don't even have to claim authority -- they are suspected of doing so just by virtue of who they are.
That isn't right.

> Whoso interpreteth what hath been sent down from the heaven of > Revelation, and altereth its evident meaning, he, verily, is of them > that have perverted the Sublime Word of God, and is of the lost ones > in the Lucid Book.>>

"It's meaning can never be exhausted". Take your pick.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Sunday, October 21, 2001 5:50 PM

Dear Dave,

I have been thinking about our discussion about the academic way of looking at the Manifestations vs. looking at them only through a believer's eyes. I think perhaps I should explain some of my own history about that, and why this issue is important to me. Because, in my own life, intellectual investigation has been an important part of my spiritual and personal growth.

I came into the Baha'i Faith at the age of 24 with a naive, but heartfelt belief in the unity of religion, a love/hate relationship with the Bible, and the belief that one's search for truth and spiritual meaning is the most important thing in one's life. I rejected the Christianity of my childhood because of its exclusivity, and insistence that you should just turn your brain off and believe even when things don't make any sense. (I was not really that aware, at the time, of more liberal forms of Christianity) I had dabbled in New Age, and Hindu thought, which appealed to me because it's tolerance and view of spiritual development, but found it unsatisfying on an emotional level.

Then Baha'u'llah came into my life. It was, in some ways, like a homecoming, with that devotional aspect of spirituality brought back to me. The Bible was brought back to me, too. I avoided, for a lot of years looking at the Bible, because, while I didn't exactly believe in it, I didn't exactly not believe in it either. The symbolic way of looking at scripture came as a revelation, and allowed me to accept the truth of scripture without being required to believe things I thought were nonsense. So I read a lot of books that look at Jesus from a Baha'i angle, but soon became dissatisfied with the elaborate symbolizing that they did, along with the tendency of Baha'is to look at the Bible as if just about everything in it referred to the Baha'i Revelation. I felt that the Christian accusation of "scripture-twisting" kind of had a point. I ran into Udo Schaeffer's "Answer to a Theologian", and decided to look back into early Christian history to see if I could find the Baha'i Jesus. Thus my introduction to looking at religious history from a more academic angle.

Well, I didn't find the Baha'i Jesus -- indeed, I found that there were no simple answers at all. Instead of being distressed by that, I was fascinated. There was not just one pure early Christianity, but a variety of people with vastly differing views that considered themselves the followers of Jesus. And there sure wasn't just one viewpoint of Jesus from the scholars who wrote about him, either. Some would say things diametrically opposed to each other. But I found I liked that academic voice, points of view that hung together and made sense -- that were content to leave an empty tomb empty and not offer any comments about how it got that way.

And I'm still learning: Partly because of a class I took as sort of a filler when I was getting my credential, and because of some things I've seen from Michael Sours on Baha'i Studies, I'm no longer so harsh about all that symbolizing -- I now realize that this is actually a very traditional way of looking at scripture and that fundamentalist-style literalism is actually more of an innovation. I'm also letting go of the "Well, a Manifestation didn't write that, therefore I can dismiss it" attitude.

So what does all this have to do with looking at Baha'u'llah academically? It has influenced the way I think and the way I approach things. It did not destroy my faith because my investigations into Christian history did not exactly coincide with the Baha'i view. It does not destroy my faith that Buddha doesn't fit into the Baha'i paradigm of a succession of Manifestations of God. When I first read "Modernity and the Millennium" I did not say "Oh, this guy is saying that Baha'u'llah was influenced by this and that; he must be an unbeliever trying to undermine the Faith. (I read the book before ever meeting Juan.) No, I thought it was amazing -- it hung together and made sense, and it only confirmed for me just how wonderful Baha'u'llah is -- even from the simply human aspect.

Now, I have gone through all this on a very naive level -- it took me years to discover things that the real intellectuals found out in their undergraduate days. But what I have kept, through it all, is curiosity and the mental flexibility to accept new ideas, and an appreciation for looking at religious figures within the context from which they arose. That has been important to me -- so the idea that Baha'is should be rejected from the community for doing that just appalls me. Looking at things in that way has enriched my faith, and my life.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - TERRORISM 5 - Testimonies re US bahai community
Date: Monday, October 22, 2001 4:54 PM

>
> My objection is that there is an inherent hypocrisy created when in > one breath we say that Baha'u'llah was the Revealer of God's Word
> and > then we say Baha'u'llah was a skilled philosopher who made this all > up.
>
> Can you see why I would object to attributing Baha'u'llah's words to > the people with whom he had contact?>>

Yes, but I don't see that Juan has done that. He hasn't done anything that's all that different from what scholars who study Jesus have done. For one thing, if you are studying a religious figure, the fact that he made a claim to a revelation is a historical fact, so any attempt to "reduce him to a philosopher" would be unhistorical. One doesn't come away from M&M with the impression that Baha'u'llah just took a bunch of good ideas and cobbled them together to make a religion -- that's not what Juan said. Have you actually read that book yet, Dave?

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: WARNING - Fundamentalist Deception runs rife on trb & arb
Date: Friday, October 26, 2001 9:55 AM

>
> Perhaps it's because BIGS tend to be cloistered from the outside world
> that > they actually believe the system is democratic. The biggest problem > they > have and fail to equate with democracy is the feeling that the AO is > not > accountable to the electorate.>>

Not to mention freedom of expression and the free flow of information. I pointed out to this guy that all sorts of repressive regimes hold elections -- just because Baha'is vote every year doesn't make the system democratic. But it goes right past him. Never let truth get in the way of a good sales pitch! I initially found his approach interesting because, unlike most fundamentalists, he didn't harp on the Covenant, basically implying that the system gets its authority by reflecting the will of the majority. But as time as gone on, I see he just keeps repeating the same things over and over, in spite of anything I say. Virtually everything he posts to anything on the list is "Yes, the Baha'i Faith teaches that, just like your religion, except it has the answers to all the world's problems." He keeps pointing out to Christians how "disunited" their religion is, and you know, the Christians don't really care!

> >
> > Yes. That's what I was saying -- every sanction against people on
> the > > Internet just adds fuel to the fire. I don't know if they've > figured that > > out yet. It has been a year and a half since the last outrage -- > Alison's > > disenrollment -- only time will tell if they've caught on to how > futile
> that > > approach is.
>
> I think they realise it but won't admit it. But that at least is > progress -
> the sign of an ever advancing civilisation?>>

Well, I'm in wait and see mode. They may yet have a few tricks up their sleeves. All the outrageous things seem to happen in the spring, so I'm waiting to see if they do anything this next year.

>
> > > Its biggest mistake was not to put review on the Internet and > train up a > > > corps of cyber warriors. But since there is no debate within the > AO the > > > cadre of experienced debaters does not exist.>>

> >
> > Yes, even now Susan's the best they've got. And she hasn't been in
> the > > trenches much lately -- new job and everything, probably.
>
> Ah come on! Not the "Grand Old Duke of York" who "led his men up
the > hill and down again" ... You're not serious that she's the best!
> There must be better... somewhere!

Have you seen any other conservative that's better? Susan, at least,
can hold up her end in a debate, and she's unpredictable, which is a rare quality among the traditionalists. In fact, she's sometimes at odds with the real fundamentalist brain-dead types; they annoy her. I sometimes wonder if she'll ever figure out someday that she's smarter than the higher-ups she's defending.

>
> I'm subscribed - the chat's delivered rather than having to go to the > Post Box to collect it. Yeah - they're back on the topic again except > that far from arguing that there should be a Guardian they're arguing > about who that Guardian should be. The solution is so obvious it's > actually painful to read all of this! But where theology flies in, > rationality flies out!>>

Yeah, I noticed that. The list was ostensibly to be a place for the Baha'is
of all the various groups to talk about Covenant issues, but it's inevitable that it will sometimes degenerate into "My Guardian is better than your Guardian."

> Some years ago some mildly disaffected from the AO Bahais suggested > organising a community event where all the Bahais from Northern > Ireland would come together for a day every so often for meeting, > socialising, discussing, debating or just plain bitching, whatever > took their fancy. Apart from organising a venue and the victuals, > there was no agenda or anything like that - at least that is until it > was "learned" that all such events had to be under the supervision
of > the LSA. >>

Yes, that's the kiss of death. How many good ideas have been squelched because it was suddenly decided that they had to be under administrative control?

>
> The more you "organise" community life the less attractive it becomes.
> There would be much more and better community life if they took

the > BIGS down the local pub, poured multiple libations down the throats > until everybody lost their inhibitions and started to say what they > really think about so called community life in the AF.>>

Yes, that's the sad part. Even a lot of the people who are very into the whole administrative thing aren't really that happy with it. And just about everybody is frustrated with the lack of growth.

>
> You remind me of that old joke of the girl who had fallen pregnant but > insisted to the doctor that she couldn't be pregnant as she had NEVER > EVER done THAT sort of thing with any man. The doctor went over to > the window and looked out.
>
> "What are you looking for?" the young lady said.
>
> "Last time this happened," quoth the doctor, "three wise men came from > the East. I can't see them yet but I'm sure they are there!">>

Well, Dermot, miracles do happen sometimes. So I keep looking out the window, even though the chances are slim that the "wise men" will ever appear.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: WARNING - Fundamentalist Deception runs rife on trb & arb
Date: Saturday, October 27, 2001 7:10 PM

Paul Hammond <pahammond@onetel.net.uk> wrote in message news:3bdb3edd@212.67.96.135...
>
> Dave Fiorito <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message > news:f0853486.0110241045.5c89092@posting.google.com...
> > Karen,
> >
> > > I am sorry to hear that you would not be open to consultation unless > > > it took place on your terms. I hope that changes some day.
> > >
> > > True consultation requires both parties to compromise.
> >
> > I don't recall ever reading that. My impression is not that both > > parties compromise but that all parties look at ideas presented in a > > unbiased and detached manner so that all fact get uncovered and the > > truth can come out. I have never read that compromise on all sides is > > required for consultation.
> >

- >
- > Do you think that Karen was using the word "consultation" here in
- > the technical, Baha'i sense, or the more general sense, as it might
- > appear in the dictionary, with examples such as "consultation"
- (talks)
- > between management and workers in a trade dispute?

Dear Paul,

It depends on what you think of as the Baha'i technical sense. When Baha'is consult with institutions, it generally is a matter of giving the institution the opportunity to tell the individual why he or she is wrong, and "unity" is achieved when the individual agrees with what the institutions is saying. My understanding of what Baha'i consultation is supposed to be about is that the issue is laid out on the table honestly, and a mutually satisfactory consensus is reached.

- > >
- > > But my point is that personal conscience is an inaccurate method of
- > > determining right and wrong. Over and over again throughout the
- > > Writings the Word of God is upheld as the standard of right and wrong.
- > >
- >
- > personal conscience is every individual person's method of determining
- > right and wrong - apart from persuasion, I don't see how this can
- > be changed. I didn't believe that Baha'u'llah wanted robots, and
- > with 70-odd meanings to the word of God (as the Word of God
- > itself says) there must be a certain amount of wiggle room in
- > there.

Oh, Paul, you ought to know by know the only accurate way a Baha'i can tell right from wrong is to have the UHJ tell him what it is. One is expected to abandon personal conscience, and accept the UHJ interpretation if you are to be really firm in the Covenant. The only moral rule the conservatives have got is "The House is always right.", and an individual has a "spiritual problem" if they disagree with that.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
 Subject: Re: That's right: Opinions are not banned!
 Date: Sunday, October 28, 2001 6:32 PM

Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9ri15e$pta$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

- > You are wrong that I thought the UHJ were Nazis.
- > You are wrong that I called them Nazis to their face.
- > You are wrong in saying the service of Women Paper was not censored.
- > You are wrong that even were I one so thinking and so calling

that > this would justify a tyrannical response on their part.
>
> To A Better Future,
> Michael

Dear Michael,

Thank you for that clarification. One of the more disturbing things about my investigations is that yours is not the only case in which letters written to the UHJ have been held against people, although in your case they reacted in an exceptionally extreme way. Steve Scholl's and David Langness' letters were held against them in the Dialogue case, and David's were again mentioned as evidence that he "made statements against the Covenant" during the Talisman crackdown.

From what I've picked up, both from UHJ responses and advice I have been given is that one is not really expected to be honest, but to write to the Supreme Institution in an extremely deferential and self-deprecating matter. If one is foolish enough to bare one's heart and lay the cards on the table, it will be taken as an indication that one is up to no good.

Love, Karen

> Pat Kohli (kohliCUT_THE_CAPS@ameritel.net) writes:
>
> >> > A nice bit of deceptive propaganda! Michael wrote the UHJ as if they were > >> the Nazi > >> > party of the Third Reich. Then he got disenrolled.
> >> >
> >
> > "Very frankly, it is very difficult to see the distinction between such Baha'i > > practices and those directed by Goebbels which at length required the > > intervention of my father and many millions like him. I can not describe for you > > the extent of the impact it had on me when I learned that your initial response > > to the reception of the information that the Writings contain passages in which > > women are referred to as "men/rulers" and that it is quite likely that > > Abdul-Baha was speaking about the House of Justice in Chicago and not the > > Universal House of Justice at all was to prohibit the publication of this data."

> >
> > My impression is that Michael was misinformed that the Universal House of
of > > Justice prohibited the publication of information that he alleges. Rather than > > seeking some clarification, he compares them with the scourge of the
the 20th > > century.
> >
> > Blessings!
> > - Pat
> > kohli@ameritel.net
> >
>
>
> --
> "My name's McKenny, Mike McKenny, Warrant Officer, Solar Guard." > (Tom Corbett #1 STAND BY FOR MARS p2)
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Monday, November 05, 2001 9:30 AM

Dermod Ryder <Grim_Reaper_Mk2@btinternet.com> wrote in message news:9s62qf$11796b$3@ID-84503.news.dfncis.de...

>
> "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com> wrote in message > news:tuarqpomhpk286@corp.supernews.com...
>
> Hi karen,
>
> >
> >
> > the shift in the Faith had been so dramatic it > > was as if they had joined one religion and ended up part of another.
>
> And sure isn't that the same today? Come and join the liberal Faith > for tomorrow is the message to the seeker! Prostrate thyself and > toady before the omniscient, omnipotent and infallible AO is the > reality when you've signed that wee card!

Dear Dermod,

Yes, exactly. And it's a cruel thing to do to people, and one reason that people who leave the Faith have such anger -- you feel gypped. People don't join the Baha'i Faith because they think building an administration that will evolve into a future theocracy is a really cool idea. They join because of the tolerant and rational principles are such a refuge from the Christian fundamentalism they are often in flight from, and because their hearts are touched by the Writings. Then, they sign the card, and the monster machine catches them in its grinding gears.

Also, in my own case, I had the rather naive idea that the administration might at least try to act within shouting distance of those tolerant principles. I understand the denial I run into sometimes -- if someone had told me, before I saw for myself, that the AO had done some of the things it had done, I would have said it was impossible. The institutions would never do that, because we believe in the independent investigation of truth,
and nobody gets into trouble unless they break clearly defined Baha'i law,
and even then only as a last resort. I believed that the Covenant actually guaranteed freedom of thought because diversity of views did not need to threaten to divide the Faith, because we had an agreed-upon center.

The sense of betrayal when I found out I was wrong was enormous.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: This is Bahai?
Date: Friday, November 23, 2001 1:16 PM

--

"The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice . . ." --
Baha'u'llah

Michael McKenny <bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA> wrote in message news:9tlrhk$skp$1@freenet9.carleton.ca...

> Greetings, Karen.

> Many thanks for your comments.

> You are quite right that the suppression of freedom of thought
and > expression is a quite telling and alarming aspect of current Baha'i life.

> What most upset me on first reading the Service of Women Paper was that it > had been censored. What most upset me when I first entered Baha'i cyberspace

> was that there were Baha'i fundamentalists there seeking to suppress the > expression of any opinion, but their own.>>

Dear Michael,

Yes, my own reaction to the censorship of "A Modest Proposal" was similar.

I had naively believed that freedom of expression was encouraged in
the

Faith, and was shocked at the sort of fundamentalism I found in cyberspace.

And there's no doubt some of the fundamentalists were shocked by me. These differences can't be swept under the rug any more, which I think is far more healthy in the long run, even though it has been painful in the short run.

- > One point I stressed from early on was that the Baha'i Covenant was a
- > two way street; it guaranteed the freedom of thought and expression for
- > Baha'is, who, whatever their personal opinions, would accept the
- > legitimacy of the authorized institutions. What is very remarkable about
- > those who had the understanding that Baha'i women should be on the UHJ was
- > that they only sought their legitimate right to express this opinion, and
- > all stated it would come about when the UHJ called for it. No one staged
- > a coup, or even passed around a special ballot.>>

Yes, that's another thing that amazed me. All the accusation against the prominent liberals -- they were politicking, they were claiming the right to authoritative interpretation, etc. -- completely fall apart upon examination. Paul Hammond recently said of the Dialogue crowd that it's rare to find such a meek set of dissidents. That's the sad thing -- all these guys really believed in the system and tried their best to work within it until they were left, at long last, with no option but to leave.

It may interest you to know that I discovered that the Mormon church, which is also experiencing tension between liberals and conservatives had a "Dialogue" of their own. The editor has been recently forced to resign under pressure from conservative, but the liberal magazine itself, Sandstone, has been in existence for 12 years. And it doesn't even have to submit its articles for review! And nobody has suffered sanctions. It saddens me greatly that the Baha'i Faith would show so much less tolerance. I've been trying to find out whether any other religious group has punished people for its email, and so far I've come up with zip -- not even the most controlling totalitarian cult punishes people for free expression in cyberspace. I've found plenty of conflict between current and ex members, though.

- > The validity of propositions is independent of the
- > personality of individuals; all the contemporary members of the UHJ
- > demonstrate by moving against personalities, by pressuring or even
- > legislating the non-Baha'i status of people believing that spiritual
- > principles trump particular literal interpretations appearing to exempt
- > leaders from living according to spiritual principles is testify to their
- > powerlessness to stand in the light of what they oppose and the extent

> they are willing to go to insist on their own understanding.>>

Yes -- if you have to stifle ideas, that demonstrates a fear of the strength of those ideas. If they had no merit, the sensible thing to do is let them be examined in the light of day. But they have no power against the hearts and minds of the sincere, and only show themselves to be petty and narrow when they do these things.

> Thanks again for your comments and for the opportunity this allows > for me to restate these points. The time I took to do this may have set > back a little the completion of that Canadian archaeology project I'm > working on, but it was worth it. Please feel free to repost any of my > posts that in the ever flowing nature of cyberspace may seem called for > yet again. The same points seem to flow as waves to the shore and it is > only seldom now I look in here. Much I'm missing, but the archives have > likely already received responses by me and others so irrefutable that > exceptional ad hominem were all those sitting in UHJ seats had to answer > with.

Dear Michael, I know the time you have to spend in Baha'i cyberspace is limited. However, I'm always glad to see you here when you have the moment to spare. Until next time.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: "Shunning is the marker of a cult . . . note that these Date: Thursday, November 29, 2001 11:36 AM

Dear friends,

I want to thank everyone for their kind words after my brief departure. I'm still keeping my cyberspace activities down, but can't resist peeking in on you guys. I'm really perfectly all right; it's just that if I continue to post while I'm over-stressed and touchy, I'll end up doing and saying things that I shouldn't. I figure I should at least try to keep my behavior within shouting distance of Baha'i standards, and taking these brief breaks is a way of ensuring that I'm not led to do otherwise just because I happen to be tired or in a bad mood.

However, I ran into something concerning the definition of cults a while back that really struck me, and I thought was worth quoting in full. It appears in Cultic Studies Journal, which is an academic journal that studies the psychological and sociological dynamics in New Religious Movements. The immediate context is an article about Christian Identity, but I think it applies generally. (I can give a full reference for this article if someone really wants one.)

"Accordingly, cults may best be viewed daily as falling on a continuum. At one end stand healthy well functioning groups, in which dissent is respected, people participate in decision making, and members at all times retain a foot in the real world. At the other end we find totalitarian enclaves in which conformity is prized above all else and people are frequently manipulated against their will for the greater good of the cult leader. People and organizations can move back and forth on this continuum depending on events. Organizations are not necessarily cults or not cults. They can be both at different times and in different places."

Note that the key to where a religion falls on this continuum is how much dissent is allowed, and how much people are allowed to participate in decision-making. While Baha'is are allowed, at least on the local level, to participate in decision-making (how much depends a lot on local leaders), there are severe limits on the expression of dissent. Conformity and obedience are highly prized within the Baha'i community. (Dave, for the purpose of analyzing a religion objectively, it is not much of a defense to say that such limits are an inherent part of the teaching. That's true even of severely destructive cults.)

Let's look objectively at what we've got here: This is a religion in which the highest governing body is believed to be infallible, and obedience to its directives is considered a measure of spiritual well-being. Even at lower levels, decisions are not to be opposed once they are reached, and the goals are generally set from upper levels, not from the grassroots. The religion practices the shunning of schismatics in order to maintain unity, and on a popular level even dissenters who are not schismatics can be considered worthy of this treatment. The religion also maintains a hierarchy of officials whose primary job it is to maintain orthodoxy, and who investigate, interrogate, and threaten adherents who deviate. Individual initiative is discouraged, unless it is carefully under institutional control. Adherents may not publish anything concerning their religion unless it is first vetted by the leadership. Sanctions and punishments have been imposed upon those seen as promoting unorthodox ideas, especially if the people doing so are articulate and credible.

The Baha'i Faith is more controlling than the Catholic Church. Many Catholics openly call for women to be priests, but I don't see them being punished solely for that reason. The Baha'i Faith is more controlling than the Mormons. There is a controversial liberal Mormon magazine that is still in operation after twelve years, even though it has been under fire from the more conservative leadership. No one reviews the articles it publishes. The liberal Baha'i magazine, Dialogue, was forced to close after only two years, even though all the articles it published were reviewed.

It would be completely unfair to class the Baha'i Faith along with really destructive cults, such as Jonestown, Heaven's Gate, or the Branch Davidians. However, it would not be out of line to class it with other fringe groups who apply psychological pressure towards conformity, like the Jehovah's Witnesses and the Amish.

Also, as this article noted, exactly how "cult-like" one experiences the Baha'i Faith depends very much on who one is and where one is. LSAs and ABMs differ widely in their approach. Some are tolerant; others are harsh and inflexible. Those who deal in the realm of ideas, such as academics and writers are far more vulnerable to being subject to pressure than the ordinary believer. Curious and questioning types are also more likely to run into trouble, especially if their curiosity brings them into an encounter with schismatic literature.

I think it is rather simplistic to just say "shunning is the hallmark of a cult". However, shunning is a control mechanism that is found almost exclusively in marginal religious sects that feel threatened by non-conformist ideas or behavior. If the Baha'i Faith wants to be anything other than marginal, then it will have to loosen up a bit.

Love, Karen

"

--

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>
Dave Fiorito <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0111290657.3a48a74d@posting.google.com...
> Ron,

>
> > > Ok, so if you believe that shunning is a part of a cult, then how do > > > you explain the following from Baha'u'llah (emphasis added):
> > >
> > > "... it is incumbent upon all the friends of God to shun any > > > person in whom they perceive the emanation of hatred for the Glorious
> > > Beauty of Abhá, though he may quote all the Heavenly Utterances and > > > cling to all the Books."
> >
> > You can't perceive anything in someone whom you are forbidden by someone > > else to have any association with. That is, this command of > > Baha'u'llah's is incompatible with shunning on the command of
the > > leadership of an organisation. The same applies to your other > > references, but the last has an additional problem:
>
> > Could you please elaborate. I am not sure I understand your point.
>
> > > "Erelong shall clamorous voices be raised in most lands.
Shun > > > them, O My people, and follow not the iniquitous and evil-hearted."
> >
> > This is simply saying not to pay attention to the voices. It has > > nothing to do with shunning people.
>
> > So how do you shun a voice without shunning the person speaking?
And
> > furthermore, shunning a voice or a person is still shunning and by > > Fred's definition that means it is still the "hallmark of a cult".
>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: "Shunning is the marker of a cult . . . note that these Date: Monday, December 03, 2001 4:37 PM

--
<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>
Dave Fiorito <bighappymonkey@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:f0853486.0112030938.7febefae@posting.google.com...
> Paul,
> > >
> >
> > So, preserving and protecting the Faith from attack is not a > > major concern of the ABM for protection?
>
> Protection does not equate with the maintenance of orthodoxy.
> Orthodoxy is impossible in a Faith with no authorized interpreter.
<<

Then on what basis are people supposed to have "misconceptions"?
It's

beside the point anyway, Dave -- having a bunch of officials whose whole job is to make sure people don't mess with the ideas of splinter groups and/or publicly disagree with administrative decisions, then you've got a control mechanism intended to limit dissent.

>

> Informal and unofficial statements do exist right here on the Net.
> Publications are classified in a very different way. Because the > Baha'i Faith has no clergy any individual who publishes could easily > be seen as making an official statement. That is why review persists.<<

It's control, Dave. The tighter the control, the closer to "cult" you are.

>

> > The point is that the "definition" of cult is fuzzy. The Baha'i Faith > > is somewhere in the middle of a continuum from damaging, > > mind-controlling cults to the free-est of Unitarian Universalists
and > > liberal Quakers. I would say that it was accurate to place it, > > in general, at around the same point as the Mormons and the > > JWs.

>

> But the continuum is not of religions - it is of cults. That was the > point of the article quoted. To put the Baha'i Faith on the continuum > is to call it a cult.<<

No, Dave, the continuum is of all religions. One end of the continuum is Jonestown; the other is the Unitarians, with most religions falling somewhere in between. That's the whole point of the paragraph -- the line between "cult" and "non-cult" isn't clear, and a single religious group can be both depending on the circumstances.

> > I don't think it is. JW "disfellowship" is the main thing that convinces > > me that they practice psychological mind control.

>

> I have known plenty of JW's, they don't seem to fit the cult model > though I am not familiar with their practice of "disfellowship".<<

Check out support sites for ex-cultists sometimes -- there are huge numbers of ex-JWs around with horror stories. They shun apostates -- I know they "disfellowship", but I'm not entirely sure on what basis they do it. I wouldn't call them a "cult" either, but they have a high turnover rate, and are more strongly controlling than your average church, at least from the stories I've heard.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 2:52 AM

> Do you know of anyone who has ever returned their membership card?
Milissa, did > you send them yours? How about you Karen? Did anyone ask for it?

Nope; it's still in my wallet. In fact, my friends locally have been so discreet about the fact of my withdrawal that when I attended a recent Holy Day celebration it was clear that some Baha'is who hadn't seen me in a while thought I was still part of the community. One lady asked me if I was "still isolated"; another explained to a couple that just moved in that I lived in a tiny incorporated city and so was not technically part of either the Redneck Heaven or Hick County communities. No one who knew better chimed in to explain that where I lived would no longer matter since I'm not on the rolls.

It took several months for National to respond to my resignation letter, but the American Baha'i stopped coming almost immediately. That would be anybody's first clue that they aren't on the rolls anymore.

I find these extended discussions of Fred's status a bit silly. Apparently, it is important to him to proclaim to all and sundry that he is a Baha'i in Good Standing. It also seems that it is important to some other people here that they proclaim just as loudly that he is not. I don't really understand either point of view. But then, official "status" is not a big deal to me. I have very strongly insisted on my identity as an unenrolled Baha'i, though. I think Fred is doing something similar, in insisting on his Baha'i identity. So leave him alone about it, already. I don't see why Dave felt the need to go checking in on his status in the first place.

The other disenrollees got a very terse letter saying they'd been booted. I don't see how that could be considered harrassment by any stretch of the imagination. They can either send Fred one, or put up with his public claim to be a BIGS.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Sunday, December 09, 2001 11:06 AM

>
> The problem isn't really Fred's status. Why the whole thing concerns > me is that Fred is claiming to not only be a BIGS (About which I could > really care less) but he is also claiming to have been a victim of AO > injustice. He is trying to get us to think that they did to him what > they did to Alison.<<

Well, going around claiming to be a BIGS seems to be an odd way of going about that-- it seems to be, in fact, a denial that he was disenrolled.
IIRC, he doesn't put his own name in his "roll call of Baha'i victims".

I care deeply about the injustices done by AO and > I want to be able to distinguish the real victims from the > non-victims.<<

Well, Milissa, it doesn't look like to me that you're having much trouble making such a distinction.

Fred just doesn't upset me much. I'm not crazy about his approach, but then,
I could say that of some other AO critics as well. He's deliberately made himself into the guy everybody loves to hate. He crossposts repetitive messages, says some wild stuff sometimes, and generally makes himself a pain in the butt. On the other hand, he has made a strong stand for freedom of conscience and expression and has a wealth of information on his website about cases of AO injustice. There are very few who have done as much to promote awareness of the problems in the Baha'i system about those issues.
Fred, or at least his online persona (which I believe to be deliberately contrived), is about as lovable as a prickly pear, but he has made an important contribution.

Love, Karen

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: bahai - "Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."
Date: Tuesday, December 11, 2001 6:39 PM

--
> > >
> > > National: "Did you mean just the mailing lists or the membership > > > list as well."

> > >
> > > Fred: "What kind of idiot are you? Take me off your lists, and if > > > you ever contact me again I will drag your ass to court!"
> > >
> > > Silence as National complies with Fred'd request.
> > >
> > > As Milissa pointed out - no one who withdraws ever gets > > > confirmation.
> > >
> > I did resign from the Bahai community and I did get confirmation
that
> > that had been actionned in the administrative records.
>
> Different NSA, different procedure.

Dave,

I got confirmation -- it took months to get it, but I got one. A letter saying that I'd been removed from the rolls according my request and if the Baha'i community can do anything further for me, then let them know. Nice, polite stuff.

Love, Karen

>
>
> > > End of story. Now - to me National owes Fred nothing.
> > >
> > Fred disagrees - he said that he did not withdraw! There is a > > disputation as to fact. How shall it be resolved?
>
> That is up to Fred, then again he does not want it resolved. He will > howl his claim on any board he deems worthy of his spam. If he > resolves it he can't howl anymore.
>
> > Until it is, this thread shall repeat, like a Mexican Chilli or a > > decent Madras Curry!
>
> mmmMMMmmm. Curry. drool, drool, drool.
>
> Well time for dinner.
>
> Cheers,
>
> Dave

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Just 'Cause we vote doesn't make it democratic Date: Sunday, December 16, 2001 9:25 PM

Dear Randy, Pat, and friends,

I've been talking a lot lately about this whole "democratically-elected" business; both because of my talks with Paul on uk.r.i. and because there's a relatively new Baha'i on my list who is really bugged by the way
that Baha'i elections are conducted. He is also bugged by how Baha'is go around

bragging about how superior their system is to American democracy, and says he doesn't want his children brought up to disdain American freedoms.

I don't think my vote had any impact on anything whatsoever other than locally, where my choices were pretty darn limited. The Chairman of
the convention almost invariably was elected -- the two times this one guy from my community was elected were exactly the two times when convention was held here. He was up there running the show when people walked in, looked like he knew what he was doing, and lo! he was elected. The last time I went
to Convention the man was an elderly Knight of Baha'u'llah who also happened to live in our community. I was a teller that year, and saw the votes -- a great many of the votes cast for this person were simply written as "Kathy X's father". That is, they didn't even know his name -- all they knew was that he was a "big-deal" Baha'i. I didn't vote for him, since I knew him rather better. But he was elected. Then, I once saw a report on the National Convention, and four of the nine didn't even get a majority of
the delegates' votes -- since we put in the nine top vote-getters whether they get a majority or not. The votes are spread so thin that just being a little bit better known than someone else tips the scale. Voting for a delegate entirely by reputation, who in turn will vote largely on impressions that he gets at Wilmette when he's there isn't democracy at all.
Democracy runs on free expression and discussion of issues. In the Baha'i
system, you might as well put names on a corkboard and throw a dart, for all the difference it makes.

Love, Karen

--

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>
Karen Bacquet <karenbacquet@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:u1qiugh82qg602@corp.supernews.com...

>

>

> > Note the bit about "some of my mails were rejected"!

> >

> > By the way now many times can someone write democratically elected in a > > single email, have you found out yet?

>

> LOL!! In fact, Paul has been calling me anti-democratic because I don't > support the "democratically elected" institutions right to punish people

and > push them out of the Faith for their opinions. It is an incredible leap
of > logic that make freedom of speech "anti-democratic", but I've heard Baha'is
> say weirder things.
>
> Love, Karen
>
> >
> > Good luck in your discussions, Randy
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Just 'Cause we vote doesn't make it democratic Date: Monday, December 17, 2001 7:09 PM

--

<https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

Randy Burns <randy.burns4@gte.net> wrote in message news:h8rT7.194$5f4.80410@dfiatx1-snr1.gtei.net...

> Karen

>

> I don't think Shoghi Effendi would like the Baha'i election process > characterized as being "democratic" anyway.,,,

I think you're right there, but every once in a while you run into someone like Paul who basically justifies the authority of the AO by claiming it is democratic and/or that it reflects the will of the majority of Baha'is.

Although, I must admit Paul is a bit extreme on this score.

>

> So I think the idea of saying "democratically-elected" everytime you > mentioned the Baha'i administration would not be too pleasing to Shoghi.

>

> Shoghi thought this system was superior to other forms of election processes

> but I still find it very subject to manipulation. The nice thing about > these new regional boards is that we now have a nice "short list" of > candidates for the NSA!<<

Well, no doubt all forms of elective government are subject to some form of manipulation. Local elections, like school boards, are real bad that way -- just a tiny vocal bunch can get somebody in because with a low turnout election, name recognition means a lot. We've had some wacko constitutionalist types elected to local office, and in fact, had a recall election that threw out three county supervisors. But in the Baha'i system, you don't know if somebody's wacko or not -- you know nothing at all

about their individual performance, just whatever their public reputation is, in a very general way. If you wanted something changed, you'd have to vote against all incumbants, and aren't likely to get very far.

Love, Karen

>
>
> Cheers, Randy
>
> --
>
> Karen Bacquet <karenbacquet@hotmail.com> wrote in message > news:u1qlj8aarpun74@corp.supernews.com...
> > Dear Randy, Pat, and friends,
> >
> > I've been talking a lot lately about this whole "democratically-elected" > > business; both because of my talks with Paul on uk.r.i. and because > there's > > a relatively new Baha'i on my list who is really bugged by the way
that > > Baha'i elections are conducted. He is also bugged by how Baha'is go > around > > bragging about how superior their system is to American democracy, and > says
> > he doesn't want his children brought up to disdain American freedoms.
> >
> > I don't think my vote had any impact on anything whatsoever other than > > locally, where my choices were pretty darn limited. The Chairman of the > > convention almost invariably was elected -- the two times this one guy
> from > > my community was elected were exactly the two times when convention was > held > > here. He was up there running the show when people walked in, looked like > he > > knew what he was doing, and lo! he was elected. The last time I went to > > Convention the man was an elderly Knight of Baha'u'llah who also happened
> to > > live in our community. I was a teller that year, and saw the votes
-- a > > great many of the votes cast for this person were simply written as
"Kathy

> > X's father". That is, they didn't even know his name -- all they knew was > > that he was a "big-deal" Baha'i. I didn't vote for him, since I knew him > > rather better. But he was elected. Then, I once saw a report on the > > National Convention, and four of the nine didn't even get a majority of

> the > > delegates' votes -- since we put in the nine top vote-getters whether they > > get a majority or not. The votes are spread so thin that just being a > > little bit better known than someone else tips the scale. Voting for a > > delegate entirely by reputation, who in turn will vote largely on > > impressions that he gets at Wilmette when he's there isn't democracy at > all.

> > Democracy runs on free expression and discussion of issues. In the > > system, you might as well put names on a corkboard and throw a dart, for > all > > the difference it makes.

Baha'i

> >

> > Love, Karen

> >

> > --

> > <https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/Bacquet.html>

> > Karen Bacquet <karenbacquet@hotmail.com> wrote in message

> > news:u1qiugh82qg602@corp.supernews.com...

> > >

> > >

> > > > Note the bit about "some of my mails were rejected"!

> > > >

> > > > By the way now many times can someone write democratically elected in

a > > > > single email, have you found out yet?

> > >

> > > LOL!! In fact, Paul has been calling me anti-democratic because I don't > > > support the "democratically elected" institutions right to punish people

> > and > > > push them out of the Faith for their opinions. It is an incredible leap

> > of

> > > logic that make freedom of speech "anti-democratic", but I've heard

> > Baha'is

> > > say weirder things.

> > >

> > > Love, Karen

> > >

> > > >

> > > > Good luck in your discussions, Randy
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > >
> > >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

From: "Karen Bacquet" <karenbacquet@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: The Silence of the Lambs
Date: Wednesday, December 19, 2001 3:07 PM

Hi, guys!

Not much to say today, but since y'all have so kindly been wondering where I've been, I thought I'd stop by and say hello.

>
> There are over 200 subscribed to Talisman 9 at the moment.
Karen's
> "Unenrolled Bahai" has I think around 50 <<

Unenrolled Baha'i stands at 49 right now. I was a bit worried if the list would fly when I first started, but I have no problem at all attracting subscribers. It is also growing less dependent upon my input, and members are becoming a real support group to each other. There's a whole lot of disillusioned Baha'is out there, folks, who have never heard of Juan Cole, or ever seen Fred Glaysher's web page. I have a fantasy that all those inactive and alienated people show up one day at Unit Convention and make their voices heard. They'd swamp the place if they did.

>
> The essential business of war is the ability to cut through the > smokescreen of disinformation to assess the damage inflicted on the > enemy by one's operations. That is a complicated and complex > business. In assessing the effect of Bahai Wars on the AO one has to > learn to read the subtext. For example the UK NSA used to publish the > names and numbers of new additions to the flock as well as the > withdrawals. It hasn't done so for many moons past.<<

One thing I noted was the statistics that they keep in the church page of my annual almanac -- once upon a time they published LSAs, which was 1750, as the number of congregations. Oddly, a few years ago, this number jumped to over 8,000, which, I suppose is the number of localities, which includes groups and isolated believers. What this tells me is that the number of LSAs in this country has dropped significantly. I'd really like a hard statistic on that if anyone's got one.

>
> >Nima (alas he has left the groups for the > >time being) > > is virulent, but backed up with sources. Karen and Melissa are > always worth a > > read.
>
> Dare one disagree with so cogent a point?,,

Thanks, guys. I need a balm to my ego. I've just been recently accused of "double-think" and "incoherence". Not by anybody I should care about, but I'm thinner-skinned than I ought to be for somebody out in cyberspace.

>Even > poor old Karen has been accused there of being a Violator and Covenant
> Breaker!<<

I have also just been accused of single-handedly orchestrating the entire Religious Debate fiasco. Not only did I have the moderator of that list in my pocket, but sent my lapdogs, Nima, Paul, and even Juan, to that list to do my evil bidding. (Hey, they didn't mention you, Dermot. How did you manage to escape that?) Exactly how I got myself promoted to that status, I haven't a clue. If I'm going to be the object of someone's paranoid fantasies, I'd rather it be a Baha'i fundamentalist, where I can at least understand why I'm hated. Maybe I'll go over to Beliefnet . . .

Love, Karen

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The full text of The Chicago Tribune article appears on this page.

Also see Comments posted to The Chicago Tribune Forum

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Now available on The Chicago Tribune at

https://articles.chicagotribune.com/2009-05-18/news/0905170216_1_orthodox-community-rift-jesus-and-muhammad

WORLDWIDE RELIGIOUS NEWS

<https://wwrn.org/articles/30946/?&place=north-america§ion=bahai>

TimesDispatch

Richmond Times-Dispatch

Rift in Baha'i faith becomes grounds for lawsuit

https://www2.timesdispatch.com/rtd/lifestyles/health_med_fit/article/I-BAHA0526_20090604-232004/271998/

Chicago Tribune

https://articles.chicagotribune.com/2009-05-18/news/0905170216_1_orthodox-community-rift-jesus-and-muhammad

November 23, 2010 >>> Opinion Handed Down by US 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, Case No. 08-2306

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/US_7th_Circuit_Court_of_Appeals_11-23-2010.html

Baha'i rift Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith --chicagotribune.com

<https://archives.chicagotribune.com/2009/may/18/local/chi-bahai-18-may18> original link

https://articles.chicagotribune.com/2009-05-18/news/0905170216_1_orthodox-community-rift-jesus-and-muhammad current link

chicagotribune

Baha'i rift: Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith Mainstream group doesn't want the name Baha'i by any other group

By Manya A. Brachear Tribune reporter May 18,2009

Every religion has been riven by struggles over authority and authenticity.

Buddhism began when a maverick Hindu prince inspired disciples to embrace asceticism. Judaism has sprouted branches from ultra-orthodox to ultra-liberal, even Jews for Jesus. Christianity went through numerous profound splits, including the Protestant Reformation sparked in the 16th Century by Martin Luther in Germany and the 19th Century Mormon movement led by Joseph Smith in the U.S.

Now the Baha'i Faith, the organization representing the most recent sect to spring from Islam, is struggling to defend its identity in federal court in Chicago, where North American Baha'is have been based ever since believers came to the U.S. about 90 years ago. They contend that a tiny band of believers known as the Orthodox Baha'i Faith can't call themselves Baha'i or use one of its key symbols without violating trademark law or a previous court ruling more than 40 years ago.

In the hands of the federal 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, the case could set a precedent for settling religious schisms, doctrinal disputes and claims to truth.

"The word Baha'i carries with it implications for a certain sets of beliefs --and we have to protect that," said Robert Stockman, a practicing Baha'i and religious studies instructor at DePaul University.

Adherents of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith believe the international community has strayed from the religion's original teachings. That deviation, they say, threatens to interfere with God's plan for the world.

Baha'u'llah, who founded the faith in Iran in the mid-19th Century, is regarded by Baha'is as the most recent messenger of God in a long line including Abraham, Buddha, Krishna, Jesus and Muhammad. Baha'is believe Baha'u'llah revealed God's plan by which humanity one day would unite to become a single race.

On a Web site called www.truebahai.com, the orthodox group faults the mainstream denomination for corrupting that plan.

The mainstream Baha'is have responded with a lawsuit that tries to bar the orthodox from calling themselves Baha'i and sharing the "The Greatest Name," a sacred and trademarked symbol. Baha'is believe they are not only safeguarding their identity. They are defending the truth with a capital T.

The Orthodox say that is not a matter for the courts to decide.

"We're the true faith. That's what we would say," said Jeffrey Goldberg, a member of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith who left Chicago to be closer to an Orthodox community in New Mexico. "That has to be decided in the hearts and minds of the Baha'i, not by a secular court order."

The Baha'is first took breakaway believers to court in 1966 after a tumultuous time for their community. Nine years earlier, Shoghi Effendi, guardian of the faith and direct descendant of the founding prophet, had died unexpectedly and allegedly without naming a successor.

Leaders decided a Universal House of Justice envisioned by Effendi would oversee the faith. But shortly after the leaders announced their solution, one of them declared that Effendi actually had intended for him to serve as the next guardian.

Charles Mason Remey, then in his 90s, said Effendi had addressed him in letters as his son or spiritual descendant.

The National Assembly of France and about 100 others followed Remey. But the rest of the Baha'i community declared Remey a covenant breaker, expelled him from the faith and successfully sued his followers, barring them from calling themselves Baha'i and using the sacred symbol. Remey's group disbanded, but orthodox believers reorganized and continued to maintain the guardianship.

Thirty years later, Goldberg, an active Baha'i in Barrington, came upon the splinter group while surfing the Internet. He became convinced that he had been duped.

With no explanation, Goldberg quietly resigned from the community because he knew the consequences. When Bahai's are declared covenant breakers, they are shunned or ostracized with the exception of business relations.

But Janice Franco wouldn't let Goldberg go that easily.

She insisted on knowing why he left and, when he told her, went on a quest to prove him wrong. After plunging herself into Baha'i literature, Franco discovered Goldberg might have a point.

Indeed, both Goldberg and Franco were declared covenant breakers and shunned. Goldberg's wife was encouraged to divorce her husband. Franco's home-schooled children lost a number of friends. To this day, they are wary of organized religion.

"It was devastating news to find out the larger group had strayed," Franco said. "I want to follow the truth. I don't want to support a mistake.

"The consequence is I don't have a community. "

Then in 2006, the mainstream Baha'is filed a lawsuit, accusing the orthodox believers of violating the court order issued 40 years earlier.

The Orthodox Baha'is insist they aren't the same group. They also say a religious denomination can't trademark truth. The term Baha'i refers to a follower of Baha'u'l-hi. That applies to him and other Orthodox Baha'i, he said.

"From our point of view, if you believe in Christ you can use the word Christ in your name," Goldberg said. "It's a little bit like asking you to recant your faith. It's unacceptable to us."

But Stockman said it is the religion's responsibility to protect the Baha'i name.

"Baha'is are told again and again to try to exercise discipline on what they say about their faith and don't confuse the public.... We have our own community to build," he said.

There are 5 million Baha'is in the world --150,000 in the U.S., including 2,000 in the Chicago area. Why the mainstream denomination waited four decades to enforce the court ruling is a mystery. Baha'i leaders declined interview requests.

Barring the Orthodox believers from using the name "Baha'i" prevents them from popping up in Google when users type in that term.

Stockman said the Web is a tricky place to have conversations about spiritual truth. "It's not our desire to convert people.

It's our desire to put our material out there for people to know what the truth is and decide themselves."

mbrachear@tribune.com Copyright © 2009, Chicago Tribune 5/25/2009 7:28 AM

Baha'i schism battles it out in court The Honolulu Advertiser

Judge: Baha'i believers can call themselves Baha'i

November 23, 2010 https://articles.chicagobreakingnews.com/2010-11-23/news/28519905_1_baha-i-believers-orthodox-baha-i-faith-north-american-baha-is

A federal court in Chicago has ruled a group of self-proclaimed orthodox Baha'i believers can keep calling themselves Baha'i despite a 1966 court decision that stopped an offshoot organization from using the Baha'I name.

Today, the federal 7th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the 1966 decision does not apply to a different offshoot known as the Orthodox Baha'i Faith.

Though the judges criticized the ruling from more than four decades ago as wrongfully trying to resolve a question of religious authority, they determined it was a moot point since the original defendants led a denomination that no longer exists.

Tuesday's ruling sidestepped any questions about whether a religious organization can trademark its name or icons.

North American Baha'is have been based in Chicago ever since believers came to the U.S. about 90 years ago.

Adherents of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith--about 50 strong in the U.S.--believe the mainstream Baha'i faith -- about 5 million strong in the world -- has strayed from the religion's original teachings.

-- Manya A. Brachear

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Baha'u'llah
Edirne Passport Photo

1868

"Whatsoever hath led the children of men to shun one another, and hath caused dissensions and divisions amongst them, hath, through the revelation of these words, been nullified and abolished."

(Baha'u'llah, Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah, p. 95)

"Let them see no one as their enemy, or as wishing them ill, but think of all humankind as their friends; regarding the alien as an intimate, the stranger as a companion, staying free of prejudice, drawing no lines."

(Abdul-Baha, Selections from the Writings of Abdul-Baha, p. 1)

A fundamental teaching of Bahá'u'lláh is the oneness of the world of humanity. Addressing mankind, He says: "Ye are all leaves of one tree and the fruits of one branch." By this it is meant that the world of humanity is like a tree, the nations or peoples are the different limbs or branches of that tree and the individual human creatures are as the fruits and blossoms thereof. In this way His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh expressed the oneness of humankind whereas in all religious teachings of the past, the human world has been represented as divided into two parts, one known as the people of the Book of God or the pure tree and the other the people of infidelity and error or the evil tree. The former were considered as belonging to the faithful and the others to the hosts of the irreligious and infidel; one part of humanity the recipients of divine mercy and the other the object of the wrath of their Creator. His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh removed this by proclaiming the oneness of the world of humanity and this principle is specialized in His teachings for He has submerged all mankind in the sea of divine generosity. Some are asleep; they need to be awakened.

Some are ailing; they need to be healed. Some are immature as children; they need to be trained. But all are recipients of the bounty and bestowals of God.

(Abdul-Baha, Baha'i World Faith - Abdul-Baha Section, p. 246)

"This movement eludes organization -- it is the realization of a new spirit. The foundation of that spirit is the love of God; and its method, the love and service of mankind. Many who have never heard of this revelation teach its laws and spiritual truths. These people are performing what Baha'u'llah hath commanded though they never heard of him. The power of Baha'u'llah's words is compelling -- therefore, you must know and love them. For instance, in the spring season trees burst forth into verdure, though they are not conscious of the sunshine, of the falling rain or the gentle breeze -- nevertheless, the power of nature urges them on to yield forth their fruits."

(Abdul-Baha, Divine Philosophy, p. 14) www.reformbahai.org

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

"A weird Baha'i sub-cult has arisen. It structurally resembles al-Qaida..." Juan Cole

Juan Cole's original posts below can be found excerpted from here.

From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Kazemzadeh, Semple and al-Qaida
Date: Friday, February 08, 2002 12:21 PM

The Baha'i faith stands for universal love, for tolerance, and for a separation of religion and state. The need for religious leaders to let politicians do the ruling is a key value stated over and over again in Baha'i scripture.

Unfortunately, a weird Baha'i sub-cult has arisen. It structurally resembles al-Qaida, and differs from al-Qaida only with regard to methods, not ideals. It does not usually employ violence or terrorism (though persons with this mindset have beaten up friends of mind). And, most frighteningly of all, it has taken over and subverted the main institutions of the Baha'i faith.

1)

Al-Qaida believes in the destruction of secular, civil governments and replacing them with a fascist theocracy.

Baha'i theocrats believe in the destruction of secular, civil governments and replacing them with a fascist theocracy. Ian Semple, a member of the Baha'i Universal House of Justice, has for decades cast scorn on civil governments and spoken of his dream of a future when Baha'i Institutions will rule in their stead.

One pilgrim wrote,

"I recall being in Haifa in the '70s ('72 and '78) and hearing long talks about this from Ian Semple, on how the world was destined to be ruled by houses of justice and there will eventually be no distinction between church and state, with rather snide and smug comments about how at last the world will finally get it right and have God and Government fused through the power of the Baha'i covenant."

Note that this is the opposite of what `Abdu'l-Baha says in the Treatise on Leadership:

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/trans/vol2/absiyasi.htm>

Semple also put out a letter from the Secretariat of the UHJ:

"As for the statement made by Shoghi Effendi in his letter of 21 March 1932, the well-established principles of the Faith concerning the relationship of the Baha'i institutions to those of the country in which the Baha'is reside make it unthinkable that they would ever purpose to violate a country's constitution or so to meddle in its political machinery as to attempt to take over the powers of government. This is an integral element of the Baha'i principle of abstention from involvement in politics. However, this does not by any means imply that the country itself may not, by constitutional means, decide to adopt Baha'i laws and practices and modify its constitution or method of government accordingly."

In this passage he basically argues for a Nazi-like tactic of getting elected democratically and then abolishing democracy. By the way, the Islamists (with al-Qaida links) tried this in Algeria, and the democrats and secularists fought back, embroiling the country in a civil war that has cost 100,000 lives. This is the sort of conflict between theocratic Baha'is and the rest of society that Semple is urging on the world. At that point would the Baha'i theocrats refrain from violence?

2) Al-Qaida wishes to reestablish the Islamic Caliphate as the One World Government.

Baha'i theocrats substitute the House of Justice for the Caliphate and envision it ruling the world.

3) Al-Qaida despises parliamentary democracy as corrupt, money-driven and unrepresentative. It wishes to overthrow parliaments and institute authoritarian religious rule instead.

Baha'i theocrats despise parliamentary democracy and wish to substitute their religious institutions, which are not freely elected, for civil government. Long-time Baha'i leader Firuz Kazemzadeh said in 1988:

"If somebody is dissatisfied with a local assembly, he is not prevented from appealing to the NSA . . . It is something else when whispering campaigns or petitions are sent around for signatures objecting to the activities of the institutions. That also may be something which is countenanced by American democracy but has nothing to do with the Baha'i Faith. We must always remember that our institutions are an unusual and unique combination of theocracy in the best sense of the term with democracy. The institutions of the Baha'i Faith have not been created by us, the institutions have been created by God."

Actually, Kazemzadeh's version of the Baha'i institutions has been created by Kazemzadeh.

4) Al-Qaida establishes cells throughout the world to work for theocracy, and recruits innocent Muslims at mosques.

Baha'i theocrats have secret cells within the Baha'i community, and recruit Baha'is at deepenings and other events into their twisted world-view. Many "Auxiliary Board Members" and Assistants are secret theocrats who play dirty tricks on ordinary Baha'is to force them out of the Faith.

The Ian Semple/Kazemzadeh theocratic ideology aims at destroying American democracy. It aims at gutting the Constitution and abolishing Congress in favor of Kazemzadeh's weird, secretive, authoritarian way of ruling.

5) Al-Qaida demands absolute obedience from its recruits, and no dissent is permitted.

Baha'i theocrats demand absolute obedience to "the Institutions" and tolerate no dissent. Kazemzadeh told a group of Baha'i intellectuals,

"the word dissent implies separating oneself from the activities of the group and putting oneself outside the mainstream of the community, and that is contrary to Baha'i practice."”

You can't disagree with the NSA.

The dangers to the pristine Baha'i faith, with its values of tolerance, allowing the expression of diverse points of view, and firm commitment to the separation of religion and state, of this theocratic cult that has taken control of the community cannot be overstated. Moreover, it is a threat to the whole world.

Now that we have seen where such authoritarian theocracy leads, on September 11, I call upon all Baha'is to step back, reread the scriptures, and adhere to the real values of our religion.

cheers Juan ColeFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Cowardice of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States

Date: Friday, February 08, 2002 3:10 AM

Dear Pat Kohli:

Since you have been out here backbiting me and using foul language and treating me to a little auto-da-fe of your own in typical Inquisitorial fundamentalist-Baha'i Style, let me just take a moment out of my busy life to respond to you, whoever you are.

First of all, you have pretended to hurt that I suggested that the US NSA was cowardly in its response to the horrible attack on the United State of September 11. But it is cowardly. In the NSA letter appended to the message of a private individual below, the NSA urges that Baha'is in the wake of September 11 avoid criticizing the Taliban Government of Afghanistan. We were not even supposed to "assign blame" to Osama Bin Ladin or al-Qaida!

"above any mention whatsoever of government actions, assignment of blame . . ."

Moreover, no Baha'i writing in as an individual to a newspaper was allowed to say, "I am a Baha'i, and I condemn this evil attack on the United States by virtue of my Baha'i values, of tolerance and respect for human life." Bob Henderson had the gall to tell us that we could not say this.

What in the world does the Baha'i faith stand for if it doesn't even publicly stand against terrorism? If adherents cannot publicly associate themselves both with a condemnation of mass murder and with the Baha'i principles??

As for this minor issue of whether the NSA had planned to ban the saying of the Prayer for America, it remains murky. Not only I but the poster below, posting in the same period, had heard that it might. I heard the same things, and was not unusual in giving them credence. I am glad to publicly acknowledge that the NSA does not appear, at least openly, to have banned the saying of the prayer. What instructions it has given its legion of Secret Police (Assistants & ABMs) behind the scenes we do not know. A lot goes on in the inner core of the Baha'i faith that is hidden from outsiders, even from the rank and file Baha'is.

So, Pat, you wanted to hear me say I got that detail wrong in the heat of the moment, and here it is. I got it wrong. Unlike some people, I don't claim infallibility. I correct my errors. Doug Martin and Farzam Arbab don't have to ever say they are sorry, because they are tinpot dictators.

But I did not get the tenor of the NSA response wrong. It is cowardly. It is running for the hills.

And I mind it. Because when the Iranian Baha'is needed the support of my government, the United States stuck its neck out for them. The US Congress passed resolutions, condemning the Iranian government for its persecution of the Baha'is. Presidents Reagan, Bush, and Clinton all condemned Iran on this issue. Don't you think that maybe American citizens could have been hurt by the Khomeinists in response? They did so at the explicit urging of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States, which maintained a $500,000 a year lobbyist for the explicit purpose of lobbying Washington on this matter. Firuz Kazemzadeh button-holed U.S. officials endlessly over this in public, while privately heaping scorn on the U.S. Congress.

Now, when my country needs the support of everyone it can get, the National Spiritual Assembly announces that, well, no, it can't come out and condemn the Taliban government of Afghanistan. Sorry, USA.

You did it for us but we're selfish cowardly s.o.b.s and we ain't doing it for you.

So, Pat, say the Prayer for America all you like. But for the love of God also stand up and say that the Baha'i Faith condemns al-Qaida, the Taliban, and mass murder. Stand up to the pusillanimous Hendersons of the world.

And just in case you don't get it, my advice to you is to get off my case. I didn't come out on TRB with that message to which you objected and I've got other things to do with my time these days that debate and condemn minor cultists. But if you keep bringing me up I will be coming after the cultists who have infiltrated and mutilated the Baha'i administration vocally, with good evidence, every day. I have file cabinets full of juicy stuff. I'd prefer to spend my time another way. But if you really want to have me spend it this way, just keep up your vacuous drumbeat.

cheers Juan

· From:
· Date: Mon, 22 Oct 2001 04:35:52

National letter of Caution

Dear all'

It seems many (especially US Bahai's) are still in the dark about the National letter of Caution.

Although no prayers have been actually spelt out (word for word) in the letter from the NSA, any Bahai with a little bit of brain-matter up top who knows The words in "Prayers for America" (below), is it not obvious,< B>

Because of the politically sensitive nature of these recent tragic events

, these prayers contain language that could seem threatening to non-Bahá'ís.

namely, many Muslims, which in turn could bring retaliation to Baha'is living in both the US and Middle Eastern Countries. One now begins to understand the wisdom of the NSA's letter. (below)

In other words, until this crisis is over, you don't go around waving a red flag at a bull. Once the crisis is over apocalyptic references from the Bahá'í writings and other prayers can be used once again (Publically that is) By those Baha'is who wish to use them. . .

National letter of Caution

Posted on NSA site 14/9/01

"To Public Information Representatives, Local Spiritual Assemblies, and Individual Bahá'ís:

All of us have been deeply affected by the tragic events in Washington DC, Pennsylvania, and New York. Without question, many Bahá'ís will yearn to make some response to demonstrate their wish that Bahá'u'lláh's healing message might reach every corner of this nation. In the words of the National Spiritual Assembly in its message to the American Bahá'í community, "The Bahá'í spirit of universal love and assistance are more urgently needed now than ever before." What is needed now is for us to act as true Bahá'ís, as true servants to humankind.

The Office of External Affairs has received requests for guidance on such matters as whether it is appropriate to submit prayers to their local newspaper, the appropriateness of writing letters to the editor in response to these tragic events and other similar inquiries.

We take this opportunity to remind the friends of the policy of the National Spiritual Assembly on writing articles to local newspapers:

* Individual Bahá'ís must first seek the approval of the local Spiritual Assembly before submission to the newspaper if the person is writing as a Bahá'í.

* Bahá'ís are free to write letters to the editors of publications to express their personal views if they do not identify themselves as Bahá'ís, imply that they represent the Faith or a Bahá'í community, or discuss the Bahá'í Faith.

* Individuals or local Spiritual Assemblies wishing to submit articles to national publications must first seek the approval of the Office of External Affairs.

* If individuals are uncertain about the relationship of their letters to the interest of the Faith, they should consult with their local Spiritual Assembly.

* Any local Spiritual Assembly that wishes to contact local government officials including for the purpose of presenting Bahá'í materials should first consult with the Office of External Affairs.

Because of the politically sensitive nature of these recent tragic events, we ask that local Spiritual Assemblies consult with the Office of External Affairs before submitting anything to a local newspaper. The Office of External Affairs can be reached by phone at (202) 833-8990 or e-mail at usnsa-oea@usbnc.org. Please note that the Office of Public Information in New York City is currently experiencing difficulty in receiving telephone and e-mail communications.

General guidelines for appropriate tone of communications to the media:

Any Bahá'í-connected message to the public should try to elevate the response to the attacks to a higher, more spiritual level that is above hatred and recrimination, above any mention whatsoever of government actions, assignment of blame, and above the attempt to use this tragedy as an opportunity to advance our own interests. It would also not be appropriate to cite apocalyptic references from the Bahá'í writings or to submit prayers which contain language that could seem threatening to non-Bahá'ís.

We welcome you to contact the Office of External Affairs anytime with your questions.

Loving Bahá'í greetings,

Office of External Affairs

OFFICE OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

1320 19th Street NW, Suite 701

Washington, DC 20036-1610

Phone: 202-833-8990

Fax: 202-833-8988

"Prayers for America"

"This [Cleveland, Ohio] is a beautiful city; the climate is pleasant; the views are charming. All the cities of America seem to be large and beautiful, and the people appear prosperous. The American continent gives signs and evidences of very great advancement; its future is even more promising, for its influence and illumination are far-reaching, and it will lead all nations spiritually. The flag of freedom and banner of liberty have been unfurled here, but the prosperity and advancement of a city, the happiness and greatness of a country depend upon its hearing and obeying the call of God. The light of reality must shine therein and divine civilization be founded; then the radiance of the Kingdom will be diffused and heavenly influences surround." (`Abdu'l-Baha: Promulgation of Universal Peace, Page: 104)

"Ya-Baha'u'l-Abha! Abdu'l-Baha did not rest a moment until He had raised Thy Cause and the Standard of the Kingdom of Abha waved over the world. Now some people have arisen with intrigues and evil aspirations< BR> to trample this flag in America, but My hope is in Thy confirmations. Leave Me not single, alone and oppressed! As Thou didst promise, verbally and in writing, that Thou wouldst protect this deer of the pasture of Thy love from the attacks of the hounds of hatred and animosity, and that Thou wouldst safeguard this persecuted sheep from the claws and teeth of the ferocious wolves, - now do I await the appearance of Thy bounties and the realization of Thy definite promise. Thou art the true Protector, and Thou art the Lord of the Covenant! Therefore, protect this Lamp which Thou hast lighted, from the severe winds."

(`Abdu'l-Baha: Baha'i World Faith, Page: 433)From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com> Subject: Re: Kazemzadeh, Semple and al-Qaida
Date: Friday, February 08, 2002 9:42 PM

I wrote,

> "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com> wrote in message > news:619f1452.0202080921.188965bc@posting.google.com...
> > The Baha'i faith stands for universal love, for tolerance, and for a > > separation of religion and state.

Our own version of Jihad Johnny Walker Lindh, Jihad Ricky Schaut, replies:

> Such is the Juan Cole official reinterpretation of Baha'u'llah. Shoghi > Effendi's statements on the matter, however, say otherwise.

Uh, Jihad Ricky, Shoghi Effendi does not deny that the Baha'i Faith stands for universal love, tolerance, and for a separation of religion and state.

Shoghi Effendi wrote, "Theirs is not the purpose, while endeavoring to conduct and perfect the administrative affairs of their Faith, to violate, under any circumstances, the provisions of their country's constitution, much less to allow the machinery of their administration to supersede the government of their respective countries."

But Jihad Ricky wants to supersede the U.S. Constitution and to throw down the U.S. government, implementing rule by his buddies in the Baha'i "administrative order" in direct contravention of Shoghi Effendi's clear instructions.

Baha'u'llah wrote in His own Will and Testament,

"Kings are the manifestations of the power, and the daysprings of the might and riches, of God. Pray ye on their behalf. He hath invested them with the rulership of the earth and hath singled out the hearts of men as His Own domain. Conflict and contention are categorically forbidden in His Book. This is a decree of God in this Most Great Revelation. It is divinely preserved from annulment and is invested by Him with the splendour of His confirmation."

He not only gave political power to civil rulers ("kings" and "presidents,"), but he forbade Baha'is from making any turmoil the way the Babis had in demanding that religious institutions take over. And he even emphasized that this principle of non-intervention in politics by God, who wants only the hearts of men for his Institutions, is "divinely preserved from annulment."

And yet Jihad Ricky (along with those other Jihadis, Ian Semple, Farzam Arbab, Doug Martin, and Firuz Kazemzadeh) has mounted the minbar of hubris and delivered himself of a Fatwa seeking to annul what is divinely preserved from annulment, and to grab civil political power for the Baha'i religious institutions.

`Abdu'l-Baha writes of the dire need to keep religious leaders and institutions from trying to run the country:

"The function of the religious leaders and the duties of the clerical jurists are to attend to spiritual affairs and to promulgate divine attributes. Whenever the leaders of the manifest religion and the pillars of the mighty divine law have intervened in the world of political leadership, put forward their rulings and attempted to manage affairs, it has ever caused the unity of the believers in the one true God to be destroyed, and resulted in the dispersal of the faithful into factions. The flames of turmoil flared up, and the blaze of rebelliousness scorched the world. The country was plundered and pillaged, and the people became the prisoners and hostages of oppressors."

Not only has religious rule and theocracy ruined Iran, Afghanistan and now the World Trade Center, it has ravaged the Baha'i faith itself, putting it under the thumb of a small, secretive group of cultists who deliberately keep it tiny and exploited.

As for Ian Semple, he has long crowed about the future Baha'i theocracy in his caves, just as Bin Ladin does in his. The proof is overwhelming.

"I recall being in Haifa in the '70s ('72 and '78) and hearing long talks about this from Ian Semple, on how the world was destined to be ruled by houses of justice and there will eventually be no distinction between church and state, with rather snide and smug comments about how at last the world will finally get it right and have God and Government fused through the power of the Baha'i covenant."

Thousands of pilgrims, not just one, have heard him say these things. And not just him. David Hoffman has an audiocassette filled with such ideas that you can order from the Baha'i publishing trust. It is all al-Qaida ideals, from beginning to end.

Semple also had the Bahai World Centre secretariat write,

"As for the statement made by Shoghi Effendi in his letter of 21 March 1932, the well-established principles of the Faith concerning the relationship of the Baha'i institutions to those of the country in which the Baha'is reside make it unthinkable that they would ever purpose to violate a country's constitution or so to meddle in its political machinery as to attempt to take over the powers of government. This is an integral element of the Baha'i principle of abstention from involvement in politics. However, this does not by any means imply that the country itself may not, by constitutional means, decide to adopt Baha'i laws and practices and modify its constitution."

I commented,

> > In this passage he basically argues for a Nazi-like tactic of getting > > elected democratically and then abolishing democracy.

Jihad Ricky, who admits he wants to repeal the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution and overthrow the US government in the long run, writes:

>The statement refers to standing Baha'i policies > regarding political non-involvement, which Dr. Cole knows forbids Baha'is > from running for office within a democratic system that's premised on > getting elected through membership in political parties.

What the statement says is that when Baha'is get to be the majority, so that they in a democratic framework represent "the country," then they ("the country itself") may "decide to adopt" [i.e. impose on the whole society] "Baha'i laws" [i.e. a far rightwing literalist interpretation of the Baha'i shariah, similar to Islamic law] and "modify" [i.e. repeal] "its constitution" [i.e. the U.S. Constitution]. The whole passage is doublespeak for Khrushchev's "We will bury you!" The only difference is that Semple thinks he can accomplish the overthrow of the U.S. constitution and the institution of a Baha'i theocracy by simply roping enough John Walker Lindhs into his cult-like perversion of the Baha'i faith, so that ultimately they can pull a Nazi-like maneuver and use their majority itself to destroy democracy.

>Do
> Baha'is believe the Universal House of Justice will, some day, be the center > piece of what is referred to as the World Order of Baha'u'llah? Yes.

In other words, Jihad Ricky is among the small group of Baha'i cultists that wants to establish a global Baha'i theocracy, just as Jihad Johnny Walker Lindh wants to establish an Islamic caliphate.

> However, at that point, any similarity between what Baha'is envision and any > Al-Qaida dream for establishing a caliphate ends.

The more cult-like members of Baha'i institutions brook no dissent, act in an authoritarian manner, impose censorship on all Baha'is, routinely investigate people for thought crimes, summarily toss them out of the community, spread nasty rumors about them, demonize them, and deprive them of the most basic human rights. Sounds an awful lot like al-Qaida's Caliph to me.

- > Dr. Cole . . . clearly seeks to brush aside any legitimate distinctions of
- > which many can be made, not the least of which is the complete absence of
- > any use of force or of any effort to undermine existing governments in
- > Baha'i activities.

The Nazis came to power peacefully, too. That the means are nonviolent makes the Baha'i fundamentalists less dangerous in the short run than the al-Qaida and Taliban, which they resemble so much. But in the long run maybe it makes them more insidious. Anyway, I don't much care how my Constitutional rights are destroyed, whether by violence or peacefully. I care about the outcome. I don't intend to allow them to be destroyed at all.

- > > Baha'i theocrats despise parliamentary democracy and wish to
- > > substitute their religious institutions, which are not freely elected,
- > > for civil government.
- >
- > Baha'i institutions are, indeed, freely elected.

No nominations, no campaigning are allowed. Speaking negatively of an incumbent is considered "negative campaigning," for which Baha'is have been punished. Even criticizing policies is disallowed. A small group of like-minded people is reelected every year at the national level, especially to offices like Secretary & Treasurer.

Well, you can run your religious elections however you like. But you are not taking away the democracy we have and which the Master so forcefully praised and replacing it by this weird cult-like manipulation of community politics.

- >Nor, for
- > that matter, do Baha'is seek to substitute Baha'i institutions for civil
- > institutions. Baha'is believe that, some day, when the majority of the - > population had become Baha'i, Baha'i institutions will form the pattern by
- > which civil government is exercised. That, however, is very different from
- > simply seeking to supplant civil government with Baha'i institutions.

Well, if the current more cult-like Baha'i governance procedures are imposed by a tyranny of the majority on civil institutions as their "pattern", then that would mean abolishing Congress, forbidding political parties (=de facto a one-party state), imposing censorship on the press, repealing the Constitution and the First Amendment. In other words, Jihad Ricky is welcoming us to al-Qaida-Ville.

- > > Baha'i theocrats have secret cells within the Baha'i community, and
- > > recruit Baha'is at deepenings and other events into their twisted
- > > world-view.
- >
- > A charge that's been repeated many times without substantive evidence to > back it up. Yet, given the track record so far in this post, one has little > faith in Dr. Cole's ability to produce any such evidence without twisting it > to mean what he wants it to mean.

Jihad Ricky, of course, is one of the Cell Leaders. Somehow the Cell Leaders are most vociferous in denying there are any Cells.

> > Baha'i theocrats demand absolute obedience to "the Institutions" and > > tolerate no dissent.
>
> Actually, Baha'i institutions tolerate a great deal of "dissent" when it's > voiced through proper channels.

No, they don't. But when the dissent is voiced, and punished privately, then nobody on the outside can know about the repression. Cultist Baha'i officials monitor community members, attempt to intimidate them into silence, interfere behind the scenes in LSA elections, and generally act in an authoritarian and corrupt way. Then they smile and put on a 'nice' face for the public. Actually, just listen carefully to Jihad Ricky and you'll see the real face of Baha'i cultism and fundamentalism.

>It is a very different model of governance > than that which is prevalent in common western democracies, and, of this, > there can be little doubt.

In other words, what Jihad Ricky advocates is not democratic at all. It is a form of fascist theocracy that deprives us of our God-given democratic rights.

>Whether or not it can be accurately > characterised as an outright "theocracy" would only depend on the extent to > which one would highlight similarities while ignoring important differences.

That's easy for you to say. It isn't your ox that is being ingored. Theocracy is the government of a society by the religious institutions. That's what Jihad Ricky wants for our beautiful, tolerant America, to make it like Iran and Taliban Afghanistan. Hint: It is a Theocracy.

See above for what Shoghi Effendi really said.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Weirdness of the NSA of Baha'is of America
Date: Saturday, February 09, 2002 12:22 PM

So let's look again at the reaction of Bob Henderson and Firuz Kazemzadeh to the tragic events of September 11.

>National letter of Caution
>Posted on NSA site 14/9/01

>"To Public Information Representatives, Local Spiritual Assemblies, and >Individual Bahá'ís:

>All of us have been deeply affected by the tragic events in Washington

>DC, Pennsylvania, and New York. Without question, many Bahá'ís will >yearn to make some response to demonstrate their wish that Bahá'u'lláh's

>healing message might reach every corner of this nation.

In other words, the first thing that came to the minds of the Baha'i fundamentalists on September 11 is, "What is in this for us? Maybe we'll be able to rope in more converts out of it." Wouldn't the right first response be enormous sorrow for the suffering of innocents, and for the blow to the United States, which has always treated the Baha'is well and given them liberty?

>In the words of the National Spiritual Assembly in its message to the >American Bahá'í community, "The Bahá'í spirit of universal love and >assistance are more urgently needed now than ever before."

And, could we please know what "assistance" the National Spiritual Assembly has given any of the victims? Or any non-Baha'is at all? Or any Baha'is, for that matter, in the United States? They have an annual budget of $25 million a year or so. What percentage of that does the US NSA spend on "assisting" people in need?

>What is needed now is for us to act as true Bahá'ís, as true servants to >humankind.

Could we have some specifics here please? What exactly would that entail? How have Baha'i communities done anything differently since September 11? Bob Henderson lives in a 9 bedroom mansion with free maid and gardening service and takes a huge salary and perks out of the National Fund. Has he made any sacrifices in his lifestyle since September 11? Has he done anything for anyone? Has he spoken out against al-Qaida terrorism?

>The Office of External Affairs has received requests for guidance on >such matters as whether it is appropriate to submit prayers to their local >newspapers, the appropriateness of writing letters to the editor in response >to these tragic events and other similar inquiries.

My advice is, if you want guidance, go right to Baha'u'llah's writings. Kazemzadeh will just send you on a fool's errand.

>We take this opportunity to remind the friends of the policy of the >National Spiritual Assembly on writing articles to local newspapers:

>* Individual Bahá'ís must first seek the approval of the local

>Spiritual Assembly before submission to the newspaper if the person is writing >as a Bahá'í.

In other words, they are running the community as a controlling cult where you can't so much as say in public "I as a Baha'i feel that . . ." They impose prepublication censorship on tens of thousands of people, just like the dictatorships in the Middle East do.

>* Bahá'ís are free to write letters to the editors of publications to >express their personal views if they do not identify themselves as >Bahá'ís, imply that they represent the Faith or a Bahá'í community, or discuss >theBahá'í Faith.

How would this be different from apostasy and denying you are a Baha'i? These authoritarians deprived thousands of Iranian Baha'is of their administrative rights because they avoided mentioning they were Baha'is on their exit visas at Tehran airport. But now when it suits Kazemzadeh and Henderson, they order Baha'is not to reveal their identities. We are Baha'is. Our values come from being Baha'is. We have a responsibility to say so when we speak in public.

>* Individuals or local Spiritual Assemblies wishing to submit articles >to national publications must first seek the approval of the Office
of >External Affairs.

Yeah, yeah. Hafez al-Asad, Ayatollah Khamenei and Mullah Omar have the same policy. It is called CENSORSHIP, folks. It is wrong. It is dictatorial.

>* If individuals are uncertain about the relationship of their letters >to the interest of the Faith, they should consult with their local >Spiritual Assembly.

In other words, don't touch that dial, we are in control of your television screen. You will see what we make you see. You will say what we tell you to say.

>* Any local Spiritual Assembly that wishes to contact local government >officials including for the purpose of presenting Bahá'í materials >should first consult with the Office of External Affairs.

Well, don't waste any time weeping over the victims of September 11, for heaven's sake! Call up your Congressman and try to slip him a copy of your latest fundamentalist tract. Here's the opportunity!

>Because of the politically sensitive nature of these recent tragic >events, we ask that local Spiritual Assemblies consult with the Office of >External Affairs before submitting anything to a local newspaper. The Office of >External Affairs can be reached by phone at (202) 833-8990 or e-mail >at usnsa-oea@usbnc.org. Please note that the Office of Public Information in >New York City is currently experiencing difficulty in receiving telephone and >e-mail communications.

I wonder why their communications were disrupted? Maybe religious fanaticism had resulted in this outcome? Wouldn't you conclude that WE NEED LESS RELIGIOUS FANATICISM? And yet this whole message reeks of cult-like control on people not so far from what al-Qaida itself imposes.

>General guidelines for appropriate tone of communications to the media:

>Any Bahá'í-connected message to the public should try to elevate the response to the attacks to a higher, more spiritual level that is >above hatred and recrimination, above any mention whatsoever of government >actions, assignment of blame,

Uh, folks, I think we can assign some blame here. September 11 was perpetrated by a secretive religious cult with Middle Eastern origins called al-Qaida. Al-Qaida was part of the Taliban government in Afghanistan. There, I'm a bad Baha'i. I said it. Moreover, I think al-Qaida and Talibanism are evil. I think `Abdu'l-Baha would have said so, as well; he said similar things about similar movements in his own time. How deep a hole are you going to dig to get away from reality in the more cult-like reaches of the Baha'i faith? Should we get to the point where we are NEUTRAL about what happened on September 11? This is the weirdest thing I have ever seen, and it is a profound betrayal by Baha'i officials like Kazemzadeh of a country that has sheltered and nurtured him when his own would have bulldozed him into a mass grave. He is a world-historical ingrate.

>and above the attempt to use this tragedy as an >opportunity to advance our own interests.

Well, since the letter so far seems to think of it mainly as a proclamation opportunity, I fear that cow is out of the barn.

>It would also not be >appropriate to cite apocalyptic references from the Bahá'í writings >or to submit prayers which contain language that could seem >threatening to non-Bahá'ís.

Well, maybe Baha'is should give up altogether on the Calamity business. It ain't gonna happen, 2000 came and went, and it is always scary to us normal people, not just when there's been a terrorist attack. 'Oh, yeah, I just joined this nice religion where people believe the world is about to end.' Any mother's eyes would shine with pride if her child came back to her with these words.

>We welcome you to contact the Office of External Affairs anytime with >your questions.

I have a question. Could you get more weird, please?

>Loving Bahá'í greetings,

Oh, yeah, Kazemzadeh has showered me and my friends with love all our lives. Hypocrite.

>Office of External Affairs

>OFFICE OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Remember Ross Perot talked about lobbyists with "alligator shoes and thousand-dollar suits"? That's what "External Affairs" is. It is a lobbying organization. But it only lobbies for itself.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

X-Mozilla-Status: 0001

Message-ID: <32A8841C.2CFB@moa.net>

Date: Fri, 06 Dec 1996 15:37:48 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: @moa.net

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: All Messages to SOC.RELIGION.BAHAI & Talisman

Content-Type: multipart/digest; boundary="-----3E69366EFD"

Content-Disposition: inline

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

-----3E69366EFD

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <3282572E.2005@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 07 Nov 1996 16:39:58 -0500

From: <@moa.net>

Organization:

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: statement of principles part 1

References: <199611071911.MAA13396@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Friend,

>

> Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

>

> I am returningthis to you for editting. I cannot allow the blanket > statements:

I refuse to edit my post in any way whatsoever. Your role as a moderator is not to be a fascist and stunt the serious exchange of ideas. Incidentally, "editting" is spelt with one "t."

>

> > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by

> > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings, > > especially in this regard.

>

> and

>

> > and modest possibilities of human material. One that that such cultures as that > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection > > and obedience.

>

> to be posted to the newsgroup. As stated with no supporting information, > these statements are unfair stereotypes which could cause a lot of heat with > no new light. :-) Please either strike them or edit them to make them more > general or backed up by fact.

>

> Thank you for participating,

>

> Dick Detweiler

> rdetweil@primenet.com

> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

>

> ===== Begin submitted post =====

>

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-1.ouhub.moa.net

> > From: <@moa.net>

> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> > Subject: Re: statement of principles part 1

> > Date: Thu, 07 Nov 1996 11:08:44 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > Lines: 87

> > Message-ID: <3282098C.31E@moa.net>

> > References: <55sp6p$q76@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> > Mime-Version: 1.0

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > To: karl1971@aol.com

> >

> > karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> >

> > >

> > > Personally, over the years I've been incredibly disillusioned with the Bahai > > > Community. I was brainwashed to believe it meant a lot of things it > > > doesn't. To, illustrate, I can still remember going to a youth deepening > > > when I was 17 and hearing this highly respected fiery lipped ex-radical > > > ominously railing to us guys about "locker room talk" --- basically in her > > > war like ways she was trying to instill a sense of shame for thinking > > > unchaste thoughts ---- which was good in a sense ---- but believe me, the way > > > she worded herself was absolute condescending nonsense. She cleverly made it > > > sound like it was a terrible crime to get horny. --- The point being, at the > > > time, being a na ve kid, I took her way too seriously.

> > >

> >

> > Karl, people are evil and twist and debase every political and religious form to > > their own purposes. I've witnessed this same kind of thing in the Baha'i Faith > > many, many times. Who, if they have even a modicum of honesty and perspicacity, > > hasn't?

> >

> > > As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any > > > individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike > > > churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with
> > > "Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and > > > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > >

> >

> > Many people are all too willing to ASSUME these roles--through election or > > otherwise makes little difference. Tainted wine in new vessels.

> >

> > >

> > > Moreover, it is precisely this sense of distrust for people in an > > > authoritative position such as priests, that in my opinion, strikes a nerve > > > in America's character. ---- If one needs good tactics for mass enrollments

> > > in the U.S., my suggestion is that we start with those aspects of the Faith > > > that appeal to those who have good reasons to distrust authority. After all, > > > isn't this distrust a tradition in this country?

> > >

> >

> > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by
> > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings, > > especially in this regard.

> >

> > > If one needs a reason to see why its so easy for people not to be Bahais, or > > > for that matter, why it's so easy to disobey the Laws of God, look no further > > > than members of the influential Bahai Community playing surrogate priests to > > > those foolish enough to play surrogate parish ----- Which has the inevitable > > > effect of denying what's a part of life: what's worth respecting, what's > > > worth being ashamed of, and what's worth forgiving.

> > >

> >

> > You, sir, have an Antinomian mind; you should OBEY!!!!

> >

> > > These roles have this effect because sooner or later a parish will wonder if > > > the priest is worth putting on a pedestal. As such, it will eventually see > > > the natural flaws in his character and not take a damn thing he says > > > seriously. Whereas with independent investigation of truth, which > > > Baha'u'llah so brilliantly condones, there are no flaws to be disillusioned > > > with.

> > >

> >

> > In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorne perceived it long ago: "Evil is the Nature > > of Mankind." I also recall Ecclesiastes: "The heart of the sons of men is > > full of evil."

> >

> > > If one needs a good subject for a fireside or a deepening, I strongly > > > recommend we deepen each other on whatever it takes to psychologically break > > > whatever it is that compels us to play such roles.

> >
> > In Some Answered Questions, Abdul-Baha says of evil, it "continues and endures."
> > Not at all an upbeat modern concept full of psychological hope.
> >
> > >"I have sworn eternal hostility to all forms of Tyranny against the minds > > >of man." - Thomas Jefferson
> >
> > >Maybe that's why the U.S. is the cradle of the Faith. What other countries > > >are founded on such principles?
> >
> > You make me think of James Madison in the Federalist Papers: "I never expect > > to see a perfect thing from imperfect man." An exceedingly Western, Christian, > > American notion, though all the great religions have a sense of the limitations > > and modest possibilities of human material. One that that such cultures as that > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection > > and obedience.
> >
> > FG
> > Rochester, Michigan, USA
> >
>
> ===== End submitted post =====

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000557991@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 07 Nov 1996 16:49:15 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr02.primenet.com [206.165.5.102]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id OAA22751; Thu, 7 Nov 1996
14:54:18 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id OAA10843; Thu, 7 Nov 1996 14:54:18 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611072154.OAA10843@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: statement of principles part 1

To: @moa.net ()

Date: Thu, 7 Nov 1996 14:54:17 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3282572E.2005@moa.net> from "" at Nov 7, 96 04:39:58 pm

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

You write:

> > Dear Friend,

> >

> > Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

> >

> > I am returningthis to you for editing. I cannot allow the blanket > > statements:

>

> I refuse to edit my post in any way whatsoever. Your role as a moderator > is not to be a fascist and stunt the serious exchange of ideas.

> Incidentally, "editing" is spelt with one "t."

>

I am sorry, but as submitted, your post does not meet the charter of the newsgroup. It contains blanket statements about a group of people when that statement can not possibly be applied accurately to all in that group.

It is therefore stereotypical and could be offensive to those in that group.

The charter for the newsgroup clearly disallows this type of post.

If you would like to support your contention by clearly identifying it as your opinion and supplying some facts to support it or qualifying it in a meaningful way, I would be happy to post your remarks.

Thank you for expressing your concern,

Dick Detweiler,
co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
rdetweil@primenet.com

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000564549@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 09 Nov 1996 10:33:02 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr04.primenet.com [206.165.5.104]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id IAA04304; Sat, 9 Nov 1996 08:38:0 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id IAA03876; Sat, 9 Nov 1996 08:38:04 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611091538.IAA03876@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

To: @moa.net ()

Date: Sat, 9 Nov 1996 08:38:03 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <32847FF3.7532@moa.net> from "" at Nov 9, 96 07:58:27 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

Please reformat and delete personal reference to moderators and blanket attacks against groups and I would be happy to post your remarks,

Dick Detweiler

co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

rdetweil@primenet.com

> Date: Sat, 09 Nov 1996 07:58:27 -0500

> From: <@moa.net>

> Organization:

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> MIME-Version: 1.0

> To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

> References: <199611071911.MAA13396@primenet.com>

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

>

> Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

> >

> > Dear Friend,

> >

> > Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

> >

> > I am returningthis to you for editing. [sic] I cannot allow the blanket > > statements:

> >

> > > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by

> > > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings, > > > especially in this regard.

> >

> > and

> >

> > > and modest possibilities of human material. One that that such cultures as that > > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection

> > > and obedience.

> >

> > to be posted to the newsgroup. As stated with no supporting information, > > these statements are unfair stereotypes which could cause a lot of heat with > > no new light. :-) Please either strike them or edit them to make them more > > general or backed up by fact.

> >

> > Thank you for participating,

> >

> > Dick Detweiler

> > rdetweil@primenet.com

> > Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> >

> > ===== Begin submitted post =====

> >

> > >

> > > karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > >

> > > >

> > > > Personally, over the years I've been incredibly disillusioned with the Bahai

> > > > Community. I was brainwashed to believe it meant a lot of things it > > > > doesn't. To, illustrate, I can still remember going to a youth deepening

> > > > when I was 17 and hearing this highly respected fiery lipped ex-radical

> > > > ominously railing to us guys about "locker room talk" --- basically in her

> > > > war like ways she was trying to instill a sense of shame for thinking

> > > > unchaste thoughts ---- which was good in a sense ---- but believe me, the way

> > > she worded herself was absolute condescending nonsense. She cleverly made it > > > sound like it was a terrible crime to get horny. --- The point being, at the > > > time, being a na ve kid, I took her way too seriously.

> > > >

> > >

> > > Karl, people are evil and twist and debase every political and religious form to > > > their own purposes. I've witnessed this same kind of thing in the Baha'i Faith > > > many, many times. Who, if they have even a modicum of honesty and perspicacity, > > > hasn't?

> > >

> > > > As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any > > > > individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike > > > > churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with
> > > > "Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and > > > > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > > >

> > >

> > > Many people are all too willing to ASSUME these roles--through election or > > > otherwise makes little difference. Tainted wine in new vessels.

> > >

> > > >

> > > > Moreover, it is precisely this sense of distrust for people in an > > > > authoritative position such as priests, that in my opinion, strikes a nerve > > > > in America's character. ---- If one needs good tactics for mass enrollments
> > > > in the U.S., my suggestion is that we start with those aspects of the Faith > > > > that appeal to those who have good reasons to distrust authority. After all, > > > > isn't this distrust a tradition in this country?

> > > >

> > >

> > > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by
> > > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings, > > > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent evidence this in my experience is Richard C. Detweiler's censoring of this posting

> the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]

> > >

> > > > If one needs a reason to see why its so easy for people not to be Bahais, or
> > > > for that matter, why it's so easy to disobey the Laws of God, look no further > > > > than members of the influential Bahai Community playing surrogate priests to > > > > those foolish enough to play surrogate parish ----- Which has the inevitable > > > > effect of denying what's a part of life: what's worth respecting, what's > > > > worth being ashamed of, and what's worth forgiving.

> > > >

> > >

> > > You, sir, have an Antinomian mind; you should OBEY!!!!

> > >

> > > > These roles have this effect because sooner or later a parish will wonder if > > > > the priest is worth putting on a pedestal. As such, it will eventually see > > > > the natural flaws in his character and not take a damn thing he says > > > > seriously. Whereas with independent investigation of truth, which > > > > Baha'u'llah so brilliantly condones, there are no flaws to be disillusioned > > > > with.

> > > >

> > >

> > > In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorne perceived it long ago: "Evil is the Nature > > > of Mankind." I also recall Ecclesiastes: "The heart of the sons of men is > > > full of evil."

> > >

> > > > If one needs a good subject for a fireside or a deepening, I strongly > > > > recommend we deepen each other on whatever it takes to psychologically break > > > > whatever it is that compels us to play such roles.

> > >

> > > In Some Answered Questions, Abdul-Baha says of evil, it "continues and endures."
> > > Not at all an upbeat modern concept full of psychological hope.

> > >

> > > > "I have sworn eternal hostility to all forms of Tyranny against the minds > > > > of man." - Thomas Jefferson

> > >

> > > > Maybe that's why the U.S. is the cradle of the Faith. What other countries > > > > are founded on such principles?

> > >

> > > You make me think of James Madison in the Federalist Papers: "I never expect > > > to see a perfect thing from imperfect man." An exceedingly Western, Christian,

> > > American notion, though all the great religions have a sense of the limitations > > > and modest possibilities of human material. One that such cultures as that > > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection

> > > and obedience. [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, doesn't exactly > value the free exchange of ideas.]

> > >

> > > FG

> > > Rochester, Michigan, USA

> > >

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.37) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000565368@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 09 Nov 1996 17:18:55 -0500

Message-ID: <328504DC.4551@moa.net>

Date: Sat, 09 Nov 1996 17:25:32 -0500

From: <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

References: <199611091538.IAA03876@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> Please reformat and delete personal reference to moderators and > blanket attacks against groups and I would be happy to post

> your remarks,

>

> Dick Detweiler

> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> rdetweil@primenet.com

Dear Richard:

Let me make sure I understand this: Moderators, like Hitler and other fascists, are above all criticism. The Kitab-i-Oppression says so.

I spelled out "SOME" though I believe the context, as well as reason, implies it.

>

> > Date: Sat, 09 Nov 1996 07:58:27 -0500

> > From: <@moa.net>

> > Organization:

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > MIME-Version: 1.0

> > To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

> > References: <199611071911.MAA13396@primenet.com>

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> >

> > Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

> > >

> > > Dear Friend,

> > >

> > > Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

> > >

> > > I am returningthis to you for editting. [sic] I cannot allow the blanket

> > > statements:

> > >

> > > > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by

> > > > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings,

> > > > especially in this regard.

> > >

> > > and

> > >

> > > > and modest possibilities of human material. One that that such cultures as that > > > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection

> > > > and obedience.

> > >

> > > to be postedi to the newsgroup. As stated with no supporting information,

> > > these statements are unfair stereotypes which could cause a lot of heat with > > > no new light. :-) Please either strike them or edit them to make them more > > > general or backed up by fact.

> > >

> > > Thank you for participating,

> > >

> > > Dick Detweiler

> > > rdetweil@primenet.com

> > > Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> > >

> > > ===== Begin submitted post =====

> > >

> > > >

> > > > karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > > >

> > > > >

> > > > > Personally, over the years I've been incredibly disillusioned with the Bahai

> > > > > Community. I was brainwashed to believe it meant a lot of things it > > > > > doesn't. To, illustrate, I can still remember going to a youth deepening

> > > > > when I was 17 and hearing this highly respected fiery lipped ex-radical

> > > > > ominously railing to us guys about "locker room talk" --- basically in her

> > > > > war like ways she was trying to instill a sense of shame for thinking

> > > > > unchaste thoughts ---- which was good in a sense ---- but believe me, the way

> > > > > she worded herself was absolute condescending nonsense. She cleverly made it > > > > > sound like it was a terrible crime to get horny. --- The point being, at the > > > > > time, being a na ve kid, I took her way too seriously.

> > > > >

> > > >

> > > > Karl, people are evil and twist and debase every political and religious form to > > > > their own purposes. I've witnessed this same kind of thing in the Baha'i Faith > > > > many, many times. Who, if they have even a modicum of honesty and perspicacity, > > > > hasn't?

> > > >

> > > > As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any > > > > individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike > > > > churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with
> > > > "Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and > > > > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > Many people are all too willing to ASSUME these roles--through election or > > > > otherwise makes little difference. Tainted wine in new vessels.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > Moreover, it is precisely this sense of distrust for people in an > > > > authoritative position such as priests, that in my opinion, strikes a nerve > > > > in America's character. ---- If one needs good tactics for mass enrollments
> > > > in the U.S., my suggestion is that we start with those aspects of the Faith > > > > that appeal to those who have good reasons to distrust authority. After all, > > > > isn't this distrust a tradition in this country?

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by
> > > > the Iranian Baha'i influence upon the understanding of its teachings, > > > > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent evidence of this in my experience is Richard C. Detweiler's censoring

> > the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]

> > > >

> > > > If one needs a reason to see why its so easy for people not to be Bahais, or
> > > > for that matter, why it's so easy to disobey the Laws of God, look no further > > > > than members of the influential Bahai Community playing surrogate priests to > > > > those foolish enough to play surrogate parish ----- Which has the inevitable > > > > effect of denying what's a part of life: what's worth respecting, what's > > > > worth being ashamed of, and what's worth forgiving.

> > > >

> > >

> > > > You, sir, have an Antinomian mind; you should OBEY!!!!

> > >

> > > > These roles have this effect because sooner or later a parish will wonder if > > > > the priest is worth putting on a pedestal. As such, it will eventually see > > > > the natural flaws in his character and not take a damn thing he says

> > > > seriously. Whereas with independent investigation of truth, which

> > > > Baha'u'llah so brilliantly condones, there are no flaws to be disillusioned > > > > with.

> > > >

> > >

> > > > In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorne perceived it long ago: "Evil is the Nature > > > > of Mankind." I also recall Ecclesiastes: "The heart of the sons of men is > > > > full of evil."

> > >

> > > > If one needs a good subject for a fireside or a deepening, I strongly > > > > recommend we deepen each other on whatever it takes to psychologically break

> > > > whatever it is that compels us to play such roles.

> > >

> > > > In Some Answered Questions, Abdul-Baha says of evil, it "continues and endures."

> > > > Not at all an upbeat modern concept full of psychological hope.

> > >

> > > > "I have sworn eternal hostility to all forms of Tyranny against the minds > > > > of man." - Thomas Jefferson

> > >

> > > > Maybe that's why the U.S. is the cradle of the Faith. What other countries > > > > are founded on such principles?

> > >

> > > > You make me think of James Madison in the Federalist Papers: "I never expect > > > > to see a perfect thing from imperfect man." An exceedingly Western, Christian,

> > > > American notion, though all the great religions have a sense of the limitations > > > > and modest possibilities of human material. One that such cultures as that > > > > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection > > > > and obedience. [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, doesn't > > value the free exchange of ideas.]

> > > >
> > > > FG
> > > > Rochester, Michigan, USA
> > > >
> >

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000565458@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 09 Nov 1996 17:58:48 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr01.primenet.com [206.165.5.101]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id QAA11251; Sat, 9 Nov 1996
16:03:52 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id QAA00271; Sat, 9 Nov
1996 16:03:51 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611092303.QAA00271@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

To: @moa.net ()

Date: Sat, 9 Nov 1996 16:03:50 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <328504DC.4551@moa.net> from "" at Nov 9, 96 05:25:32 pm

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

I am sorry if you have a problem with moderated newsgroups. But if you would like to take part in the discussion on this groups, you need to make sure your submittals meet the charter of the group. I am enclosing a copy of it for your reference. Please keep it in mind while reviewing the post in question and my comments. Again, when it is free of personal attacks and negative comments about a whole group of people which could find them offensive, I would be happy to post it. My reformatting request had to do with getting rid of the '>'s that have build up over the course of our exchange.

Let me also reiterate that negative comments about the Faith are fine on the newsgroup as long as they meet the charter. If you would like to make a point that Iranian culture tends towards orthodoxy and that that may impact the way some individuals act, that's alright. Just make sure the comments meet the charter. If you want to say Baha'is are a bunch of uptight, repressed, narrow-minded, religiously-conned, non-intellectual, misguided saps, just make sure you say it with a smile on your face, OK?

And one more thing, fascists like me like honey a lot better than vinegar. If you take my meaning...

Your jack-booted, brown-shirted moderator friend,

Dick Detweiler
co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
rdetweil@primenet.com

CHARTER FOR THE SOC.RELIGION.BAHAI NEWSGROUP

=====

PURPOSE

The newsgroup will act as a non-threatening forum for discussing and sharing information about the tenets, history, and texts of the Baha'i Faith. Prior to its formation there was a good amount of traffic on this topic in other newsgroups; this group provides a "single point of contact" for such discussion.

Examples of posts that fall within the group's scope are:

- * The Baha'i Faith's relation to other religions
- * Relevance of Baha'i principles to current world events/problems
- * Analysis of particular scriptural passages or themes
- * General Q & A

MODERATOR POLICIES

o The newsgroup will be subject to standards of Baha'i consultation, a decision-making process whose salient features include frank yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search for truth. In practice, the moderators will reject personal attacks (flames) directed at individual posters, similarly inflammatory attacks directed at religious institutions, and articles which use offensive language. These guidelines are intended to regulate only the tone of the discussions, and not their contents.

o The moderators will weigh the guidance available from the Baha'i Institutions such as the Universal House of Justice, National Spiritual Assemblies, Continental Counselors, and Auxiliary Board members in determining the appropriateness of postings to the newsgroup.

o To avoid confusion, articles should not contain unpublished, unauthorized translations of Baha'i texts. Instead, authors should paraphrase untranslated materials. A good model can be found in Adib Taherzadeh's 4-volume work, "The Revelation of Baha'u'llah."

o Posts which argue for or promote a succession of authority outside the Covenant of Baha'u'llah will not be posted. This does NOT preclude posts which ask about, explain or elucidate the Covenant of Baha'u'llah.

o Repetitive postings (such as multiple responses to one request for a book reference) may also be rejected.

o The moderators will not intentionally accept posts from individuals who can not be reached by email. Note that this policy does not preclude anonymous mailers, but a back-channel must exist.

o Any rejected article will be returned to the sender with an explanation. The moderators may also, when it appears helpful, insert clarifying remarks in posts, with the intent of maintaining a good signal/noise ratio.

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.58) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000566562@atlas.moa.net>;
Sun, 10 Nov 1996 07:00:46 -0500
Message-ID: <3285C57D.2927@moa.net>
Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 07:07:25 -0500
From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

References: <199611092303.QAA00271@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> I am sorry if you have a problem with moderated newsgroups.

"Problem" is a derogatory characterization of my position. What I disapprove of is CENSORED newsgroups. In my last posting, I apparently hurt your feelings.

But if > you would like to take part in the discussion on this groups, you need > to make sure your submittals meet the charter of the group. I am > enclosing a copy of it for your reference. Please keep it in mind > while reviewing the post in question and my comments. Again, when > it is free of personal attacks [you?]

and negative comments about a whole > group of people which could find them offensive,

[I qualified the obvious, i.e., what ought to go without saying.]

I would be happy > to post it. My reformatting request had to do with getting rid of > the '>'s that have build up over the course of our exchange.

I'm resending it then.

>

> Let me also reiterate that negative comments about the Faith are fine > on the newsgroup as long as they meet the charter. If you would like > to make a point that Iranian culture tends towards orthodoxy and that > that may impact the way some individuals act, that's alright. [sic] Just > make sure the comments meet the charter.

[And God has enlightened you to make the decision?]

If you want to say Baha'is > are a bunch of uptight, repressed, narrow-minded, religiously-conned, > non-intellectual, misguided saps, just make sure you say it with a > smile on your face, OK?

This, Richard, is a generalization, one apparently you find permissible.

I, however, will grant you what you refuse to grant me: The statement of an opinion without endless, absurd qualifications, IMHOs, etc.

>

> And one more thing, fascists like me like honey a lot better than > vinegar. If you take my meaning...

>

You're abusing your power. All fascists do/did. Threats stultify the exchange of ideas as much as censorship.

> Your jack-booted, brown-shirted moderator friend,

You're trying to turn into a joke a very serious issue.

>

> Dick Detweiler

> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> rdetweil@primenet.com

>

> CHARTER FOR THE SOC.RELIGION.BAHAI NEWSGROUP

> =====

I don't disagree with any of this nor did my original post.

>

>

> PURPOSE

>

> The newsgroup will act as a non-threatening forum for discussing and > sharing information about the tenets, history, and texts of the Baha'i

> Faith. Prior to its formation there was a good amount of traffic on > this topic in other newsgroups; this group provides a "single point of > contact" for such discussion.

>

> Examples of posts that fall within the group's scope are:

>

>  The Baha'i Faith's relation to other religions

>  Relevance of Baha'i principles to current world events/problems

>  Analysis of particular scriptural passages or themes

>  General Q & A

>

>

> MODERATOR POLICIES

>

> o The newsgroup will be subject to standards of Baha'i consultation, a > decision-making process whose salient features include frank yet > respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > for truth. In practice, the moderators will reject personal attacks > (flames) directed at individual posters, similarly inflammatory > attacks directed at religious institutions, and articles which use > offensive language. These guidelines are intended to regulate only > the tone of the discussions, and not their contents.

>

> o The moderators will weigh the guidance available from the Baha'i > Institutions such as the Universal House of Justice, National Spiritual > Assemblies, Continental Counselors, and Auxiliary Board members in > determining the appropriateness of postings to the newsgroup.

>

> o To avoid confusion, articles should not contain unpublished, > unauthorized translations of Baha'i texts. Instead, authors should > paraphrase untranslated materials. A good model can be found in Adib > Taherzadeh's 4-volume work, "The Revelation of Baha'u'llah."

>

> o Posts which argue for or promote a succession of authority > outside the Covenant of Baha'u'llah will not be posted. This > does NOT preclude posts which ask about, explain or elucidate > the Covenant of Baha'u'llah.

>

> o Repetitive postings (such as multiple responses to one request for a > book reference) may also be rejected.

>

> o The moderators will not intentionally accept posts from individuals who > can not be reached by email. Note that this policy does not preclude > anonymous mailers, but a back-channel must exist.

>

> o Any rejected article will be returned to the sender with an explanation.

> The moderators may also, when it appears helpful, insert clarifying > remarks in posts, with the intent of maintaining a good signal/noise > ratio.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000566755@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 10 Nov 1996 10:20:36 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr09.primenet.com [206.165.5.109]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id IAA25365; Sun, 10 Nov 1996 08:25:39 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id IAA23650; Sun, 10 Nov 1996 08:25:38 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611101525.IAA23650@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 08:25:37 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3285CAB3.45FE@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 10, 96 07:29:39 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

The following comments - as personal attacks which have no place on this newsgroup - need to be removed before this will be submitted to the newsgroup:

> especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent > evidence of this in my experience is the censoring of this posting
> the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]

and

> [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that > Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, does not
> value the free exchange of ideas.]

Strike these and incorporate your parenthetical comments into the main body of your post and I would be happy to post this to the newsgroup.

Dick Detweiler

co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

rdetweil@primenet.com

> From @moa.net Sun Nov 10 05:28:08 1996

> Received: from atlas.moa.net (atlas.moa.net [198.111.46.21]) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) with SMTP id FAA29406 for <rdetweil@primenet.com>; Sun, 10 Nov 1996 05:28:07 -0700 (MST)

> Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.58) by atlas.moa.net

> (EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000566576@atlas.moa.net>;

> Sun, 10 Nov 1996 07:23:00 -0500

> Message-ID: <3285CAB3.45FE@moa.net>

> Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 07:29:39 -0500

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> MIME-Version: 1.0

> To: rdetweil@primenet.com

> CC: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

> References: <199611091538.IAA03876@primenet.com> <328504DC.4551@moa.net>

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

>

> karl1971@aol.com wrote:

>

>

> >Personally, over the years I've been incredibly disillusioned with the Bahai

> >Community. I was brainwashed to believe it meant a lot of things it > >doesn't. To, illustrate, I can still remember going to a youth deepening

> >when I was 17 and hearing this highly respected fiery lipped ex-radical

> >ominously railing to us guys about "locker room talk" --- basically in her

> >war like ways she was trying to instill a sense of shame for thinking

> >unchaste thoughts ---- which was good in a sense ---- but believe me, the way

> >she worded herself was absolute condescending nonsense. She cleverly made it > >sound like it was a terrible crime to get horny. --- The point being, at the > >time, being a na ve kid, I took her way too seriously.

>

> Karl, people are evil and twist and debase every political and religious form to > their own purposes. I've witnessed this same kind of thing in the Baha'i Faith > many, many times. Who, if they have even a modicum of honesty and perspicacity, > hasn't?

>

> >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any

> >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike > >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with

> >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and > > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.
>
>
> Many people are all too willing to ASSUME these roles--through election or > otherwise makes little difference. Tainted wine in new vessels.
>
> >Moreover, it is precisely this sense of distrust for people in an > >authoritative position such as priests, that in my opinion, strikes a nerve > > in America's character. ---- If one needs good tactics for mass enrollments
> > in the U.S., my suggestion is that we start with those aspects of the Faith > > that appeal to those who have good reasons to distrust authority. After all, > > isn't this distrust a tradition in this country?
>
> It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by > the Iranian Baha'i influence [SOME] upon the understanding of its teachings, > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent > evidence of this in my experience is the censoring of this posting
> the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]
>
> >If one needs a reason to see why its so easy for people not to be Bahais, or
> >for that matter, why it's so easy to disobey the Laws of God, look no further > >than members of the influential Bahai Community playing surrogate priests to > >those foolish enough to play surrogate parish ----- Which has the inevitable > >effect of denying what's a part of life: what's worth respecting, what's > >worth being ashamed of, and what's worth forgiving.
>
> You, sir, have an Antinomian mind; you should OBEY!!!!
>

> > These roles have this effect because sooner or later a parish will wonder if > > the priest is worth putting on a pedestal. As such, it will eventually see > > the natural flaws in his character and not take a damn thing he says > > seriously. Whereas with independent investigation of truth, which > > Baha'u'llah so brilliantly condones, there are no flaws to be disillusioned > > with.

>

> In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorne perceived it long ago: "Evil is the Nature > of Mankind." I also recall Ecclesiastes: "The heart of the sons of men is > full of evil."

>

> > If one needs a good subject for a fireside or a deepening, I strongly > > recommend we deepen each other on whatever it takes to psychologically break > > whatever it is that compels us to play such roles.

>

> In Some Answered Questions, Abdul-Baha says of evil, it "continues and endures."
> Not at all an upbeat modern concept full of psychological hope.

>

> >"I have sworn eternal hostility to all forms of Tyranny against the minds > >of man." - Thomas Jefferson

>

> >Maybe that's why the U.S. is the cradle of the Faith. What other countries > >are founded on such principles?

>

> You make me think of James Madison in the Federalist Papers: "I never expect > to see a perfect thing from imperfect man." An exceedingly Western, Christian, > American notion, though all the great religions have a sense of the limitations > and modest possibilities of human material. One that such cultures as that > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection
> and obedience. [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point outthat > Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, does not > value the free exchange of ideas.]

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> MIME-Version: 1.0

> To: rdetweil@primenet.com

> CC: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

> References: <199611091538.IAA03876@primenet.com> <328504DC.4551@moa.net>

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

>

> karl1971@aol.com wrote:

>

>

> >Personally, over the years I've been incredibly disillusioned with the Bahai

> >Community. I was brainwashed to believe it meant a lot of things it > >doesn't. To, illustrate, I can still remember going to a youth deepening

> >when I was 17 and hearing this highly respected fiery lipped ex-radical

> >ominously railing to us guys about "locker room talk" --- basically in her

> >war like ways she was trying to instill a sense of shame for thinking

> >unchaste thoughts ---- which was good in a sense ---- but believe me, the way

> >she worded herself was absolute condescending nonsense. She cleverly made it > >sound like it was a terrible crime to get horny. --- The point being, at the > >time, being a na ve kid, I took her way too seriously.

>

> Karl, people are evil and twist and debase every political and religious form to > their own purposes. I've witnessed this same kind of thing in the Baha'i Faith > many, many times. Who, if they have even a modicum of honesty and perspicacity, > hasn't?

>
> >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any > >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike > >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with
> >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and > > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.
>
>
> Many people are all too willing to ASSUME these roles--through election or > otherwise makes little difference. Tainted wine in new vessels.
>
> >Moreover, it is precisely this sense of distrust for people in an > >authoritative position such as priests, that in my opinion, strikes a nerve > > in America's character. ---- If one needs good tactics for mass enrollments
> > in the U.S., my suggestion is that we start with those aspects of the Faith > > that appeal to those who have good reasons to distrust authority. After all, > > isn't this distrust a tradition in this country?
>
> It seems to me the growth of the Faith has been perhaps hopelessly stunted by > the Iranian Baha'i influence [SOME] upon the understanding of its teachings, > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent > evidence of this in my experience is the censoring of this posting
> the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]
>
> >If one needs a reason to see why its so easy for people not to be Bahais, or
> >for that matter, why it's so easy to disobey the Laws of God, look no further > >than members of the influential Bahai Community playing surrogate priests to > >those foolish enough to play surrogate parish ----- Which has the inevitable

> >effect of denying what's a part of life: what's worth respecting, what's > >worth being ashamed of, and what's worth forgiving.
>
> You, sir, have an Antinomian mind; you should OBEY!!!!
>
> > These roles have this effect because sooner or later a parish will wonder if > > the priest is worth putting on a pedestal. As such, it will eventually see > > the natural flaws in his character and not take a damn thing he says > > seriously. Whereas with independent investigation of truth, which > > Baha'u'llah so brilliantly condones, there are no flaws to be disillusioned > > with.
>
> In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorne perceived it long ago: "Evil is the Nature > of Mankind." I also recall Ecclesiastes: "The heart of the sons of men is > full of evil."
>
> > If one needs a good subject for a fireside or a deepening, I strongly > > recommend we deepen each other on whatever it takes to psychologically break > > whatever it is that compels us to play such roles.
>
> In Some Answered Questions, Abdul-Baha says of evil, it "continues and endures."
> Not at all an upbeat modern concept full of psychological hope.
>
> >"I have sworn eternal hostility to all forms of Tyranny against the minds > >of man." - Thomas Jefferson
>
> >Maybe that's why the U.S. is the cradle of the Faith. What other countries > >are founded on such principles?
>
> You make me think of James Madison in the Federalist Papers: "I never expect > to see a perfect thing from imperfect man." An exceedingly Western, Christian, > American notion, though all the great religions have a sense of the limitations > and modest possibilities of human material. One that such cultures as that > of Iran blithely ignore in their futile, primitive, brutal search for perfection

> and obedience. [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that > Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, does not > value the free exchange of ideas.]

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <32871D67.A62@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 11 Nov 1996 07:34:47 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

References: <199611101525.IAA23650@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> The following comments - as personal attacks which have no place on > this newsgroup - need to be removed before this will be submitted to > the newsgroup:

>

These do not constitute personal attacks but exposures of your undue interference in the content on my postings. I can understand you would prefer no one else should know about the issue. In my opinion, you're violating my constitutional freedom as an American citizen and my privilege as a Baha'i to express my conscience candidly. In both of these passages, I am taking issue with the heavy-handed editorial practice that you seem to believe is justifiable. I trust the spark of truth enough to manifest itself to allow others to speak their minds. That, to me, is a Baha'i principle, sorely neglected in your handling of my post. I believe it is legitimate use of the newsgroup to discuss the moderators' procedures for manipulating discussion.

> > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent
> > evidence of this in my experience is the censoring of this posting
> > the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]
>
> and
>
> > [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that > > Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, does not > > value the free exchange of ideas.]
>
> Strike these and incorporate your parenthetical comments into the main body > of your post and I would be happy to post this to the newsgroup.
>

Your request to strike these is so as not to draw attention to your flawed handling of my posting. You're now merely trying to protect yourself from the possible censure you have earned. I'm not out to get YOU. Don't get paranoid. It's policy that permits ANY moderator to do what you have that concerns me. I believe that policy, in context, is worthy of discussion, indeed, essential.

Your request to include my parenthetical comments constitutes another request to obscure further the real issue. Your attempt to protect yourself at the cost of silencing me.

> Dick Detweiler
> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
> rdetweil@primenet.com
>

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000569753@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 11 Nov 1996 08:48:51 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr05.primenet.com [206.165.5.105]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id GAA23233; Mon, 11 Nov 1996 06:53:55 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id GAA06981; Mon, 11 Nov 1996 06:53:54 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611111353.GAA06981@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Mon, 11 Nov 1996 06:53:53 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <32871D67.A62@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 11, 96 07:34:47 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Frederick,

The policy of this newsgroup is not to allow offensive material. Your post contains two instances where you make blanket statements about Iranians which many could view as prejudgemental and offensive. You have also insisted on including attacks on the moderator, these are not allowed as they are attacks on an individual. These comments must be tempered - moderated if you will. The purpose of this group is to share ideas and the moderators work to make sure that ideas and not people are the focus of discussion.

I am sorry but that is all there is to it. I have handed off moderation duty to the next moderator in the cycle as Sunday was my last day. Please direct any further comments to the address srb-mods@bccca.org.

If you have problems with these policies as a Baha'i, I suggest you take it up with a Local Spiritual Assembly or Auxiliary Board member as well.

Thanks again for expressing your concerns,

Dick Detweiler

co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> From @moa.net Mon Nov 11 05:33:16 1996

> Received: from atlas.moa.net (atlas.moa.net [198.111.46.21]) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) with SMTP id FAA04941 for <rdetweil@primenet.com>; Mon, 11 Nov 1996 05:33:14 -0700 (MST)

> Received: from glaysheer.library (204.38.255.45) by atlas.moa.net

> (EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000569373@atlas.moa.net>;

> Mon, 11 Nov 1996 07:28:07 -0500

> Message-ID: <32871D67.A62@moa.net>

> Date: Mon, 11 Nov 1996 07:34:47 -0500

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> MIME-Version: 1.0

> To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

> CC: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Bahai Community

> References: <199611101525.IAA23650@primenet.com>

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

>

> Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

> >

> > Dear Frederick,

> >

> > The following comments - as personal attacks which have no place on > > this newsgroup - need to be removed before this will be submitted to > > the newsgroup:

> >

>

> These do not constitute personal attacks but exposures of your undue interference > in the content on my postings. I can understand you would prefer no one else > should know about the issue. In my opinion, you're violating my constitutional > freedom as an American citizen and my privilege as a Baha'i to express my > conscience candidly. In both of these passages, I am taking issue with the > heavy-handed editorial practice that you seem to believe is justifiable. I trust > the spark of truth enough to manifest itself to allow others to speak their minds.

> That, to me, is a Baha'i principle, sorely neglected in your handling of my post.
> I believe it is legitimate use of the newsgroup to discuss the moderators' > procedures for manipulating discussion.

>

>

> > > especially in this regard. [At the insistence of the "moderator," the best recent > > > evidence of this in my experience is the censoring of this posting
> > > the first time I submitted it. As a pre-Reformation, or non-Reformation culture, Iran > > > has the typical tendency to disallow the free exchange of opinion. IMHO, this cultural > > > predilection is shared by SOME Iranian Baha'is. How could it not be?]

> >

> > and

> >

> > > [Once again forced by the CENSOR, I apparently need to point out that > > > Iran (Baha'u'llah seems to have noticed this), as a culture, does not > > > value the free exchange of ideas.]

> >

> > Strike these and incorporate your parenthetical comments into the main body > > of your post and I would be happy to post this to the newsgroup.

> >

>

> Your request to strike these is so as not to draw attention to your flawed > handling of my posting. You're now merely trying to protect yourself from > the possible censure you have earned. I'm not out to get YOU. Don't get > paranoid. It's policy that permits ANY moderator to do what you have that > concerns me. I believe that policy, in context, is worthy of discussion, > indeed, essential.

>

> Your request to include my parenthetical comments constitutes another request > to obscure further the real issue. Your attempt to protect yourself at the > cost of silencing me.

>

>

> > Dick Detweiler

> > co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> > rdetweil@primenet.com

> >

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000567520@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 10 Nov 1996 16:03:13 -0500

Received: from boatrigh (Port106.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.217]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id PAA10562; Sun, 10 Nov 1996 15:07:54 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611102107.PAA10562@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Business Computers

To: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>, @moa.net

Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 15:19:43 -0600

Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Win32 (v2.31)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear John, (and copied to Frederick)

I have already asked Frederick to decrease the quote in the message he sent to the newsgroup and to which you are replying. Could we, perhaps let you two continue this in private email, or perhaps you both would like to prepare new summeries of your positions for the newsgroup? These messages with their extremely lenthly quoted context violate the signal-to-noise ratio that the newsgroup generally strives for.

Rick Boatright
co-moderator
soc.religion.bahai

Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 11:18:02 -0600 (CST)
From: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>
To: FG <@moa.net>
Cc: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought

On Sun, 10 Nov 1996, FG wrote:

> John Haukness wrote:

> >

> > Dear Friends: One can see me as anti-whatever they want. The writings of > > the Guardian make it clear to me that the american separation of Church > > and state is based on fear and will fade away.

>

> It's based on fear of the harsh realities of historical experience--often > bloody. The Guardian is more nuanced.

And now we live in the Day that will not be followed by nite! Also, we

as much historical episodes of blood baths as a result of secular behaviors so do you want also to separate the secular from the secular based on using the same logic? have> > As far as equating

> > Religion and state as one, being common anti intellectual sentiment, I am > > familiar with a long list of Baha'i's arguing this, many who have > > published far more than I have- I wish people would start studying Shoghi

> > Effendi with an open mind, and Abdul Baha's statements on education.

> >

> > Of course my friends William and John Hatcher have put this issue to > > rest, safe ground, as with their publishing record, it is hard to call > > them anti-intellectual. From Shoghi Effendi: "As the Baha'i

> > Administrative Order rapidly expands throughout the world it behooves

> > everyone associated with it to familiarize himself with its principles > > to understand its import and to put its precepts into practice. The > > divinely ordained institutions of the Local Spiritual Assembly operates

> > at the first levels of human society and is the basic administrative unit > > of Bahauallah's World Order." So how are you going to separate religion > > from Bahauallah's World Order, an Order, Bahauallah has placed the state in?

> >

>

> I made no such suggestion.

> The suggestion of your post was that Western secularism's separation of church and state was good, I assumed you were applying that it still is necessary.

> Well, John, you sure know how to ignore unpleasant facts and dispense with > 400 years of religious and social history triumphantly.
> As I have said, there is no conclusive evidence that the separation of church and state have provided the security you are attributing, for the>past 400 years there are as many wars, forced famines and the like among church against church and state against state, Likewise being ignored are all the successful ventures of cooperation the past 400 years of religion and state; but regardless, that was then and now is now. What strikes me, is that with keen insight, (I would shure like to hear from the readers who already have noticed the following) one can begin to see the faint glimmers, that secular society and religious society are beginning to come upon, what the Hatcher's so elequantly wrote about, that religion is inseparable from science, they are married interwoven in the foundation. (I am not saying there are not appropriate manmade separations, in man's need for efficiency and specialization
one needs to make artificial separations all the time, but if you look at Shoghi Effendi's writings on the Assemblies and Houses of Justice, and Abdul Baha's on schools, you can clearly see, that at the foundation level, religion and state are complimentary, and that the Local House of Justice, and Baha'i School are the foundation institutions of the New World Order state.

All the best! > >

> > > Your post seems to me to be ladened with the anti-intellectualism that > > > has become characteristic of the thinking of many Baha'is. Your > > > conclusions don't appear to me to be supported by the Baha'i Writings.

> > >

> > > Given modern religious history, since the 1600s really, Western > > > secularism has quite rightly that the separation of religion from > > > the state is in everyone's best interest.

> > >

> > > The Baha'i Faith has yet sufficiently to prove otherwise.

> > >

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from gaston.tenet.edu (198.213.2.8) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000577994@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 12 Nov 1996 19:08:21 -0500

Received: (from haukness@localhost) by gaston.tenet.edu (8.7.6/8.7.3) id SAA07867; Tue, 12 Nov 1996 18:03:47 -0600 (CST)

Date: Tue, 12 Nov 1996 18:03:34 -0600 (CST)

From: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>

To: Rick Boatright <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

cc: @moa.net

Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought

In-Reply-To: <199611102107.PAA10562@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Message-ID: <Pine.OSF.3.91.961112180053.2015E-100000@gaston.tenet.edu>

MIME-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: TEXT/PLAIN; charset=US-ASCII

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Rick: After reviewing my message I find my tone and objectivity, is quite more temperate and reserved than many other posts. I find soc.religion's moderating policy to lean towards the left ideology.

On Sun, 10 Nov 1996, Rick Boatright wrote:

> Dear John, (and copied to Frederick)

>

> I have already asked Frederick to decrease the quote in the message

> he sent to the newsgroup and to which you are replying. Could we,

> perhaps let you two continue this in private email, or perhaps you > both would like to prepare new summaries of your positions for the > newsgroup? These messages with their extremely lengthy quoted > context violate the signal-to-noise ratio that the newsgroup > generally strives for.

>
> Rick Boatright
> co-moderator
> soc.religion.bahai
>
>
> Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 11:18:02 -0600 (CST)
> From: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>
> To: FG <@moa.net>
> Cc: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought
>
>
>
> On Sun, 10 Nov 1996, FG wrote:
>
> > John Haukness wrote:
> > >
> > > Dear Friends: One can see me as anti-whatever they want. The writings of > > > the Guardian make it clear to me that the american separation of Church > > > and state is based on fear and will fade away.
> >
> > It's based on fear of the harsh realities of historical experience--often > > bloody. The Guardian is more nuanced.
>
> And now we live in the Day that will not be followed by nite! Also, we > as much historical episodes of blood baths as a result of secular > behaviors so do you want also to separate the secular from the > secular based on using the same logic? have> > As far as equating

> > > Religion and state as one, being common anti intellectual sentiment, I am

> > > familiar with a long list of Baha'i's arguing this, many who have > > > published far more than I have- I wish people would start studying Shoghi

> > > Effendi with an open mind, and Abdul Baha's statements on education.

> > >

> > > Of course my friends William and John Hatcher have put this issue to > > > rest, safe ground, as with their publishing record, it is hard to call > > > them anti-intellectual. From Shoghi Effendi: "As the Baha'i

> > > Administrative Order rapidly expands throughout the world it behooves

> > > everyone associated with it to familiarize himself with its principles

> > > to understand its import and to put its precepts into practice. The > > > divinely ordained institutions of the Local Spiritual Assembly operates

> > > at the first levels of human society and is the basic administrative unit

> > > of Bahauallah's World Order." So how are you going to separate religion > > > from Bahauallah's World Order, an Order, Bahauallah has placed the state in?

> > >

> >

> > I made no such suggestion.

> > The suggestion of your post was that Western secularism's separation > of church and state was good, I assumed you were applying that it still > is necessary.

>

>

>

> > Well, John, you sure know how to ignore unpleasant facts and dispense with > > 400 years of religious and social history triumphantly.

> > As I have said, there is no conclusive evidence that the separation of > church and state have provided the security you are attributing, for > the>past 400 years there are as many wars, forced famines and the like

> among church against church and state against state, Likewise being > ignored are all the successful ventures of cooperation the past 400

> years of religion and state; but regardless, that was then and now > is now. What stikes me, is that with keen insight, (I would shure like > to hear from the readers who already have noticed the following) one > can begin to see the faint glimmers, that secular society and religious > society are beginning to come upon, what the Hatcher's so elequantly > wrote about, that religion is inseparable from science, they are married > interwoven in the foundation. (I am not saying there are not appropriate > manmade separations, in man's need for efficiency and specialization
> one needs to make artificial separations all the time, but if you look > at Shoghi Effendi's writings on the Assemblies and Houses of Justice, > and Abdul Baha's on schools, you can clearly see, that at the foundation > level, religion and state are complimentary, and that the Local House of > Justice, and Baha'i School are the foundation institutions of the New > World Order state.
> All the best! > >
> > > > Your post seems to me to be ladened with the anti-intellectualism that > > > > has become characteristic of the thinking of many Baha'is. Your > > > > conclusions don't appear to me to be supported by the Baha'i Writings.
> > > >
> > > > Given modern religious history, since the 1600s really, Western > > > > secularism has quite rightly that the separation of religion from > > > > the state is in everyone's best interest.
> > > >
> > > > The Baha'i Faith has yet sufficiently to prove otherwise.
> > > >
> >
>

-----3E69366EFD

Wed, 13 Nov 1996 07:21:48 -0500

Message-ID: <3289BEEC.27DF@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 13 Nov 1996 07:28:28 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought

References: <Pine.OSF.3.91.961112180053.2015E-100000@gaston.tenet.edu>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Another excellent example, apparently, of the abuse of your laughable little powers as a "moderator." You're interfering too much in the CONTENT of the message.

John Haukness wrote:

>

> Dear Rick: After reviewing my message I find my tone and objectivity, is > quite more temperate and reserved than many other posts. I find > soc.religion's moderating policy to lean towards the left ideology.

>

> On Sun, 10 Nov 1996, Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> > Dear John, (and copied to Frederick)

> >

> > I have already asked Frederick to decrease the quote in the message

> > he sent to the newsgroup and to which you are replying. Could we,

> > perhaps let you two continue this in private email, or perhaps you > > both would like to prepare new summeries of your positions for the > > newsgroup? These messages with their extremely lenthly quoted > > context violate the signal-to-noise ratio that the newsgroup > > generally strives for.

> >

> > Rick Boatright
> > co-moderator
> > soc.religion.bahai

> >

> >

> > Date: Sun, 10 Nov 1996 11:18:02 -0600 (CST)
> > From: John Haukness <haukness@tenet.edu>
> > To: FG <@moa.net>
> > Cc: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> > Subject: Re: Reviewing and Freedom of Speech and Thought

> >

> >

> >

> > On Sun, 10 Nov 1996, FG wrote:

> >

> > > John Haukness wrote:

> > > >

> > > > Dear Friends: One can see me as anti-whatever they want. The writings of > > > > the Guardian make it clear to me that the american separation of Church > > > > and state is based on fear and will fade away.

> > >

> > > It's based on fear of the harsh realities of historical experience--often > > > bloody. The Guardian is more nuanced.

> >

> > And now we live in the Day that will not be followed by nite! Also, we > > as much historical episodes of bood baths as a result of secular > > behaviors so do you want also to separate the secular from the > > secular based on using the same logic? have> > As far as equating

> > > Religion and state as one, being common anti intellectual sentiment, I am

> > > familiar with a long list of Baha'i's arguing this, many who have > > > published far more than I have- I wish people would start studying Shoghi

> > > Effendi with an open mind, and Abdul Baha's statements on education.

> > > >

> > > > Of course my friends William and John Hatcher have put this issue to > > > > rest, safe ground, as with their publishing record, it is hard to call > > > > them anti-intellectual. From Shoghi Effendi: "As the Baha'i

> > > > Administrative Order rapidly expands throughout the world it behooves

> > > > everyone associated with it to familiarize himself with its principles

> > > > to understand its import and to put its precepts into practice. The > > > > divinely ordained institutions of the Local Sprriityal Assembly operates

> > > > at the first levels of human society and is the basic administrative unit > > > > of Bahaulлах's World Order." So how are you going to separate religion > > > > from Bahaulлах's World Order, an Order, Bahaulлах has placed the state in?

> > > >

> > >

> > > I made no such suggestion.

> > > The suggestion of your post was that Western secularism's separation > > of church and state was good, I assumed you were applying that it still > > is necessary.

> >

> >

> >

> > > Well, John, you sure know how to ignore unpleasant facts and dispense with > > > 400 years of religious and social history triumphantly.

> > > As I have said, there is no conclusive evidence that the separation of > > church and state have provided the security you are attributing, for > > the>past 400 years there are as many wars, forced famines and the like

> > among church against church and state against state, Likewise being > > ignored are all the successful ventures of cooperation the past 400

> > years of religion and state; but regardless, that was then and now > > is now. What stikes me, is that with keen insight, (I would shure like > > to hear from the readers who already have noticed the following) one > > can begin to see the faint glimmers, that secular society and religious > > society are beginning to come upon, what the Hatcher's so elequantly > > wrote about, that religion is inseparable from science, they are married > > interwoven in the foundation. (I am not saying there are not appropriate > > manmade separations, in man's need for efficiency and specialization
> > one needs to make artificial separations all the time, but if you look > > at Shoghi Effendi's writings on the Assemblies and Houses of Justice, > > and Abdul Baha's on schools, you can clearly see, that at the foundation > > level, religion and state are complimentary, and that the Local House of > > Justice, and Baha'i School are the foundation institutions of the New > > World Order state.
> > All the best! > >
> > > > Your post seems to me to be ladened with the anti-intellectualism that > > > > has become characteristic of the thinking of many Baha'is. Your > > > > conclusions don't appear to me to be supported by the Baha'i Writings.
> > > >
> > > > Given modern religious history, since the 1600s really, Western > > > > secularism has quite rightly that the separation of religion from > > > > the state is in everyone's best interest.
> > > >
> > > > The Baha'i Faith has yet sufficiently to prove otherwise.
> > > >
> > >
> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000575596@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 12 Nov 1996 11:08:59 -0500

Received: from RICK (Port21.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.31]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id KAA28513 for <@moa.net>; Tue, 12 Nov 1996 10:13:39 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611121613.KAA28513@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Busines Computers

To: FG <@moa.net>

Date: Tue, 12 Nov 1996 10:14:01 -0600

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned -- THANK YOU!

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Windows (v2.23)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Thanks. That was just posted to the net. I appriciate your patience in working with the moderators on this.

Rick Boatright

co-moderator

soc.religion.bahai

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <3289BE59.6BA7@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 13 Nov 1996 07:26:01 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned -- THANK YOU!

References: <199611121613.KAA28513@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> Thanks. That was just posted to the net. I appreciate your patience > in working with the moderators on this.

>

No patience at all. You and your cohorts are heavy-handed, self-righteous fascists who apparently believe God has touched you with holy wisdom.

I feel nothing but contempt for Baha'is like you.

> Rick Boatright

> co-moderator

> soc.religion.bahai

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.44) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000579504@atlas.moa.net>;
Wed, 13 Nov 1996 07:19:19 -0500
Message-ID: <3289BE59.6BA7@moa.net>
Date: Wed, 13 Nov 1996 07:26:01 -0500
From: FG <@moa.net>
X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
MIME-Version: 1.0
To: boatright@cjnetworks.com
CC: @MOA.net
Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned -- THANK YOU!
References: <199611121613.KAA28513@topeka.cjnetworks.com>
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> Thanks. That was just posted to the net. I appreciate your patience > in working with the moderators on this.

>

No patience at all. You and your cohorts are heavy-handed,
self-righteous fascists who apparently believe God has touched you with holy wisdom.

I feel nothing but contempt for Baha'is like you.

> Rick Boatright

> co-moderator

> soc.religion.bahai

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000596273@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 17 Nov 1996 10:40:51 -0500

Received: from boatrigh (Port75.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.86]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id JAA08025; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:35 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611171545.JAA08025@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Business Computers

To: FG <@MOA.net>

Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:57:52 -0600

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: srb-mods@bccca.org

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Win32 (v2.31)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Really nice message. Good work. Thanks for hanging in there with us Frederick. I really appreciate it.

Rick Boatright

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:10:16 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> To: mac13@teleport.com

> Cc: @MOA.net

> mac13@teleport.com wrote:

> >

> > In article <"Yu8EZB.A.s9F.YwJjy"@bounty>,

> > FG <@moa.net> wrote:

> > > Cheshmak A Farhoumand wrote:

> > > > [clip]

> > >

> > With all due respect, the impression I have of previous > > systems is a system of "hierarchy and > > > authority that flows downward, entrapping many people into > > actions and > > systems imposed upon them from above.

> >

> > With all due respect, with what I am slowly learning about > > the Baha'i Faith, much authority is dervied from an > > hierarchy commencing at a very local level and then > > ascending.

> >

>

> I don't believe your local level metaphor, if you will, here quite fits.

> The UHJ is not a local institution.... It's members are distant and > unknown to most local Baha'is.

>

> [clip]

>

> > Perhaps those people who have long held within their grasp

> > the reins of the people governed and whose words were so > > lofty and whose deeds were so shameful will wonder if a > > system based on authority and hierarchy ascending from the > > local level has any chance to work, given the elements with > > which it is composed.

>

> "The elements with which it is composed": Nice phrase. Echoes Shoghi Effendi > somewhere or other doesn't? This is the crux of my thinking.

>

> [clip]

>

> >

> > You state that

> > "Shoghi Effendi and The Promised Day is Come with the > > word "power." He obviously spent his life developing a > > system based on hierarchy and authority. To call these > > things "old world" is inaccurate. To observe > > that power can be abused in the Baha'i Faith is not "old > > world."

> >

> > I must disagree with you that my personal opinion is that > > Shoghi Effendi labored those years to implement the > > structure set forth by Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha.

>

> Of course I agree with you here by and large. However, that structure was none > too detailed.... Shoghi Effendi's study at Oxford of political philosophy > provided more than a little useful background knowledge. Obvious observation, > if you will, for anyone who's actually studied political philosophy.

>

> He

> > found ways to give it expression that did NOT entail > > the abuse of "hierarchy and authority" on a descending > > mode being imposed upon many... my personal opinion is that > > he found ways to implement a program to ensure that > > authority derived from the Institutions and the Institutions > > dervied authority initially from local levels...

>

> Perhaps you're right. Give concrete examples.

>

> that is > > not "Old World Order".

>

> What are those "ways"? Can you list them? I would find specific examples of them > in practical application interesting....

>

> > I am sorry that one would be incredibly disillusioned with > > the Baha'i Community. It is made up of humans, lots and > > lots of humans who, as I have mentioned before, have come > > with much baggage from the system in which many have lived > > for years. They are trying: they are not isolating as some > > organizations might... fearing contamination from an outside > > world.

>

> You really don't address here the original issue from the person who wrote

> "incredibly disillusioned with the Baha'i Community." That wasn't me. Human?

> That's my point. You rush past it too quickly to my mind.

>

> "Isolating"? Baha'i communities, as I have experienced them for twenty years, > often seem extremely isolated and isolating.... I have often wondered why.

> Any ideas?

>

> > Thanks for "listening" to my comments.

> > Good luck, and take care.

> >

> > ---Dennis

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.39) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000599064@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 07:57:31 -0500

Message-ID: <32905ECF.5790@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:04:15 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611171545.JAA08025@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> Really nice message. Good work. Thanks for hanging in there with > us Frederick. I really appreciate it.

>

> Rick Boatright

>

Frankly, I don't know what you mean here.

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> > Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:10:16 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > To: mac13@teleport.com

> > Cc: @MOA.net

>

> > mac13@teleport.com wrote:

> > >

> > > In article <"Yu8EZB.A.s9F.YwJjy"@bounty>,

> > > FG <@moa.net> wrote:

> > > >Cheshmak A Farhoumand wrote:

> > > > [clip]

> > > >

> > > With all due respect, the impression I have of previous > > > systems is a system of "hierarchy and > > > >authority that flows downward, entrapping many people into

>

[cut]

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000600246@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 11:34:58 -0500

Received: from RICK (Port106.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.217]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id KAA16177; Mon, 18 Nov 1996 10:39:41 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611181639.KAA16177@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Busines Computers

To: FG <@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 10:40:09 -0600

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: srb-mods@bccca.org

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Windows (v2.23)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

I was trying to say two unrelated things.

First, that was a really nice message. Well thought, cohesive, good writing, I was trying to give you a compliment.

Second, I was expressing my gratitude that the conflict between you and the moderators a couple of weeks ago did not result in your leaving the newsgroup. I appriciate your continued participation.

Rick Boatright

> Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:04:15 -0500

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

> Cc: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> Rick Boatright wrote:

> >

> > Really nice message. Good work. Thanks for hanging in there with > > us Frederick. I really appreciate it.

> >

> > Rick Boatright

> >

>

> Frankly, I don't know what you mean here.

>

>

> > > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> > > Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:10:16 -0500

> > > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > > To: mac13@teleport.com

> > > Cc: @MOA.net

> >

> > > mac13@teleport.com wrote:

> > > >

> > > > In article <"Yu8EZB.A.s9F.YwJjy"@bounty>,

> > > > FG <@moa.net> wrote:

> > > > >Cheshmak A Farhoumand wrote:

> > > > > [clip]

> > > > >

> > > > With all due respect, the impression I have of previous > > > systems is a system of "hierarchy and > > > > authority that flows downward, entrapping many people into

> >
>
> [cut]
>
> --
> FG
> Rochester, Michigan USA
>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.58) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000603626@atlas.moa.net>;
Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:28:51 -0500
Message-ID: <32919B88.7907@moa.net>
Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:35:36 -0500
From: FG <@moa.net>
X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
MIME-Version: 1.0
To: boatright@cjnetworks.com
CC: @MOA.net
Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community
References: <199611181639.KAA16177@topeka.cjnetworks.com>
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>
> Dear Frederick,

>

> I was trying to say two unrelated things.

>

> First, that was a really nice message. Well thought, cohesive, good > writing, I was trying to give you a compliment.

>

I don't need nor want your unsolicited editorial comments BIG BROTHER.

I want the freedom to speak the conscience God has given me and the freedom to be responded to by OTHERS' unconstrained consciences. Stay out of the way.

> Second, I was expressing my gratitude that the conflict between you > and the moderators a couple of weeks ago did not result in your > leaving the newsgroup. I appreciate your continued participation.

>

I feel nothing but contempt for the way you and Richard Detweiler have handled my postings. Make no mistake in that regard. Neither one of you, or anybody, has the prescience to exercise such power and control over others' consciences.

The abuse of your power is a proper subject for discussion on the newsgroup.

> > Rick Boatright wrote:

> > >

> > > Really nice message. Good work. Thanks for hanging in there with > > > us Frederick. I really appreciate it.

> > >

> > > Rick Boatright

> > >

> >

> > Frankly, I don't know what you mean here.

> >

> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu (141.210.10.152) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000603613@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:06:28 -0500

Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id GAA23652; Tue, Nov 1996 06:08:59 -0500

To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net

From: FG <@MOA.net>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:10:21 -0500

Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

Lines: 78

Message-ID: <3291959D.7D9C@moa.net>

References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qoi9$rmd@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

To: Anne Furlong <afurlong@cs.mun.ca>

CC: @MOA.net

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Anne Furlong wrote:

>

> The reference to power probably helps poinpoint the difficulty some of > the friends have here. The point is that in this Faith, for the first > time in religious history, power and authority have been intentionally > and effectively severed. The authority to make decisions, to legislate, > to guide, rests with the elected institutions of the Faith. However, > these institutions - and the individuals who make them up - have no power > whatsoever.

"No power whatsoever": Utterly naive....

[clip]

>

> Why do people become disillusioned with the community? with individuals?
> Well, we all know people who, by force of personality, or because of > defects of character and personality, receive, demand, or desire > acquiescence from other individuals. But note: if such people do in fact > poison a community, who ultimately must take the responsibility? Power > is not theirs to command: it is ceded to them by those who have not the > wisdom or the courage to recognise that what is being asked is both > contrary to the Faith, and ultimately impossible to give.
>

Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

- > Yes, impossible: for since in the Administrative order which is
- > Baha'u'llah's gift to the world, power and authority are divided,

In theory, yes; in practice, I'm not convinced.

then the

- > efforts of a few misguided individuals to bring power and authority
- > together in their own persons; or to build up factions; or to do anything,
- > in fact, which is contravenes the spirit and the reality of the Covenant,
- > are doomed to failure. 'Abdul-Baha said that the ocean of the Covenant
- > will surge and surge until it casts the bodies of the (spiritually) dead
- > onto the shore. We cannot ultimately harm the progress of the Cause, but
- > can cut ourselves off from the abundant share of the blessings which
- > obedience to the Covenant brings to us.
- >
- > If we are disillusioned with the community we live in, then our response
- > will either add to the problem or be the start of its eradication. The
- > whole purpose of consultation is to allow the individual to exercise
- > responsibility - his power - within the "unit of civilization".

What I am saying is that there are situations when it is not allowed. You're too quick to leap over that fact for me.

We are

- > all going to be responsible for our actions to Baha'u'llah when we pass
- > from this earth; are we going to plead the immaturity of others as the
- > reason for our failure to love?
- >

Your dragging "love" into this confuses the issue.

> Baha'u'llah did more than despise tyranny; in his Administrative Order,
> He, as the Divine Physician, prescribed the effective and permanent remedy.
>

The point from the original post was in regard to the abuse of the remedy, turning it into a cheap medicine show elixir. What then of the community or individuals under that Tyranny?

> All the best,
>
> Anne Furlong
> St John's Newfoundland Canada

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.55) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000632990@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 26 Nov 1996 06:17:24 -0500

Message-ID: <329AD35D.6E67@moa.net>

Date: Tue, 26 Nov 1996 06:24:13 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: srb-mods@bccca.org

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qoi9$rmd@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

<3291959D.7D9C@moa.net>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Anne Furlong wrote:

>

> The reference to power probably helps poinpoint the difficulty some of > the friends have here. The point is that in this Faith, for the first > time in religious history, power and authority have been intentionally > and effectively severed. The authority to make decisions, to legislate, > to guide, rests with the elected institutions of the Faith. However, > these institutions - and the individuals who make them up - have no power > whatsoever.

"No power whatsoever": Utterly naive....

[clip]

>

> Why do people become disillusioned with the community? with individuals?
> Well, we all know people who, by force of personality, or because of > defects of character and personality, receive, demand, or desire > acquiescence from other individuals. But note: if such people do in fact > poison a community, who ultimately must take the responsibility? Power > is not theirs to command: it is ceded to them by those who have not the > wisdom or the courage to recognise that what is being asked is both > contrary to the Faith, and ultimately impossible to give.
>

Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

> Yes, impossible: for since in the Administrative order which is

> Baha'u'llah's gift to the world, power and authority are divided,

In theory, yes; in practice, I'm not convinced.

then the > efforts of a few misguided individuals to bring power and authority

> together in their own persons; or to build up factions; or to do anything, > in fact, which contravenes the spirit and the reality of the Covenant,

> are doomed to failure. 'Abdul-Baha said that the ocean of the Covenant

> will surge and surge until it casts the bodies of the (spiritually) dead

> onto the shore. We cannot ultimately harm the progress of the Cause, but > can cut ourselves off from the abundant share of the blessings which > obedience to the Covenant brings to us.

>

> If we are disillusioned with the community we live in, then our response > will either add to the problem or be the start of its eradication. The > whole purpose of consultation is to allow the individual to exercise > responsibility - his power - within the "unit of civilization".

What I am saying is that there are situations when it is not allowed. You're too quick to leap over that fact for me.

We are > all going to be responsible for our actions to Baha'u'llah when we pass

> from this earth; are we going to plead the immaturity of others as the > reason for our failure to love?

>

Your dragging "love" into this confuses the issue.

> Baha'u'llah did more than despise tyranny; in his Administrative Order,
> He, as the Divine Physician, prescribed the effective and permanent remedy.
>

The point from the original post was in regard to the abuse of the remedy, turning it into a cheap medicine show elixir. What then of the community or individuals under that Tyranny?

> All the best,
>
> Anne Furlong
> St John's Newfoundland Canada

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000604653@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 19 Nov 1996 09:29:07 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr11.primenet.com [206.165.5.111]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id HAA10366; Tue, 19 Nov 1996
07:34:11 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.2) id HAA23362; Tue, 19 Nov
1996 07:34:11 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611191434.HAA23362@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

To: @MOA.net (FG)

Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 07:34:10 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <32918F7B.76FA@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 19, 96 05:44:11 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

As your post contains sarcastic comments and argues with the moderation of the group in a demeaning and disrespectful manner, it will not be posted. These issues are also peripheral to the purpose of the newsgroup in any case.

If you are seeking full vent to your frustrations, I suggest news.admin or talk.religion.misc on the Internet as the first is appropriate and the other is unmoderated. This newsgroup, however, is for discussion of the Baha'i Faith in an atmosphere of respect and free from topical tangents of all kinds.

Thank you for participating,

Dick Detweiler

rdetweil@primenet.com

Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

===== Begin submitted post =====

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 05:44:11 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 68

> Message-ID: <32918F7B.76FA@moa.net>

> References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qogd$rri@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> To: Sian Smith <sms@mfe.govt.nz>

> CC: @MOA.net

>

> Sian Smith wrote:

> >

> > In article <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty>, FG
<@moa.net> says:

> > >

> >

> > [snip extracts from previous messages about being disillusioned]

> >

> > > : >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any

> > > : >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike

> > > : >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with

> > > : >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and

> > > : > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > >

> > >> : Since the Baha'i Community does not have a paid clergy, every Baha'is is
> > >> : to perform the service that the clergy of previous religions performed. We
> > >> : are each to study the Holy Writings, and to teach and deepen others in the > > >> : Faith. It may be hard for one of a traditional religious background that > > >> : does not encourage study to take responsibility for one's own spiritual
> > >> : growth, but we all have to struggle to change our shortcomings.

> > >>

> > >

> > >Miguel, you utterly miss Karl's well-taken point here again. It's the abuse of > > >the responsibility that is the crux of his observation. Power corrupts.
> > >And it can corrupt Baha'is as well as Christians, Muslims, Nazis, etc.

> >

> > Excuse my ignorance, but WHO in the Baha'i Faith has any "power"? I've > > never met anyone in the Faith who has power of any kind (i.e: power in > > the sense that they can exert some kind of binding influence over > > another person).

>

> I'll give you an example: The "moderators" of this newsgroup. They've > censored a number of messages I've tried to post during the last few weeks.
> They have the "power" to determine what you and everyone else OUT THERE > reads.... It that's not control and power to SHAPE thought and opinion what > is it?

>

> Maybe the previous writer was referring to some other > > kind of power - in which case I would be grateful to receive a > > "definition", so to speak, of this power and how it compares to the > > "definition" I had in mind which, in my own humble opinion, is the sort > > of power which is contained in the assertion "power corrupts".

> >

>

> The "moderators" power is corrupting and inhibiting the exchange of ideas > on this newsgroup. When I attempted to bring this to the attention of > contributors by posting a message to this effect earlier, I was told

>

> THOU SHALT NOT QUESTION THE AUTHORITY AND POWER OF THE
"MODERATORS."

> Kitab-i-Oppression, page 999.

>

> > The only person who has any kind of power over my spiritual development > > is ME. I cannot abdicate that responsibility to someone else.

> >

>

> There's a sense in which you're right. But secular and religious history > is wracked with the abuse of POWER and the devastating results of it....

> It always began in little ways.... A little at a time.... People shrugged....

> Let's not make ways.... Let's build UNITY!

>

> > Loving greetings

> >

> > Sian Smith

> > Wellington

> > New Zealand

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

===== End submitted post =====

-----3E69366EFD

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000609283@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 20 Nov 1996 08:46:37 -0500

Message-ID: <32930D52.2FC8@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 08:53:22 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611191434.HAA23362@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

>

> Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

>

> As your post contains sarcastic comments and argues with the > moderation of the group in a demeaning and disrespectful manner, > it will not be posted. These issues are also peripheral to > the purpose of the newsgroup in any case.

>

> If you are seeking full vent to your frustrations, I suggest

> news.admin or talk.religion.misc on the Internet as the first > is appropriate and the other is unmoderated. This newsgroup, > however, is for discussion of the Baha'i Faith in an atmosphere > of respect and free from topical tangents of all kinds.

>

> Thank you for participating,
>
> Dick Detweiler
> rdetweil@primenet.com
> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
>

I'm not at all surprised Richardt.... Fascists and totalitarians have always sought to conceal and manipulate reality.

> ===== Begin submitted post =====
>
> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net
> > From: FG <@MOA.net>
> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai
> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community
> > Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 05:44:11 -0500
> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.
> > Lines: 68
> > Message-ID: <32918F7B.76FA@moa.net>
> > References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qogd$rri@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>
> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net
> > Mime-Version: 1.0
> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
> > To: Sian Smith <sms@mfe.govt.nz>
> > CC: @MOA.net

> >

> > Sian Smith wrote:

> > >

> > > In article <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty>, FG
<@moa.net> says:

> > > >

> > >

> > > [snip extracts from previous messages about being disillusioned]

> > >

> > > > : >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any

> > > > : >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike

> > > > : >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with

> > > > : >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and

> > > > : > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > > >

> > > > : Since the Baha'i Community does not have a paid clergy, every Baha'is is

> > > > : to perform the service that the clergy of previous religions performed. We

> > > > : are each to study the Holy Writings, and to teach and deepen others in the

> > > > : Faith. It may be hard for one of a traditional religious background that

> > > > : does not encourage study to take responsibility for one's own spiritual

> > > > : growth, but we all have to struggle to change our shortcomings.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > Miguel, you utterly miss Karl's well-taken point here again. It's the abuse of > > > > the responsibility that is the crux of his observation. Power corrupts.

> > > > And it can corrupt Baha'is as well as Christians, Muslims, Nazis, etc.

> > >

> > > Excuse my ignorance, but WHO in the Baha'i Faith has any "power"? I've > > > never met anyone in the Faith who has power of any kind (i.e: power in > > > the sense that they can exert some kind of binding influence over > > > another person).

> >

> > I'll give you an example: The "moderators" of this newsgroup. They've > > censored a number of messages I've tried to post during the last few weeks.

> > They have the "power" to determine what you and everyone else OUT THERE > > reads.... It that's not control and power to SHAPE thought and opinion what > > is it?

> >

> > Maybe the previous writer was referring to some other

> > > kind of power - in which case I would be grateful to receive a

> > > "definition", so to speak, of this power and how it compares to the

> > > "definition" I had in mind which, in my own humble opinion, is the sort > > > of power which is contained in the assertion "power corrupts".

> > >

> >

> > The "moderators" power is corrupting and inhibiting the exchange of ideas

> > on this newsgroup. When I attempted to bring this to the attention of > > contributors by posting a message to this effect earlier, I was told

> >

> > THOU SHALT NOT QUESTION THE AUTHORITY AND POWER OF THE

> > "MODERATORS."

> > Kitab-i-Oppression, page 999.

> >

> > > The only person who has any kind of power over my spiritual development

> > > is ME. I cannot abdicate that responsibility to someone else.

> > >

> >

> > There's a sense in which you're right. But secular and religious history > > is wracked with the abuse of POWER and the devastating results of it....

> > It always began in little ways.... A little at a time.... People shrugged....

> > Let's not make waves.... Let's build UNITY!

> >

> > > Loving greetings

> > >

> > > Sian Smith

> > > Wellington

> > > New Zealand

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

>

> ===== End submitted post =====

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.66) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000609715@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 20 Nov 1996 10:20:19 -0500

Message-ID: <32932348.5E7E@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 10:27:04 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611191434.HAA23362@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

>

> Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

>

> As your post contains sarcastic comments and argues with the > moderation of the group in a demeaning and disrespectful manner,

> it will not be posted. These issues are also peripheral to > the purpose of the newsgroup in any case.

>

False. They go to the heart of the matter, i.e., how it functions.

> If you are seeking full vent to your frustrations, I suggest

> news.admin or talk.religion.misc on the Internet as the first > is appropriate and the other is unmoderated.

"Vent your frustrations" is in the same category as my "Utterly naive."

I don't seek to deprive you of your conscience that apparently believes that. You may say what you wish. It won't hurt my little feelings.

I believe you're again manipulating discussion in a dictatorial, oppressive manner unjustified by anything in the Baha'i Writings which you apparently cloak your shameless deeds in.

This newsgroup,

> however, is for discussion of the Baha'i Faith in an atmosphere > of respect and free from topical tangents of all kinds.

>

The abuse of the conscience of a member of the Baha'i Faith and, apparently regular practice of distortion and censorship is not a suitable topic?

I can understand why you wouldn't wish to have anyone else know....

> Thank you for participating,

>

I'm not participating at all. You are self-righteous depriving me of that.

You are also depriving others of hearing or disagreeing with my opinions.

> Dick Detweiler

> rdetweil@primenet.com

> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

>

> ===== Begin submitted post =====

>

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net

> > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> > Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 05:44:11 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > Lines: 68

> > Message-ID: <32918F7B.76FA@moa.net>

> > References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qogd$rri@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> > Mime-Version: 1.0

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > To: Sian Smith <sms@mfe.govt.nz>

> > CC: @MOA.net

> >

> > Sian Smith wrote:

> > >

> > > In article <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty>, FG
<@moa.net> says:

> > > >

> > >

> > > [snip extracts from previous messages about being disillusioned]

> > >

> > > > : >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any

> > > > : >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike

> > > > : >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with

> > > > : >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and

> > > > : > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > > >

> > > > : Since the Baha'i Community does not have a paid clergy, every Baha'is is

> > > > : to perform the service that the clergy of previous religions performed. We

> > > > : are each to study the Holy Writings, and to teach and deepen others in the

> > > > : Faith. It may be hard for one of a traditional religious background that

> > > > : does not encourage study to take responsibility for one's own spiritual

> > > > : growth, but we all have to struggle to change our shortcomings.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >Miguel, you utterly miss Karl's well-taken point here again. It's the abuse of > > > >the responsibility that is the crux of his observation. Power corrupts.

> > > >And it can corrupt Baha'is as well as Christians, Muslims, Nazis, etc.

> > >

> > > Excuse my ignorance, but WHO in the Baha'i Faith has any "power"? I've > > > never met anyone in the Faith who has power of any kind (i.e: power in > > > the sense that they can exert some kind of binding influence over > > > another person).

> >

> > I'll give you an example: The "moderators" of this newsgroup. They've > > censored a number of messages I've tried to post during the last few weeks.

> > They have the "power" to determine what you and everyone else OUT THERE > > reads.... If that's not control and power to SHAPE thought and opinion what > > is it?

> >

> > Maybe the previous writer was referring to some other

> > > kind of power - in which case I would be grateful to receive a

> > > "definition", so to speak, of this power and how it compares to the

> > > "definition" I had in mind which, in my own humble opinion, is the sort > > > of power which is contained in the assertion "power corrupts".

> > >

> >

> > The "moderators" power is corrupting and inhibiting the exchange of ideas

> > on this newsgroup. When I attempted to bring this to the attention of > > contributors by posting a message to this effect earlier, I was told

> >

> > THOU SHALT NOT QUESTION THE AUTHORITY AND POWER OF THE

> > "MODERATORS."

> > Kitab-i-Oppression, page 999.

> >

> > > The only person who has any kind of power over my spiritual development

> > > is ME. I cannot abdicate that responsibility to someone else.

> > >

> >

> > There's a sense in which you're right. But secular and religious history > > is wracked with the abuse of POWER and the devastating results of it....

> > It always began in little ways.... A little at a time.... People shrugged....

> > Let's not make ways.... Let's build UNITY!

> >

> > > Loving greetings

> > >

> > > Sian Smith

> > > Wellington

> > > New Zealand

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

> = End submitted post =====

YOU DEAR CENSORS have shown your true colors once again.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000604679@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 19 Nov 1996 09:38:03 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr11.primenet.com [206.165.5.111]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id HAA10563; Tue, 19 Nov 1996 07:43:08 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.2) id HAA24131; Tue, 19 Nov 1996 07:43:08 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611191443.HAA24131@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 07:43:07 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3291959D.7D9C@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 19, 96 06:10:21 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

I ask that you strike the comment "utterly naive" as an attack on the previous poster. If you would like to say you disagree, that would be acceptable.

Also, your sarcastic comments in the following paragraph:

> Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual > maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when > power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To > discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, > working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

If you would turn this into a meaningful criticism based on actual events than the readership could evaluate and enter into a dialog with you on these events.

Again, let me make it clear that if you have a grievance with the Faith, you are free to air it here, but it must be the facts and your reasons for the grievance presented and not belittling insults, broad stereotypes, and blatant sarcasm.

Thank you for participating,

Dick Detweiler

rdetweil@primenet.com

Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

===== Begin submitted post =====

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:10:21 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 78

> Message-ID: <3291959D.7D9C@moa.net>

> References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qoi9$rmd@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> To: Anne Furlong <afurlong@cs.mun.ca>

> CC: @moa.net

>

> Anne Furlong wrote:

> >

> > The reference to power probably helps poinpoint the difficulty some of > > the friends have here. The point is that in this Faith, for the first > > time in religious history, power and authority have been intentionally

> > and effectively severed. The authority to make decisions, to legislate, > > to guide, rests with the elected institutions of the Faith. However, > > these institutions - and the individuals who make them up - have no power > > whatsoever.

>

> "No power whatsoever": Utterly naive....

>

> [clip]

>

> >

> > Why do people become disillusioned with the community? with individuals?

> > Well, we all know people who, by force of personality, or because of > > defects of character and personality, receive, demand, or desire > > acquiescence from other individuals. But note: if such people do in fact > > poison a community, who ultimately must take the responsibility? Power > > is not theirs to command: it is ceded to them by those who have not the > > wisdom or the courage to recognise that what is being asked is both

> > contrary to the Faith, and ultimately impossible to give.

> >

>

> Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual

> maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when > power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To > discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, > working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

>

> > Yes, impossible: for since in the Administrative order which is > > Baha'u'llah's gift to the world, power and authority are divided,

>

> In theory, yes; in practice, I'm not convinced.

>

> then the > > efforts of a few misguided individuals to bring power and authority

> > together in their own persons; or to build up factions; or to do anything,

> > in fact, which is contravenes the spirit and the reality of the Covenant,

> > are doomed to failure. 'Abdul-Baha said that the ocean of the Covenant > > will surge and surge until it casts the bodies of the (spiritually) dead > > onto the shore. We cannot ultimately harm the progress of the Cause, but > > can cut ourselves off from the abundant share of the blessings which > > obedience to the Covenant brings to us.

> >

> > If we are disillusioned with the community we live in, then our response > > will either add to the problem or be the start of its eradication. The > > whole purpose of consultation is to allow the individual to exercise > > responsibility - his power - within the "unit of civilization".

>

> What I am saying is that there are situations when it is not allowed. You're > too quick to leap over that fact for me.

>

> We are > > all going to be responsible for our actions to Baha'u'llah when we pass > > from this earth; are we going to plead the immaturity of others as the > > reason for our failure to love?

> >

>

> Your dragging "love" into this confuses the issue.

>

> > Baha'u'llah did more than despise tyranny; in his Administrative Order,
> > He, as the Divine Physician, prescribed the effective and permanent remedy.

> >

>

> The point from the original post was in regard to the abuse of the remedy, > turning it into a cheap medicine show elixir. What then of the community > or individuals under that Tyranny?

>

> > All the best,

> >

> > Anne Furlong
> > St John's Newfoundland Canada
>
> --
> FG
> Rochester, Michigan USA
>

===== End submitted post =====

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.66) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000609746@atlas.moa.net>;
Wed, 20 Nov 1996 10:25:30 -0500
Message-ID: <3293247F.2340@moa.net>
Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 10:32:15 -0500
From: FG <@moa.net>
X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
MIME-Version: 1.0
To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>
CC: @MOA.net
Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community
References: <199611191443.HAA24131@primenet.com>
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Further response-- Your characterization of my comments as sarcastic is ludicrous. One may not be sarcastic in the Baha'i Faith? And you are too determine is toooooo SARCASTIC? Oh God, what a farce!

Since you apparently don't understand the passage in question, I'm supposed to water in down for YOUR ignorance! I'm talking about the totalitarianism of the SOVIET UNION which you dangerously come close to.

Again, I request that you post my message or pass it on to someone else who is not as fanatical as you.

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

>

> Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

>

> I ask that you strike the comment "utterly naive" as an attack > on the previous poster. If you would like to say you disagree, > that would be acceptable.

>

> Also, your sarcastic comments in the following paragraph:

>

> > Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual

> > maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when > > power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To > > discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, > > working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

>

> If you would turn this into a meaningful criticism based on actual events > than the readership could evaluate and enter into a dialog with you on these > events.

>

> Again, let me make it clear that if you have a grievance with the Faith, > you are free to air it here, but it must be the facts and your reasons for > the grievance presented and not belittling insults, broad stereotypes, and > blatant sarcasm.
>
> Thank you for participating,
>
> Dick Detweiler
> rdetweil@primenet.com
> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
>
> ===== Begin submitted post =====
>
> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net
> > From: FG <@moa.net>
> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai
> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community
> > Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:10:21 -0500
> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.
> > Lines: 78
> > Message-ID: <3291959D.7D9C@moa.net>
> > References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qoi9$rmd@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>
> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net
> > Mime-Version: 1.0
> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
> > To: Anne Furlong <afurlong@cs.mun.ca>
> > CC: @moa.net
> >
> > Anne Furlong wrote:

> > >

> > > The reference to power probably helps pinpoint the difficulty some of > > > the friends have here. The point is that in this Faith, for the first > > > time in religious history, power and authority have been intentionally > > > and effectively severed. The authority to make decisions, to legislate, > > > to guide, rests with the elected institutions of the Faith. However, > > > these institutions - and the individuals who make them up - have no power > > > whatsoever.

> >

> > "No power whatsoever": Utterly naive....

> >

> > [clip]

> >

> > >

> > > Why do people become disillusioned with the community? with individuals?
> > > Well, we all know people who, by force of personality, or because of > > > defects of character and personality, receive, demand, or desire > > > acquiescence from other individuals. But note: if such people do in fact > > > poison a community, who ultimately must take the responsibility? Power > > > is not theirs to command: it is ceded to them by those who have not the > > > wisdom or the courage to recognise that what is being asked is both > > > contrary to the Faith, and ultimately impossible to give.

> > >

> >

> > Excellent point. A profound moral problem arises here. How can the individual > > maintain the moral strength of character to resist abuse and manipulation when > > power can be wielded in such a way as to undermine that very ability? To > > discredit it. Ban it. Brand it as outlaw, heretic, disruptive, anti-social, > > working against the realization, e.g., of the communist Kingdom of Freedom.

> >

> > > Yes, impossible: for since in the Administrative order which is > > > Baha'u'llah's gift to the world, power and authority are divided,

> >

> > In theory, yes; in practice, I'm not convinced.

> >

> > then the > > > efforts of a few misguided individuals to bring power and authority

> > > together in their own persons; or to build up factions; or to do anything,

> > > in fact, which is contravenes the spirit and the reality of the Covenant,

> > > are doomed to failure. 'Abdul-Baha said that the ocean of the Covenant

> > > will surge and surge until it casts the bodies of the (spiritually) dead

> > > onto the shore. We cannot ultimately harm the progress of the Cause, but > > > can cut ourselves off from the abundant share of the blessings which > > > obedience to the Covenant brings to us.

> > >

> > > If we are disillusioned with the community we live in, then our response > > > will either add to the problem or be the start of its eradication. The > > > whole purpose of consultation is to allow the individual to exercise > > > responsibility - his power - within the "unit of civilization".

> >

> > What I am saying is that there are situations when it is not allowed. You're > > too quick to leap over that fact for me.

> >

> > We are > > > all going to be responsible for our actions to Baha'u'llah when we pass

> > > from this earth; are we going to plead the immaturity of others as the > > > reason for our failure to love?

> > >

> >

> > Your dragging "love" into this confuses the issue.

> >

> > > Baha'u'llah did more than despise tyranny; in his Administrative Order,

> > > He, as the Divine Physician, prescribed the effective and permanent remedy.

> > >

> >

> > The point from the original post was in regard to the abuse of the remedy, > > turning it into a cheap medicine show elixir. What then of the community > > or individuals under that Tyranny?

> >

> > > All the best,

> > >

> > > Anne Furlong

> > > St John's Newfoundland Canada

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

>

> ===== End submitted post =====

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000610091@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 20 Nov 1996 11:44:21 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr11.primenet.com [206.165.5.111]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id JAA23456; Wed, 20 Nov 1996
09:44:28 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id JAA14736; Wed, 20 Nov
1996 09:44:27 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611201644.JAA14736@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 09:44:26 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3293247F.2340@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 20, 96 10:32:15 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

FG writes:

>

> Further response-- Your characterization of my comments as sarcastic

> is ludicrous. One may not be sarcastic in the Baha'i Faith? And you > are too determine is toooooo SARCASTIC? Oh God, what a farce!

>

> Since you apparently don't understand the passage in question, I'm > supposed to water in down for YOUR ignorance! I'm talking about the > totalitarianism of the SOVIET UNION which you dangerously come close

> to.

>

> Again, I request that you post my message or pass it on to someone > else who is not as fanatical as you.

>

Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to correct some misunderstandings you have about the newsgroup soc.religion.bahai. It appears you have the impression that the newsgroup has some kind of official standing within the Baha'i Faith and that the moderators are somehow part of the Baha'i Administration. This is not the case. While the moderators

try to use Baha'i principles of consultation and at times request guidance from Institutions of the Faith, we are not in any way connected with the Administrative Order. We are simply volunteers who try to apply the charter of the newsgroup to the submissions that come before us.

The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement alone that I have rejected some of your posts. In doing so, I am making no judgement as to your fitness or standing as a Baha'i.

Let me stress again, the moderators stand ready to post your views to the newsgroup no matter what they are as long as they meet these simple criteria:

- they address aspects of the Baha'i Faith
- they are respectful in tone
- they are not personal attacks
- they are not ads or solicitations

Your posts have at times fallen short in the 2nd and 3rd category. Each time I have suggested how you can get your views heard on the newsgroup. It is completely up to you whether you want to cooperate and live by these rules. If you insist on a right to belittle and be disrespectful with those you engage in discussion, I will fully support your right to do so either by e-mail, on another newsgroup, by phone, mail, or in person. But if you want to participate in this newsgroup, you will have to abide by the charter and the moderators.

Dick Detweiler

co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.60) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000610771@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 20 Nov 1996 14:01:31 -0500

Message-ID: <32935722.7DC@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 14:08:18 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611201644.JAA14736@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> FG writes:

> >

> > Further response-- Your characterization of my comments as sarcastic

> > is ludicrous. One may not be sarcastic in the Baha'i Faith? And you > > are too determine is toooooo SARCASTIC? Oh God, what a farce!

> >

> > Since you apparently don't understand the passage in question, I'm > > supposed to water in down for YOUR ignorance! I'm talking about the > > totalitarianism of the SOVIET UNION which you dangerously come close

> > to.

> >

> > Again, I request that you post my message or pass it on to someone > > else who is not as fanatical as you.

> >

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysher,

>

> Thank you for giving me the opportunity to correct some misunderstandings

> you have about the newsgroup soc.religion.bahai. It appears you have > the impression that the newsgroup has some kind of official standing

> within the Baha'i Faith and that the moderators are somehow part of > the Baha'i Administration. This is not the case. While the moderators

> try to use Baha'i principles of consultation and at times request > guidance from Institutions of the Faith, we are not in any way connected > with the Administrative Order. We are simply volunteers who try to > apply the charter of the newsgroup to the submissions that come before > us.

>

> The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject > to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank

> yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement > alone that I have rejected some of your posts.

I don't believe this is true. "Utterly naive" refers to the idea, not to its author as an insult. You're the one who has construed that way. I can't even understand what could possibly be WRONG with your objection to the second passage in the post in question.

Your attempt to hide behind the newsgroup charter strikes me as a mere stratagem to conceal what you're actually doing: CENSORING.

In doing so, I am making > no judgement as to your fitness or standing as a Baha'i.

>

> Let me stress again, the moderators stand ready to post your views > to the newsgroup no matter what they are as long as they meet these > simple criteria:

>

> - they address aspects of the Baha'i Faith

> - they are respectful in tone

> - they are not personal attacks

> - they are not ads or solicitations

>

> Your posts have at times fallen short in the 2nd and 3rd category. Each > time I have suggested how you can get your views heard on the newsgroup.

> It is completely up to you whether you want to cooperate and live by these > rules. If you insist on a right to belittle and be disrespectful with those > you engage in discussion, I will fully support your right to do so either > by e-mail, on another newsgroup, by phone, mail, or in person. But if you > want to participate in this newsgroup, you will have to abide by the charter > and the moderators.

>

> Dick Detweiler

> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000611613@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 20 Nov 1996 17:09:42 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr04.primenet.com [206.165.5.104]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id PAA05783; Wed, 20 Nov 1996 15:14:44 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id PAA26784; Wed, 20 Nov 1996 15:14:44 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611202214.PAA26784@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Wed, 20 Nov 1996 15:14:43 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <32935722.7DC@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 20, 96 02:08:18 pm

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

> >

> > The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject > > to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank > > yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > > for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement > > alone that I have rejected some of your posts.

>

> I don't believe this is true. "Utterly naive" refers to the idea, not to > its author as an insult. You're the one who has construed that way. I can't > even understand what could possibly be WRONG with your objection to the > second passage in the post in question.

>

Thank you for pointing this out - I hadn't thought of it like that. But I hope you can see that if I (and the other mods) can be confused on this point, it will probably be the case with many in the readership as well. Our tendency is to err on the side of not posting things when they may be misinterpreted by the readership as being attacks or insults. That way, the respectful tone is maintained. Remember that the readership includes people from all backgrounds and cultures. I have been surprised many times when seemingly innocuous comments have offended. I try to make sure the chance of this is kept to a minimum.

And, if I may, don't you think "I believe you are being naive because..." makes your points easier for other to accept and continue to engage you rather than a brusque "Utterly naive"? Please think about that. I assume your reason for being here is to share your viewpoint with others.

> Your attempt to hide behind the newsgroup charter strikes me as a mere > stratagem to conceal what you're actually doing: CENSORING.
>

Once again, Mr Glaysher - my job is not to suppress ideas but to make sure those ideas are presented in a respectful manner conducive to frank and unfettered consultation.

I continue to await the chance to post your thoughts in the submittals in question when they are appropriate for posting to the newsgroup.

Dick Detweiler
co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.57) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000614358@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:00:43 -0500

Message-ID: <32947031.2ADA@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:07:29 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611202214.PAA26784@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> > >

> > > The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject > > > to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank > > > yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > > > for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement > > > alone that I have rejected some of your posts.

> >

> > I don't believe this is true. "Utterly naive" refers to the idea, not to > > its author as an insult. You're the one who has construed that way. I can't > > even understand what could possibly be WRONG with your objection to the > > second passage in the post in question.

> >

>

> Thank you for pointing this out - I hadn't thought of it like that.

Then what's YOUR problem. Post it or suppress it.

But I

- > hope you can see that if I (and the other mods) can be confused on this
- > point, it will probably be the case with many in the readership as well.

You're assumption is that OTHERS will be as imperceptive as you. And hence you BAN ME!

- > Our tendency is to err on the side of not posting things when they may be
- > misinterpreted by the readership as being attacks or insults.

Even after admitting the ERROR is on your part? Not logical. You're trying to justify your heavy-handed will to BAN.

That way,

- > the respectful tone is maintained.

There is nothing disrespectful about either passage YOU'VE questioned.

Remember that the readership includes

- > people from all backgrounds and cultures.

Irrelevant justification. You're groping for excuses.

I have been surprised many times

- > when seemingly innocuous comments have offended.

Nothing would then ever get posted in your scenario. Unless it meets your prejudices.

I try to make sure the

- > chance of this is kept to a minimum.

>

I don't know that. You're suppression to posting ratio would be required to make that determination; it would have to be independently confirmed.

> And, if I may, don't you think "I believe you are being naive because..."

> makes your points easier for other to accept and continue to engage you > rather than a brusque "Utterly naive"? Please think about that. I > assume your reason for being here is to share your viewpoint with others.

>

You sound like a schoolmarm. A self-righteous, prudish old bag. What gives you the right? God's charter? It doesn't come from Him.

> > Your attempt to hide behind the newsgroup charter strikes me as a mere > > stratagem to conceal what you're actually doing: CENSORING.

> >

>

> Once again, Mr Glaysher - my job is not to suppress ideas but to make sure

> those ideas are presented in a respectful manner conducive to frank and > unfettered consultation.

>

You're completely fettering my consultation. But that's okay. You possess the prescience to know better. Again, you're groping for justification of your suppressing the presentation of my views to others.

> I continue to await the chance to post your thoughts in the submittals in > question when they are appropriate for posting to the newsgroup.

>

Mr. Detweiler, you appear to me to be completely shameless and drunk on your little power to muzzle people who don't echo your opinions.

> Dick Detweiler

> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

Again, I ask you to post my message since as you acknowledge above its about IDEAS.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000614581@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:35:33 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr08.primenet.com [206.165.5.108]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.3/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id IAA04978 for <@moa.net>; Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:40:39 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id IAA09540 for @moa.net; Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:40:38 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611211540.IAA09540@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:40:37 -0700 (MST)

In-Reply-To: <32947031.2ADA@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 21, 96 10:07:29 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

When you make the modifications asked or post something which meets the charter of the newsgroup, I will be happy to post it.

Dick Detweiler

co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> From @moa.net Thu Nov 21 08:05:55 1996

> Received: from atlas.moa.net (atlas.moa.net [198.111.46.21]) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) with SMTP id IAA07420 for <rdetweil@primenet.com>; Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:05:54 -0700 (MST)

> Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.57) by atlas.moa.net

> (EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000614358@atlas.moa.net>;

> Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:00:43 -0500

> Message-ID: <32947031.2ADA@moa.net>

> Date: Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:07:29 -0500

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> MIME-Version: 1.0

> To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

> CC: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> References: <199611202214.PAA26784@primenet.com>

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

>

> Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

> >

> > >

> > > The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject > > > to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank

> > > yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > > > for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement > > > alone that I have rejected some of your posts.
> > >
> > > I don't believe this is true. "Utterly naive" refers to the idea, not to > > > its author as an insult. You're the one who has construed that way. I can't > > > even understand what could possibly be WRONG with your objection to the > > > second passage in the post in question.
> > >
> >
> > Thank you for pointing this out - I hadn't thought of it like that.
>
> Then what's YOUR problem. Post it or suppress it.
>
> But I > > hope you can see that if I (and the other mods) can be confused on this > > point, it will probably be the case with many in the readership as well.
>
> You're assumption is that OTHERS will be as imperceptive as you. And hence > you BAN ME!
>
> > Our tendency is to err on the side of not posting things when they may be > > misinterpreted by the readership as being attacks or insults.
>
> Even after admitting the ERROR is on your part? Not logical. You're trying > to justify your heavy-handed will to BAN.
>
> That way,
> > the respectful tone is maintained.
>
> There is nothing disrespectful about either passage YOU'VE questioned.
>

> Remember that the readership includes

> > people from all backgrounds and cultures.

>

> Irrelevant justification. You're groping for excuses.

>

> I have been surprised many times

> > when seemingly innocuous comments have offended.

>

> Nothing would then ever get posted in your scenario. Unless it meets > your prejudices.

>

> I try to make sure the > > chance of this is kept to a minimum.

> >

>

> I don't know that. You're suppression to posting ratio would be required > to make that determination; it would have to be independently confirmed.

>

> > And, if I may, don't you think "I believe you are being naive because..."

> > makes your points easier for other to accept and continue to engage you

> > rather than a brusque "Utterly naive"? Please think about that. I > > assume your reason for being here is to share your viewpoint with others.

> >

>

> You sound like a schoolmarm. A self-righteous, prudish old bag. What gives > you the right? God's charter? It doesn't come from Him.

>

> > > Your attempt to hide behind the newsgroup charter strikes me as a mere > > > stratagem to conceal what you're actually doing: CENSORING.

> > >

> >

> > Once again, Mr Glaysher - my job is not to suppress ideas but to make sure

> > those ideas are presented in a respectful manner conducive to frank and > > unfettered consultation.
> >
>
> You're completely fettering my consultation. But that's okay. You possess > the prescience to know better. Again, you're groping for justification of > your suppressing the presentation of my views to others.
>
> > I continue to await the chance to post your thoughts in the submittals in > > question when they are appropriate for posting to the newsgroup.
> >
>
> Mr. Detweiler, you appear to me to be completely shameless and drunk on your > little power to muzzle people who don't echo your opinions.
>
> > Dick Detweiler
> > co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai
>
> Again, I ask you to post my message since as you acknowledge above its about > IDEAS.
>
> --
> FG
> Rochester, Michigan USA
>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.60) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000623484@atlas.moa.net>;
Sat, 23 Nov 1996 07:34:58 -0500

Message-ID: <3296F108.4BEF@moa.net>

Date: Sat, 23 Nov 1996 07:41:44 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

References: <199611211540.IAA09540@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

What I wrote meets the charter of the newsgroup and the "modifications" you want are unnecessary and unjustifiable. You yourself acknowledged your request for "modification" was based on your own misreading and misunderstanding of the post.

God save us if the Baha'i Faith comes down to people like you "protecting" us....

I ask you again to post it or pass it on to someone else who's more rational than you.

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysher,

>

> When you make the modifications asked or post something which meets the > charter of the newsgroup, I will be happy to post it.

>

> Dick Detweiler

> co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

>

> > From @moa.net Thu Nov 21 08:05:55 1996

> > Received: from atlas.moa.net (atlas.moa.net [198.111.46.21]) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8. with SMTP id IAA07420 for

<rdetweil@primenet.com>; Thu, 21 Nov 1996

> > Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.57) by atlas.moa.net

> > (EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000614358@atlas.moa.net>;

> > Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:00:43 -0500

> > Message-ID: <32947031.2ADA@moa.net>

> > Date: Thu, 21 Nov 1996 10:07:29 -0500

> > From: FG <@moa.net>

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > MIME-Version: 1.0

> > To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

> > CC: @moa.net

> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> > References: <199611202214.PAA26784@primenet.com>

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> >

> > Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

> > >

> > > >

> > > > The charter of the newsgroup states that "the Newsgroup will be subject > > > > to standards of Baha'i consultation whose salient features include frank

> > > > yet respectful statement of views and the concerted, open-minded search > > > > for truth." It is on this statement in the charter and this statement > > > > alone that I have rejected some of your posts.

> > > >

> > > > I don't believe this is true. "Utterly naive" refers to the idea, not to > > > > its author as an insult. You're the one who has construed that way. I can't > > > > even understand what could possibly be WRONG with your objection to the > > > > second passage in the post in question.

> > > >

> > >

> > > Thank you for pointing this out - I hadn't thought of it like that.

> >

> > Then what's YOUR problem. Post it or suppress it.

> >

> > But I

> > > hope you can see that if I (and the other mods) can be confused on this > > > point, it will probably be the case with many in the readership as well.

> >

> > You're assumption is that OTHERS will be as imperceptive as you. And hence

> > you BAN ME!

> >

> > > Our tendency is to err on the side of not posting things when they may be > > > misinterpreted by the readership as being attacks or insults.

> >

> > Even after admitting the ERROR is on your part? Not logical. You're trying > > to justify your heavy-handed will to BAN.

> >

> > That way,

> > > the respectful tone is maintained.

> >

> > There is nothing disrespectful about either passage YOU'VE questioned.

> >

> > Remember that the readership includes

> > > people from all backgrounds and cultures.

> >

> > Irrelevant justification. You're groping for excuses.

> >

> > I have been surprised many times

> > > when seemingly innocuous comments have offended.

> >

> > Nothing would then ever get posted in your scenario. Unless it meets > > your prejudices.

> >

> > I try to make sure the > > > chance of this is kept to a minimum.

> > >

> >

> > I don't know that. You're suppression to posting ratio would be required > > to make that determination; it would have to be independently confirmed.

> >

> > > And, if I may, don't you think "I believe you are being naive because..."

> > > makes your points easier for other to accept and continue to engage you

> > > rather than a brusque "Utterly naive"? Please think about that. I > > > assume your reason for being here is to share your viewpoint with others.

> > >

> >

> > You sound like a schoolmarm. A self-righteous, prudish old bag. What gives > > you the right? God's charter? It doesn't come from Him.

> >

> > > > Your attempt to hide behind the newsgroup charter strikes me as a mere > > > > stratagem to conceal what you're actually doing: CENSORING.

> > > >

> > >

> > > Once again, Mr Glaysher - my job is not to suppress ideas but to make sure

> > > those ideas are presented in a respectful manner conducive to frank and > > > unfettered consultation.

> > >

> >

> > You're completely fettering my consultation. But that's okay. You possess

> > the prescience to know better. Again, you're groping for justification of > > your suppressing the presentation of my views to others.

> >

> > > I continue to await the chance to post your thoughts in the submittals in > > > question when they are appropriate for posting to the newsgroup.

> > >

> >

> > Mr. Detweiler, you appear to me to be completely shameless and drunk on your > > little power to muzzle people who don't echo your opinions.

> >

> > > Dick Detweiler

> > > co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

> >

> > Again, I ask you to post my message since as you acknowledge above its about

> > IDEAS.

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu (141.210.10.152) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000596165@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:38:37 -0500

Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id JAA19072; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:43:51 -0500

To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

Path: ppp-pm01-dy-29.ouhub.moa.net

From: FG <@MOA.net>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500

Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

Lines: 53

Message-ID: <328F24FC.253@moa.net>

References: <"uiWV9.A.DUF.dSkjy"@bounty>

NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

To: karl1971@aol.com

CC: @MOA.net

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> [clip]

> The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world

> that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah > make love, not war.

>

> One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

>

> In a Bahai Marriage:

>

> We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > or her life.
>
> We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > daughter-in-law.
>
> We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects
> his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > loathsome addiction.
>
> We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > through hell in a handbasket.
>
> We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.
>
> We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > sensual affection.
>
>
>
>
> -- sincerely
>
> -- Karl

Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her veins....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000596309@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 17 Nov 1996 11:02:24 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr11.primenet.com [206.165.5.111]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.2/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id JAA17044 for <@MOA.net>; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:07:31 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) id JAA22964 for @MOA.net; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:07:31 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611171607.JAA22964@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

To: @MOA.net (FG)

Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:07:30 -0700 (MST)

In-Reply-To: <328F24FC.253@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 17, 96 09:45:16 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Not suitable for the group. Tell hi mto take it to e-mail.

Dick D.

> From news@news2.acs.oakland.edu Sun Nov 17 07:43:51 1996

> Received: from bcca.org (root@bounty.bcca.org [208.133.44.40]) by primenet.com (8.8.2/8.8.2) with SMTP id HAA12476 for <rdetweil@primenet.com>; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 07:43:50 -0700 (MST)

> Received: from relay6.UU.NET by bcca.org with smtp

> (Smail3.1.29.1 #3) id m0vP8RI-0008esC; Sun, 17 Nov 96 09:43 EST

> Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu by relay6.UU.NET with ESMTP

> (peer crosschecked as: news2.acs.oakland.edu [141.210.10.152])

> id QQbqfq06145; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:43:44 -0500 (EST)

> Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id JAA19072; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:43:51 -0500

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-29.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

> Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 53

> Message-ID: <328F24FC.253@moa.net>

> References: <"uiWV9.A.DUF.dSkjy"@bounty>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> To: karl1971@aol.com

> CC: @MOA.net

>

> karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > [clip]

>

> > The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world

> > that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah

> > make love, not war.

> >

> > One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> > quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

> >

> > In a Bahai Marriage:

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> > justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her

> > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > > or her life.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > > daughter-in-law.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects

> > his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > > loathsome addiction.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive

> > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > > through hell in a handbasket.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards

> > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good

> > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > > sensual affection.

> >

> >

> >

> > -- sincerely

> >

> > -- Karl

>

>

> Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited > advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the > self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her > veins....

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.39) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000599112@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:02:27 -0500

Message-ID: <32905FF7.25F8@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:09:11 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

References: <199611171607.JAA22964@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Not suitable for the group. Tell him to take it to e-mail.

>

> Dick D.

>

Dick, I mean this in all seriousness. You're a fascist pig. I'd say that to your face, fellow....

> > From news@news2.acs.oakland.edu Sun Nov 17 07:43:51 1996

> > Received: from bcca.org (root@bounty.bcca.org [208.133.44.40]) by primenet.com
(8.8.2/8.8.2) with SMTP id HAA12476 for <rdetweil@primenet.com>; Sun, 17 Nov 1

> > Received: from relay6.UU.NET by bcca.org with smtp

> > (Smail3.1.29.1 #3) id m0vP8RI-0008esC; Sun, 17 Nov 96 09:43 EST

> > Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu by relay6.UU.NET with ESMTP

> > (peer crosschecked as: news2.acs.oakland.edu [141.210.10.152])

> > id QQbqfq06145; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:43:44 -0500 (EST)

> > Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id JAA19072; S
17 Nov 1996 09:43:51 -0500

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-29.ouhub.moa.net

> > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> > Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

> > Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > Lines: 53

> > Message-ID: <328F24FC.253@moa.net>

> > References: <"uiWV9.A.DUF.dSkjy"@bounty>

> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> > Mime-Version: 1.0

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > To: karl1971@aol.com

> > CC: @MOA.net

> >

> > karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > > [clip]

> >

> > > The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world

> > > that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah

> > > make love, not war.

> > >

> > > One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> > > quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > > > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

> > >

> > > In a Bahai Marriage:

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> > > justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her

> > > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > > > or her life.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > > > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > > > daughter-in-law.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects

> > > his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > > > loathsome addiction.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > > > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive

> > > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > > > through hell in a handbasket.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards

> > > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good

> > > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > > > sensual affection.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > -- sincerely

> > >

> > > -- Karl

> >

> >

> > Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited > > advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the > > self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her > > veins....

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000596294@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 17 Nov 1996 10:56:17 -0500

Received: from boatrigh (Port75.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.86]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id KAA08931; Sun, 17 Nov 1996 10:01:02 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611171601.KAA08931@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Business Computers

To: FG <@MOA.net>

Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 10:13:19 -0600

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: srb-mods@bccca.org

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Win32 (v2.31)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

A real, true _question_. Did you mean for this to go out to the newsgroup? The humor is apparent, the advice is probably reasonable, but I am forced to wonder if you really ment the post to go to the newsgroup. It seems too susceptible to te kind of mis-interpretation that gets rwar started..... I therefore suspect that you ment this for private email.

Rick Boatright
co-moderator
soc.religion.bahai

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> From: FG <@MOA.net>
> Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)
> Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500
> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.
> To: karl1971@aol.com
> Cc: @MOA.net

> karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > [clip]

>

> > The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world

> > that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah

> > make love, not war.

> >

> > One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> > quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

> >

> > In a Bahai Marriage:

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> > justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her

> > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > > or her life.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > > daughter-in-law.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects

> > his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > > loathsome addiction.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive

> > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > > through hell in a handbasket.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards

> > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.

> >

> > We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good

> > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > > sensual affection.

> >

> >

> >

> > -- sincerely

> >

> > -- Karl

>

>

> Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited > advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the > self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her > veins....

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.39) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000599091@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:00:21 -0500

Message-ID: <32905F79.61AB@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:07:05 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

References: <199611171601.KAA08931@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> A real, true _question_. Did you mean for this to go out to the > newsgroup? The humor is apparent, the advice is probably reasonable, > but I am forced to wonder if you really ment the post to go to the > newsgroup. It seems too susceptible to te kind of mis-interpretation > that gets rwars started..... I therefore suspect that you ment > this for private email.

>
> Rick Boatright
> co-moderator
> soc.religion.bahai
>

You "suspect" incorrectly. I certainly intended for my message to be posted.
I'd appreciate if you'd act as a moderator and not a censor.

I find you're interfering in my communication offensive. Post it.

>
> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net
> > From: FG <@MOA.net>
> > Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)
> > Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500
> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.
> > To: karl1971@aol.com
> > Cc: @MOA.net
>
> > karl1971@aol.com wrote:
> > > [clip]
> >
> > > The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world
> > > that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah

> > > make love, not war.

> > >

> > > One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> > > quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > > > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

> > >

> > > In a Bahai Marriage:

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> > > justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her

> > > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > > > or her life.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > > > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > > > daughter-in-law.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects

> > > his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > > > loathsome addiction.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > > > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive

> > > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > > > through hell in a handbasket.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards

> > > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.

> > >

> > > We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good

> > > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > > > sensual affection.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > -- sincerely

> > >

> > > -- Karl

> >

> >

> > Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited > > advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the > > self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her > > veins....

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from emout01.mail.aol.com (198.81.11.92) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000597370@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 17 Nov 1996 17:59:46 -0500

Received: by emout01.mail.aol.com (8.6.12/8.6.12) id SAA21257 for @moa.net;
Sun, 17 Nov 1996 18:04:54 -0500

Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 18:04:54 -0500

From: KARL1971@aol.com

Message-ID: <961117180453_1083116951@emout01.mail.aol.com>

To: @moa.net

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

In a message dated 96-11-17 09:44:24 EST, you write:

<< Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited

advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the

self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her

veins....

>>

Do you know of any single ages 18-30?

Karl Lehman, Oregon, USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.39) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000599281@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:34:15 -0500

Message-ID: <3290676C.6301@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:41:00 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: KARL1971@aol.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

References: <961117180453_1083116951@emout01.mail.aol.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

KARL1971@aol.com wrote:

>

> In a message dated 96-11-17 09:44:24 EST, you write:

>

> << Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little

> unsolicited

> advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i

> women, the

> self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing > through her

> veins....

> >>

>

> Do you know of any single ages 18-30?

>

> Karl Lehman, Oregon, USA

Karl, unlike the fascists who "moderate" the newsgroup, you have a sense of humor. They've banned the post I sent you from the wires as not "suitable." Too many fanatical feminist Baha'i broads out there would have their "feelings" hurt, I guess....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000600350@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 18 Nov 1996 11:53:24 -0500

Received: from RICK (Port106.cjnetworks.com [206.52.158.217]) by topeka.cjnetworks.com (8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id KAA17797 for <@moa.net>; Mon, 18 Nov 1996 10:57:37 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611181657.KAA17797@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Busines Computers

To: FG <@moa.net>

Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 10:58:04 -0600

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Windows (v2.23)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

And in your internal model, what is the difference between a moderator and a censor? I asked a polite question. Did you intend to post this? Lots of people post things they didn't intend to, and we catch a lot of those. They are generally greatful. I didn't complain that you characterize Baha'i women as bloodless. I probably should. I didn't complain that your comment was bigoted and offensive to the vast majority of sexually active and spirited Baha'i women, though I probably should. Let them tell you that themselves.

I asked a polite question.

Lighten up.

Don't try to put a nazi mantle on my shoulders.

Rick Boatright

co-moderator

soc.religion.bahai

> Date: Mon, 18 Nov 1996 08:07:05 -0500

> From: FG <@moa.net>

> To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

> Cc: @moa.net

> Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

> Rick Boatright wrote:

> >

> > Dear Frederick,

> >

> > A real, true _question_. Did you mean for this to go out to the > > newsgroup? The humor is apparent, the advice is probebly reasonable,

> > but I am forced to wonder if you really ment the post to go to the > > newsgroup. It seems too susceptible to te kind of mis-interpretation > > that gets rvars started..... I therefore suspect that you ment

> > this for private email.

> >

> > Rick Boatright

> > co-moderator

> > soc.religion.bahai

> >

>

> You "suspect" incorrectly. I certainly intended for my message to be posted.

> I'd appreciate if you'd act as a moderator and not a censor.

>

> I find you're interfering in my communication offensive. Post it.

>

>

>

>

>

> >

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > > Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

> > > Date: Sun, 17 Nov 1996 09:45:16 -0500

> > > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > > To: karl1971@aol.com

> > > Cc: @MOA.net

> >

> > > karl1971@aol.com wrote:

> > > > [clip]

> > >

> > > > The believers of Baha'u'llah have a Faith of integrity. Unlike the world

> > > > that's falling apart around us, the ones who who believe in Baha'u'llah

> > > > make love, not war.

> > > >

> > > > One of the most important ways we do this is by fulfilling a legitimate

> > > > quest to marry, always confident each and everyone of us has the potential > > > > to be a partner of a beautiful spiritual match made in heaven.

> > > >

> > > > In a Bahai Marriage:

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than a partner with patience, who believes in dreams,

> > > > justice, miracles, and aspirations who will spend every one of his or her

> > > > most physically intimate moments with one and only one for the rest of his > > > > or her life.

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than a world where every father and mother is > > > > completely satisfied with who they have for a son-in-law or > > > > daughter-in-law.

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than a fellow beauty of the opposite sex who respects

> > > > his or her body and doesn't smoke dope or drink booze or have some > > > > loathsome addiction.

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than someone who always had high standards of > > > > justice, integrity, dignity, and morality, and has always been sensitive

> > > > and intelligent, even having been raised among sick people and having gone > > > > through hell in a handbasket.

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than beautiful love making experiences with standards

> > > > of integrity that free us from the shackles of a promiscuous world.

> > > >

> > > > We seek nothing less than a world full of pairs of men and women of good

> > > > taste who legitimately receive and satisfy each other's desires for > > > > sensual affection.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > -- sincerely

> > > >

> > > > -- Karl

> > >

> > >

> > > Karl, man to man, you need to get married! Let me give you a little unsolicited > > > advice, if you don't mind. Don't choose one of these half-dead Baha'i women, the > > > self-righteous zealot type. Find a real woman with some blood flowing through her > > > veins....

> > >

> > > --

> > > FG

> > > Rochester, Michigan USA

> > >

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.58) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000603633@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:41:09 -0500

Message-ID: <32919E6A.414D@moa.net>

Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 06:47:54 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: The Integrity of Bahai Marriage (revised)

References: <199611181657.KAA17797@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> And in your internal model, what is the difference between a > moderator and a censor?

See previous message to you.

I asked a polite question. Did you intend > to post this?

I sent it to the newsgroup, didn't I?

Lots of people post things they didn't intend to, and > we catch a lot of those.

In such cases, you'd be properly assisting discussion.

They are generally grateful. I didn't > complain that you characterize Baha'i women as bloodless.

Why should you? What business is it of yours? I'm not writing to you, nor do I want to. Yet here I am stuck in a non-productive task dealing with you and Richard....

I probably > should.

Why should you. Who the hell are you?

I didn't complain that your comment was bigoted and > offensive to the vast majority of sexually active and spirited Baha'i > women, though I probably should.

A complaint you're entitled to make. In public. In response to me on the

Net. Not shunting anything YOU don't like off into obscurity.

Let them tell you that themselves.

>

I am saying the freedom for them to say so should be extended to them. You are robbing them of that God-given freedom of expression of conscience.

> I asked a polite question.

>

> Lighten up.

>

Don't tell me to lighten up when you and Richard are perverting and screening the newsgroup self-righteous, prudishly suppressing opinions you don't like.

Again, who are you two to make such decisions? Do you really imagine God has given you the ability to make such judgements?

> Don't try to put a nazi mantle on my shoulders.

>

It's already there, Rick. Wake up.

> Rick Boatright

> co-moderator

> soc.religion.bahai

>

>

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu (141.210.10.152) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000613926@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:36:22 -0500

Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id IAA29545; Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:41:43 -0500

To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

Path: ppp-pm01-dy-14.ouhub.moa.net

From: FG <@MOA.net>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

Date: Thu, 21 Nov 1996 08:43:04 -0500

Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

Lines: 20

Message-ID: <32945C68.3378@moa.net>

References: <56tfo6$cgg@nnrp1.news.primenet.com> <56vdgi$eth@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

CC: @MOA.net

X-Mozilla-Status: 0004

Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling through this morass....

The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the power to change the world....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu (141.210.10.152) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000618943@atlas.moa.net>;

Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:11:25 -0500

Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id IAA00181; Fri, 22
Nov 1996 08:16:46 -0500

To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

Path: ppp-pm01-dy-11.ouhub.moa.net

From: FG <@MOA.net>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:18:05 -0500

Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

Lines: 20

Message-ID: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net>

References: <56vhv1$p1e@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

CC: @MOA.net

X-Mozilla-Status: 0005

Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling through this morass....

The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the power to change the world....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000619960@atlas.moa.net>;

Fri, 22 Nov 1996 10:48:10 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr04.primenet.com [206.165.5.104]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.3/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id IAA13654; Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:15 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id IAA01560; Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:14 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611221548.IAA01560@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

To: @MOA.net (FG)

Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:14 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 22, 96 08:18:05 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Mr. Glaysheer,

Sorry for the inadvertent send on the last message. The following will not be posted to the newsgroup as it is disrespectful in tone and sarcastic in the extreme. As a Baha'i, perhaps you will get some value out of the following excerpts from Baha'u'llah's Writings. I provide them as insight into why the moderators enforce the policies they have in place.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! Commit not that which defileth the limpid stream of love or destroyeth the sweet fragrance of friendship. By the righteousness of the Lord! We were created to show love one to another and not perversity and rancor. Take pride not in love for yourselves but in love for your fellow-creatures. Glory not in love for your country, but in love for all mankind."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablets of Baha'u'llah 138 (quoted in "Unrestrained as the Wind", section on "Demonstrating love and fellowship", p 87).

"Say: Human utterance is an essence which aspireth to exert its influence and needeth moderation. As to its influence, this is conditional upon refinement which in turn is dependent upon hearts which are detached and pure. As to its moderation, this hath to be combined with tact and wisdom as prescribed in the Holy Scriptures and Tablets. Meditate upon that which hath streamed forth from the heaven of the Will of thy Lord, He Who is the Source of all grace, that thou mayest grasp the intended meaning which is enshrined in the sacred depths of the Holy Writings."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablet of Wisdom, Tablets of Baha'u'llah, p. 143

"For the tongue is a smouldering fire, and excess of speech a deadly poison. Material fire consumeth the body, whereas the fire of the tongue devoureth both heart and soul. The force of the former lasteth but for a time, whilst the effects of the latter endure a century."

- Baha'u'llah, The Kitab-i-Iqan, p. 193

Thank you for participating,

Dick Detweiler

rdetweil@primenet.com

Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

===== Begin submitted post =====

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-11.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:18:05 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 20

> Message-ID: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net>

> References: <56vhv1$p1e@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> CC: @MOA.net

>

> Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > through this morass....

>

> The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

>

>

> THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

>

>

> There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

>

> I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > power to change the world....

>

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

===== End submitted post =====

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.60) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000623542@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 23 Nov 1996 08:11:51 -0500

Message-ID: <3296F9AE.6D7C@moa.net>

Date: Sat, 23 Nov 1996 08:18:38 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

References: <199611221548.IAA01560@primenet.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Thank you Richard for Teaching me what the Baha'i Faith truly stands for.

Again, I believe you are CENSORING me and ask you to pass this post on to someone else.

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysher,

>

> Sorry for the inadvertent send on the last message. The following will > not be posted to the newsgroup as it is disrespectful in tone and sarcastic > in the extreme. As a Baha'i, perhaps you will get some value out of the > following excerpts from Baha'u'llah's Writings. I provide them as insight > into why the moderators enforce the policies they have in place.

>

> "O ye beloved of the Lord! Commit not that which defileth the limpid > stream of love or destroyeth the sweet fragrance of friendship. By > the righteousness of the Lord! We were created to show love one to > another and not perversity and rancor. Take pride not in love for > yourselves but in love for your fellow-creatures. Glory not in love > for your country, but in love for all mankind."

>

> - Baha'u'llah, Tablets of Baha'u'llah 138 (quoted in "Unrestrained > as the Wind", section on "Demonstrating love and fellowship", p 87).

>

> "Say: Human utterance is an essence which aspireth to exert its > influence and needeth moderation. As to its influence, this is > conditional upon refinement which in turn is dependent upon hearts > which are detached and pure. As to its moderation, this hath to be > combined with tact and wisdom as prescribed in the Holy Scriptures > and Tablets. Meditate upon that which hath streamed forth from the > heaven of the Will of thy Lord, He Who is the Source of all grace, > that thou mayest grasp the intended meaning which is enshrined in > the sacred depths of the Holy Writings."

>

> - Baha'u'llah, Tablet of Wisdom, Tablets of Baha'u'llah, p. 143

>

> "For the tongue is a smouldering fire, and excess of speech > a deadly poison. Material fire consumeth the body, whereas > the fire of the tongue devoureth both heart and soul. The > force of the former lasteth but for a time, whilst the > effects of the latter endure a century."

> - Baha'u'llah, The Kitab-i-Iqan, p. 193

>

> Thank you for participating,

>

> Dick Detweiler

> rdetweil@primenet.com

> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

>

> ===== Begin submitted post =====

>

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-11.ouhub.moa.net

> > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> > Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> > Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:18:05 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > Lines: 20

> > Message-ID: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net>

> > References: <56vhv1$p1e@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> > Mime-Version: 1.0

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > CC: @MOA.net

> >

> > Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > > through this morass....

> >

> > The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

> >

> >

> > THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

> >

> >

> > There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

> >

> > I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > > power to change the world....

> >

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

>

> ===== End submitted post =====

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000624060@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 23 Nov 1996 13:03:35 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr02.primenet.com [206.165.5.102]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.3/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id LAA20484; Sat, 23 Nov 1996 11:08:40 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id LAA13655; Sat, 23 Nov 1996 11:08:40 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611231808.LAA13655@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

To: @moa.net (FG)

Date: Sat, 23 Nov 1996 11:08:39 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3296F9AE.6D7C@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 23, 96 08:18:38 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

>

> Thank you Richard for Teaching me what the Baha'i Faith truly stands for.

>

> Again, I believe you are CENSORING me and ask you to pass this post on to > someone else.

>

It is the policy of the moderation team that we are responsible for the posts that come in on our watches which typically last a week. After that week we still are individually responsible for the posts submitted on our time.

In the future if you would like to address your remarks to the moderation team, please send them to srb-mods@bccca.org which will reach all of the moderators. However, the decision on the posts in question rest with me as per the moderation policy of the newsgroup.

Dick Detweiler

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from topeka.cjnetworks.com (206.52.158.250) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000634634@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 26 Nov 1996 12:32:53 -0500

Received: from Packard (Port114.cjnetworks.com [206.52.159.169]) by topeka.cjnetworks.co
(8.7.1/8.7.1) with SMTP id LAA27030; Tue, 26 Nov 1996 11:37:30 -0600 (CST)

Message-Id: <199611261737.LAA27030@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Comments: Authenticated sender is <boatright@mail.cjnetworks.com>

From: "Rick Boatright" <boatright@cjnetworks.com>

Organization: Topeka Busines Computers

To: FG <@moa.net>, srb-mods@bccca.org

Date: Tue, 26 Nov 1996 11:29:01 -0600

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

Reply-to: boatright@cjnetworks.com

Priority: normal

X-mailer: Pegasus Mail for Windows (v2.23)

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Dear Frederick,

The decisions about the replies to your posts have been made by the group of moderators not by Dick acting alone.

I am very very sorry you feel abused about this. The moderators profoundly believe that this post does not contribute to discussion
"about the beliefs and teachings of the Baha'i Faith." and that it and the previous post that it refers to violate the charters restrictions on abusive language. The group of moderators further have requested that one of our number forward to you several selections from the Baha'i writings about hateful speech and the care with which we must choose words.

Beyond that, if you still feel the moderators are overstepping their bounds, you may, of course, post your comments about the moderators in the appropriate forum on Usenet, which is usually considered to be news.admin.abuse or news.admin.misc. Additionally, you may contact the newsgroups sponsoring LSA. I will forward their address to you in a subsequent message, however, you should be forewarned that the Assembly does not exercise direct oversight over the moderators, nor is it chartered to. The newsgroup moderators are chartered by the Usenet newsgroup system, not by any Baha'i institution.

Rick Boatright
co-moderator
soc.religion.bahai

> Date: Tue, 26 Nov 1996 06:17:46 -0500
> From: FG <@moa.net>
> To: srb-mods@bccca.org
> Cc: @moa.net
> Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> I believe Richard Detweiler is CENSORING my following message. I appeal > to you, whoever you are, to have some common sense and permit it to be > posted.
>
> I will forward to you the original message, which he also CENSORED, to > which this was responding.
>

>
> >
> > Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > > through this morass....
> >
> > The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:
> >
> > THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!
> >
> > There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.
> >
> > I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > > power to change the world....
> >
> > --
> > FG
> > Rochester, Michigan USA
>
> --
> FG
> Rochester, Michigan USA
>

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.43) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000637919@atlas.moa.net>;
Wed, 27 Nov 1996 06:15:58 -0500
Message-ID: <329C2487.3D60@moa.net>
Date: Wed, 27 Nov 1996 06:22:47 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: boatright@cjnetworks.com

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

References: <199611261737.LAA27030@topeka.cjnetworks.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Boatright wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> The decisions about the replies to your posts have been made by the > group of moderators not by Dick acting alone.

>

> I am very very sorry you feel abused about this. The moderators
> profoundly believe that this post does not contribute to discussion
> "about the beliefs and teachings of the Baha'i Faith."

The moderators are wrong and censoring my speech.

and that it

> and the previous post that it refers to violate the charters > restrictions on abusive language.

"Abusive language"? Cite some of it for me. "Utterly naive"? Oh come on!

What you're doing is censoring and manipulating postings that express opinions you differ with.

The group of moderators further

- > have requested that one of our number forward to you several
- > selections from the Baha'i writings about hateful speech

"Hateful speech"! How dare you! Cite it for me, please. It's not in either post. I absolutely resent your self-righteous, self-serving characterization of my speech as "hateful." Keep the Baha'i selections and read them yourself!

and the care

- > with which we must choose words.
- >

Your choice of words leaves much to be desired in my opinion. I don't believe "hate speech" is in the Baha'i Writings. It's part of the worthless, prevailing liberalism you're not intelligent enough to see through.

- > Beyond that, if you still feel the moderators are overstepping their
- > bounds, you may, of course, post your comments about the moderators
- > in the appropriate forum on Usenet, which is usually considered to be
- > news.admin.abuse or news.admin.misc.

In other words, go away and leave us alone. Don't dare question our judgement or rock the boat because we're blessed with holy insight.

Additionally, you may contact

- > the newsgroups sponsoring LSA.

Why bother? They'll probably only be fanatics like you.

I will forward their address to you

- > in a subsequent message, however, you should be forewarned that the
- > Assembly does not exercise direct oversight over the moderators, nor > is it chartered to. The newsgroup moderators are chartered by the > Usenet newsgroup system, not by any Baha'i institution.

>

Entirely loose canons, eh? Uh huh. Fascists in MHO.

> Rick Boatright

> co-moderator

> soc.religion.bahai

>

> > Date: Tue, 26 Nov 1996 06:17:46 -0500

> > From: FG <@moa.net>

> > To: srb-mods@bccca.org

> > Cc: @moa.net

> > Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

>

> > I believe Richard Detweiler is CENSORING my following message. I appeal > > to you, whoever you are, to have some common sense and permit it to be > > posted.

> >

> > I will forward to you the original message, which he also CENSORED, to > > which this was responding.

> >

> >

> > >

> > > Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > > > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > > > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > > > through this morass....

> > >

> > > The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

> > >

> > > THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

> > >

> > > There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

> > >

> > > I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > > > power to change the world....

> > >

> > > --

> > > FG

> > > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.43) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000637925@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 27 Nov 1996 06:25:57 -0500

Message-ID: <329C26DE.A6E@moa.net>

Date: Wed, 27 Nov 1996 06:32:46 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Talisman@umich.edu

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

References: <199611261737.LAA27030@topeka.cjnetworks.com> <329C2487.3D60@moa.net>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Would you like a case study in manipulation of speech on soc.religion.bahai? Read this.

FG wrote:

>

> Rick Boatright wrote:

> >

> > Dear Frederick,

> >

> > The decisions about the replies to your posts have been made by the > > group of moderators not by Dick acting alone.

> >

> > I am very very sorry you feel abused about this. The moderators

> > profoundly believe that this post does not contribute to discussion

> > "about the beliefs and teachings of the Baha'i Faith."

>

> The moderators are wrong and censoring my speech.

>

> and that it

> > and the previous post that it refers to violate the charters > > restrictions on abusive language.

>

> "Abusive language"? Cite some of it for me. "Utterly naive"? Oh come on!

> What you're doing is censoring and manipulating postings that express opinions

> you differ with.

>

> The group of moderators further

> > have requested that one of our number forward to you several > > selections from the Baha'i writings about hateful speech

>

> "Hateful speech"! How dare you! Cite it for me, please. It's not in either > post. I absolutely resent your self-righteous, self-serving characterization > of my speech as "hateful." Keep the Baha'i selections and read them yourself!

>

> and the care

> > with which we must choose words.

> >

>

> Your choice of words leaves much to be desired in my opinion. I don't believe

> "hate speech" is in the Baha'i Writings. It's part of the worthless, prevailing > liberalism you're not intelligent enough to see through.

>

> > Beyond that, if you still feel the moderators are overstepping their

> > bounds, you may, of course, post your comments about the moderators

> > in the appropriate forum on Usenet, which is usually considered to be > > news.admin.abuse or news.admin.misc.

>

> In other words, go away and leave us alone. Don't dare question our > judgement or rock the boat because we're blessed with holy insight.

>

> Additionally, you may contact

> > the newsgroups sponsoring LSA.

>

> Why bother? They'll probably only be fanatics like you.

>

> I will forward their address to you

> > in a subsequent message, however, you should be forewarned that the > > Assembly does not exercise direct oversight over the moderators, nor > > is it chartered to. The newsgroup moderators are chartered by the > > Usenet newsgroup system, not by any Baha'i institution.

> >

>

> Entirely loose canons, eh? Uh huh. Fascists in MHO.

>

> > Rick Boatright

> > co-moderator

> > soc.religion.bahai

> >

> > > Date: Tue, 26 Nov 1996 06:17:46 -0500

> > > From: FG <@moa.net>

> > > To: srb-mods@bccca.org

> > > Cc: @moa.net

> > > Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> >

> > > I believe Richard Detweiler is CENSORING my following message. I appeal > > > to you, whoever you are, to have some common sense and permit it to be > > > posted.

> > >

> > > I will forward to you the original message, which he also CENSORED, to > > > which this was responding.

> > >

> > >

> > > >

> > > > Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > > > > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > > > > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > > > > through this morass....

> > > >

> > > > The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

> > > >

> > > > THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

> > > >

> > > > There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

> > > >

> > > > I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > > > > power to change the world....

> > > >

> > > > --

> > > > FG

> > > > Rochester, Michigan USA

> > >

> > > --

> > > FG

> > > Rochester, Michigan USA

> > >

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from redheat.rs.itd.umich.edu (141.211.83.36) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000646926@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 01 Dec 1996 09:51:01 -0500

Received: by redheat.rs.itd.umich.edu (8.7.5/2.2)

with X.500 id JAA19798; Sun, 1 Dec 1996 09:54:34 -0500 (EST)
Received: by redheat.rs.itd.umich.edu (8.7.5/2.2)
with X.500 id JAA19796; Sun, 1 Dec 1996 09:54:33 -0500 (EST)
Received: from atlas.moa.net by redheat.rs.itd.umich.edu (8.7.5/2.2) with SMTP id JAA19792; Sun, 1 Dec 1996 09:54:32 -0500 (EST)
Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.42) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000646924@atlas.moa.net>;
Sun, 01 Dec 1996 09:49:20 -0500
Message-ID: <32A19C8D.6F4@moa.net>
Date: Sun, 01 Dec 1996 09:56:13 -0500
From: FG <@moa.net>
X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)
MIME-Version: 1.0
To: SManeck@berry.edu
CC: talisman@umich.edu
Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled
References: <445D77B7BE5@odin.berry.edu>
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Susan Maneck wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> Your postings are not what I would call "hate speech" but they are > "flames." I think you will make your points much more effectively if > your tone were a bit more temperate. I say that as someone who > sympathizes with your concerns.

>

> Susan

Tone? I'll chose the tone I damn well like! To hell with you bunch of self-appointed overseers of public discussion....

Temperate? As insipid and devoid of personality as the circuits of a computer board! Is this what the Baha'i Faith amounts to? Old biddies shaking their crooked fingers in the faces of naughty little boys....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.60) by atlas.moa.net (EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000623538@atlas.moa.net>;

Sat, 23 Nov 1996 08:07:43 -0500

Message-ID: <3296F8B3.400A@moa.net>

Date: Sat, 23 Nov 1996 08:14:27 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Talisman@umich.edu

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: [Fwd: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled and HONESTY]

Content-Type: multipart/mixed; boundary="-----23F0783A7928"

X-Mozilla-Status: 0005

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

-----23F0783A7928

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

Will I be permitted a hearing here? Oh my, perhaps I should first consult the holy texts.... No, I might misread them.... Others will read them for me--they shall tell me what they mean. God has inspired them.... What I should do? Dare I.... Oh this world of muck and mud....

Subject:

Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

Date:

Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:14 -0700 (MST)

From:

"Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

To:

@MOA.net (FG)

CC:

srb-mods@bccca.org

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

Sorry for the inadvertent send on the last message. The following will not be posted to the newsgroup as it is disrespectful in tone and sarcastic in the extreme. As a Baha'i, perhaps you will get some value out of the following excerpts from Baha'u'llah's Writings. I provide them as insight into why the moderators enforce the policies they have in place.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! Commit not that which defileth the limpid stream of love or destroyeth the sweet fragrance of friendship. By the righteousness of the Lord! We were created to show love one to another and not perversity and rancor. Take pride not in love for yourselves but in love for your fellow-creatures. Glory not in love for your country, but in love for all mankind."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablets of Baha'u'llah 138 (quoted in "Unrestrained as the Wind", section on "Demonstrating love and fellowship", p 87).

"Say: Human utterance is an essence which aspireth to exert its influence and needeth moderation. As to its influence, this is conditional upon refinement which in turn is dependent upon hearts which are detached and pure. As to its moderation, this hath to be combined with tact and wisdom as prescribed in the Holy Scriptures and Tablets. Meditate upon that which hath streamed forth from the heaven of the Will of thy Lord, He Who is the Source of all grace, that thou mayest grasp the intended meaning which is enshrined in the sacred depths of the Holy Writings."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablet of Wisdom, Tablets of Baha'u'llah, p. 143

"For the tongue is a smouldering fire, and excess of speech a deadly poison. Material fire consumeth the body, whereas the fire of the tongue devoureth both heart and soul. The force of the former lasteth but for a time, whilst the effects of the latter endure a century."

- Baha'u'llah, The Kitab-i-Iqan, p. 193

Thank you for participating,

Dick Detweiler

rdetweil@primenet.com

Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

===== Begin submitted post =====

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-11.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:18:05 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 20

> Message-ID: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net>

> References: <56vhv1$P1e@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> CC: @MOA.net

>

> Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > through this morass....

>

> The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

>

>

> THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

>

>

> There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

>
> I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > power to change the world....
>
>
> --
> FG
> Rochester, Michigan USA
>

===== End submitted post =====

Forgive me if I hurt your feelings!

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----23F0783A7928

Content-Type: message/rfc822

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

Content-Disposition: inline

Received: from mailhost1.primenet.com (206.165.5.51) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000619960@atlas.moa.net>;

Fri, 22 Nov 1996 10:48:10 -0500

Received: from primenet.com (rdetweil@usr04.primenet.com [206.165.5.104]) by mailhost1.primenet.com (8.8.3/wjp-h3.00) with ESMTP id IAA13654; Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:15 -0700 (MST)

Received: (from rdetweil@localhost) by primenet.com (8.8.3/8.8.3) id IAA01560; Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:14 -0700 (MST)

From: "Richard C. Detweiler" <rdetweil@primenet.com>

Message-Id: <199611221548.IAA01560@primenet.com>

Subject: Re: New Sacred Text Unveiled

To: @MOA.net (FG)

Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:48:14 -0700 (MST)

Cc: srb-mods@bccca.org

In-Reply-To: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net> from "FG" at Nov 22, 96 08:18:05 am

X-Mailer: ELM [version 2.4 PL23]

Content-Type: text

X-Mozilla-Status: 0011

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

Sorry for the inadvertent send on the last message. The following will not be posted to the newsgroup as it is disrespectful in tone and sarcastic in the extreme. As a Baha'i, perhaps you will get some value out of the following excerpts from Baha'u'llah's Writings. I provide them as insight into why the moderators enforce the policies they have in place.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! Commit not that which defileth the limpid stream of love or destroyeth the sweet fragrance of friendship. By the righteousness of the Lord! We were created to show love one to another and not perversity and rancor. Take pride not in love for yourselves but in love for your fellow-creatures. Glory not in love for your country, but in love for all mankind."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablets of Baha'u'llah 138 (quoted in "Unrestrained as the Wind", section on "Demonstrating love and fellowship", p 87).

"Say: Human utterance is an essence which aspireth to exert its influence and needeth moderation. As to its influence, this is conditional upon refinement which in turn is dependent upon hearts which are detached and pure. As to its moderation, this hath to be combined with tact and wisdom as prescribed in the Holy Scriptures and Tablets. Meditate upon that which hath streamed forth from the heaven of the Will of thy Lord, He Who is the Source of all grace, that thou mayest grasp the intended meaning which is enshrined in the sacred depths of the Holy Writings."

- Baha'u'llah, Tablet of Wisdom, Tablets of Baha'u'llah, p. 143

"For the tongue is a smouldering fire, and excess of speech a deadly poison. Material fire consumeth the body, whereas the fire of the tongue devoureth both heart and soul. The force of the former lasteth but for a time, whilst the effects of the latter endure a century."

- Baha'u'llah, The Kitab-i-Iqan, p. 193

Thank you for participating,

Dick Detweiler

rdetweil@primenet.com

Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

===== Begin submitted post =====

> To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> Path: ppp-pm01-dy-11.ouhub.moa.net

> From: FG <@MOA.net>

> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> Subject: New Sacred Text Unveiled

> Date: Fri, 22 Nov 1996 08:18:05 -0500

> Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> Lines: 20

> Message-ID: <3295A80D.1168@moa.net>

> References: <56vhv1$p1e@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> Mime-Version: 1.0

> Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> CC: @MOA.net

>

> Apparently, a new text has been discovered. Or perhaps it has always > been there. I, and others, apparently, missed it. It was difficult > to see. Alas, I, we, are so woefully human.... Blind and stumbling > through this morass....

>

> The crucial passage in the newly discovered Revealed Word is this:

>

>

> THOU SHALT NOT COMMIT SARCASM!

>

>

> There are sensitive plants. We mustn't hurt their feelings.

>

> I beg all of you to meditate profoundly on this koan. It has the > power to change the world....

>

>

> --

> FG

> Rochester, Michigan USA

>

===== End submitted post =====

-----23F0783A7928--

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from news2.acs.oakland.edu (141.210.10.152) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000626084@atlas.moa.net>;

Sun, 24 Nov 1996 10:40:49 -0500

Received: (from news@localhost) by news2.acs.oakland.edu (8.7.6/8.7.4) id KAA07287; Sun, Nov 1996 10:46:11 -0500

To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

Path: ppp-pm01-dy-3.ouhub.moa.net

From: FG <@MOA.net>

Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

Subject: Re: Let Soc.Religion.Bahai Participants Hear & Decide

Date: Sun, 24 Nov 1996 10:47:23 -0500

Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

Lines: 153

Message-ID: <32986E0B.5210@moa.net>

References: <578ls9$6ap@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

Mime-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

CC: @MOA.net

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

What do YOU think?

Richard C. Detweiler wrote:

>

> Dear Mr. Glaysher,

>

> Thank you for your submission to soc.religion.bahai.

>

> As your post contains sarcastic comments and argues with the > moderation of the group in a demeaning and disrespectful manner,

> it will not be posted. These issues are also peripheral to > the purpose of the newsgroup in any case.

>

False. They go to the heart of the matter, i.e., how it functions.

> If you are seeking full vent to your frustrations, I suggest

> news.admin or talk.religion.misc on the Internet as the first > is appropriate and the other is unmoderated.

"Vent your frustrations" is in the same category as my "Utterly naive."

I don't seek to deprive you of your conscience that apparently believes that. You may say what you wish. It won't hurt my little feelings.

I believe you're again manipulating discussion in a dictatorial, oppressive manner unjustified by anything in the Baha'i Writings which you apparently cloak your shameless deeds in.

This newsgroup,

> however, is for discussion of the Baha'i Faith in an atmosphere > of respect and free from topical tangents of all kinds.

>

The abuse of the conscience of a member of the Baha'i Faith and, apparently regular practice of distortion and censorship is not a suitable topic?

I can understand why you wouldn't wish to have anyone else know....

> Thank you for participating,

>

I'm not participating at all. You are self-righteously depriving me of that.

You are also depriving others of hearing or disagreeing with my opinions.

> Dick Detweiler

> rdetweil@primenet.com

> Co-moderator, soc.religion.bahai

>

> ===== Begin submitted post =====

>

> > To: soc-religion-bahai@uunet.uu.net

> > Path: ppp-pm01-dy-26.ouhub.moa.net

> > From: FG <@MOA.net>

> > Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai

> > Subject: Re: Incredibly Disillusioned with the Baha'i Community

> > Date: Tue, 19 Nov 1996 05:44:11 -0500

> > Organization: Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan, U.S.A.

> > Lines: 68

> > Message-ID: <32918F7B.76FA@moa.net>

> > References: <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty> <56qogd$rri@nnrp1.news.primenet.com>

> > NNTP-Posting-Host: zeus.moa.net

> > Mime-Version: 1.0

> > Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

> > Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

> > X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

> > To: Sian Smith <sms@mfe.govt.nz>

> > CC: @MOA.net

> >

> > Sian Smith wrote:

> > >

> > > In article <"-ER8GC.A.gTH.UGkiy"@bounty>, FG
<@moa.net> says:

> > > >

> > >

> > > [snip extracts from previous messages about being disillusioned]

> > >

> > > > : >As you know, the Bahai Faith doesn't have priests, preachers, or any

> > > > : >individuals who have the responsibility of telling people what to do, unlike

> > > > : >churches. However, from my experience I've discovered associating with

> > > > : >"Bahais" and not expecting them to play the roles of surrogate priests and

> > > > : > surrogate parish to be incredibly wishful and foolish thinking.

> > > >

> > > > : Since the Baha'i Community does not have a paid clergy, every Baha'is is

> > > > : to perform the service that the clergy of previous religions performed. We

> > > > : are each to study the Holy Writings, and to teach and deepen others in the

> > > > : Faith. It may be hard for one of a traditional religious background that

> > > > : does not encourage study to take responsibility for one's own spiritual

> > > > : growth, but we all have to struggle to change our shortcomings.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > Miguel, you utterly miss Karl's well-taken point here again. It's the abuse of > > > > the responsibility that is the crux of his observation. Power corrupts.

> > > > And it can corrupt Baha'is as well as Christians, Muslims, Nazis, etc.

> > >

> > > Excuse my ignorance, but WHO in the Baha'i Faith has any "power"? I've > > > never met anyone in the Faith who has power of any kind (i.e: power in > > > the sense that they can exert some kind of binding influence over > > > another person).

> >

> > I'll give you an example: The "moderators" of this newsgroup. They've > > censored a number of messages I've tried to post during the last few weeks.
> > They have the "power" to determine what you and everyone else OUT THERE > > reads.... If that's not control and power to SHAPE thought and opinion what > > is it?

> >

> > Maybe the previous writer was referring to some other > > > kind of power - in which case I would be grateful to receive a > > > "definition", so to speak, of this power and how it compares to the > > > "definition" I had in mind which, in my own humble opinion, is the sort > > > of power which is contained in the assertion "power corrupts".

> > >

> >

> > The "moderators" power is corrupting and inhibiting the exchange of ideas > > on this newsgroup. When I attempted to bring this to the attention of > > contributors by posting a message to this effect earlier, I was told
> >

> > THOU SHALT NOT QUESTION THE AUTHORITY AND POWER OF THE
"MODERATORS."

> > Kitab-i-Oppression, page 999.

> >

> > > The only person who has any kind of power over my spiritual development > > > is ME. I cannot abdicate that responsibility to someone else.

> > >

> >

> > There's a sense in which you're right. But secular and religious history > > is wracked with the abuse of POWER and the devastating results of it....
> > It always began in little ways.... A little at a time.... People shrugged....
> > Let's not make ways.... Let's build UNITY!

> >

> > > Loving greetings

> > >

> > > Sian Smith

> > > Wellington

> > > New Zealand

> >

> > --

> > FG

> > Rochester, Michigan USA

> >

> = End submitted post =====

YOU DEAR CENSORS have shown your true colors once again.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

Is this happening to YOU too? Assuming this post is now CENSORED, what do YOU make of it?

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from stargate.rs.itd.umich.edu (141.211.63.82) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000650330@atlas.moa.net>;

Mon, 02 Dec 1996 11:25:49 -0500

Received: from localhost by stargate.rs.itd.umich.edu (8.7.5/2.3) with SMTP id LAA13105; Mon, 2 Dec 1996 11:31:01 -0500 (EST)
Date: Mon, 2 Dec 1996 11:31:01 -0500 (EST)
From: Juan R Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
X-Sender: jrcole@stargate.rs.itd.umich.edu
To: FG <@moa.net>
Subject: Re: use of Lists
In-Reply-To: <32A2BFBA.501F@moa.net>
Message-ID: <Pine.SOL.3.95.961202112930.8275F-100000@stargate.rs.itd.umich.edu>
MIME-Version: 1.0
Content-Type: TEXT/PLAIN; charset=US-ASCII
X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Frederick:

The self-righteous prig remark was out of line. Talisman doesn't have many rules, but personal insults are off limits. I want you to stick around and become a productive part of the list, but this sort of behavior can get you kicked off by majority vote. It would be out of my hands.

JRIC

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.56) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000654044@atlas.moa.net>;
Tue, 03 Dec 1996 06:18:30 -0500
Message-ID: <32A40E22.25DD@moa.net>
Date: Tue, 03 Dec 1996 06:25:22 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Juan R Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: use of Lists

References: <Pine.SOL.3.95.961202112930.8275F-100000@stargate.rs.itd.umich.edu>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Juan R Cole wrote:

>

> Frederick:

>

> The self-righteous prig remark was out of line. Talisman doesn't have > many rules, but personal insults are off limits. I want you to stick > around and become a productive part of the list, but this sort of behavior > can get you kicked off by majority vote. It would be out of my hands.

>

> JRIC

I really don't think it was "out of line." It seems to me to have been quite accurate....

I'll try not to hurt any FEELINGS. It won't be easy given the hypersensitivity of some people. I'll consider your suggestions along these lines more carefully.

Incidentally, thanks for the info on LISTSERVS. It may take me several days to read and think about it.

Something for you to ponder: There's more than one way to skin a cat.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.56) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000654039@atlas.moa.net>;

Tue, 03 Dec 1996 06:11:13 -0500

Message-ID: <32A40C6D.1ACF@moa.net>

Date: Tue, 03 Dec 1996 06:18:05 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: LineSync Architecture <linesync@sover.net>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: use of Lists

References: <v01520d01aec89ec38eb3@[204.71.18.147]>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

LineSync Architecture wrote:

>

> I find the continued disparaging language of FG to be most > offensive. This list is for academic discourse which is easily carried on > without character assumptions and accusations.

>

> Julie Lineberger

Give me an example of "disparaging language." Sorry to offend your FEELINGS.

Your message leads me to believe you don't know anything about academic discourse....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.50) by atlas.moa.net

(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000666892@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 05 Dec 1996 14:33:46 -0500

Message-ID: <32A72538.39F5@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 05 Dec 1996 14:40:40 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Rick Schaut <richs@MICROSOFT.com>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Richard Logan's Comments

References:

<c=US%a=_%p=msft%l=RED-67-MSG-961205185106Z-16983@INET-01-IMC.microsoft.com>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Rick Schaut wrote:

>

> Dear Frederick,

>

> You asked,

>

> >What "episode" do you refer to? Can you flesh that out a little more?
> >
> >I believe my message contained sufficient facts for my point to be made.
> >You're certainly welcome to ask around if you wish.
> >
> >
> >Regards,
> >Rick

I'm asking you, but you apparently imagine it's all self-evident.

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from pacman.rs.itd.umich.edu (141.211.63.80) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000660467@atlas.moa.net>;

Wed, 04 Dec 1996 11:45:39 -0500

Received: from localhost by pacman.rs.itd.umich.edu (8.7.5/2.3) with SMTP id LAA27651; Wed, 4 Dec 1996 11:50:52 -0500 (EST)

Date: Wed, 4 Dec 1996 11:50:51 -0500 (EST)

From: "Joshua S. Greenbaum" <jsgreen@umich.edu>

X-Sender: jsgreen@pacman.rs.itd.umich.edu

To: @moa.net

Subject: Talisman

Message-ID: <Pine.SOL.3.95.961204114930.27422A-100000@pacman.rs.itd.umich.edu>

MIME-Version: 1.0

Content-Type: TEXT/PLAIN; charset=US-ASCII

X-Mozilla-Status: 0005

Dear Mr. Glaysher,

I am sorry to inform you that due to numerous complaints regarding your behavior, I have been forced to remove you from the Talisman list for a period of six months.

*

Josh Greenbaum"For we are like tree trunks in the snow.

Program AssistantIn appearance they lie sleekly and a Center for Middle Easternlittle push should be enough to set them and North African Studiesrolling. No, it can't be done, for they 144 Lane Hall 1290are firmly wedded to the ground.

(313) 764-0350But see, even that is only an appearance."

jsgreen@umich.edu-Franz Kafka

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <32A6B2F4.5808@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 05 Dec 1996 06:33:08 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: "Richard C. Logan" <nineteen@Onramp.NET>

CC: Sandra Fotos <sfotos@gol.com>, Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>,

"Eric D. Pierce" <PIERCEED@sswdserver.sswd.csus.edu>,

Talisman <talisman@umich.edu>, Soc.Religion.Bahai

Subject: Re: Serial Tantrums

References: <199612050543.XAA02813@mailhost.onramp.net>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Richard C. Logan wrote:

>

> >No, no, no.... Don't be pedant.... Cite MY nasty, brutish remarks that > >offend

> >your FEELINGS so.... TELL me I'm wrong. I'll consider it. Give me some > >reasoning.... NOT footnotes.

> >

> >I'm surrounded by books here in my study and have plenty to read already

> >though

> >I'll read what you write HERE.

>

> Dear Doctor Cole,

>

> I formally request that Mr. Glaysher be removed from the list, or at the > very least he be admonished to stop being so personal and contentious.

> Everyday I read some unpleasant and rude remarks. Is this really > neccesary?

>

> Richard C. Logan

> nineteen@onramp.net

> Maintain HomePage "The Baha'is of Lubbock"

> <https://rampages.onramp.net/~nineteen/>

My apologies if I've made "some unpleasant and rude remarks." If Mr. Logan would give me more of a sense of exactly what it is he finds to be so, I could respond more precisely.

If you all will permit me, I find it unpleasant that vague accusations against me might result in the GAS OVENS! I mean really, come on!

The post of my cited above appears to me to be quite innocuous. How that could be grounds for ostracism is beyond me.

Okay. I'll try, sincerely, to be nicer.... Give me chance.

Heh, isn't this the newsgroup that has had on it so much about FREE SPEECH and CONSCIENCE lately?

(How humiliating, having to beg for one's life.)

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Received: from glaysher.library (204.38.255.50) by atlas.moa.net
(EMWAC SMTPRS 0.81) with SMTP id <B0000666912@atlas.moa.net>;

Thu, 05 Dec 1996 14:36:42 -0500

Message-ID: <32A725E8.5C6E@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 05 Dec 1996 14:43:36 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: belove@sover.net

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: Re: Serial Tantrums

References: <Chameleon.849794796.belove@>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

belove@sover.net wrote:

>

> Philip here:

>

> I second this request.

>

On what basis? I don't find anything in THIS clip a justifiable basis for character assassination and ostracism.... As though it were all self-evident....

> --- On Wed, 4 Dec 96 23:45:15 -0600 "Richard C. Logan"

> <nineteen@onramp.net> wrote:

>

> >>No, no, no.... Don't be pedant.... Cite MY nasty, brutish remarks that

>

> >>offend

> >>your FEELINGS so.... TELL me I'm wrong. I'll consider it. Give me

> some > >>reasoning.... NOT footnotes.

> >>

> >>I'm surrounded by books here in my study and have plenty to read already

>

> >>though

> >>I'll read what you write HERE.

> >

> >Dear Doctor Cole,

> >

> >I formally request that Mr. Glaysher be removed from the list, or at the > >very least he be admonished to stop being so personal and contentious.

> >Everyday I read some unpleasant and rude remarks. Is this really > >neccesary?

> >

> >

> >Richard C. Logan

> >nineteen@onramp.net

> >Maintain HomePage "The Baha'is of Lubbock"

> ><https://rampages.onramp.net/~nineteen/>

> >

> >

>

> -----End of Original Message-----

>

> -----

> E-mail: belove@sover.net

> Date: 12/5/96

> Time: 9:06:20 AM

>

> This message was sent by Chameleon

> -----

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <32A6B6CA.490C@moa.net>

Date: Thu, 05 Dec 1996 06:49:30 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Juan R Cole <jrc@umich.edu>

CC: @MOA.net

Subject: FATWA

References: <Pine.SOL.3.95.961202001354.6022B-100000@breakout.rs.itd.umich.edu>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0005

jsgreen is banishing me on the basis of "numerous complaints"! Is that all it takes? What about FREE SPEECH and individual CONSCIENCE?

Can you plead for my life? Don't let them send me to the gas chambers!
The gulag!

Seriously, this is a serious issue....

As a published writer and poet, I find it quite disturbing....

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD

Message-ID: <32A87892.7EAA@moa.net>

Date: Fri, 06 Dec 1996 14:48:34 -0500

From: FG <@moa.net>

X-Mailer: Mozilla 2.02 (Win95; I)

MIME-Version: 1.0

To: Quanta Dawn-Light <DAWNLIQU@fllab.chass.ncsu.edu>

CC: talisman@umich.edu, irfan@umich.edu

Subject: Re: Please stop!

References: <1B0C93A57B9@fllab.chass.ncsu.edu>

Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii

Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit

X-Mozilla-Status: 0015

Quanta Dawn-Light wrote:

>

> Dear beloved Frederick,

>

> You are more loved than you realize! You are the beloved > universal child of Father Cosmos and Mother Earth.

> You contain many of hearts within you who do truly love you.

> Stop hurting yourself. Please! Please! Please!

>

> love,

> q.

>

> *****

> Life is a pattern of relationships (_)

Well, dear friend (may I call you that?), I understand what you are saying....

Alas, here, in the Siberian taiga, I fear you blame the victim. Can you consider that? No one else has. I hope your good heart will permit you to for at least one moment....

Yes, not a complete victim. (Oh the bitter ironies of life, the soul a tangled skein.) I apologize, sincerely, dearest, for any untoward harm I might have done. And dearest Sonia, I will watch for you outside the prison walls!

--

FG

Rochester, Michigan USA

-----3E69366EFD--

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

This file contains two messages: "attacks by Bahais" & "Bahai Bullying":

The non-Bahai will note that a year later, now March 2000, my fellow Bahais only continue, with renewed ferocity, their attempts to silence and suppress what they don't want you to know about:

Incessant Bahai attacks upon my freedom of speech and liberty, as well as on others, have made it necessary for me to adopt a persona for my own protection and well being. Other measures have been taken.

During the late winter and spring of 1999, Bahais twice flooded my hotmail account with up to 1000 messages per day resulting in considerable inconvenience and expenditure of time and effort to block, and ultimately close, the offending accounts; they have, by using numerous Bahai trolls, especially Gyr Falcon, slandered, maligned, and caricatured me in a further effort to discredit me and portray me on talk.religion.bahai and elsewhere as a disturbed and errant individual; through concerted false charges and allegations against me, they have now succeeded in deceiving Hotmail into closing my email account, which I depended on for a considerable part of my income and livelihood.

For documentation of many similar incidents of Bahai oppression during the last decade, see The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

bahai.htm

BULLYING:

I'm alarmed at the Bahai attempts, during May of 1999, at character assassination, ridicule, and generally portraying me and others as disturbed individuals. This tactic has been used for over three years and continues to be used against me and other Bahais and non-Bahais or ex-Bahais on and off talk.religion.bahai.

I have never claimed to be perfect. At times I have apologized to Bahais, Muslims, and other non-Bahais when I felt, or was convinced, that I was wrong or had spoken unfairly. I find the constant technique to portray me as a megalomaniac or paranoid quite offensive.

Similarly, the tactic of accusing me of spam for posting my opinions is calculated to discredit the validity of my and others' concerns regarding censorship in Bahai forums and has also been used on AOL. Such accusations reveal the frustration that Bahai fundamentalists apparently feel over my having found ways of enduring and resisting the onslaught of their concerted attacks, while preserving a historical record on a markedly ephemeral medium for innocent Bahais and non-Bahais....

Fair-minded Bahai and non-Bahai observers may judge for themselves whether my and others' allegations of censorship are valid by reading the record preserved under "Assorted Controversial Documents" on my website at

bahai.htm

As further corroboration that I am not the only person concerned with the intolerance and censorship that has overtaken the Bahai Faith, I recommend Professor Juan Cole's new book Modernity & the Millennium: The Genesis of the Bahai Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East, available through Columbia University Press or Amazon.com at

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

In his conclusion, which would never have passed the system of Bahai "review" that the UHJ imposes on all publications brought out under its tight control, Professor Cole, of the Department of History at The University of Michigan, quite accurately identifies the distortions that have been wreaked upon Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

"Some contemporary leaders of the Baha'i Faith have given answers increasingly similar to those of fundamentalists, stressing scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values. While the values of the nineteenth-century Baha'i movement, which was far more tolerant, continue to exist as a minority view, by the late 1990s a different set of emphases prevailed." (196)

He himself and many others, as evidence under the "Assorted Controversial Documents," have suffered at the hands of the fundamentalists who have taken control of the religion:

"The rise of academic Baha'i scholarship has caused tension in the community, whose present-day leadership tends to be fundamentalist and antiliberal in orientation, and this has led to pressure on a number of prominent academics to resign or dissociate themselves from the movement." (201)

These same forces of fundamentalist orthodoxy are evident on AOL, talk.religion.bahai, and alt.religion.bahai for impartial viewers to witness. They will be evident to all perceptive observers of whatever forum Bahais may be trying to control and influence.

As a Bahai since 1976, I myself have always found especially repulsive the manner in which Bahai fundamentalists attempt to manipulate the institutions and leaders of government, the United Nations, and public opinion, while pretending to values they deride in private or at Bahai-only meetings.

Ultimately, it is the Bahai Universal House of Justice that is responsible for the perversion and corruption of such clear and elevating teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world."

Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

The UHJ is also in the end responsible for inciting Bahai fanatics and fundamentalists to attack other Bahais and non-Bahais merely for their views expressed on and off line in free forums of public discussion.

I recommend all newcomers to these matters read "The Baha'i Technique":

technique.htm

On The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
bahai.htm

Professor Juan Cole, of the University of Michigan, discusses related issues in his journal article "The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997":

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm>

Also see:

Full Text of UHJ's Letter of April 7, 1999

UHJLetterApril71999.htm

Juan Cole, "Commentary" on UHJ's "outburst of vehement ignorance"
Outburst.htm

Letter of Resignation from Paul Dodenhoff, Assistant to the Auxiliary Board LetterResignationPD.htm

--

Patrick Henry.... "Give me liberty or give me death!"
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:
bahai.htm

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Bahai Faith Website Links - 2006

300+ Links

Homepage

FG

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty

The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

- The Bahá'í World Faith - <https://www.religioustolerance.org/bahai.htm>
A view of the Bahá'í Faith by "Ontario Consultants on Religious Tolerance", a group that provides perspectives of major religious groups for the purpose of promoting religious tolerance.
- Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience - <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>
A collection of viewpoints critical of the Bahá'í Faith and the Universal House of Justice, calling for greater freedom of conscience within the Faith, as collected by FG.
- The Religion of Baha'i - <https://www.probe.org/docs/baha'i.html>
A critique of the Baha'i Faith from a Christian perspective; its origins, major beliefs, contrasts between Christianity and Baha'i, its organization and goals, and suggested weaknesses of the Baha'i system of belief. By Lou Whitworth.
- The Baha'i Faith - <https://religiousmovements.lib.virginia.edu/nrms/bahi.html>
New Religious Movements' profile of the Baha'i Faith, links with abstracts, and a print bibliography. Includes references to bogus Baha'i groups.
- Where's the Troops? - <https://uibm.freeyellow.com/index.html>
A critique of the Baha'i Faith in the United States, by Darrick Evenson, from a Mormon perspective, offering an introduction to the Universal Integrated Baha'i Message (U.I.B.M.).
- Unenrolled Baha'i - Yahoo Discussion Group - <https://groups.yahoo.com/group/unenrolledbahai> An online support group for persons who identify with some of the Teachings of Baha'u'llah while not being enrolled with the Baha'i Administration. Members only Yahoo group.
- The Baha'i Faith - <https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/bahailinks.html>
A critique of the Baha'i Administration and its treatment of Baha'i liberals, from person who has resigned his Baha'i membership, but claims to practice Baha'i privately.
- Enemies Within: Conflict and Control in the Baha'i Community - <https://www.angelfire.com/ca3/bigquestions/enemies.html>
Cultic Studies Journal article about the internal stresses in the Baha'i community, and the Baha'i administration's attempts to suppress free expression among adherents.
- The Baha'i Faith: An Introduction for Evangelical Christians - <https://www.angelfire.com/mo/baha/christianintro.html>
A viewpoint on the Baha'i Faith written to address issues of interest to Christians. WARNING: This site displays unauthorised photographic representations of Baha'u'llah which may offend Baha'is.
- Stonehaven Press - <https://www.stonehaven-press.com/index.htm>
Publishers of pamphlets on Bahá'í themes, including the relationship to Christianity, the Bible, spirituality and modern science.
- Islam and the Baha'i Faith - <https://bci.org/islam-bahai>
A brief study of the relationship between the two Faiths, from a Baha'i point of view.
- Hinduism and the Baha'i Faith - <https://www.northill.demon.co.uk/hinduism/index.htm>
Explores the relationship between Hinduism and the Baha'i Faith and offers an explanation of the Baha'i Faith to people of Hindu background.
- Religious Apologetics - <https://www24.brinkster.com/riazlalehzari/religion.html>
Interpretations of the connections between the Bahai faith and other religions including Christianity, Islam, Buddhism and Hinduism through Baha'i Writings. Discussions downloadable as word documents.
- Kingdom Project - <https://www.kingdom-project.org/>
An initiative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States. Information, resources, subscription form for electronic newsletter.
- The Baha'is: Christians of the Second Advent - <https://ldsbf.freeyellow.com/jesus.html>
Why do Baha'is believe that Christ has already returned? What do they believe about the rapture, the mark of the beast (666), and about Jesus?
- In Praise of God from the worlds religions. - <https://business.fortunecity.com/haas/235/praiseGod.html>
Meditations on God from the religions of the world.
- Baha'i Christian Dialogue - <https://www.ozemail.com.au/~cdibdin/index.htm>
The aim of the site is a cordial and productive dialogue between Bahá'ís and Christians.
- The Baha'i Faith; an Introduction for Mormons \(& Latter Day Saints\) - <https://www.freeyellow.com/members6/ldsbf/index.html>
Some believe that Joseph Smith prophesied the coming of the Founder of The Baha'i Faith. You are invited to take 15 or 20 minutes to read this article, and see for yourself.

- Hinduism and the Baha'i Faith - <https://www.religiousunity.org/>
A study of Hinduism and the Baha'i Faith by Prof. Anil Sarwal. Downloadable book Miracles in Religion and some poems included.
- The Baha'i Faith: The 7th Revelation of Islam - <https://www.angelfire.com/mo/baha/islam.html>
An Introduction to the Baha'i Faith for Muslims.
- Do Mormon Temples Testify of Baha'u'llah? - <https://www.angelfire.com/mo/baha/temples.html>
How the Mormon Endowment Ceremony prepares Latter-day Saints for the coming of Baha'u'llah: the Son of Man and Founder of the Baha'i Faith.
- Ocean - Bahá'í Virtual Library - <https://www.bahai-education.org/ocean/> Virtual library of religious literature, including Scripture from the World's major religions. Includes ordering information for alternative CD-ROM version.
- Online book - Near-Death-Experience & the Baha'i Faith - <https://home.arcor.de/unity9/LightAfterDeath.html>
Cyber edition of "Light After Death". Explores the Baha'i teachings on the afterlife as they may relate to the 'Near Death Experience'.
- Baha'i Prayers - <https://www.bahaiprayers.org/> Prayers of Baha'u'llah, Abdul-Baha and The Bab, accompanied by photographs from nature, may be found in this quiet place of devotion.
- International Bahá'í Library - <https://library.bahai.org/>
The International Bahá'í Library, Haifa, Israel, is the largest repository of published items by and about the Bábí and Bahá'í religions and community.
- Baha'i by Subject - <https://bahai.attach.net/>
Thousands of Subjects plus on-line Bahá'í Books with Word & Phrase Search
- Association for Baha'i Studies \(English-Speaking Europe\) - <https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/abs/>
An Association dedicated studying Baha'i Scripture and correlating Bahá'í principles with the current needs of society. General information, online publications, proceedings membership, calendar of events, contacts.
- Association for Bahá'í Studies - North America - <https://www.bahai-studies.ca/> Mission and goals, book orders, conference details, membership, and contacts.
- Association for Bahá'í Studies in Persian - <https://www.absp.org/>
A centre for Bahá'í Studies administered by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada. In English and Persian language. News, activities, newsletter, illustrated list of available publications, and online order form.
- Bahai-Studies.org - <https://www.bahai-studies.org/> Directory listing of links to worldwide Associations for Bahá'í Studies.
- Bahá'í Association - University of Louisville - <https://www.louisville.edu/rso/bahai/> Students Association on the campus of the University of Louisville which seeks to apply the principles of the Bahá'í Faith to world issues. Calendar of Events, contacts.
- Association for Bahá'í Studies - Japan - <https://www2.gol.com/users/sfotos/> List of publications, and links.
- Association For Bahá'í Studies in Southern Africa - <https://www.bci.org/bahaistudies/> Activities, purposes, documents, membership, contacts.
- Association for Bahá'í Studies - Australia - <https://abs.bahai.org.au/> Promotes the study of the history, teachings and philosophy of the Bahá'í Faith, and the application of Bahá'í principles to the concerns of society.
- Association For Bahá'í Studies - Canada - <https://ncf.davin.ottawa.on.ca/freeport/community.associations/bahai/abs/menu> Purposes, activities, and membership information.
- Bahá'í Studies Review - <https://bahai-library.org/bsr/> Journal of the Association for Bahá'í Studies (English-speaking Europe).
- The Baha'i World - <https://www.bahai.org/>
The official presence of the Baha'i Faith on the Web. Comprehensive body of authentic material presented by the Baha'i International Community. Available in English, Spanish, French, Portuguese, and some others.
- One Country - <https://www.onecountry.org/>
The online newsletter of the Baha'i International Community.
- Baha'i International Community World News - <https://www.bahaiworldnews.org> Official Bahá'í International Community World News, Baha'i glossary.
- Baha'i International Community United Nations Statements - <https://www.bic-un.bahai.org> Statements of the Baha'i International Community from 1947 to the present day including those presented to the United Nations.
- Mottahedeh Development Services - <https://www.mdssed.org/>
A Social and Economic Development Agency of the Baha'i Faith, promoting unity in diversity, community service, responsibility, universal education and prosperity.
- Uplifting Words - <https://www.upliftingwords.org> Mailing list for quotes from the Baha'i Writings via e-mail. Feedback page and links.
- Bahá'í Faith Pages from Skye - <https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/index.htm>
A Scottish site hosting the Association for Bahá'í Studies (English-Speaking Europe), the Writings in Gaelic, children's magazine Dayspring, and UK links.
- Special Ideas, source for Baha'i materials - <https://www.special-ideas.com> Online shop for Bahai teaching and personal items including books, jewelry, t-shirts, literature, stickers and other items.
- Sina's Baha'i page - <https://www.sina.iwarp.com>
An individual Baha'is personal page

- Pilgrimage 159 BE - <https://omv.op.het.net/>
A selection of writings illustrated with pictures of a pilgrimage to the Bahá'í Holy places in Israel.
 - Living Waters - <https://www.geocities.com/lunaesia>
A personal site by a Baha'i youth for the promotion of Baha'i inspiration and understanding, with essays, poetry, Writings.
 - Baha'i Journal UK - <https://www.bahaijournal.org.uk/>
On-line edition of the Journal of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United Kingdom. Current edition and archives of prior publications.
 - Welcome to Sarwals' Home - <https://bahai.htmlplanet.com/> Anil Sarwal shares his Baha'i experiences and his thoughts on social issues, travel, education, language, and Hinduism. His book 'Miracles in Religion' is included.
 - Bahai-Deepening - <https://users.tebenet.nl/~kuijer-e/announce.html>
Hosts a deepening for every Saturday for Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'í, on Bahá'í topics, 4:00pm GMT on EFnet, IRC. The site has archives of past deepenings and the schedule of upcoming topics.
 - Naveed Foundation - <https://www.naveedfoundation.org>
A non-profit organisation which assists social and economic development projects consistent with the teachings of the Baha'i Faith. Projects, media announcements, spiritual axis feature, contacts and links.
Baha'i Marriage - <https://www.bahaimarriage.com/>
Information on the Baha'i concept of marriage.
-
- Bahá'í Computer & Communication Association - <https://www.bcca.org/> Internet services for Baha'i organisations, mailing lists, discussion groups and directories of communities, information and references.
 - The Bahá'í Faith - <https://www.bahai.com/>
A directory of Baha'i sites.
 - Baha'i Faith Index - <https://www.bahaindex.com/>
Search engine and portal with 3,000 links, a discussion area, and chat area.
 - Bahá'í Communities - <https://www.bcca.org/communities/> Directory of sites for localities and organizations throughout the world, arranged by countries or regions.
 - The Bahá'í Page at Ibiblio - <https://www.ibiblio.org/Bahai/> Compilation of links related to the Bahá'í Faith.
 - Baha'i Academics Resource Library - <https://bahai-library.org>
A collection of texts and resources on Baha'i topics, accumulated by academics, for academics.
 - Baha'i Youth Workshops - <https://workshops.prohosting.com/>
A directory of Baha'i Youth Workshops throughout the world. Includes a bulletin board.
 - Famous Baha'is - https://www.adherents.com/largecom/fam_bahai.html
List of famous Baha'is: includes famous poets, musicians, actors, authors, and leaders.
 - World Religions - <https://bahai.freesevers.com/> Listing of information on various religions, and some biographical information from the webmaster.
 - Baha'i Web Ring - <https://v.webring.com/hub?ring=bahai&id=21&hub>
An index of participating Baha'i sites around the world, with facility for sequential or random linking.
 - Indian Baha'i Community - <https://www.bahaindia.org/> Official web presence of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of India. General information, literature, social and economic development projects, contacts and links.
 - Baha'is of Chandigarh - <https://bci.org/bahaichandigarh/> Chandigarh, Union Territory, India. News, services, contacts and general information.
 - Baha'i Faith in Guyana - <https://www.sdn.org.gy/bahai/> General information about the Faith in Guyana, contacts. Statements of the international Baha'i Community.
 - Bahai-Directory.org - <https://www.Bahai-Directory.org>
A partial listing of Bahá'í Communities represented on the internet
 - Asia-Pacific Baha'i Link Page - <https://www.ozemail.com.au/~curtotti/ap/ap.html>
Geographically organised listing of Baha'i Communities, institutions and agencies in the Asia-Pacific region.
 - The Bahá'í Faith in South Africa - <https://www.za.bahai.org>
The official website of the Bahá'í Faith in South Africa
 - The Baha'i Community of Zurich - <https://www.bahaizurich.ch> Zurich, Switzerland. Community vision, activities, invitation to the public, contacts and links. In English and German.
 - Baha'i Switzerland - <https://www.bahai.ch/english/index.html>
Swiss Baha'i community, introduction, events, statements on world events, contacts and links.
 - Baha'i Community of Lithuania - <https://www.bahai.lt/>
General information, contacts.
 - Baha'is in Singapore - <https://www.bahai-sg.org/default.htm>
Official Website of the Baha'is of Singapore.
 - Baha'i Youth Group Singapore - <https://bci.org/bygs> List of birthdays of members, and calendar with events and Holy Days marked. Gregorian New Year 2001 photo archive.
 - Baha'is of Guyana website - <https://www.gy.bahai.org> Website of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Guyana, South America. Brief history of the Baha'i Faith in Guyana included.
 - Baha'i Puerto Rico - <https://bahai-puerto-rico.org/> Official web presence for the Puerto Rico Baha'i Community. General information and contacts.
 - Baha'i Community of Singapore - <https://www.bahai.org.sg/> Community news, history, personal profiles, links and contacts.
 - Baha'is of Victoria, Australia - <https://www.vic.bahai.org.au/>
Baha'is of Victoria Australia, news, events ,articles on spiritual issues, Art Gallery, Bahai Books & Writings, a spiritually vibrant community
 - Australian Baha'i Community - <https://www.bahai.org.au/>
National website of the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Australia, Sydney, Australia.

- Bahá'ís of Western Australia - <https://www.wa.bahai.org.au/>
The official website of the Bahá'ís of Western Australia.
- Baha'i Community of Melville - <https://www.wa.bahai.org.au/melville/> Official website of the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'ís of Melville, Western Australia. List of activities, news, contacts and links with downloadable information flyers.
- Baha'is in Melbourne Metropolitan Municipalities - <https://home.vicnet.net.au/~bahai/metro.html>
Map with hotspot links to Community Contact information
- Darwin Baha'i Community - <https://www.nt.bahai.org.au/darwinlsa/> Website of the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'ís of Darwin Inc.
- The Bahá'í Faith in Hawkesbury, NSW Australia - <https://www.nsw.bahai.org.au/hawkesbury/info.htm> Hawkesbury is one hours travel North West of Sydney. General information on the Baha'i Community of Hawkesbury
- Baha'i Community of Toowoomba - <https://bci.org/toowoomba>
Toowoomba, Queensland, Australia

- Windsor Bahá'í Community - <https://www.wincom.net/BAHAI/> Contacts and public activities for the Windsor and surrounding areas' Bahá'í communities. Links to Bahá'í resources.
- Baha'i Community of Canada/Communauté baha'ie canadienne - <https://www.ca.bahai.org/>
The official web site of the Bahá'í Community of Canada. /Le site officiel de la communauté bahá'ie canadienne.
- The Bahá'í Faith Forum - <https://ncf.davin.ottawa.on.ca/freeport/community.associations/bahai/menu> Baha'i communities in the national capital area, including Ottawa, Nepean, Vanier, Clarence Creek, Kanata, Gloucester, Manotick, Osgoode, Cumberland, Stittsville, Aylmer, Gatineau, Hull, Chelsea and LaPêche. Local activities, contacts, and general information about the Bahá'í World Faith.
- The Bahá'í Faith in Newfoundland and Labrador - <https://www.infonet.st-johns.nf.ca:80/bahai/>
Ongoing activities and recent events, local community contacts, the history of the Faith in the province, and links to Bahá'í resources.
- The Baha'i Community of Lambton Shores - <https://www.bahailambtonshores.org/> Ontario, Canada. Corporate vision, invitation to the public, community information and email contact.
- Baha'i Community of Stirling-Rawdon - <https://bci.org/Stirling-Rawdon/> Community information, news and contacts. Maintained by the Spiritual Assembly of Stirling-Rawdon, Ontario, Canada.
- Bahá'ís of Lower Fraser Valley - <https://bci.org/fvbahai/> Information on and for Baha'i Communities in this region of British Columbia Canada. Calendar of Events, Bookshop, contact information.
- The Baha'i Community of Langley - <https://bci.org/bahai-langley/> Includes information on Baha'i Children's classes, Community Events and Activities, and Vision TV program information.
- The West Vancouver Bahá'í Community - <https://westvanbahai.bc.ca/>
Introductory information about the Bahá'í World Faith. Local content includes community activities calendar, group photographs, registration form for children's classes and a list of Bahá'í-related resources to be found in the West Vancouver Memorial Library.
- Yukon Baha'i Resources - <https://www.aseeko.com/bahai> Whitehorse Yukon Bahai community. Local activities, news, links and contacts.
- Cowichan Valley Baha'i Community - <https://cvbahais.org> Shawnigan Lake Baha'i Community in British Columbia, Canada. Community events, general information and contacts.
- The Bahá'í Community of Wood Buffalo - <https://members.tripod.com/~kay64/> Community newsletter for the Wood Buffalo and Fort McMurray, Alberta Bahá'í Community, with links to introductory information and local community members' home pages.

- Baha'i Community of New Zealand - <https://www.bahai.org.nz/> Official Website of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'ís of New Zealand
- Lower Hutt Bahai Community - <https://www.huttbahai.org.nz/>
The Baha'i Community of Lower Hutt, New Zealand. Contact information, archival events calendar and international news items

- National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United Kingdom - <https://www.bahai.org.uk/>
General information, UK community websites, administrative and guidance information for UK Bahá'ís, discussion papers, and directions for finding the resting place of Shoghi Effendi.
- Baha'is of the Isle of Man - https://bci.org/bahai_ion/
Contact information, a questionnaire, and introductory information on Bahá'í.
- Skye and Lochalsh Bahá'í Community - <https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/skyecom/>
A portrait of a small island Bahá'í community. The site also contains a selection of articles from "Dayspring", the UK's children's Bahá'í magazine, a selection of material from the publications of the Association for Bahá'í Studies (English Speaking Europe), Bahá'í Writings in Scottish and Irish Gaelic, and other material.
- Index to Bahá'í Sites in the United Kingdom - <https://www.manvell.org.uk/lynx/index.htm>
A regularly updated set of URLs and email addresses for local community sites in England. Also links to sites in the remainder of the UK.
- The Scottish Bahá'í - <https://www.breacais.demon.co.uk/sbn/index.htm>
Newsletter of the Scottish Baha'i Community. Current and back issues for reading online.
- UK Bahá'í Contacts - <https://www.warble.com/Bahai/UK/>
A guide to what's on in the UK for Bahá'ís and for those wishing to learn more about the Faith or meet with Bahá'ís in their area.
- Bahá'í Council for Scotland - <https://www.bci.org/scotland/>
"Communicating with Bahá'ís in Scotland and beyond." Features regular events, news, information about the Maxwell Bahá'í Community Sunday School, the Scottish Bahá'í Youth Task Force, a chat forum, and a guest book.
- Travel Teaching Service - <https://bci.org/tts/> Facilitates travel teaching and pioneering within England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle

- of Man. Information for Communities, travel teachers, and pioneers.
- Monmouthshire Bahá'í Community, Wales - <https://members.aol.com/MonBahais/Welcome.html>
Welcome to Baha'is of Monmouthshire
- Coleraine Baha'i Community, Northern Ireland - <https://freespace.virgin.net/sina.rezvani/>
"We are working for a World Civilization!" Includes texts on "Becoming a Bahá'í", "Bahá'í Life".
- Office of Public Information - <https://www.bahai.org.uk/opi/index.htm>
Information and resources for the Bahá'í community, from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United Kingdom.
- Bahá'í Council for Wales - <https://www.acemake.com/bahaiwales/>
The Bahá'í Council for Wales. Includes Bahá'u'lláh's "The Hidden Words" in Welsh translation.
- Derry Bahá'ís, Northern Ireland - https://www.bci.org/bahais_of_derry/Baha'i Community of Londonderry, Northern Ireland. Includes a brief introduction to the local community.
- Isle of Wight Baha'i Community - <https://bci.org/BahaisIoW/> Information about the Baha'i Community in the Isle of Wight, United Kingdom, and general information on the Faith.
- The Baha'is of Preston - <https://bci.org/preston/> Preston, Lancashire, England. Community and municipal information, general information and links.
- The Baha'i Faith In Manchester - https://bci.org/manchester_bahai/Community events and contact details for the Baha'i Community of Manchester including some history of the Faith, and links.
- Carlisle Baha'i Group - <https://bci.org/carlisle/> Brief information on the Baha'i Community of Carlisle, England, and links to neighbouring communities. Links to general information on the Baha'i Faith.
- Nottingham Baha'is - <https://bci.org/nottinghambahais/> Baha'i Community of Nottingham, England. Three Projects currently running, Rhui Study Circles, Lenton Project and The Community School.
- Havering Bahá'ís, London - <https://bci.org/havering/>
Welcome to the Bahá'ís of Havering website
- Bahá'í Council for England - <https://bci.org/england/>
This is the official WebSite of the Baha'i Council for England. The Baha'i Faith is an independent worldwide religion with 6 million adherents who believe in the oneness of God and the oneness of humankind.
- Southwark Baha'is - <https://www.bahais.co.uk/>
Community events, Baha'i Teachings, general information, contacts links.
- Carmarthen Baha'i Community - <https://www.martinjane.freemove.co.uk/carmarth.htm> Carmarthenshire, Wales, Bahá'í Community home page. The site includes community information as well as a list of current activities.
- Magherafelt Baha'i Community, Northern Ireland - <https://dSPACE.dial.pipex.com/town/terrace/ae198/magherafeltbahaishomepage.htm>
Magherafelt Baha'i Community Homepage, which includes biographical details about Bahá'u'lláh, Founder of the Bahá'í Faith, as well as information on the Northern Ireland Bahá'í Choir.
- Shetland, Scotland, Baha'i Community - <https://www.bahai.org.uk/shetland/>
The northernmost island group of the UK. Includes an introduction to the Bahá'í Faith, a history of the local community, the local calendar of events, and a picture gallery.
- Thanet Bahá'í Community - <https://farid.20m.com/th.html>
Welcome to the Homepage of the Thanet Baha'i Community in Kent
- Dunfermline Bahá'ís, Scotland - <https://bci.org/dunfermline/>
Site includes a brief introduction to the Bahá'í Faith as well as listing 'Abdu'l-Bahá's "Seven Candles of Unity" and short notes about Andrew Carnegie and Elizabeth Whyte, the first Scottish Bahá'í.
- Edinburgh Baha'i Community - <https://www.bci.org/edinburgh/>
The Bahá'í Community of Edinburgh, the first Bahá'í community in Scotland.
- Warwick Bahá'í Community - <https://www.mercia.demon.co.uk> Information on the Warwick Baha'i community, and Warwick in general. Also has links to the Warwick Bahá'í Bookshop.
- Belfast Bahá'í Community, Northern Ireland - <https://www.bahai.org.uk/belfast/>
Information about the community's membership, contact details, and some of the basic principles from Bahá'u'lláh's teachings.
- Rugby Baha'is - https://website.lineone.net/~bahais_of_rugby/Home pages of the Bahá'í community in Rugby, England.
- Oxford Bahá'í Community - <https://oxfordbahais.com/>
Information about local Bahá'ís past and present, about Oxford, and about the Bahá'í Faith itself, in the UK and across the world.
- Cookstown Baha'i Community, Northern Ireland - <https://dSPACE.dial.pipex.com/town/terrace/ae198/homepageCookstown.html>
homepage of Cookstown Baha'i Community
- Nuneaton and Bedworth Bahá'ís - <https://www.nuneaton-bahais.org.uk/> Bahá'ís of Nuneaton and Bedworth.
- Dacorum Baha'i Community - <https://www.dacorumbahai.freemove.co.uk/>
For Baha'is of Dacorum, Hertfordshire, England. Community information, shire map, events, contacts.
- Gedling Community Web page - <https://www.gnnix.co.uk/gedling.htm>
The Gedling Baha'i Community is situated in the Gedling district on the edge of Nottingham in the East Midlands of England.
- Brent Bahá'í Community - <https://members.aol.com/Lsabrent/1844/> Home page of the Bahá'í Community of Brent, London
- Haringey Bahá'í Community - https://bci.org/haringey_bahai/Homepage of Haringey Bahá'í Community
- Norwich Baha'i Community - <https://bci.org/norwichuk/> History of the Baha'is in Norwich, and general information about the Baha'i Faith.
- Huntingdonshire Bahá'í Community - <https://petermac.users.netlink.co.uk/bahai/>
Welcome to the Huntingdonshire Bahá'í Community
- Conwy Bahá'í Community, Wales - https://members.lycos.co.uk/bahais_of_conwy/Conwy Baha'i Community Website an exploration of the Baha'i Faith in general and the Conwy Community in particular.
- Ipswich Bahá'í Community - <https://www.bahai.org.uk/ipswich/index.htm>
The home page of the Bahá'í Community in Ipswich.

- Bahá'í Community of Wycombe - <https://freespace.virgin.net/padideh.sabeti/> Wycombe, Buckinghamshire. Bahá'ís. Community information, calendar of events, contacts and links.
- Bracknell Bahá'ís - <https://www.bracknellbahaicommunity.uklinux.net> Community Website with selected Prayers and Writings, Principles of the faith, Calendars of Events, Pictures of Bracknell, Bahá'í Gallery, Daily Readings, Meditations, Games, and Links.
- Wandsworth Bahá'í Community - <https://www.mileke.freeseve.co.uk/>
The Bahá'ís of Wandsworth, London.
- Havant Bahá'ís, Hampshire, England - <https://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/groostami/>
The Baha'i Faith in Havant, Hampshire.
- Bristol Bahá'ís - <https://members.lycos.co.uk/BristolLSA/BristolBahai/home.html> Home page of the Bahá'í community in Bristol, England.
- Cambridge Baha'i Community Web Page - <https://www.cam.ac.uk/societies/baha/local/> Includes community information and calendar of events.
- The Baha'i Faith - <https://www.us.bahai.org>
This is the Official WebSite of the Baha'is of the United States of America. General information, news, current affairs, contacts and links to the International Baha'i Community.
- Washington D.C. Bahá'í Community - <https://www.dcbahai.org/>
Explanation of the faith, statement of race unity, calendar of events, directions to the center.
- The Bahá'í Faith in Southern Arizona - <https://www.bci.org/tucsonbahai/> Baha'i regional information. Upcoming events for Tucson area (plus Pima, Cochise, and Santa Cruz Counties), directions to the Tucson Bahá'í Information Center, Feast schedule, and contact information.
- Bahá'ís of Philadelphia - <https://www.phillybahai.org/> Events and activities in the greater Philadelphia region.
- The Baha'is of North Kona - <https://bci.org/konabahais/> Activities calendar, contact information for the Baha'i Community of North Kona, Hawaii. Also introductory information on the Faith, and prayers in local language and English.
- The Bahá'ís of Metro Detroit - <https://www.detroitbahai.org/> An explanation of the Faith, meeting schedule, and local community information. Features the pilgrim's notes of Hand of the Cause Louis G. Gregory, in text and PDF formats.
- The Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Lawrenceville - <https://www.lawrence-bahai.org/> Lawrenceville, New Jersey. Community calendar of events, general information and contacts.
- Marianas Bahá'í Community - <https://bahai.guam.net/>
A Web site sponsored by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Mariana Islands.
- Austin Baha'i Community - <https://www.austinbahai.org/>
Baha'i community of Austin, Texas, USA. Includes a brief introduction to the Baha'i Faith, history of the community, calendar of events, reference materials, community directory, and electronic postcards.
- Bahá'ís of Miami - <https://bci.org/miami-dade/> Baha'i Communities of Miami-Dade County, Florida. Community Calendar, contact information for Baha'i Communities in the Miami area.
- Florida Bahá'í Net Directory - <https://www.bci.org/flabahai/> Links to internet presence for Florida Baha'i Communities, and other information on the Faith.
- Citrus County Baha'i Community - https://bci.org/citrus_bahai/Citrus County, Florida, USA. Local news and events, FAQ, general information and contacts.
- Baha'i Community of Dallas - <https://www.bahaisofdallas.org/>
Baha'i Community of Dallas, Texas
- Baha'i Communities of metropolitan Columbia - <https://www.columbiabahai.org/>
Columbia, South Carolina. Baha'i teachings, history, current community activities with illustrations, links and contacts.
- The Bahá'í Community of Howard County, Maryland - <https://www.bahaisofhowardcounty.org> Community activities, Institute of Learning, general information, contacts and links.
- Baha'i Faith of Reno - <https://bci.org/reno/> Reno, Nevada. Community goals, local history, general information, contacts and links.
- Madison Bahá'í Community - <https://danenet.wicip.org/bahai/> Statement of faith, social concerns, contacts of the temple in Madison, Wisconsin.
- Anchorage Baha'i Community - <https://www.anchoragebahai.org/>
General information about the Baha'i Faith, community events calendar and news.
- Baha'i Community of Edmond - <https://www.edmondbahai.org/>
Edmond, Oklahoma. Calendar of events and Holy Days, contacts for Oklahoma Baha'i communities, general information and links.
- Baha'is of Baltimore County Central - <https://bcc.greaterbaltimorebahais.org/>
The official Web site of the Baha'is of Baltimore County Central.
- Mesa Bahá'í Community - <https://www.mesabahai.org/> Published by the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Mesa, Arizona. Activities and links.
- Baha'is of San Antonio, Texas - https://www.bci.org/sanantonio_bahai/
San Antonio, Texas. Calendar of events, general information, Virtues Project, contacts.
- Las Vegas Baha'i Community - <https://www.lvbahai.org> Official website of The Baha'is of Las Vegas
- The Boone Baha'i - <https://boonebahai.missouri.org/>
The Boone Baha'i - For seekers of religious information about the Baha'i Faith.
- Baha'is of Charlotte, North Carolina - <https://www.CharlotteBahai.org>
Explanation of the faith, calendar of events, community information.
- Baha'i Community of Helena - <https://www.helenabahai.org/>
Local events calendar, articles and news, information on the Faith, and Contacts. Montana, USA.
- Jacksonville Baha'i Community - <https://www.bahaijax.org/>
Jacksonville, Florida. Notice board of local events, principles of the Faith, contacts and links.

- Huntersville Baha'i Community - <https://www.huntersvillebahai.org/>
Huntersville Baha'i Community
- Lincoln Baha'i Website - <https://www.lincolnbahai.org/> Official website of the Lincoln, Nebraska Baha'i community. General information on Baha'i Teachings and community notice board.
- Baha'i Communities of Brevard County - <https://www.bahaisofbrevard.org/> Information relating to the Central Florida Baha'i Communities, USA. Community events list, articles on the Faith, links and contacts.
- Baha'is of Richardson - <https://bci.org/rchnbahai/> Richardson, Texas. Calendar of events, general information, contacts and links.
- Bahá'i Faith in Boise - <https://www.bci.org/boise> Information about the faith in Boise, Idaho, the community, contact numbers, links.
- Bahá'i Community of Shorewood Hills - <https://danenet.wicip.org/bahai/shorewood/> Wisconsin congregation, contact information, statement of faith, links.
- Baha'is of Great Falls - <https://bci.org/greatfallsbahais/> Baha'i Community of Great Falls, Montana. General information, community calendar, contacts.
- Rappahannock Area Baha'is - <https://www.bci.org/spotslsa/rappahan.htm> information on community activities, contacts and links.
- Baha'is of Desoto Texas - <https://www.bahais-of-desoto.org/>
General information about the Baha'i Faith, local community activities, contacts.
- Everett, Washington - <https://www.geocities.com/Athens/Troy/3732/>
The Baha'i Community of Everett, Washington provides categorized and keyword search engines for up to 2300 Baha'i websites.
- Baha'i Community of Renton - <https://bci.org/renton/> Renton, Washington. Contact information and links.
- Practical Religion - <https://www.practicalreligion.com/>
St Louis Baha'i Community site, dedicated to fostering interfaith partnerships and the application of spiritual principles to everyday life. Calendar of events, quotes, contacts.
- Baha'i Unity Centre - <https://bci.org/raleigh/> Raleigh, North Carolina. Activity calendar, statements on current world issues, contacts.
- Baha'i Community of Irving - <https://www.irvingbahai.org/>
Irving, Texas. Calendar of events, youth activities, contacts.
- The Bahais of Tulsa - <https://www.tulsabahai.org/>
Tulsa Oklahoma. General information on Baha'i Faith. User registration for discussion forum.
- The Bahá'í Community of Plano - <https://bahaisofplano.org/> Plano Texas. Community news and events, and information about the North Texas Regional Baha'i Center.
- Baha'is of Fairfield County - <https://BahaiFairfield.org/>
General information from several Bahá'í communities in Southwestern Connecticut. Events calendars, links, and contact information.
- Baha'i Community of Topeka Kansas - <https://www.bahai-ks.org/topeka>
The official site of the Topeka and Shawnee County Kansas Spiritual Assemblies. Events calendar, general information contacts and links.
- Sioux City Iowa Baha'i Community - <https://www.avalon.net/~lael/> Baha'i Community of Sioux City, Iowa. Events calendar, photo gallery and contacts.
- Baha'i Center of St. Petersburg - <https://www.stpetebahai.org/>
St. Petersburg, Florida, USA. Local events, general information and contacts.
- Bahá'í Faith Palm Beach - https://communitylink.gopbi.com/servlet/groups_ProcServ/dbpage=page&gid=00026000001017060983739213
Information for South Floridian Bahá'ís, with an introduction to the Faith, a calendar of local events and a gallery of children's art.
- Baha'i Community of Fort Wayne - <https://hometown.aol.com/bahaisoffw> Fort Wayne, Indiana. Information on community activities, contacts and links.
- Bosch Bahá'í School - <https://www.bosch.org/>
A school with the purpose of increasing students' knowledge of various aspects of the Bahá'í Faith, including its history, core teachings and spiritual principles. Located in Santa Cruz
- Bahá'í Community of San José - <https://www.bci.org/sjca/>
San José, California. Information on local activities and links to international Baha'i Community. Contacts and directions for finding the Bahá'í Center in San José.
- Baha'i Community of Lake Forest - <https://bci.org/lfbahai/> Lake Forest, California. Calendar of community events, links, contacts.
- Baha'is of Mountain View and Los Altos - <https://bci.org/mv/> Mountain View and Los Altos, California. Calendar of local activities, general information and contacts.
- Baha'i Centre of South Orange County - <https://www.bahaicenter.org/> South Orange County, California. General information, Shining Star School, contacts and directions.
- The Baha'is of Simi Valley - <https://www.bci.org/simical/> Baha'i Community of Simi Valley, California. Local Contacts, general links.
- Serving Baha'i Communities in/around Orange Co CA - <https://www.oc-bahai.org> oc-bahai.org is dedicated to serving the Baha'i Faith, in particular its members and communities in and around Orange County, California.
- Baha'i Faith in San Francisco - <https://www.sfbahai.org/>
San Francisco, California. Community events, family school calendar, general information and contacts.
- Baha'i Community of Santa Clara - <https://bci.org/sc/> Santa Clara, California, USA. Community calendar of events, photo gallery, links and contact information.
- The Bahá'í Community of Dana Point - <https://bci.org/danapointbahais/> Dana Point California. Community activities, devotional meetings, contacts.

- Pleasant Hill - <https://www.msu.edu/user/hsuhsuni/bahai.htm>
Local contact information for the Pleasant Hill, CA Bahá'í community.
- Baha'is of Fremont - <https://bci.org/fremont/> Fremont, California. Calendar of events, general information, contacts and links.
- Baha'i Community of Petaluma, - <https://www.bahaisofpetaluma.org/>
Petaluma, California, USA. is doing and also more about the Baha'i Faith worldwide. Community events calendar, information on community service projects, general information and contacts.
- Aliso Viejo Baha'i community - <https://alisoviejo.usabahai.com/> Baha'i Community of Aliso Viejo, California. Community information and events, statements on current issues, contacts.
- Atascadero Baha'i Community - <https://www.ktsweb.net/bahaifaith/> Baha'is of Atascadero. Community events, general information and contacts.

- Baha'i Community of Naperville - <https://www.bci.org/naperville/> Information about the Bahá'í Faith and the Bahá'í Community of Naperville, Illinois, USA.
- Baha'i Community of Aurora - <https://bci.org/aurora/> Published by the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Aurora, Illinois, USA. Information on current community projects, calendar of activities, contacts and links.
- Chicago Bahá'í Community - <https://www.pipeline.com/~chibahai/> Newsletter, history of the Chicago community which dates back to 1893, calendar of events, several selections from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh, and contact information.

- New York City - <https://www.BCCA.Org/communities/us/ny/nyc/>
- St. James - <https://www.smithnetny.com/noprofit/bahai.htm>
- Brighton - <https://www.brightonbahai.org/>
- The Light of Unity - <https://bahainyc.org>
The web site of the Baha'is of New York City. Local activities, community information and general introductory information on the Baha'i Faith.

https://directory.google.com/Top/Society/Religion_and_Spirituality/Bah%C3%A1%27%C3%AD/

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Baha'is in My Backyard - Full Interview. 2.4 hours.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Bahais_in_My_Backyard.html

Full interview below in three segments. FG

See also Transcript of key passages "Fraud Shop" demonstrating the concern of the Israelis about who is truly in control of the Baha'i Faith in Israel and where the vast sums of money are coming from for the massive construction projects on Mt Carmel, Haifa, Israel, which is to say, Shiia and/or perhaps Sunni fanatics whose antisemiticism is reflected in the ban on teaching the Baha'i Faith in Israel; Baha'u'llah's universal teachings coopted into a multi-generational form of Islamic dawah or call to become Muslim that Westerners especially fail to perceive and understand; ultimately furthering the goal of subjugation of non-Mulisms, around the world, into dhimmitude.

Baha'i Faith "Fraud Shop"

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Bahais_in_My_Backyard_Fraud_Shop.htm

Given the US Federal Court decisions ruling three times against the Haifan Baha'i denomination in 2008 to 2010, I believe it is the right moment to make available this full interview for people researching the Bahai Faith.

I was interviewed for the movie Baha'is in My Backyard on October 18, 2004. The movie was produced by the Israeli company Belfilms. At the time I had not yet realized that the 1912 Covenant of Abdul-Baha existed, as documented in the early Bahai magazine the Star of the West and by Ruth White, as well as other sources, and was the formative document for the Bahai Movement in the West, during Abdul-Baha's lifetime, both in the United States and Europe. Consequently, the 1912 Authentic Covenant of Abdul-Baha is the central document for the renewed and revived Reform Bahai Faith. Accordingly, some of my remarks in this interview on Shoghi Effendi would be revised today, as would my acceptance of approximately a million Baha'is in India, which now appears actually to be closer to merely 11,000 people, mostly Iranian immigrants, according to the testimony of an Indian who was a former NSA member. Otherwise, my opinions and concerns would remain the same today, though perhaps my comments on the manipulation of Google search results for Baha'i were more applicable in 2004. Google has increasingly become aware of and responsive to how people and organizations attempt to manipulate its results.

Please note that I was interviewed by Belfilms for two and a half hours but they chose a highly selective two minutes to use, carefully arranged and presented, which distort the full context of my comments and portray me in an unfavorable light, at best, and in a way that is reminiscent of the tactics of the Haifan Baha'is themselves. They also violated client confidentiality by making our contract public, including my personal signature, without my permission, and in a way that casts suspicion upon me. Although required by our mutually agreed upon contract, Belfilms both failed to notify me before the first public broadcast of the film and to provide me with a requisite DVD copy until I had heard of the airing several months after the event and reminded them of their obligations. The short clip of my interview is further framed with a lead-in and closing that is meant to present me in a ridiculous and paranoid fashion* (mp3 below). I maintain the fullness of the interview allows the viewer a more comprehensive perspective on both myself and the manner in which the movie was created, as well as the issues involved.

While people elsewhere on the Internet have speculated that the Unitarian Baha'is and Baha'u'llah's great-grand-daughter Nigar Bahai Amsalem may have funded, or been behind the movie, or the Haifan Baha'is in what would be a highly characteristic counter-disinformation effort, since much of the movie simultaneously attempts to diffuse suspicions raised in the film, presenting Haifans as innocuous, the fact remains that in 2011 it is still unresolved from whom or where Belfilms received funding for the movie and what was the true motivation for its production. Others have speculated that the Israeli government was behind the movie in some way. To a perceptive viewer aware of the actual historical record of Haifan Baha'is when it comes to religious freedom and speech, the movie clearly constitutes more than a "mockumentary."

Baha'is in My Backyard - Segment 1 - Full Interview - Streaming wmv. Naama Pyritz from Belfilms was the interviewer.

Baha'is in My Backyard - Segment 2 - Full Interview - Two Israeli cameramen present throughout the full interview.

Baha'is in My Backyard - Segment 3 - Full Interview

Or watch all three through the Playlist on YouTube:

<https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PL27E91AB0E43D5B74>

Bahais in My Backyard - trailer Youtube - Sets up FG and Juan Cole as the demons in the paranoid fantasies of the uhj.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oPSjw1OdRvs>

"Documentary, 54 min. A Belfilms Production Directed by Naama Pyritz & Asaf Shafir. Belfilms is one of the leading production houses in Israel, producing drama, documentaries, feature films and commercials, for Israeli and foreign broadcasters, advertising agencies, and international co-productions. Belfilms features and documentaries have been screened in the cinema and television throughout the world and at film and television leading festivals."

Much of the finished movie Bahais in My Backyard is available on Youtube Playlist - though edited.

https://www.youtube.com/results?search_query=baha'is+in+my+backyard&aq=f

*Mp3 - One of the cameramen deceitfully reassured me at the end of their taping that "I want to ease your mind about what we're doing. Just to make sure, that we have the integrity to present it exactly as it came out." As explained and suggested above and demonstrated by the final product of the movie, I believe they handled the interview without any integrity whatsoever and harbored malicious intentions from the start. Naama Pyritz and cameramen at the end: Mp3 recording 2 minutes.

Reform Bahai Faith

<https://www.ReformBahai.org>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Baha'i Faith "Fraud Shop"

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Bahais_in_My_Backyard_Fraud_Shop.html

Baha'is in My Backyard - Full Interview. 2.4 hours.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Bahais_in_My_Backyard.html

"Bahais in My Backyard." Movie, 2006. Text of key passages from the 2004 interview of FG by Belfilms, Israel, a production directed by Naama Pyritz and Asaf Shafir, demonstrating the concern of the Israelis about who is truly in control of the Baha'i Faith in Israel and where the vast sums of money are coming from for the massive construction projects on Mt Carmel, Haifa, Israel, which is to say, Shiia and/or perhaps Sunni fanatics whose antisemiticism is reflected in the ban on teaching the Baha'i Faith in Israel; Baha'u'llah's universal teachings coopted into a multi-generational form of Islamic dawah or call to become Muslim that Westerners especially fail to perceive and understand; ultimately furthering the goal of subjugation of non-Mulisms, around the world, into dhimmitude.

Bahais in My Backyard - Playlist on YouTube: <https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PL27E91AB0E43D5B74>

Segment 1 - 27:44 to 29:34 minutes

Question: Is it possible, in any way, that other individuals, once Shoghi Effendi was dead, it took about six years to assemble the first UHJ, is it possible that at this period of time, individuals, that had some take over of the religion kind of thing, that were out of the religion, that had different intentions, maybe?

Answer: Human nature being what it is one should never dismiss any possibility. I'm not sure I hear and understand a clear question of what you are asking. There were definitely individuals, Mason Remey, primarily, and a few people associated with him who claimed, in a short time, not immediately, the details of which I can't immediately recount. There may have been a year or two period in which this happened. There was definitely a six-year gap between the death of Shoghi Effendi and the creation of the Universal House of Justice. There is an enormous amount of documents marshalled by the organized Baha'i Faith defending what was done, defending their position and so forth. But all of which is from the victor, shall we say. In fact everything in the Baha'i Faith and writings is basically the writing and works of those in control and power. There's a fundamental bias to any Baha'i source, on this issue as well.

Conversation in Hebrew at 40; 47 minutes

Segment 2 - 50:23 to 53:45 minutes

Question: I want to push this a little further, maybe I'm off totally, but do you think it is possible that, ah, given the changes, since the last forty years, since the organization changed, is it possible, maybe, there is some kind of fraud shop, that shows one thing, and behind that there is a totally different organization that operates for different reasons, has totally different aims and goals.

Answer: What's the word you used? Fraud shop? Front shop? Okay, absolutely, it's an idea that has occurred to many people, myself included. Certainly, the idea that the Baha'i administration is run by and orchestrated by people who are not elected and who have totally different purposes and motives from those that are publicly proclaimed to the American Baha'i community, and others around the world, that idea has occurred to many, many people, not just myself. There have been people who have alleged, and really when we are talking about this we always have to screen out as well the Iranian fanatics who have hated the Baha'i Faith, as heretics within Islam, desecrators of the Muslim faith and so forth, and especially since Khomeini, they have gone to very extreme lengths to slander and smear and discredit Baha'is online as well. But that being said and recognized, there are people who have claimed seriously, and don't seem to be part of that Iranian mentality, that there are people in the Persian Gulf states who largely fund the Baha'i Faith budget operation, because given the insignificant communities in Europe and the very meager community in the United States, where the funding is coming from for the mega-million dollar marble buildings in Haifa has left many people scratching their heads. I repeat that only as an allegation. I have no knowledge that that's true. But it certainly does highlight yet again that appearance and reality seems to be so complex to people in a variety of walks of life, within or near or outside the Baha'i Faith, that such speculations occur independently to many people. And one would think that would be different.

Segment 3 - Not quoted.

Conversation in Hebrew at 7 minutes.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Given the Bahai threats of lawsuits against me during the spring and early summer of 1999 let me say I have never committed slander against any individual, Bahai or otherwise, nor against any Bahai institution. If anyone has been slandered on talk.religion.bahai, it is I by the constant character assassination Bahais have marshalled against me since the fall of 1996.

I'd be happy to appear in court and present an American judge and jury with the evidence of Bahai lies, deceit, censorship, and tyranny over the last decade. I highly doubt any legitimately established jury would look favorably on what Bahai fundamentalists have done to the Walbridges, Juan Cole, Michael McKenny, Stephen Scholl, and many, many other, indeed, TENS of THOUSANDS, of American ex-Bahais....

I'd be happy to appear in an American court and present the judge and jury with the many passages from the Bahai Writings in which the Figures speak favorably of free speech and conscience, such as the following:

"These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of the contingent world. Moreover, if interrogation of conscience, which is one of the private possessions of the heart and the soul, take place in this world, what further recompense remains for man in the court of divine justice at the day of general resurrection? Convictions and ideas are within the scope of the comprehension of the King of kings, not of kings; and soul and conscience are between the fingers of control of the Lord of hearts, not of [His] servants."
Abdul-Baha, A Traveler's Narrative, 91.

Only one of the nine tyrants on Mt. Carmel could distort such passages to mean the kinds of things they have had the gall to foist on American Bahais in their statement this April, which Professor Juan Cole has candidly and accurately referred to as an "outburst of vehement ignorance."

Outburst.htm

Bahais falsely accuse me of slander. Far from slandering the UHJ, I have stood up to Bahai fundamentalists and honestly spoken my conscience. They are free to call that "slander." I doubt any judge or jury in the West would call it such, especially after reading the EVIDENCE and reflecting on the enormous discrepancy between the sycophantic treatment leaders in government, the UN, and the media regularly receive from Bahais who are always interested in attempting to exploit their positions of power for one reason or another and the reality of abuse of the most basic human rights now well documented on Professor Juan Cole's website and on mine.

I trust the American legal system to protect me from such organizations and fundamentalist reprobates.

The objective observer will note the Bahai tactic of resorting to threats and intimidation instead of engaging in discussion of the actual incidents of censorship and oppression, extensively noted in "The Baha'i Technique."
technique.htm

Such tactics remind me of a comment by Dr. Martin Luther King in his Letter from Birmingham Jail:

"You deplore the demonstrations taking place in Birmingham. But your statement, I am sorry to say, fails to express a similar concern for the conditions that brought about the demonstrations."

Fundamentalist Bahais typify this same mentality. They rail and threaten me, and others who dare speak their minds, but express no concern whatsoever for the underlying conditions of censorship and oppression that have led to distrust and contempt for the UHJ and its fascist distortion of Baha'u'llah's Teachings.

Everything I have said is a matter of religious conscience protected under the US Constitution. My Bahai membership card proves it, and a scanned copy of it may be found on my website. I would be happy to present the original to any judge or jury in the land.

"I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man." --Thomas Jefferson

--

Patrick Henry

"Give me liberty or give me death."

Visit The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience:

bahai.htm

Saman Ahmadi <perspolis@earthlink.net> wrote in message news:376EF2DE.221BD43@earthlink.net...

>

> I have stated that I may sue you - that is singular. I am not aware of > anyone else's attempt. BTW, my suing you is not a threat - a threat > is I will do this if you do that. You have already crossed that line.
> I > said I would first take it up with Dejanews - Roger pointed out that > you were not using Dejanews to post your articles so I suppose it > is bigfoot at first.
>
> Now, if it gets to the point that I decide to sue you, I will offer > anyone > who wishes to join in a class-action suit, if that is legally possible.
>
> My feet are firmly on the ground - I am not joking or mincing words.
>
> Saman Ahmadi
>
>
> Patrick Henry wrote:
>
> > Given the recurrent Bahai threats of lawsuits against me, > > let me say I have never committed slander.
>
> P.S. Ever heard of the Furman tapes?
>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

BANK FRAUD - Re: Baha'i technique of loan application (using false, inflated statistics to qualify for loans)

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BANK%20FRAUD.htm>

False Statistics for Baha'i Membership in the USA, India, & Elsewhere

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/FalseStats.htm>

Compare the Canadian nsa tactics:

<https://www.geocities.com/molonelaveh/faq.html>

Baha'i Faith "Fraud Shop"

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Bahais_in_My_Backyard_Fraud_Shop.html

BANK FRAUD - Re: Baha'i technique of loan application

by "Baha'i Censorship - See Website" <bahaicensorship@ May 20, 2005 at 10:51 AM

Henry,

Thank you for your explanation of how fraudulent loans are obtained by the nsa and uhj. It almost takes one's breath away! It makes me recall that the nsa dumped the nursing home in Wilmette, apparently thinking it was NOT worth a genuine loan and human resources to sustain!

Best,

--

FG

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

<aviccenna9012000@

> wrote in message

news:1116599480.039952.314870@

> Despite the decreased number of enrollments by 60% in 7 years, the US

> NSA is able to obtain loans from US Banks with increased regularity.

>

> In a non-profit world, the Baha'i organization has to show the > following as collateral:

>

> 1) Number of adherents -which has been padded by 2-4 times.

> 2) Number of contributors (even if they pay one cent they are counted)

> 3) Total contribution -this is the IRS filing and does included the

> "padded" loans from wealthy Iranian Baha'is

> 4) Real Estate- recall all those beautifications called "Kingdom

> Project". These improvements increase the value of the real estate > while also taking a deduction and a depreciation- double whammy!!! Good > for the NSA pocketbook.

> 5) Publishing Trust value- books written by Baha'is- really "good will > value". Has anybody read some of those Baha'i books written by > individuals? I will cite one by Bahiyyih Nakhjavani- it is a piece of > generous trash.

> 6) Collateral cosigners- such as Amanat-Banani-Sabet-Khojasteh-Hojabr > Yazdani
>
>
>
> Here is how the loan is applied for:
>
> 1) NSA applies for a loan
>
> 2) NSA Provides the number of contributors- now, recall how Baha'i UHJ > claims that universal participation is important- even if one gives > $1.00?
>
> 3) Thus everyone is counted, even if they hardly contributed.
>
> 4) The total amount of contribution: here, the balance is padded by > contributions (actually false loans) from Habib Sabet- Khojasteh-> Amanat- Banani- and many other wealthy Baha'is.
>
> 5) Once the loan is obtained from the US Bank, then the " paddedd > loans" from the wealthy Baha'is are quietly returned .
>
> 6) It is no surprise then to see a deficits of 2-3 millions dollars by > April of each year- disappear due to "sacrificial givings".
>
> 7) The giving is really a padded loan from those rich Iranian Baha'i > Refugees in US-Canada-Australia-Brazil-United Arab Emirates- and even > Iran.
>
> This is in summary the Baha'i technique of "padding" the number of > contributors and "padding" the amount of contributions.
>
> This technique is used very frequently by the NSA- UHJ. It is very > difficult to pierce as the number of contributors plus contributions > can not be entirely audited.
>
> Recall how the Canada NSA has a huge deficit but in their Tax filing, > the Canada NSA has a surplus of several million dollars.
>
> Link: <https://www.geocities.com/molonelaveh/faq.html>
> -----
>
> There you have it- dear TRB readers.
>
> I agree with Dr. Maneck in the first part of her response. In the > second part, you can see how the "padding" is done in order to extract > the maximum loan amount from the US Bank.
>
> Henry
>
>
>
>
>
> avicenna9012000@
wrote:
>> > That is an excellent point.
>> > When the US NSA must obtain loans- then the number of followers > would be great to inflate.
>> > Non-profit organizations have ways to get their loans approved.

>
> smaneck@
wrote:
>> Banks look at numbers of contributors and amounts of contributions.
>> They couldn't care less what the membership is if they don't > contribute.
>

<https://groups.google.com.au/group/alt.religion.bahai/msg/4a1504bba3950856?dmode=source&hl=en>

Message from discussion BANK FRAUD - Re: Baha'i technique of loan application

Path: g2news1.google.com!postnews.google.com!o13g2000cwo.googlegroups.com!not-for-mail
From: avicenna9012...@yahoo.com
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Subject: Re: BANK FRAUD - Re: Baha'i technique of loan application
Date: 20 May 2005 09:44:12 -0700
Organization: <https://groups.google.com>
Lines: 78
Message-ID: <1116607452.272200.168690@o13g2000cwo.googlegroups.com>
References: <1116599480.039952.314870@g44g2000cwa.googlegroups.com>
<FdudnWEJXfDuZBDfRVn-gA@comcast.com>
NNTP-Posting-Host: 68.188.233.187
Mime-Version: 1.0
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="iso-8859-1"
X-Trace: posting.google.com 1116607476 5155 127.0.0.1 (20 May 2005 16:44:36 GMT)
X-Complaints-To: groups-abuse@google.com
NNTP-Posting-Date: Fri, 20 May 2005 16:44:36 +0000 (UTC)
In-Reply-To: <FdudnWEJXfDuZBDfRVn-gA@comcast.com> User-Agent: G2/0.2
Complaints-To: groups-abuse@google.com
Injection-Info: o13g2000cwo.googlegroups.com; posting-host=68.188.233.187;
posting-account=qqNEMw0AAAAM82jKA0A3wyl_R4pHrSHI

One correction= contributors (I made a spelling error)

On the issue of the Home for the Aged- it was closed due to its money losing venture. In addition, it was a huge liability when the US NSA tried to obtain loans. So, in Baha'i parlance, it was "good ridance".

Now, you recall that nursing homes in the US operate generally with a huge profit- simply by billing their services to US- Medicare.

I am baffled that the omniscient-omnipotent- humanity loving US NSA and its leader Robert Henderson were not able to find one competent Baha'i to manage the nursing home and make a profit.

This worries me- as such an easy money making venture- was poorly run.

What else is poorly run in the Baha'i financial world? Well, all those contributions are padded at will- and as in the New Mexico lawsuit and the Phoenix embezzlement fiasco- the NSA of US basically tries to cover up the audits.

Recall how well the NSA of US tried to run the Baha'i Travel Agency back in 1992? Well, it ended up with a deficit of USD 1 million dollars. This loss was covered up by the US NSA.

In the first place, what business does a non-profit Baha'i NSA have to run a travel agency?

Do you know of the Vatican running their own airlines? Or the Muslims having airlines approved by Muhammad? Or Jesus and Moses having their own airlines and travel agencies?
So, the Baha'is throughout the world run businesses very poorly- partly due to their Iranian background of "ZERANGI"- refer to the 1996 US NSA publication regarding Iranian Baha'is- "ability to circumvent the laws- as a sign of status and intelligence".

Yes, Iranian Baha'is make money throuh their connection with the boss :

UHJ. For example, when marble was quarried from Italy- it was done by a Baha'i subsidiary. All those marvelous buildings in Haifa, Israel made great amount of money for Iranian Baha'is who had direct supplier connection with the UHJ.

These include suppliers of heavy equipment (Sabet), marble from Italy, architectural designs (Amanat and Sahba), landscaping , electrical-sewer-ventilation-water-security, computers- IT, advertisement, photography, maintenance, funding through loans from wealthy Iranian Baha'is in United Arab Emirates-Iran-Australia (Sunland Corporation).

Finally, many of UHJ-NSA investments in stocks are done by insiders- such as the son of UHJ member Fatheazam. His son runs a company in Chicago by the name of Vector Research.

SHAHAB FATHEAZAM
Managing Director

Shahab Fatheazam has over 25 years of investment banking experience working in the healthcare and life sciences industries. From 1994 to 1999, Mr. Fatheazam was a Managing Director of Vector Securities International, Inc. and joined the Prudential Vector Healthcare Group in 1999 through the acquisition of Vector Securities by Prudential Securities. Prior to Vector Securities, he spent 12 years in the International Corporate Finance and Capital Markets Group at Kidder, Peabody and four years at PaineWebber where he was a Managing Director and Co-Head of PaineWebber Development Corporation. Mr. Fatheazam holds an MBA from Columbia University in New York, and a BA and an MA in history and anthropology from Cambridge University in England. Mr. Fatheazam serves on the Boards of AcryMed, Inc., Artielle Immuno Therapeutics, Inc., and Virogenomics, Inc.

Link: <https://www.vectorsec.com/aboutvbase3.html>

So as you can see, there are a lot of people in the Baha'i faith making money off the non-profit status of the UHJ-US NSA.

Henry

Compare: <https://groups.google.com.au/group/talk.religion.bahai/msg/f5df9dd0a518d1f0?dmode=source&hl=en>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

bahai-apologetics & BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association)

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BCCA_Ap.htm

The Yahoo Group bahai-apologetics appears to be used by the BCCA and fundamentalist Baha'is to coordinate disinformation and marshal surveillance and censorship of Baha'i related websites, discussion groups, encyclopedias, Usenet, databases, and so forth, which is very difficult for the infrequent, casual observer to detect and realize.

The BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association) has a long history of censoring Baha'is on the Internet. See the BCCA Menu page.

See also Mark Towfig

CAUTION * Psychological War Zone  Newcomers

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: CC Secretary[SMTP:bcca-cc@bccca.org]
Sent: Monday, September 22, 1997 4:22 PM
To: FG
Cc: CC Mail
Subject: Baha'i Discuss

Dear Mr Glaysher

The Co-ordinating Committee has been made aware that you have been posting extracts from mail to Baha'i Discuss to one or more Usenet groups, with the email address of the said list included. This behaviour must be seen as quite unacceptable for two reasons.

First, it is a violation of the privacy of Baha'is who have posted to Discuss in the belief that their messages will only be seen by other Baha'is. Naturally, there can be no objection to your reposting them if you have obtained the original sender's permission but we must instruct you to desist where that is not the case.

Secondly, and even worse, you have now disclosed the address of a Baha'is-only list to Net users who are not qualified by membership of the Faith to participate. It is presently unclear whether any have availed themselves of the opportunity with which you have so thoughtlessly presented them but, in any case, you have also presented the Committee with a completely unnecessary and unlooked for headache.

We trust that you will desist from this behaviour forthwith.

In His service

Nick Sanders

Nicholas J A Sanders

Secretary
BCCA Co-ordinating Committee

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 23, 1997 8:43 AM
To: Bahai Studies; CC Secretary; Bahai Discuss Subject: Bahai-discuss attacks on talk.religion.bahai

I appreciate your concerns. I hope we can work together on this matter. Let me state first my concerns so that you understand my thinking and then perhaps we can agree on a course of action.

During the first vote for talk.religion.bahai this spring, an individual Bahai, Mark Towfiq, posted instructions on why and how to vote NO on the proposal to the women's listserv and reportedly to two other Bahai listservs. No Bahai has had the honesty to reveal which listservs those were. I can only assume that Bahai-discuss may have been one of them, given the tenor of the discussion that is already beginning to develop it. I note this morning a message, appended to the end of this one, calculated to violate the usual and acceptable procedures of UseNet interest polling. I

Further, I have been personally slandered on Bahai-discuss, both as an individual and as a Bahai, in a manner quite similar to the character assassination practiced on soc.religion.bahai.

I also append the two installments of messages I have posted to alt.religion.bahai and elsewhere so that you might review the other messages urging Bahais to vote NO for ideological and pseudo-religious reasons.

I don't believe it is an appropriate use of a Bahai discussion listserv to support such activities.

As a the Coordinating Committee for Bahai-discuss, did you witness and permit the posting by Mark Towfiq of his NO vote campaign message? Did you support him? Do or will you support other such attempts to overwhelm the voting process with NO votes during this second attempt to form talk.religion.bahai?

Please explain for me why you find it permissible, if you do, for Bahais to attack, in the secrecy and privacy of Bahai-discuss, the God-given right of others to express their own religious conscience and free speech and to scheme for the defeat of trb? You mention some Bahais want such acts to take place without non-Bahais seeing it. I find that statement perplexing and morally confused since it seems to justify the denial of many Bahais and non-Bahais of their right to establish a newsgroup free of the voter distortion that occurred last time. I believe it is your duty as a Coordinating Committee to expose and denounce such stratagems instead of asking me to allow them to continue unabated.

I am baffled by your lack of concern for the headache, if you will, created for me and 156+ Bahais and non-Bahais by the use of Bahai-discuss and other listservs to marshall NO votes against talk.religion.bahai before the second proposal has even yet been presented to the group-mentors for their advice.

I trust you will consult and reflect on the seriousness of what you are permitting Bahais to use Bahai-discuss for and counsel all those subscribed to your listserv to show respect for the wishes of others to form an unmoderated newsgroup on the Bahai Faith.

I will be happy to refrain from reposting messages that attack the forming of talk.religion.bahai if you can assure me it won't be necessary since you will not allow or support misguided Bahais from doing so.

I ask you to read prayerfully and meditate long on this passage by Abdul-Baha before beginning your deliberations:

"This is a goodly temple and congregation, for--praise be to God!--this is a house of worship [Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn on 16 June 1912] wherein conscientious opinion has free sway. Every religion and every religious aspiration may be freely voiced and expressed here. Just as in the world of politics there is need for free thought, likewise in the world of religion there should be the right of unrestricted individual belief. Consider what a vast difference exists between modern democracy and the old forms of despotism. Under an autocratic government the opinions of men are not free, and development is stifled, whereas in a democracy, because thought and speech are not restricted, the greatest progress is witnessed. It is likewise true in the world of religion. When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable. Therefore, this is a blessed church because its pulpit is open to every religion, the ideals of which may be set forth with openness and freedom."

Abdul-Baha, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, 197.

--
FG

UseNet: alt.religion.bahai

Ask your ISP to add it; also available on

www.dejanews.com, www.reference.com, and www.zippo.com.

> From: CC Secretary <bcca-cc@bcca.org>

> To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

> Cc: CC Mail <bcca-cc@bcca.org>

> Subject: Baha'i Discuss

> Date: Monday, September 22, 1997 4:22 PM

>

> Dear Mr Glaysher

>

> The Co-ordinating Committee has been made aware that you have been > posting extracts from mail to Baha'i Discuss to one or more Usenet > groups, with the email address of the said list included. This behaviour > must be seen as quite unacceptable for two reasons.

>

> First, it is a violation of the privacy of Baha'is who have posted to > Discuss in the belief that their messages will only be seen by other > Baha'is. Naturally, there can be no objection to your reposting them if > you have obtained the original sender's permission but we must instruct > you to desist where that is not the case.

>

> Secondly, and even worse, you have now disclosed the address of a

> Baha'is-only list to Net users who are not qualified by membership of the > Faith to participate. It is presently unclear whether any have availed > themselves of the opportunity with which you have so thoughtlessly > presented them but, in any case, you have also presented the Committee > with a completely unnecessary and unlooked for headache.

>

> We trust that you will desist from this behaviour forthwith.

>

> In His service

>

> Nick Sanders

>

>

> Nicholas J A Sanders

>

> _____
> Secretary

> BCCA Co-ordinating Committee

>

Appended message follows:

From baha-discuss-x@bounty.bcca.org Mon Sep 22 13:23:32 1997

Received: by bcca.org (Smail3.1.29.1 #3)

id m0xDerq-0003rnC; Mon, 22 Sep 97 16:14 EDT

X-Loop: Bahai-Discuss-request@Bounty.BCCA.Org

Errors-To: Bahai-Discuss-x@Bounty.BCCA.Org
Sender: Bahai-Discuss-x@Bounty.BCCA.Org
X-IMPORTANT-NOTE: Please send unsubscribe messages to Bahai-Discuss-Request@BCCA.Org
To: "Baha'i Discuss" <Bahai-Discuss@BCCA.Org>
Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
References: <3.0.32.19970922101903.00915620@persia.com>
Mime-Version: 1.0
Message-Id: <3426D0FD.3FF520AA@lightspeed.net>
Subject: Re: talk.religion.bahai
X-Mailer: Mozilla 4.01 [en] (WinNT; I)
Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii
X-Priority: 3 (Normal)
Date: Mon, 22 Sep 1997 13:11:41 -0700
From: "John B. Cornell" <jcornell@lightspeed.net> <Picture: Save Address> <Picture: Block Sender>

<Picture: Reply/ReplyAll/Forward><Picture: Delete><Picture: Prev/Next Message><Picture: Close><Picture: ->

Robert Moldenhauer wrote:

> My reason for bringing this up is that when the CFV occurs, some may think > that talk.bahai.religion is sponsored by Baha'i institutions.

It is logical to assume so.

> It is not.
> Nor is its would be predecessor (alt.religion.bahai) a particularly > pleasant place.

That's what we discovered.

> On the other hand, the continual attacks on the Faith that come with > alt.religion.bahai don't seem to have much effect either.

How do you measure harm, Robert? By whether or not the House of Worship is blown up? The mere fact that an uncontrolled newsgroup makes us appear to be a bunch of crazies does no harm? It doesn't help our public image!

> So I guess it's > not the end of the world if talk.religion.bahai gets approved...

Not the end of the world, but the Faith's reputation is bound to suffer.

> I intend to vote no on "talk.religion.bahai" and urge others to do the > same, but I must say that the Institutions have chosen not to comment on > the group, so there is no official Baha'i position on the vote.

Institutions are wise to leave individual decisions to individuals.
Voting is the responsibility of individuals. For example, it is not the role of institutions to tell us whom to elect to spiritual assemblies.
I think as Baha'is we have a responsibility to vote on newsgroups that affect the public image of the Faith.

The way to protect a not-well-known religion from the crazy image presented on alt.religion.bahai is to have newsgroups with the name "Baha'i" under supervision by some responsible group such as the Baha'i Computer and Communication Association.
This is one reason BCCA was created, to give any needed supervision.

'Abdul-Baha said "...not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly,...that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause." (BA, p. 21) We have seen the harm an unsupervised newsgroup like alt.religion.bahai has done to our image when operated by someone out of control. We should worry about this influence being increased by his obtaining a more visible newsgroup.

John

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 30, 1997 7:30 AM
To: Nicholas Sanders
Cc: Bahai Discuss
Subject: Re: Bahai-discuss attacks on talk.religion.bahai

I'm concerned that this morning I find Bahai-Discuss is being used for a campaign against me personally by someone pretending to be me and posting from bahai@hotmail.com.

I request that your committee officially denounce this abusive activity clearly calculated to inflame passions against my person and against talk.religion.bahai, before the proper period of discussion has even begun.

I must add that I have received two pieces of hate mail, one of which personally threatens me. I will forward it to you under separate posting.

I await patiently your answer to my previous communication.

FG
UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
Ask your ISP to add it; also available on
www.dejanews.com, www.reference.com, and www.zippo.com.

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 30, 1997 7:34 AM
To: BCCA CC
Cc: CC Secretary
Subject: Fw: hate mail#1

FG
UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
Ask your ISP to add it; also available on
www.dejanews.com, www.reference.com, and www.zippo.com.

> From: Nancy S Damren <ladyvadr@juno.com>
> To: FG@hotmail.com
> Subject:
> Date: Monday, September 29, 1997 2:35 PM
>
> Dear Mr. Glaysher,
>
> I have had the dubious privilege of receiving four email messages from > you in the same retrieval, that of Monday afternoon, September 29, 1997.
>
> I have already reacted in earlier postings to your intemperate and > inflammatory language. That reaction was negative. Now you send word > that your impertinence has been inflicted on the Universal House of > Justice, an institution of God that you have no business addressing in > such a fashion.

>
> Your emphasis on your own selfish desire to do as you please, regardless > of the consequences, rather than acting for the good of the Faith has > cost you all respect in my eyes and, no doubt, in those of many others.
>
> You have nothing to say to me that I want to hear. Accordingly, I must > request you to omit my email address from all of your postings in the > future. Further bombardment - for I can call it nothing less - will > result in notification of both my email service and yours of your email > abuse. If that doesn't work, then perhaps prosecution will.
>
> You saw a threat in a perfectly innocent and concerned letter from an > Auxiliary Board member where there was none. Fine the threat here. This > threat is real.
>
> Nancy Damren

From: Nicholas Sanders[SMTP:semiotek@post8.tele.dk]
Sent: Thursday, October 02, 1997 12:34 AM
To: FG
Cc: CC Mail
Subject: Re: Bahai-discuss attacks on talk.religion.bahai

Dear Mr Glaysher

Thank you for your post which is receiving our attention. I note from your earlier message that you "await patiently [our] answer" - may I presume to try that patience a little further by asking that you refrain from any further postings on this matter, either to "Baha'i Discuss" or "talk.religion.bahai"? I am confident that your doing so will help to reduce the heat generated by this issue and thus facilitate its speedier resolution.

By all means advise the Committee of any further mail which you receive about it: indeed I hope that you will, but I prefer that you post to <bcca-cc@bcca.org> in future as this will ensure your message gets treated promptly as incoming correspondence to the Coordinating Committee.

Please accept our apologies for the continued delay in finding a way through this difficulty. I am sure that you can readily appreciate that it has become increasingly complex, not least because there are now posts circulating which purport to be sent by you but which, if we understand correctly, you say are not yours. In order that we might be assisted towards clarification, can you confirm whether the post entitled "Open Letter: UHJ (Universal House of Justice)" and dated "1997/03/31" was actually from you or not.

Thank you for your continuing assistance.

In His service

Nicholas Sanders

Reply Separator
In a message logged 30/09/97 13:30 Gudhjem Time, FG wrote:

>I'm concerned that this morning I find Bahai-Discuss is being >used for a campaign against me personally by someone >pretending to be me and posting from bahai@hotmail.com.
>
>I request that your committee officially denounce this >abusive activity clearly calculated to inflame passions against >my person and against talk.religion.bahai, before the proper >period of discussion has even begun.

>
>I must add that I have received two pieces of hate mail, >one of which personally threatens me. I will forward it to you >under separate posting.
>
>I await patiently your answer to my previous communication.
>
>FG
>UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
>Ask your ISP to add it; also available on
>www.dejanews.com, www.reference.com, and www.zippo.com.

----- End Forwarded Message -----

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Thursday, October 02, 1997 6:36 AM
To: Nicholas Sanders
Subject: Re: Bahai-discuss attacks on talk.religion.bahai

> From: Nicholas Sanders <semiotek@post8.tele.dk>
> To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
> Cc: CC Mail <bcca-cc@bcca.org>
> Subject: Re: Bahai-discuss attacks on talk.religion.bahai
> Date: Thursday, October 02, 1997 12:34 AM
>

> Dear Mr Glaysher

>
> Thank you for your post which is receiving our attention. I note from > your earlier message that you "await patiently [our] answer" - may I > presume to try that patience a little further by asking that you refrain > from any further postings on this matter, either to "Baha'i Discuss" or > "talk.religion.bahai"? I am confident that your doing so will help to > reduce the heat generated by this issue and thus facilitate its speedier > resolution.

I'd prefer your not taking advantage of my patience.... Talk.religion.bahai does not exist; you mean alt.religion.bahai. Although you might notice, I have not been involved in generating the "heat." You seem quite incorrectly to be blaming the victim.

I remain very concerned about the demonizing character assassination that has and is taking place on b-d. I would like a response from you as soon as possible as well as your taking positive and effective action there to ensure b-d is not used to undermine UseNet voting procedure and to attack and threaten the way Nancy Damren has done. I also request at this time that you email her directly and obtain an apology or clear statement from her that she has not done or is about to do something rash in regard to my personal safety and that of my family.

>
> By all means advise the Committee of any further mail which you receive > about it: indeed I hope that you will, but I prefer that you post to > <bcca-cc@bcca.org> in future as this will ensure your message gets > treated promptly as incoming correspondence to the Coordinating Committee.

This is the email address that I have in my address book.

>
> Please accept our apologies for the continued delay in finding a way > through this difficulty. I am sure that you can readily appreciate that > it has become increasingly complex, not least because there are now posts > circulating which purport to be sent by you but which, if we understand > correctly, you say are not yours. In order that we might be assisted > towards clarification, can you confirm whether the post entitled "Open > Letter: UHJ (Universal House of Justice)" and dated "1997/03/31" was > actually from you or not.

I do not agree. What I wrote six months ago is irrelevant to the threat
I have received. In my opinion, you are failing your duties as a Coordinating Committee by not responding promptly to the disgraceful uses Bahai-Discuss is being put to by many Bahais on it. The issue is not whether I wrote the reposted message in question. It is whether such low and contemptible tactics are acceptable on Bahai-Discuss and in the context of a UseNet interest poll for both Bahais and non-Bahais.

I assure you I did not repost any of the messages from "bahai@hotmail.com."
The motives of that individual are clearly to inflame animosity against me and alt/talk.religion.bahai. Have you emailed bahai@hotmail.com?

>
> Thank you for your continuing assistance.

I find your failure as a committee to act promptly and responsibly in this matter quite shameful....

>
> In His service
>
> Nicholas Sanders
>

> _____ Reply Separator _____

> In a message logged 30/09/97 13:30 Gudhjem Time, FG
wrote:

>
> >I'm concerned that this morning I find Bahai-Discuss is being > >used for a campaign against me personally by someone > >pretending to be me and posting from bahai@hotmail.com.
> >
> >I request that your committee officially denounce this > >abusive activity clearly calculated to inflame passions against > >my person and against talk.religion.bahai, before the proper > >period of discussion has even begun.

> >
> >I must add that I have received two pieces of hate mail, > >one of which personally threatens me. I will forward it to you > >under separate posting.

> >
> >I await patiently your answer to my previous communication.

> >
> >FG
> >UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
> >Ask your ISP to add it; also available on
> >www.dejanews.com, www.reference.com, and www.zippo.com.

> ----- End Forwarded Message -----

From: Joseph Khoury[SMTP:joseph@bounty.bcca.org]
Sent: Monday, October 06, 1997 12:58 PM
To: FG
Cc: fglaysh@hotmail.com
Subject: BCCA Mailing Lists subscriptions

> I don't want to subscribe but unsubscribe from BINS, Tech,
> Bahai-singles, Helping, Homeschool, Teachers, Race Unity, and Readings.

> I'd appreciate it if you could make > sure I'm off them. My email address for receiving them is
>
> fglaysh@hotmail.com
>
>

Dear FG,

You have been removed from the above mentioned mailing lists (you must have been getting about five zillion messages per day!); you are still subscribed to the following lists:
Announce;BCF;Discuss;Youth

If this is not what you want, please let us know!

Joseph Khoury
(just one of the BCCA Lists Managers)

From: Bahai Lists Manager[SMTP:janet@Bounty.BCCA.Org]
Sent: Wednesday, October 22, 1997 8:10 PM
To: FG
Subject: Re: Pointers to RFD: TRB: (Re: BCCA Mailing Lists subscriptions)

You may post to any list whether or not you are a member.

On Wed, 22 Oct 1997, FG wrote:

> Date: Wed, 22 Oct 1997 08:09:06 -0400
> From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
> To: Baha'i Request <Bahai-Request@BCCA.org> > Subject: Pointers to RFD: TRB: (Re: BCCA Mailing Lists subscriptions)
>
> I'd like to post the pointer to the RFD for talk.religion.bahai to the > following lists, > which I subscribed to a few weeks ago.... I know I'm no longer > subscribed to some of them. Perhaps I should resubscribe and then post but > it seems such a waste of your time, if not mine.... I have individually > emailed > in a pointer for each one, they should be around there already somewhere,
> but > am concerned they'll bounce. I forgot I had unsubscribed from some of > them....
> Would you be willing to post the RFD to them anyway, or should I > resubscribe?
>
> FG
> UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
> The RFD for talk.religion.bahai can be found on news.groups, > news.announce.newgroups, or at <<https://www.baha.demon.co.uk/rfd.htm>>
>

> -----
> > From: Joseph Khoury <joseph@bounty.bcca.org>
> > To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
> > Cc: fglaysh@hotmail.com
> > Subject: BCCA Mailing Lists subscriptions
> > Date: Monday, October 06, 1997 12:58 PM
> >
> > > I don't want to subscribe but unsubscribe from BINS, Tech, > > > Bahai-singles, Helping, Homeschool, Teachers, Race Unity, and Readings.
> >
> > > I'd appreciate it if you could make > > > sure I'm off them. My email address for receiving them is
> > >

> > > fglaysh@hotmail.com
> > >
> > >
> >
> > Dear FG,
> >
> > You have been removed from the above mentioned mailing lists (you must > > have been getting about five zillion messages per day!); you are still > > subscribed to the following lists:
> > Announce;BCF;Discuss;Youth
> >
> > If this is not what you want, please let us know!
> >
> > Joseph Khoury
> > (just one of the BCCA Lists Managers)
> >
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

From: CC Secretary[SMTP:bcca-cc@bcca.org]
Sent: Monday, November 10, 1997 2:31 PM
To: FG
Cc: CC Mail
Subject: Message from the BCCA-CC

Mr Glaysher

I write to advise you that the following message has been mailed to BCCA lists today.

On behalf of the BCCA-CC

Nicholas J A Sanders

Dear Baha'i Friends

The Co-ordinating Committee of the Baha'i Computer and Communications Association regrets to announce that Mr FG has been unsubscribed from all of the BCCA lists which included his name and email address and that steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility.

We wish to make it quite clear that this action follows from Mr Glaysher's persistent contravention of the conditions of the BCCA Charter and our decision should not be taken as indicating any stance on the question of his proposal for a new Usenet group. It has been made only after our several attempts to settle difficulties amicably with Mr Glaysher have produced no positive result.

The Committee now urges all the believers who participate in online Baha'i activities to focus their attention on the urgent needs of the time and to renew their efforts towards successful completion of the Four-Year Plan. We earnestly hope that the acrimonious exchanges of past weeks will now be forgotten and that there will be no repeat of them.

(Please note that this message is being posted to several BCCA lists - we apologise for any multiple receipts.)

In His service

Nicholas Sanders

Nicholas J A Sanders

Secretary
BCCA Co-ordinating Committee

From: FG[SMTP:FG@hotmail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, November 11, 1997 4:06 PM
To: bn872@freenet.carleton.ca
Subject: kicked off BCCA message

Subject: Message from the BCCA-CC
Date: Mon, 10 Nov 97 19:31:00 +0100
From: CC Secretary <bcca-cc@bcca.org>
To: "FG" <FG@hotmail.com>
CC: "CC Mail" <bcca-cc@bcca.org>

Mr Glaysher

I write to advise you that the following message has been mailed to BCCA lists today.

On behalf of the BCCA-CC

Nicholas J A Sanders

Dear Baha'i Friends

The Co-ordinating Committee of the Baha'i Computer and Communications Association regrets to announce that Mr FG has been unsubscribed from all of the BCCA lists which included his name and email address and that steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility.

We wish to make it quite clear that this action follows from Mr Glaysher's persistent contravention of the conditions of the BCCA Charter and our decision should not be taken as indicating any stance on the question of his proposal for a new Usenet group. It has been made only after our several attempts to settle difficulties amicably with Mr Glaysher have produced no positive result.

The Committee now urges all the believers who participate in online Baha'i activities to focus their attention on the urgent needs of the time and to renew their efforts towards successful completion of the Four-Year Plan. We earnestly hope that the acrimonious exchanges of past weeks will now be forgotten and that there will be no repeat of them.

(Please note that this message is being posted to several BCCA lists - we apologise for any multiple receipts.)

In His service

Nicholas Sanders

Nicholas J A Sanders

Secretary
BCCA Co-ordinating Committee

--
FG
UseNet: alt.religion.bahai
The RFD for talk.religion.bahai can be found on news.groups, news.announce.newgroups, or at <<https://www.baha.demon.co.uk/rfd2.htm>>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Bahai-Discuss Archive - Fall of 1997

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BCCAMenu.htm>

This archive contains all postings to the Bahai mailing list Bahai-Discuss that had anything to do with the second interest poll for talk.religion.bahai during the approximately two months prior to my being deprived of my right of access by the BCCA. I believe the files below reveal most convincingly the fanaticism and involvement of the BCCA in attempting for more than two years to scuttle talk.religion.bahai and thereby the involvement of the Bahai administration itself. Ascii text format. Messages appear in chronological order.

Bahai-discuss-sampler1 9/21/97 22k A selection from the full Archive

Bahai-discuss-sampler2 9/22/97 14k A selection from the full Archive

BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association) 33k.

My pleading with BCCA to intervene

BCCA vows "steps have been taken to prevent his posting to any forum for which we have responsibility" 1k 11/10/97 BCCA ignores my pleas and expels me from its lists.

Full Archive

Bahai Discuss Archive September to early November 1997. 1.1 megabytes. All discussion re talk.religion.bahai

See also Mark Towfig

For similar tactics used on talisman9 in July of 2004, see

Hate Mail 2004 "babytorturer" - slander by talisman9 "moderator"

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/hate16.htm>

Censorship and disinformation pervade bahai cyberspace

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/censored.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Beliefnet - New Baha'i Discussion Forums - 2008 forward

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/beliefnet_bahai.html

Beliefnet has a very long history of being used by fundamentalist, Haifan Baha'is as a forum for censoring all opinions that differ from their interpretation. This is the "normal" abnormal pattern of Haifan Baha'is regardless of what forum, on or offline. Skim around the homepage of this website for substantiating evidence.

Current List of all Beliefnet forums, including five on Bahai:

<https://community.beliefnet.com/go/forum/viewboard>

Other Baha'i Beliefs on Beliefnet Reform Bahai Faith

Discuss Baha'i Faith CENSORED

Old Beliefnet Discussion Forums - 2001 to 2007. Extensive evidence of coercion of conscience by and among Haifan Baha'is:

https://www.beliefnet.com/boards/discussion_list.asp?sortby=1&boardID=5608&pageID=1 Viewed by Topic

https://www.beliefnet.com/boards/discussion_list.asp?boardID=5608 Viewed by Date

Google search results for Beliefnet and The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience, <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/> (bottom of page) or

click here.

Screen shot of message I posted of extracts from the US Federal Court of Appeals November 26, 2010; shortly thereafter deleted by the "moderator." All mention of the US Federal Court verdicts against the Wilmette-Haifan Baha'is have been systematically prevented and deleted from appearing in any forum they have control of on the Internet.

Yahoo! Groups: My Grou... Opinion of US Court of A... community.beliefnet.com/go/thread/view/43861/26337389/Opinion_of_US_Court_of_Appeals_7th_Circuit_No_08-2306

2 Google Directory Gmail Godaddy Email Frederick Glaysher, ... Facebook Twitter reformbahai.org Baha'i Faith & Religi... Earthrise Press Other bookmarks

beliefnet[™]
Inspiration. Spirituality. Faith.

What is Quantum Jumping? Discover Why Thousands of People are "Jumping" to Change Their Life www.Quantum
Get 3 Free Sermons Now Nelson Searcy of Journey Church-NYC Help In Leading Your Church Today! www.Church
Appeals Briefs Writers Supreme Court Appeals Serving Pro Se Appellants www.appealsparalegal.com

Sign Up Login Search GO

Home Faiths & Prayer Inspiration Health Entertainment Holistic Living Love & Family News

COMMUNITY HOME PEOPLE FORUMS GROUPS PHOTOS VIDEO JOURNALS PRAYER CIRCLES Search Community GO Help

Beliefnet Forums > Faiths & Beliefs: ... > Baha'i Faith > Opinion of US Court of...

POST REPLY

Opinion Of US Court Of Appeals 7th Circuit No. 08-2306
9 hours ago :: Nov 26, 2010 - 8:40AM #1

REFORM BAHAI
Reformbahai
Posts: 5

US Court of Appeals 7th Circuit No. 08-2306
7th Cir: Public online 08-2306 case documents Opinion in case# 08-2306
www.ca7.uscourts.gov/fdocs/docs.fwx?case...

p 7: False finding of "fact" by Judge Austin in 1966

p 13: "...civil authorities may not make judgments about religious controversies when deciding church property disputes. Kedroff, 344 U.S. at 116. (The church-autonomy principle recognized in Watson "must now be said to have federal constitutional protection as a part of the free exercise of religion against state interference.")

WATCH FILM
RESPONSIBILITY PROJECT.com Liberty Mutual

Announcements
The 2010 MIPY Award
Who inspires you? Nominate your hero that could be the next Most Inspiring Person of the Year!

5:32 PM 11/26/2010

Yahool Groups : My Grou... x Opinion of US Court of A... x

community.beliefnet.com/go/thread/view/43861/26337389/Opinion_of_US_Court_of_Appeals_7th_Circuit_No_08-2306

2 Google Directory Gmail Godaddy Email Frederick Glaysher, ... Facebook Twitter reformbahai.org Baha'i Faith & Religi... Earthrise Press Other bookmarks

recognized in Watson must now be said to have federal constitutional protection as a part of the free exercise of religion against state interference.)"

"Building on Kedroff, the Supreme Court held in Presbyterian Church that "the First Amendment severely circumscribes the role that civil courts may play in resolving church property disputes."

p 14-15: "Considered in light of these First Amendment limitations on the court's authority, certain aspects of the 1966 injunction are troubling. The decree declares that "there is only one Baha'i Faith," that Shoghi Effendi was its last Guardian and none has come since, and the National Spiritual Assembly was its representative and "highest authority" in the United States and was "entitled to exclusive use of the marks and symbols of the Faith," including the exclusive use of the word "Bahá'í." Declarations of this sort push the boundaries of the court's authority under Kedroff and Presbyterian Church. In church property disputes (trademark suits obviously qualify), the First Amendment limits the sphere in which civil courts may operate. When a district judge takes sides in a religious schism, purports to decide matters of spiritual succession, and excludes dissenters from using the name, symbols, and marks of the faith (as distinct from the name and marks of a church), the First Amendment line appears to have been crossed."

p 17: "It is a principle of general application in Anglo-American jurisprudence that one is not bound by a judgment in personam in a litigation in which he is not designated as a party or to which he has not been made a party by service of process."

p 20: The court expands on and concludes that the parties were simply not in privity with the 1966 flawed decision by Judge Austin.

--

Chicago Tribune. Baha'i rift. Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith articles.chicagotribune.com/2009-05-18/n...

Comments posted to The Chicago Tribune Forum on one page: www.fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicag...

POST REPLY

> Beliefnet Forums > Faiths & Beliefs: ... > Baha'i Faith > Opinion of US Court of...

What's Hot Today

PRAYER CIRCLE
Thanksgiving
Add your prayer of thanks to the Gratitude Prayer Circle!
Click here...

DISCUSSION
Modern Science
Has religion conquered science? Join the popular discussion.
Have your say...

DISCUSSION
A Death Sentence
Do you believe in the death penalty? Why or why not?
Join the debate...

GALLERY
Knock, Knock
Discover the doors of the world that could open to exciting new places.
View the gallery...

TALK ABOUT IT
It Takes Time
Is it possible to ever be fully recovered from an addiction?
Start here...

5:33 PM 11/26/2010

Screen shot showing the above message I posted of extracts from the US Federal Court of Appeals November 26, 2010, appearing in the list of threads on Beliefnet; shortly thereafter deleted by the "moderator" from the thread:

community.beliefnet.com/go/forum/view/43861/69519/Bahai_Faith

2 Google Directory Gmail Godaddy Email Frederick Glayshe, ... Facebook Twitter reformbahai.org Baha'i Faith & Religi... Earthrise Press Other bookmarks

Community Blogs Video Newsletters Sign Up Login Search GO

Home Faiths & Prayer Inspiration Health Entertainment Holistic Living Love & Family News

COMMUNITY HOME PEOPLE FORUMS GROUPS PHOTOS VIDEO JOURNALS PRAYER CIRCLES Search Community GO Help

Beliefnet Forums > Faiths & Beliefs: ... > Baha'i Faith

NEW THREAD

Page 1 of 6 1 2 3 4 5 6 Next

Threads In Forum: Baha'i Faith

Thread	Replies	Views	Last Post
Phishing Scams & Problems/Complaints Started By: world citizen	0	299	5 months ago by world citizen
Moved Thread(s) Started By: world citizen	0	288	5 months ago by world citizen
Guidelines for Board Started By: world citizen	0	850	10 months ago by world citizen
Opinion of US Court of Appeals 7th Circuit No. 08-2306 Started By: Reformbahai	0	12	9 hours ago by Reformbahai
Philosophy/Bahai faith question Started By: truthseeker630	6	97	2 days ago by truthseeker630
Abdu'l-Baha's tablet on religious law and the House of Justice Started By: Sen_McGlinn	0	19	4 days ago by Sen_McGlinn
Words to ponder/discuss ... Started By: world citizen	89	4,728	5 days ago by world citizen
Bahai books Started By: truthseeker630	5	145	2 weeks ago by Aka_me

Advertisement

INTERNATIONAL FELLOWSHIP OF CHRISTIANS AND JEWS

Israel is threatened. Don't let her enemies win!

Sign the Statement of Support for Israel Now »

Receive this FREE calendar

ISRAEL

Announcements

The 2010 MIPY Award

Who inspires you? Nominate your hero that could be the next Most Inspiring Person of the Year!

What's Hot Today

PRAYER CIRCLE

Thanksgiving

Add your prayer of thanks

5:29 PM 11/26/2010

Sample message posted by a Baha'i fundamentalist slurring other Bahais as "apostates", November 21, 2010, the common attitude found all over Haifan Baha'i cyberspace:

Facebook | Frederick Glay... x Discussions - talk.religion... x disenrolling - Discuss Ba... x community.beliefnet.com/go/thread/view/43851/25962217/disenrolling?pg=5

2 Google Directory Gmail Godaddy Email Frederick Glaysher, ... Facebook Twitter reformbahai.org Baha'i Faith & Religi... Earthrise Press Other bookmarks

Advertisement

beliefnet
Inspiration. Spirituality. Faith.

DON'T Let the Dentist Fool You
Single mom discovers 1 simple trick to turn nasty, yellow teeth brilliant white in the comfort of her own home. The secret will surprise you.

CLICK NOW TO GET FREE INFORMATION

Community Blogs Video Newsletters Sign Up Login Search GO

Home Faiths & Prayer Inspiration Health Entertainment Holistic Living Love & Family News

COMMUNITY HOME PEOPLE FORUMS GROUPS PHOTOS VIDEO JOURNALS PRAYER CIRCLES Search Community GO Help

Search This Thread Go

Beliefnet Forums > Faiths: Religion D... > Discuss Baha'i Faith > disenrolling

POST REPLY

Page 5 of 5 Prev 1 2 3 4 5

Disenrolling

2 days ago :: Nov 21, 2010 - 8:36PM #41

REFORM BAHAI
Reformbahai
Posts: 2

Oct 1, 2010 -- 2:14AM, in_my_opinion wrote:

Sep 30, 2010 -- 11:45PM, Aka_me wrote:

They are just not Bahá'ís... more often they fit the bill of apostasy as described and defined here: bahaisonline.net/marginality_and_apostas...

Advertisement

WRIGHT

Announcements

The 2010 MIPY Award
Who inspires you? Nominate your hero that could be the next Most Inspiring Person of the Year!

7:12 PM 11/23/2010

PDF:

Beliefnet - Discuss Baha'i Faith 4-1-2011 text below; posted to Beliefnet Bahai Discuss and deleted some hours later:

Haifan Baha'i writes:

"People see what they want to see. There's enough out there on the internet to explain the Baha'i position on Abdu'l-Baha and Shoghi Effendi that I don't think I even have to bother elaborating that."

I respond:

The fact is that much of the Haifan "Baha'i position," interpretation, really, is based on falsehoods and historical distortions. Most average Baha'is have never made the effort or spent the time to actually read and study the early history of the Bahai Movement as taught by Abdul-Baha in the West. Rather, they have accepted, without independent investigation, the "positions" of the fraudulent will and testament of Shoghi Effendi's family in 1921.

Abdu'l-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

An Analysis of Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic

https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments.html

Haifan Baha'i writes:

"Moreover, most of the earliest dissenters - relatives of Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha as well as their descendents, many among the early American communiy (Ruth White), etc. - fundamentally misunderstood the Baha'i Faith. They either mistook it for a radical political movement, for an occultish, new age faith that would grant "mystic powers," or for some liberal, loosly organized Islamic version of UU. Regardless, a legitimate case can't be made against the authority of Shoghi Effendi unless you were to erase the enitre ministry of Abdu'l-Baha."

I respond:

Not true. One to three thousand early Bahais left the Bahai Movement in the early 1920s and 1930s because many of them knew Abdul-Baha and had heard him speak in public. They had read in the Star of the West his 1912 Authentic Covenant, which was repeatedly printed in that magazine, and understood his Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings were of a universal religion, open, broad, and accepting of various shades of conscience. Shoghi Effendi dragged the Bahai Movement back to the fanatical imamate of Shiite Islam, where it has only continued to sour and fester through the decades.

Your characterizing Ruth White and other early Bahais as "new age," given to "mystic powers," etc., demonstrates the distorting lense of Shoghi Effendi's corrupt interpretation, not Abdul-Baha's.

Ruth White www.reformbahai.org/Ruth_White.html

Jenabe Fazel Mazandarani www.reformbahai.org/Jenabe_Fazel.html

Haifan Baha'i writes:

"Anyone curious about the "Orthodox Baha'i," "BUPC," or "Reform Baha'i" arguments can easily refer back to Abdu'l-Baha's writings and most of the historical works relating to this formative period in the Baha'i Faith. We do believe in "Independent Investigation of the Truth," after all. ""

I respond:

Abdul-Baha believed in and taught that the individual believer's "conscience is to be respected," unlike Shoghi Effendi, who actually taught, as does the Haifan Baha'i "administration" today, that one must put aside independent investigation once one becomes a member of its organization. Only a cult brainwashes its members to reject the God-given, rational intellect that distinguishes the human being.

About the Reform Bahai Faith

www.reformbahai.org/about.html

> MESSAGE DELETED by "moderator"...

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Bahai in Perfectly Good Standing

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BIGS.htm>

Despite the libel and slander of many fundamentalists among my fellow bahais, I have been a member of the bahai faith since 1976. My ID Card may be found on my main bahai page. I have never been contacted by the uhj or any of its underlings to the contrary.

The reason the uhj allows and encourages fundamentalists among my fellow bahais to backbite, libel, and slander me on talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, AOL, BeliefNet, and elsewhere may be discovered in the four messages below:

To the Universal House of Justice - March 31, 1997
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/To-UHJ1.htm>

To the Universal House of Justice - July 24, 1998
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/UHJ72498.htm>

To uhj 12-10-1999
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/uhj12-10-99.htm>

Open Petition for Baha'i Reformation February 8, 2001
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Reformation.htm>

My Request Not to Receive the American Bahai 1996
"Please remove my name and address from your mailing list."

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Since all books and publications are required by the Baha'i administration to undergo the censorship inherent in the process of "review," a supposedly "temporary" measure now more than eighty-five years in effect, there are very few independent sources of information and knowledge available about the history and teachings of the Baha'i Faith. Those that any serious student should be aware of are given below.

Review of Sen McGlinn, Church and State. Leiden, 2005. By FG.

William Garlington. The Bahai Faith in America. Praeger. 2005. c.221p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-275-98413-3. $39.95. REVIEW by FG

In the only book worth reading on the Bahai Faith since 1987, Professor Juan Cole emphasizes the fundamentalism that has overtaken the religion during the 20th Century: Modernity and the Millennium : The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East Columbia University Press, 1998.
Reviews of Cole's Modernity and the Millennium

Ruth White's books, beginning as early as 1927 through 1946, are essential to understanding the actual history of the Baha'i Faith, especially in the Western world and the United States. A bibliography and PDF copies can be found on the Ruth White page, along with extensive Excerpts. The documents she deposited with the Library of Congress in 1930 substantiating that the British Museum hand writing expert C. Ainsworth Mitchell found that Abdul-Baha's purported will and testament is actually a fraudulent document can be found HERE.

Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942. Reprinted. H-Bahai: Lansing, Michigan, 2004. Sohrab presents a view of Bahai life in America during the early 20th Century very different from what the usual sanitized public version suggests. The version on H-Bahai is a sanitized one, leaving out some very important pages.

Excerpts: <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

Sohrab's entire book may be downloaded in one click. 21 megabytes.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/SohrabBrokenSilence.pdf>

The Baha'i Faith: Its History and Teachings. William McElwee Miller. William Cary Library, 1974.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

"The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre." 1961.
By Frank S. Meyer. Out of print but copies available through online booksellers.
I highly recommend people interested in understanding the Baha'i Wars read this entire book. <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/cadre%20bahai.htm>

The Baha'i Cadre System - Randy Burns

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/cadre.htm>

EXCERPTS - The Baha'i Cadre System

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/cadre_bahai.htm

See also The Modern Inquisition: Seven Prominent Catholics and their Struggles with the Vatican.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/The%20Modern%20Inquistiion.htm>

Shoot the Messenger, Character Assassination, ETC

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shoot%20the%20Messenger.htm>

"In fact, it is just to the degree that individual psychological traits remain that the Communist falls short of being a bolshevik" (12).

"The question remains: if the cadre has no official existence, how can it be identified and what is the source of its being? Members of the cadre are members of the cadre when they are recognized as such by their equals and superiors in the cadre. They become members of the cadre and achieve their status within the cadre by the decision of their superiors in the cadre; and the status of the superiors depends upon their superiors" (15).

"All Party experience and all Party training, theoretical and practical, lead towards absolute and uncompromising acceptance of the decisions of the organization--not only in the face if prison, torture, and death, but in the face of what were yesterday one's firmest convictions. What is demanded is more than acceptance, more than the carrying out of decisions. One must make those decisions one's own--even though one still knows that they are wrong" (21).

"The inner contradictions of a self-reconstruction, which requires the suppression or destruction of most of the best instincts and attitudes of the human being and demands complete subordination of individuality, threaten at every moment to shatter the acquired personality structure into a thousand bits" (25).

"Once let that will falter for a single moment and the human being emerges, in revolt against the elaborate structure of untruth and evil which has dominated him. There are but two possible outcomes of the conflict between the individual and the moulding process: either failure of the will to enforce dehumanization, followed by revolt and break from the Party; or the triumph of the will, fortified by cynicism and residual faith-- the successful moulding of a Communist" (26).

"But the same implicit psychological theory lies behind the whole process of the training of the Communist cadre. Timidity, the critical spirit, individualist resentment against authority--every personal trait which blocks the fusion of the personality in the mould of the Communist type--is slowly and steadily destroyed, but without crisis tactics or dramatic confrontation. To the degree that the developing Communist accepts Marxism-Leninism as a true view of reality, his acceptance becomes an anvil upon which his personality can be hammered into shape by the Party's constant blows against those attitudes which, by the technique of reductionism, are shown to be incompatible with the accepted Marxist-Leninist outlook" (85).

"The energy expended upon any single effort to recruit varies, of course, depending upon the Party's judgment of the probable usefulness of the individual. That judgment is influenced by two considerations. First, does the prospective recruit already hold some strategic position of influence or show signs of abilities which will enable him to achieve such a position? Secondly, has he qualities which indicate cadre-potentiality? While these two possibilities may be combined in the same individual, it is the cadre-potentiality which is decisive" (100-101).

"A man joins the Communist Party because he wants to be a Communist, and the decisive step of joining the Party is taken with a deep awareness of passing a decisive climacteric" (102).

"And so, despite the fact that once a recruit is drawn into the Communist machine, terrific pressure is brought to bear to mould him into the desired ideal Communist by destroying his individuality, the process of recruiting itself concentrates upon him as an individual" (103).

"The primary aim is the creation of a steeled cadre, flexible enough to take any tactically desired stand on current questions, accreting strength as it moves through opposite and contradictory campaigns and feeds upon generation after generation of the rank and file of the formal Parties" (105).

"Apart from the direct result achieved in these classes through absorption of the material taught--the raising of the Party from a mundane institution to a mystical entity--two other results are attained. In the first place, the Communist method of teaching through a guided discussion directed toward a predetermined end confirms the belief of the new member that the conclusions to which he comes have been arrived at freely and by his own thinking, although they always turn out to be the conclusions of the Party.... The student emerges conditioned both to accept the decision of the leadership and to that, to the degree of his understanding, he has arrived at those decision himself and will understand them more and more fully the more thoroughly he masters the science of the movement" (113).

"But the main task of any Communist Party in the pre-revolutionary period is to build and strengthen the Communist cadre for the day when it will be needed for its only proper task. Any attitude which attaches value to activities for their own sake is, from the Marxist-Leninist point of view, reformist--that is, non-revolutionary, non-Communist, a 'betrayal of the working class' " (123).

"Through theory, through atmosphere, through interpreted experience in demonstration or picket line, the sense of community with the nation is shattered. Very concretely, the idea of a commonwealth within the established commonwealth, and in bitter battle with it, is instilled" (128).

"The whole of Communist training, however, drives towards the acceptance of the revolution as the end to which all things and all persons must be strictly subordinated as means.... The good or evil in any situation is determined by whether it helps the revolution or impedes it" (130).

"The ideational content of such crises is essentially the clash of ethos I have discussed. Communists recognize this when they speak of 'the necessity of choosing between two worlds.' In fact, in many cases the Party deliberately raises an apparently trivial problem to a height which will create such a crisis. While a clash of ethos is the ideational content of these crises, their emotional power is undoubtedly generated by the pressure to surrender the individuality of the personality, replacing it with the new Communist inner imperative. But since it is precisely the innate and unique value of the individual person which lies at the heart of the Western ethos, the ideational and emotional components of this crisis, in Western Communists at least, are interconnected in their essence. The crisis on all levels is a crisis of individual personality" (133).

"Whatever the occasion of the crisis, however, the content inevitably involves a clash between personal judgment and Party judgment, carried to a point where the will is faced with the choice of which judgment is to be followed. And what makes the situation radically critical is the realization that this time, for some reason or other (presumably relevant to the characteristics and the accidents of development of the particular personality), the surrender of individuality is decisive. Final barriers are being crashed; the decision is not for this instance only, but for a whole life" (136).

"Called before a commission of the Bureau after a number of brushes with lower authorities, and faced with a set of demands--deliberately provocative--which no ordinary self-respecting man would put up with, he was goaded into statements which could be used as the basis for a decision expelling him from the Party.... The rights and wrongs of the case went by the board. The issue became one of willingness to suspend personal judgment, to subordinate it to the judgment of the Party leadership" (139).

"It did, however, give the District exactly what was wanted, an occasion for intense pressure upon the important abstainers, in order either to create cadre consciousness or to drive them out of the Party" (140).

"It is the faith, whole and entire, Communism, the Party, which inspires the Communist's universe and is the object of the his devotion. That is why the known realities of the Soviet Union--oppression, slave-labor camps, purge after purge, murder in the millions, brutal and unprovoked aggression, even Khrushchev's exposure of Stalin and the Hungarian Revolution of 1956--slide off the cadre Communist's conscience like water off a duck's back. They make no live impact upon him. Intellectually he explains them as necessary casualties of the historic process, unfortunate but unavoidable. Emotionally they simple are not real, even when he has actually seen horrors with his own eyes. Facts taht do not fit the theoretical outlook of Marxism-Leninism have only a shadowy existence. Reality rests only in the doctrines of Communism and the institution of the Party" (155).

"If ever a trained and developed cadre Communist allows himself fully and deeply to acknowledge any reality independent of the Communist cosmos--a fact, an idea, an aspect of an order of being--the whole tense, complex structure is in imminent danger of shattering into bits. Only the most stupendous and immediate effort of the will can close the breach. The man to whom this is happening sometimes pretends to himself that he does not recognize its significance; but in such cases, almost always the Party smells it. Then, if he admits it, to the Party and to himself, everything possible is done to help him make that effort of will. But if he denies it, he is boxed off, trapped into compromising or blackmailable situations, demoted, expelled, vilified. For, even if he does not know that he has taken the first step on the road out of the Party, which for a cadre Communist means the road to hostility towards the Party (the Party speaks of 'the iron law of renegacy'), the Party does, and it will stop at nothing to neutralize the threat" (155-156).

"Two prior conditions, I believe, must be fulfilled before the moment of acceptance of a reality counter to the Communist outlook is possible. First, there must have been over a considerable period of time a continuing series of doubts and questions, quickly repressed, but not fully dealt with and intellectually overcome, so that they have, if only to a small degree, sapped and weakened the foundations of Marxist-Leninist belief. Such a substratum, however, is not by itself a sufficient pre-condition. Secondly, there must occur some separation of the person from the Party, geographically or emotionally, for a time" (157).

"So strong is the impress of the Communist mould, that to follow the path upon which they then find themselves compelled to proceed is not an easy, quick or automatic process. It is, in fact, a 'dark night of the soul,' mentally and spiritually agonizing to a degree which makes the extreme personal and social difficulties which the Party creates for them minor. Perhaps a premonition of this--a horror of the void through which one must pass before finding a new understanding on the other side--is an additional buttress to the Communist will in resisting the temptations of reality and truth. For it is the will which decides the issue. Exerted steadfastly day by day--because doubt after doubt creeps in and must be dealt with--it is called to its supreme effort when some eventuality creates the conditions in which the threat to long-accepted certainties arises" (157-158).

"The Communists say, when a defection occurs at a high level, that the person concerned 'never fully understood and accepted Marxism-Leninism.' They find indications in all his writings, his speeches, his actions, to prove their contention. It may well be that in the deepest sense they are right. The cadre Communist who breaks has retained somewhere within his personality values, elements of understanding, which are alien to the world-view of Marxism-Leninism" (158).

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The Baha'i Cadre System

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/cadre.htm>

EXCERPTS from "The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre." 1961.

By Frank S. Meyer.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/cadre_bahai.htm

See also The Modern Inquisition: Seven Prominent Catholics and their Struggles with the Vatican.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/The%20Modern%20Inquistiion.htm>

[Translated from a Russian-language blog run by The New York Times. November 26, 2008, regarding the Soviet GULAG, Jozhiki_pyzhiki]

I think everybody here understands how and why people were put into prison / executed by firing squad at that time. A classic scheme, w

Everybody (who is interested in this topic) read Solzhenitsyn, whom our authorities made a hero (though, in fact, he is a good writer). Ma

"The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre." 1961.

By Frank S. Meyer. Out of print but copies available through online booksellers.

I highly recommend people interested in understanding the Baha'i Wars read this entire book.

"The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre" by Frank S. Meyer. Randy Burns 05 Apr 2004

The Baha'i Faith is run by a Cadre system which is a carbon copy of the one that used to exist in the worldwide Communist movement. Ra

These people are easily controlled by Cadre Baha'is Randy Burns 14 Jul 2005

The underlying basis of control exercised by the Cadre system Randy Burn 15 Apr 2005

Currently the station of the Guardian is being exercised by the Cadre Baha'i as a group. Randy Burns Feb 27 2000

The cadre system is not based on Baha'i teachings per se Randy Burns 16 Jan 2005

I think the problem lies in the development of the Cadre Baha'i Randy Burns 23 Aug 2004

The Moulding of Baha'is : The Training of the Baha'i Cadre. Randy Burns 30 Oct 2003

Path: archiver1.google.com!news1.google.com!news.glorb.com!border1.nnntp.ash.giganews.com!border2.nnntp.ash.giganews.com!nnntp.gig

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai

References: <406DFF11.6090308@tco.net> <20040403225645.14438.00000593@mb-m10.aol.com> <406F9AAC.3060809@tco.net> <

Subject: Re: Diverse objectives. was Re: Selective obedience

Lines: 66

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1158

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1165

Message-ID: <b9hcc.1$bd4.0@nwrddc01.gnilink.net>

Date: Mon, 05 Apr 2004 18:00:39 GMT

NNTP-Posting-Host: 67.233.213.79

X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net

X-Trace: nwrddc01.gnilink.net 1081188039 67.233.213.79 (Mon, 05 Apr 2004 14:00:39 EDT)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Mon, 05 Apr 2004 14:00:39 EDT

"Karen Bacquet" <bacq...@tco.net> wrote in message news:40716C6F.8060506@tco.net...

>

> Oh, yes. The very fact a person has a criticism is taken as a sign that > they have/are a problem -- the focus ends up being on the fact of > criticism, not what sparked it.

Quite correct, Karen. The reason for this is obvious. Baha'is have failed to differentiate between 'Baha'i Administration' and the current 'Baha'i Political Process.' The 'Deepened Baha'i -- Loyal in the Covenant' has really pledged fealty to a certain Baha'i Political Process rather than to the Administrative Order itself. Criticism of things gone awry in the reality of the rank and file Baha'i exposes this underlying political process and the fact that it is NOT in fact a legitimate part of Baha'i Administration itself. Thus those who would expose this relationship are marked as 'enemies.'

- > One of the most remarkable things is
- > that they don't care that people leave -- they don't care about
- > capacity; they care about obedience. If you can't give them that, then
- > they actually want you to leave.

Right again. In this sense the 'purpose' of the Baha'i Faith is NOT to create a 'Baha'i Administration' based on the principles of Baha'u'llah, rather it is to bring about what they see as the higher purpose of creating the 'Deepened Baha'i -- Loyal in the Covenant' i.e. one whose total existence revolves around obedience to those who are higher in the hierarchy than they are, not loyalty to the teachings of Baha'u'llah, rather loyalty to functionaries in the hierarchy. It's sad to discover this, but that is the obvious conclusion one draws.

- > Oh, when it comes to actually getting anything done, most of the time,
- > it doesn't matter. From what I've seen from the rare person who does
- > seem to be able to get any response you have to do a delicate balance
- > between being a squeaky wheel combined with grovelling -- and it has to
- > be something they haven't already decided they won't do. But most - > people don't have the political ability, and quite innocently stumble in
- > without realizing they need it. Most of the time, people just get told
- > why nothing is going to be done.

I think changes are made only when it becomes necessary to hide what must remain hidden from the majority of rank and file members. The rank and file are necessary to the process, and without rank and file Baha'is there will be no one to draw on for future 'Deepened Baha'is -- Loyal in the Covenant', so the rank and file Baha'is as a group must be retained.

Changes are NOT made to bring administration closer to the teachings of Baha'u'llah, rather changes are only made to prevent the majority of rank and file members from discovering what is really happening in the inner political processes of the Faith.

If you really want to understand the Political nature of Baha'i then you should read "The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre" by Frank S. Meyer, who himself had been an active member of the Communist Party for 14 years. This book explains in 'delicious' detail the loving requirements of becoming a 'Deepened Baha'i -- Loyal to the Covevant' or as communists called them members of the Cadre.

Cheers, Randy

p.ash.giganews.com!nntp.giganews.com!cyclone1.gnilink.net!spamkiller.gnilink.net!gnilink.net!nwrddc01.gnilink.net.POSTED!113ee285!not-for-mail From: "Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news4.google.com!news.glorb.com!border1.nntp.dca.giganews.com!border2.nntp.dca.giganews.com!nntp.gig
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai

References: <ii1s519slkbkclb1brnnhvi0b3i7fu9n80@4ax.com> <425e3c4e_1@news.iprimus.com.au> <vk92619spp3tad01gp8glgjt37h3f

Subject: Re: Reasons for intervention by the Universal House of Justice

Lines: 95

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441

Message-ID: <WHCae.1996$Nc.875@trnddc03>

Date: Sun, 24 Apr 2005 01:33:42 GMT

NNTP-Posting-Host: 63.19.10.81

X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net

X-Trace: trnddc03 1114306422 63.19.10.81 (Sat, 23 Apr 2005 21:33:42 EDT)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Sat, 23 Apr 2005 21:33:42 EDT

--

"Heather Carr-Rowe" <r...@northwestel.net> wrote in message news:IOxae.27619$Jg5.1451295@news20.bellglobal.com...

- > The book I'm now reading called The New Revelations by Neale Donald Walsch

- > has some interesting things to say about aggressiveness and defensiveness
- > in the 'religious' sense.
- >
- > From one POV I'm simply being protective of Baha'u'llah's 'original
- > intention' as Abdu'l-Baha' Worded it. From the opposite POV I'm
- aggressively
- > attacking the Baha'i Administrative Order

Actually Larry, the Baha'i Faith is run by a Cadre system which is a carbon copy of the one that used to exist in the worldwide Communist movement. In the Communist Cadre system, "actually possessing a Party card or functioning in an organizational unit of the Party is immaterial from any realistic point of view. The important criterion is acceptance of Communist discipline and directives." (Frank S. Meyer, The Moulding of Communists: The Training of the Communist Cadre).

This is the "real" problem that you share with Alison and Michael, a lack of acceptance of Cadre discipline and adherence to the current directives, whatever they might be.

- > From another POV the Universal House of Justice is simply being
- protective
- > of Their Own interpretation of what Baha'u'llah's intent for His religion
- > was. From the opposite POV the Universal House of Justice is aggressively
- > attacking the very Principle and Universal teachings of Baha'u'llah which
- > are at the foundation of His Cause.

Cadre's always react to protect their power. Cadre members, irregardless of their official status in the Faith's administrative structure, are the real power holder's in Baha'i and they will do whatever it takes to retain that power. This is not about administration, it is about Leadership and the right to claim that Leadership role within the Faith. It is in effect the battle for control over what should have been the area that the Guardianship would have possessed. It is the continuation of the Guardianship by another name.

- > Thus we can both be seen to be protective of our own personal
- > interpretations of what Baha'u'llah's intent was.
- >
- > The difference is that I acknowledge that my personal interpretation is
- > simply that, a personal interpretation of Baha'u'llah's intent, where the
- > Universal House of Justice has imposed their own personal interpretation
- of
- > what Baha'u'llah's intent is on all Baha'is.

Their "interpretation" as you put it is (in my eyes) mere subterfuge on their part, it is irrelevant. It is not what you believe, it is who you take orders from. Take orders direct from Baha'u'llah via your heart and you are automatically suspect, in fact you become useless in their eyes and thus expendable.

- > The Writings make it very clear that The Universal House of Justice has
- no
- > power of interpretation or of enforcement of their interpretation.

They may not, but what they want : "What is demanded is more than acceptance, more than the carrying out of decisions. One must make those decisions one's own--even though one still knows that they are wrong." (Frank S. Meyer).

- > From my POV The Universal House of Justice was discredited when they
- > exceeded their authority and began to impose their own interpretational
- > standard of qualification for Baha'i membership. They further discredited
- > Themselves when they exacerbated the polarization in the Baha'i Faith
- > through labeling and marginalizing liberal Baha'is and scholars as a
- > 'internal opposition'.

As Frank S. Meyer put it:

"A veteran of the Communist International once said to me, talking of old inner-party struggles and referring to the defeat of the Bukharinite Right opposition, of which he had himself been a leader: 'Of course we were right--but the Party is always right.'"

- > The counterproductive effect on the Baha'i Faith from this lack of
- > leadership on their part, this neglectful incompetence, is only beginning
- to
- > show its negative results.

As counterproductive as it might seem to be to you, you can be sure that it is all done on purpose and is not regretted in the least by the cadre.

Cheers, Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news3.google.com!news.glorb.com!border1.nntp.dca.giganews.com!border2.nntp.dca.giganews.com!nntp.gig
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
References: <1121135276.503866.267960@g44g2000cwa.googlegroups.com> <yzGAe.6727$qq1.387175@news20.bellglobal.com> <11
Subject: Re: Baha'u'llah's counsel
Lines: 103
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437
X-MIMEOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441
Message-ID: <YujBe.802$LG4.509@trnddc04>
Date: Thu, 14 Jul 2005 01:47:36 GMT
NNTP-Posting-Host: 63.19.28.117
X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net
X-Trace: trnddc04 1121305656 63.19.28.117 (Wed, 13 Jul 2005 21:47:36 EDT)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Wed, 13 Jul 2005 21:47:36 EDT

"Heather Carr-Rowe" <r...@northwestel.net> wrote in message news:ONhBe.9857$qq1.774112@news20.bellglobal.com...

>

> Even though it was conservative individuals within the Baha'i > Administrative Order who began the process of drawing artificial lines > between themselves and their liberal coreligionists, liberal Baha'is have > drawn some artificial lines as well.

This may not be literally true, Larry. Who was it that started the rumor that mass teaching efforts in South Carolina had been drastically curtailed because of racism? Isn't that what really started most of the problems of the last twenty some years?

> It is time to call an armistice within the Baha'i Faith, this can only > happen though if the Baha'i Administrative Order comes clean and accepts Its > full responsibility in the creation of the divide which currently afflicts > the Baha'i Faith.

Two things are necessary above all else. Clear guidelines for due process must be established and adhered to in Administrative matters, and the Appointee branch must receive better training in how to carry out it's various tasks. You can't just call a truce, and then not clear up any of the problems, you must start where the problems themselves are created in the first place. The major source of our problems have been the overzealous efforts of the Appointed Branch.

Most of the Administrative Order in and of itself consists of ordinary rank and file Baha'is. Only the Appointed Branch consists almost exclusively of Cadre Baha'is. Couldn't we train these people a bit better and screen them better before hand?

We wouldn't want a bunch of bozos and clowns reaching the highest levels of our AO, after all.

> The biggest problem of all is that the Baha'i Administrative Order sees > Itself as blameless, as the victim of acts from an "internal opposition", > from those they have marginalized by typifying them as "enemies". This breach > within the Baha'i Faith can be traced directly to this mindset, a mindset > clearly counselled against by Abdu'l-Baha' and Baha'u'llah, the religious > mindset which uses the scape goat of 'enemies' to justify division.

It's the Cadre and the Cadre mindset which has this opinion. Most of the AO consists of "us," ie. rank and file Baha'is, even at the NSA level. These people are easily controlled by Cadre Baha'is, so basically whatever the Cadre puts out becomes the more or less official position of the Faith.

The reason why the Cadre adopts this mindset is obvious, since the Cadre operates from a position without "authority" in the Faith, yet exercises a huge amount of power over the rank and file members. Protection of the power possessed by the Cadre is all important, and the principles of Baha'u'llah are easily jettisoned in pursuit of such a task.

- > Until such time as the Baha'i Administrative Order and specifically The
- > Universal House of Justice become willing to admit that it has been their
- > own lack of leadership which has led to the widening of the gulf between
- > conservative and liberal Baha'is, all liberal Baha'is can do is try to
- > inform other Baha'is of the facts; try to inform other Baha'is about the
- > suppression and mistreatment of their coreligionists.

It is primarily a lack of leadership which has either compelled or allowed the usurpation of power by the Cadre, which of course has by now captured the UHJ itself and is fairly secure against attack from that direction.

- > Whenever liberal voices within the community of Baha' have made even the
- > slightest attempt to be heard, whenever liberals Baha'is have even touched
- > on the need for reform within the Baha'i Faith the iron fist of the
- > Administrative Order has been quick to smash the attempt. The historical
- > record speaks for itself: The L.A. Study Class, A Modest Proposal, The - > Service of Women paper, The clamp down on talisman1, Dialogue Magazine,
- the
- > expulsion of Michael McKenny for speaking openly of his personal
- > interpretation of Baha'i teachings and of the conclusions of his
- > interpretations: that women need to be welcomed into their rightful roles
- as
- > members of the Universal House of Justice for it to become two-winged and
- > fly, the expulsion of Alison Marshall for daring to suggest that there
- can
- > be faith without the Administrative Order.

Is that why she was expelled? I've often wondered.

- > Until the Administrative Order matures to the point of being able to - accept
- > and publicly admit its own share of responsibility in creating the current
- > polarization within the community of Baha', it is not only the right of
- > liberal Baha'is to speak their consciences, it is the duty of liberal
- > Baha'is to continue to remind their fellow coreligionists that such
- behavior
- > on the part of the Administrative Order is not only ignorant and
- intolerant,
- > it is un-Baha'i like to the nth degree!

That and expose the machinations of the Cadre. The Cadre lives in the shadows and draws strength from the darkness that inhabits the old world order. Up against the wall rank 'n filers!

Cheers, Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news4.google.com!news.glorb.com!cycny01.gnlink.net!cyclone1.gnlink.net!spamkiller.gnlink.net!gnlink.net!

From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai

References: <h73u51pj9jlevi2209j9od2o7ssac2hcjo@4ax.com>

Subject: Re: Callousness of institutions

Lines: 49

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441

Message-ID: <5CT7e.13902$jd6.7196@trnddc07>

Date: Fri, 15 Apr 2005 18:20:49 GMT

NNTP-Posting-Host: 63.19.67.24

X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net

X-Trace: trnddc07 1113589249 63.19.67.24 (Fri, 15 Apr 2005 14:20:49 EDT)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Fri, 15 Apr 2005 14:20:49 EDT

"Swiss Heritage" <geot...@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:h73u51pj9jlevi2209j9od2o7ssac2hcjo@4ax.com...

- > Maybe one reason some Baha'is rally around Baha'i regime change
- > demagoguery, is because of the devious, cold-blooded, and contemptuous
- > way Baha'i institutions, including the Universal House of Justice,
- > seem to treat people sometimes. They see signs of that in the language
- > of messages from the institutions, and above all in the words and
- > conduct of some people who spend their time in Internet discussions
- > arguing with critics of Baha'i administration.

I see no reason to think that Baha'is should or could work for regime change within the Baha'i Faith. Since the Faith is run by a Cadre system this is for all intents and purposes an impossibility.

You are right that the attitude of the UHJ and its agents is a cause for major concern. George Bernanos in speaking of the Catholic Church said "The Saints were obedient, not subservient." There is a vast difference between the two. No one obeys the laws of their government because they "love" their government.

> I see all that too, and I can sympathize very well with the feeling > that it will never change by working within the boundaries drawn by > those same institutions, or at least that there are faster and better > ways to work for change that it would be wrong not to use.

Baha'is need to understand the political nature of the AO and the underlying basis of control exercised by the Cadre system. Since all religions in the world today are becoming and slowly transforming themselves into political entities, the Baha'i Faith also must do this. What confuses Baha'i rank and filers is the common misbelief that the Institutions of the Faith are meant to be spiritual in nature. Baha'u'llah set up the Mashriqs to be the spiritual entities in the Faith and the AO as the political arm.

> I certainly am not impressed by the apologetics I've seen posted in > Internet discussions by people who argue with critics of Baha'i > administration. I have reasons of my own for strictly abstaining from > adversarial strategies, but I've never tried to discuss them with > anyone. For me, walking and working with abused and marginalized > people has a much higher priority than trying to persuade raging > castaways that their methods are wrong.

Actually they are wrong, for the reasons I state above. There is no point in asking for reform of the AO, but wider understanding of the underlying facts is needed.

Cheers, Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news3.google.com!news.glorb.com!cyclone1.gnilink.net!spamkiller.gnilink.net!gnilink.net!trnddc05.POSTED!11
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
References: <JmtUd.5671$Vf6.213210@news20.bellglobal.com>
Subject: Re: Invitation on the Universal House of Justice
Lines: 78
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437
X-MIMEOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441
Message-ID: <qBuUd.43375$EL5.12558@trnddc05>
Date: Mon, 28 Feb 2005 01:37:26 GMT
NNTP-Posting-Host: 63.19.33.251
X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net
X-Trace: trnddc05 1109554646 63.19.33.251 (Sun, 27 Feb 2005 20:37:26 EST)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Sun, 27 Feb 2005 20:37:26 EST

"Heather Carr-Rowe" <r...@northwestel.net> wrote in message news:JmtUd.5671$Vf6.213210@news20.bellglobal.com...

>
> As it was God's Will that these 'inseparable institutions' be separated, > this critical function that was to be the responsibility of an on going > hereditary Guardianship remains unfulfilled. Who is to speak up when ' any > enactments ... conflict with the meaning and to depart from the spirit of > Baha'u'llah's revealed utterances.'? Who is to give voice to what cries out
> from their heart of hearts?

Some time ago I suggested right here on TRB that the Institution of the Guardian needed to be resurrected without an actual Guardian but instead as an institutional body charged with maintaining the duties of the Guardian in a noninfallible way. The UHJ certainly has the power to establish such a body, which could either be constituted as a Court or even a Review Board of some kind. Personally I think this would be a great help to the faith at this juncture.

> That I have taken upon myself this task in no way is an assertion or claim > on my part that I am a Guardian. I recognise only the 'twin Guardians' of > Baha'u'llah's, 'justice and equity' as being in this day the true Guardians > of the Cause. I claim no special station whatsoever, I am simply one of > one hundred billion people to have graced and disgraced this earth.

the

Currently the station of the Guardian is being exercised by the Cadre Baha'i as a group. This group has derogated to itself all the rights and perquisites of the Guardianship without any duly authorized body (such as the UHJ) acting to create it or authorize it, therefore it is an illicit group which has no right to exist within the Faith.

> It is my heart felt conclusion, based on the many years that I have been > Baha'i, the many years that I have studied and contemplated the Writings > that the enactments of the Universal House of Justice against It's > coreligionists Alison Marshall and Michael McKenny "conflict with the > meaning" and "depart from the spirit of Baha'u'llah's revealed utterances".

Without established due process and without an institution of the Guardianship there is no current method of appealing such decision save that of appealing directly to the Cadre--the final arbiter of all decisions currently made in the Faith. The Cadre's price for appeal is already well know. There is nothing anyone can do about that save the UHJ itself, the only Center of the Faith that we currently have that is indisputably genuine in nature.

> I hereby invite The Universal House of Justice to consult here on this > matter, in the manner that Baha'u'llah has taught us to consult, so that
the > truth of these matters may be known to all.

The House can do nothing that the Cadre has not already approved in advance.

>So that we truly may show that > we regard one another 'as one soul' and that the very purpose for the > Cause may be fulfilled :
>
> "so that the seal bearing the words "The Kingdom shall be God's" may be > stamped on every heart, and the light of Divine bounty, of grace, and mercy > may envelop all mankind. "
>
> (Baha'u'llah, Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah, p. 260)
>
> There is only us, we are them, as one soul.

Appeal to the House is and will be fruitless until the House acts to create a legitimate Institution of the Guardianship which can root out the Cadre organization from the bowels of the Faith.

Good luck in your quest,
Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news4.google.com!newshub.sdsu.edu!border1.nntp.dca.giganews.com!border2.nntp.dca.giganews.com!nntp.c
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
References: <mkp8u0hh8ph5p46kkmfqjo1ktck3eb8baj@4ax.com> <DNbFd.71749$N6.9233@edtnps84> <gg5bu016dlsp1u2l0vbn1s814
Subject: Re: Baha'i shunning Compared to Jehovah's Witnesses and Shunning
Lines: 96
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437
X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441
Message-ID: <XboGd.5542$Os6.2163@trnddc08>
Date: Sun, 16 Jan 2005 06:53:43 GMT
NNTP-Posting-Host: 63.19.8.168
X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net
X-Trace: trnddc08 1105858423 63.19.8.168 (Sun, 16 Jan 2005 01:53:43 EST)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Sun, 16 Jan 2005 01:53:43 EST

"Finnegan's Wake" <m...@privacy.net> wrote in message news:34u57pF4em7s0U1@individual.net...

>
>>
> The separation of powers implicit in the democratic model of government > developed so as to avoid abuse of power by any one branch of government.
> Hence the legislature makes law, the executive carries it out and the > judiciary ensures the laws are properly interpreted and consistently > applied. In the AO all power is vested in one body with neither check nor

- > control on it. Bahais are not exempt from the application of Acton's dictum
- > that all power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely.

The fact that all power is vested in one body in the Baha'i Faith is not the problem. Actually all "authority" is vested in one body, the UHJ, however power is shared out not only thru the other elected bodies but also thru both the appointed branch and the cadre Baha'is.

All governments, all institutions, all organizations have types of cadre groups that seek to wrest power from the legitimate authorities, this is why such things as due process have been developed to prevent abuses. Legislatures are supposed to legislate, no one needs protection from them doing their duty, what we need protection from is the collective Cadre group of lobbyists, industrialists or wealthy persons, bodies of interest and various interest groups, etc, that continually seek to influence the legislative acts.

The main source of protection in the broader society is the idea of the open society or the idea of freedom of speech or freedom of association, etc. This allows for a greater degree of investigation behind the scenes to reveal what these various cadres are really doing to the public and thus holds some small part of this activity in check. What we see in the Baha'i faith is that such investigations and reporting is not allowed, and all attempts at same are censored and the offenders face sanctions.

- > In the Bahai
- > system I would have had no chance had I complained against the actions of an
- > administrative institution - I've been through that bahai judicial process
- > where the institution, whose actions were complained of, was allowed to file
- > evidence which I was not allowed to see and therefore could not rebut or
- > refute.

Of course the real point of the Baha'i process is to protect from prying eyes the cadre system, mainly for fear that the wider body of Baha'is would seek to wrest the powers entrusted to the Cadre from them if they knew of their existence. The cadre seeks to prevent this at all costs. Better that the faith should die than to see the cadre deprived of its power.

- > In the litigation I have just finished, there was complete disclosure by all
- > sides of pertinent documentation and a hearing conducted in a most civilised
- > fashion without acrimony of any sort - indeed I was actually joking with
- > some of my opponents during a recess and at the conclusion of the hearing.
- > My initial experience of complaint against a Bahai institution was a
- > judgement that I was "arrogant," made by the body whose actions were
- > complained of and who, quite properly, in the Bahai system took jurisdiction
- > of the matter. Common sense ought to tell you that a body cannot
- > objectively judge its own actions - indeed, any assertion that it has acted
- > wrongfully will merely serve to impel it to close ranks against the accuser
- > who cannot be other than a base malefactor engaged in malfeasance of the
- > first order.

All accusations against Baha'i institutions are seen as direct assaults upon the cadre system itself. The reason for this is fairly obvious, the cadre runs all the institutions (or all the important ones), thus any attack on an institution is seen as a direct attack on the cadre itself, and the cadre (in fear of discovery) seeks to protect itself.

- > One of the major differences twixt the Bahai way and that of a civilised
- > society is that the Courts not only render judgements but the ratio
- > decidendi therefor. They give reasons, cite laws and precedents and ground
- > the judgement on those and the facts of the case. The Bahais make it up as
- > they go along so that the consistency essential to a sound legal system is
- > missing.

The cadre system is not based on Baha'i teachings per se, this is why the institutions often seem out of touch with actual Baha'i teachings. It's the cadre that seeks to discard or prevent any normal approach to such activities. It is the cadre that makes it up so as to prevent any form of due process developing which could be used by its enemies (the Baha'is themselves) to remove them from their emplacement in the system.

Cheers, Randy

Path: g2news1.google.com!news1.google.com!news.glorb.com!cyclone1.gnilink.net!spamkiller.gnilink.net!gnilink.net!nwrddc02.gnilink.net
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
References: <fe72f2b1.0408200637.320ced9@posting.google.com> <20040820113800.05775.00003913@mb-m05.aol.com> <4FrVc.78
Subject: Re: Orthodox Baha'is
Lines: 50
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1437
X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1441
Message-ID: <NpgWc.11912$LV1.5630@nwrddc02.gnilink.net>
Date: Mon, 23 Aug 2004 06:47:09 GMT
NNTP-Posting-Host: 65.234.44.39
X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net
X-Trace: nwrddc02.gnilink.net 1093243629 65.234.44.39 (Mon, 23 Aug 2004 02:47:09 EDT)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Mon, 23 Aug 2004 02:47:09 EDT

"kaweah" <djen...@kaweah.com> wrote in message news:fe72f2b1.0408210001.1eb5af32@posting.google.com...
> Randy, I wonder what about the following passage indicates that the > House of Justice ought to play the role of thought police:
>
> "All matters of State should be referred to the House of Justice, but > acts of worship must be observed according to that which God hath > revealed in His Book." -- 8th Ishraq
>
> Is a person's status as a Baha'i a matter of State, or is it a > spiritual matter? Mind you, a person's ability to worship as a member > of a spiritual community is impacted here. Picture a world that is > predominantly Baha'i: what would the Baha'i community do with the > village whacko then? Cast him out and shun him? Should the UHJ be > separating the wheat from the chaff, or ought they to leave that job > to God?

I think the problem lies in the development of the Cadre Baha'i (what we called "The Deepened Baha'i--Loyal in the Covenant"). The whole process of the Baha'i Faith today, as it is practised, is not to create a community thru religious practice, but rather to create the Cadre Baha'i or Deepened Baha'i--Loyal in the Covenant. Thus the praxis of the Baha'i Faith currently revolves not around religious ritual in the normal sense but rather around the process of recruiting and transforming ideal types into the Cadre Baha'i. Part of that process involves and actually requires the necessity of total excommunication of those who are unable to assist in that process.

According to Frank S. Meyer in his book "The Moulding of Communists : The Training of the Communist Cadre," people are conceived of , not as those who make up the association , those for whom the association exists , but rather as material to be developed, fertilized, watered--and pruned. This is what the Baha'i Faith has been reduced to as a result of the creation of the Cadre elite organization which replaced the Guardianship.

The one thing that the UHJ does not do very much of are those very tasks which are actually set out for it in the W&T. Perhaps it would be better if they would actually begin to do those things.

Cheers, Randy

Path: archiver1.google.com!news2.google.com!news.maxwell.syr.edu!in.100proofnews.com!in.100proofnews.com!cycny01.gnilink.net!cyc
From: "Randy Burns" <randy.bur...@gte.net>
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai
References: <xTnnb.11266$%e3.9290@nwrddc03.gnilink.net> <20031029094818.12487.00000273@mb-m01.aol.com>
Subject: Re: Will and Testament - cannot be abrogated
Lines: 30
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 6.00.2800.1158
X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V6.00.2800.1165
Message-ID: <fg0ob.20834$%e3.17625@nwrddc03.gnilink.net>
Date: Thu, 30 Oct 2003 04:16:11 GMT
NNTP-Posting-Host: 67.241.176.73
X-Complaints-To: abuse@verizon.net
X-Trace: nwrddc03.gnilink.net 1067487371 67.241.176.73 (Wed, 29 Oct 2003 23:16:11 EST)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Wed, 29 Oct 2003 23:16:11 EST

"Susan Maneck " <sman...@aol.com> wrote in message news:20031029094818.12487.00000273@mb-m01.aol.com...

> >

>

> Ahh, here we go again. The secret cabal.

Not a secret cabal but rather a cadre. This "cadre is a distinct elite, the members of which are recognizable by no title; who may or may not be in positions of organizational leadership."

"The important criterion is acceptance of discipline and directives. The cadre constitute a distinct body within the Baha'i Faith. It is the cadre which has assumed the role of the Guardian. It is the vanguard of the New Race of Man. The cadre is not the formal leadership of the Baha'i Faith. Most of the formal leaders of the Faith are members of the cadre, but not necessarily all. "

"The question can be asked: if the cadre has no official existence, how can it be identified and what is the source of its being? Members of the cadre are members of the cadre when they are recognized as such by their equals and superiors in the cadre. They become members of the cadre and achieve their status within the cadre by the decision of their superiors in the cadre; and the status of the superiors depends upon their superiors."

Source: The Moulding of Baha'is : The Training of the Baha'i Cadre.

Cheers, Randy

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

My Comments on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's Report

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_comments.htm

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_Report.htm

ALL DOCUMENTS by Mitchell on Reform Bahai Faith website.

ALSO Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.html

Scholarship worthy of the name cannot be done without confronting the Bahai history to which Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab testify.

Details below. See especially Abdul-Baha's Covenant.

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.htm

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:

https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Abdul-Baha's Covenant

<https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.htm>

Bahai regards,

Reform Bahai Faith

www.reformbahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

Thank you, for addressing the obvious, as Ruth White, and thousands of early Bahais did. The burden of proof lies upon the criminals who benefited from the fraud.

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens." --Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell

Mitchell was singularly qualified to judge the authenticity of the purported will of Abdul-Baha:

"In England, C. Ainsworth Mitchell was a public analyst interested primarily in questioned documents and the chemistry of inks during the early twentieth century" (25).

Introduction to Forensic Sciences. William G. Eckert.
Published 1997 CRC Press. Legal Reference / Law Profession. 390 pages.
ISBN 0849381010

The authenticity of my quotation from the Introduction to Forensic Sciences above, regarding Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, may be verified by Previewing the book and selecting page 25. On Amazon.com:

<https://www.amazon.com/>

NOTE WELL: In 1997, decades after his Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha in 1930, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's reputation in the field of "questioned documents" continues to command the respect of his colleagues capable of evaluating his abilities and of educating new students.

"Documents And Their Scientific Examination" (1920) Author: C. Ainsworth Mitchell, Date 1920

<https://www.archive.org/details/DocumentsAndTheirScientificExamination>

[can be downloaded in full]

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:

https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Will Johnson to a fundamentalist Baha'i who dismissed Dr. Mitchell:

From: "wjhonson" wjhonson@...

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Saturday, April 21, 2007 10:36 PM

Subject: Re: 4-20-07 - Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament.

>

> That's a bit disengenuous to his memory. Charles Ainsworth Mitchell > wrote several books in which he details pencil, ink, writing styles, > etc. It wasn't a hobby, he was a professional in this type of > analysis.

>

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_Report.htm

SEE:

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

--- In ex-bahai@yahoogroups.com, wrote:

>

> Yes I see your point that the BAO will never deign to provide proof to their claim. Nothing will compel them to do that unless some legal court gets involved or something. I am speaking more directly to the argument here and now on Ex-Baha'i. It seems that there are people here on both sides. And they all seem to have a vested interest in the outcome of the argument. So far I've seen people refuting the claims of forgery. But I haven't seen them counter with any proof of authenticity. I don't think it's sufficient to > refute the argument of your opponent and provide no proof in favor of your own view.

>

> Regardless of whether the BAO gets involved in the debate or not, then > individual believers and non-believers are still bound to make up there > minds about it based on the evidence from both sides.

>

SNIP

>

> Thanks,

> M

>

Exactly. For over 75 years, Shoghi Effendi or the denominations based on the fraudulent will and testament have used the techniques of smear and slander, avoidance and shunning, to hide their perfidy.

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles

The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

The "appeal to authority" is first and foremost to Abdul-Baha

Himself. THEN, to Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, whose qualifications are unimpeachable and still widely recognized by forensic researchers. Ruth White's book provides documentation on both as well as arguments on a more analogous basis, comparing the dissimilarities of the forged w&t with Abdul-Baha's public statements, for instance.

What did Shoghi Effendi appeal to but the basest fears and emotions of humanity, in a manner foreshadowing those widely used by Baha'i fanatics during the last decade, for instance, "besotted woman," etc.

Chanler and Sohrab, in their own conception, were never attempting to create a separate denomination. Indeed, Sohrab may have been trying to curry favor with Shoghi Effendi and perhaps "win" his way back into the corrupted regime. It's important to realize the difference between them and Ruth White, who was more insightful into what had really taken place when Abdul-Baha died.

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

Ian,

Forgery has no excuse.

Shoghi Effendi also thought he knew better than Abdul-Baha.
For decades Bahais have suffered from his arrogance:
<https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.htm>

You're entitled to your views. They're not mine, but "The conscience of man is sacred and to be respected." I don't believe you've responded to the fact that Dr. Mitchell scientifically confirmed forgery.

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

It's not a matter of my providing evidence. The eminently qualified Dr. C.

Ainsworth Mitchell provided the hard evidence:

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:

https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.htm

Abdul-Baha's Covenant provides the "smoking-gun" in irrefutable black and white text:

<https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.htm>

It's in the interest of the ao to deny the obvious, and claim the world is flat....

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

None of your arguments against Dr. Mitchell's Report are persuasive, nor properly explore and address his credentials. "Eggs in one basket" is a canard.

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

Long ago, it was proven to be a fraudulent document:

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens." --Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell

The burden of proving otherwise rested with Shoghi Effendi, the translator and main benefactor of the spurious document and now with the illegitimate organization he created.

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:

https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.htm

Bahai regards,

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

Sohrab's position isn't as simply as you make it out to be in The Will and Testament of Abdul Baha, An Analysis. New York: Universal Publishing, 1944.

There are a number of subtle nuances he carefully wrote into the book, complicating his support of Shoghi Effendi's usurpation of His grandfather's Faith:

"there is apparent contradiction between this section of the Will and his lifelong teachings" (61).

"the fact that Abdul Baha had never in speech or writing given the slightest indication that there would be a successor to himself. On the contrary, a number of addresses delivered by him on various occasions had made the opposite impression."(61). In this connection, see Abdul-Baha's Covenant <https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.htm>

Sohrab, for some reason, is clearly trying to influence Shoghi Effendi in 1944, as evinced in his advising that time was running out in Shoghi Effendi's appointing the Hands of the Cause. Whatever Sohrab's motives, they don't change the fact that the will and testament is a fraudulent document, never probated, i.e., never proven authentic, quite the contrary given the tactics Shoghi Effendi used to attempt to discredit Ruth White and Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell--Mitchell's credentials are unimpeachable and it's one of the many slanders and signs of desperation that the corrupt AO only responds with smears and derision. At this point in history, whatever Sohrab's motivations were, they no longer matter.

See, The Universal Principles of the Reform Bahai Faith. Reform Bahai Press, 2008. 148 pages.

Available worldwide:

<https://www.reformbahai.org/reform%20bahai%20press.htm>

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Re: Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell & Abdul-Baha's Covenant

--- In ex-bahai@yahoogroups.com, wrote:

>

SNIP

>

I believe the turning point can now be > identified as the 1988 "Dialogue Magazine" fiasco. Because the AO was > not ready with a policy of openness and dialogue with thoughtful > people by letting things open up in 1988 at the grassroots level, it > was not ready for the energy of the Internet when it began its rise > in 1994. The rest is now history. There are tens of thousands of very > good and thoughtful spiritual books and magazines on Amazon while the > Baha'is have largely nothing whatsoever in the way of wide ranging > deep spiritual and thoughtful books or periodicals of commentary. The > UHJ has largely translated NOTHING from the Writings in 35 years! It > is just pathetic. It is literally criminal. Defeat in war is two > little words..."too late". It is now far too late.

--

Thanks,

I agree with so much in your comments. I want to respond to your Dialogue observation. I think you're precisely right about identifying the Dialogue debacle as a profoundly serious mistake that had deep and lasting ramifications for the Faith, sending shock waves throughout the community, and awakening all thoughtful souls that something dreadfully wrong had happened to Abdul-Baha's conception that the individual's conscience was sacred and to be respected! Many lost opportunities since then.... one after another.... Of course, I'd allow, that many such things too had happened earlier, with more of the same.

The one thing I'd disagree with is that it's all too late. God's challenge to the soul is never too late, only the response. Just my view.

I believe Bahais can renew and restore Baha'u'llah's Teachings, and revitalize our community and world.

See, The Universal Principles of the Reform Bahai Faith. Reform Bahai Press, 2008. 148 pages.

Available worldwide:

<https://www.reformbahai.org/reform%20bahai%20press.htm>

Bahai regards,

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles

The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

Reflections on the Fraudulent will & testament of Abdul-Baha

The will and testament is a fraudulent document perpetrated by a family seeking to seize and control a formative religion for its own benefit. Largely, they succeeded, though they initially lost approximately thousands of early Bahais over the coming decades, while a few insightful and valient Bahais, such as Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab protested and explained their concerns and objections in a number of books, all the more worth reading in the light of subsequent decades of slander, deceit, lies, and shunning of independently minded scholars, writers, and people of every background:

"Abdul Baha had never in speech or writing given the slightest indication that there would be a successor to himself. On the contrary, a number of addresses delivered by him on various occastions had made the opposite impression" (61). "There is apparent contradiction between this section of the Will and his lifelong teachings..." (61). --Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, The Will and Testament of Abdul Baha, An Analysis. New York: Universal Publishing, 1944. Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942. <https://fglaysiaher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

"Whether the alleged will of Abdul Baha is authentic or spurious, the results of the administration of Shoghi Effendi and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is stand as an historical indictment against them.
[Boldface in original] They no more represent the Bahai Religion than the bigots of the dark ages of Christianity.

"We had the dark ages because the bigots of that era got control of Christ's teachings and tortured all those who did not comply with their interpretation. Shoghi Effendi, and the National Spiritual Assembly of Baha'is, cannot in this day resort to physical torture to enforce their will, but they have resorted to mental torture by blackmailing with excommunication all those who do not comply with their inverted teachings" --Ruth White (100), Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament.

Beverly Hills: White, 1946. Ruth White, Excerpts, Bibliography

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens." --Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_Report.htm

"A sincere man in Shoghi's position should gladly have accepted my challenge for an investigation. Any man confident of the justice of his case would, in fact, have courted and insisted upon an impartial and judicial examination of the alleged will and of all the facts bearing on his claim to Guardianship. Shoghi Effendi however, it can be seen, was congratulating himself that there was no likelihood of the Palestine authorities considering the question. He shunned a test of the alleged will and of his claims. And I have every reason to believe that his advice to his followers not to hurt my feelings at that time was with a view to prevent me from pursuing the matter further" (1).

"This alleged will is undated, unwitnessed, unprobated, and unstamped by the Government. It also contradicts the intent that its alleged maker held during his lifetime. for the alleged will commands people to obey Shoghi Effendi as if he were God, and to pay a tax to him. This is the motive of the fraud--money and power" (2).

"I am making this complaint in order to protect the public from a fraud, and a movement, which under Shoghi Effendi has become far more subversive than that of Bolshevism. For Shoghi Effendi aims to become world dictator, and he is establishing enemy states within each state, and collecting taxes from the people of these enemy states. All this is contrary to the teachings of Sir Abdul-Baha Abbas whose successor he claims to be (2-3). Letter to High Commissioner of Palestine. Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

A painful and difficult possibility to contemplate and recognize, that both theocratic interpretations of Baha'u'llah's Revelation are spurious and based upon a fraudulent document, but one that becomes all the more glaring in the light of subsequent Baha'i history. Yet if God has given us a conscience with which to independently seek the truth, we are called to trust it and weigh the evidence, no matter how concerted and overwhelming the mountain of slanderous vilification and misrepresentation might be.

Ultimately, we have Abdul-Baha's Words to guide us:

"The Bahai Movement is not an organization. You cannot organize the Bahai Movement." --Abdul-Baha

My Comments on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's Report

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_comments.htm

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008

Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Scholarship worthy of the name cannot be done without confronting the Bahai history to which Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab testify.

Dr. C. (Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha. 1930.
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_Report.htm

Ruth White, Excerpts, Bibliography
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

Ruth White Collection, Library of Congress, 1930
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/RWhiteLibC.htm>

ALL DOCUMENTS by Mitchell on Reform Bahai Faith website.
ALSO Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:
https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.html

"That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person."

"A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will . . . has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdu'l-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens." --
Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell

The attempts to discredit Dr. Mitchell and Ruth White have relied on, for over 75 years, slander and ad hominem and are no more convincing now than they have ever been. Note the attempt to shift, from his conclusion and call for an examination of the original, to the man himself. Classic ad hominem.

I ask the reader to reflect on the fact that Dr. Mitchell remains one of the most respected forensic researchers of the 20th century and is still quoted and cited by academics and legal experts. His professional integrity is beyond question as is and was his ability to assess the authenticity of the purported will itself. As the document curator for the British Museum, Dr. Mitchell used techniques and methods still widely used and recognized, whether or not one has a command of the language being scrutinized. Knowledge of a language in and of itself has never been the essential for handwriting experts, and informed people know that to be a fact. Those who seek to conceal the act of forgery hope to confuse the uninformed about what is involved. See the link at the bottom to one of his books available online.

Ruth White placed Dr. Mitchell's signed Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha with the Library of Congress in 1930. Certified copy below.

A bibliography of Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's published work is available from the Library of Congress at the bottom of this page.

My Comments on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's Report
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CAMitchell_comments.htm

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:
https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

(11" x 17")

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
PHOTODUPLICATION SERVICE
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20540-4570

PHOTODUPLICATION SERVICE

202-707-5640 (VOICE)

202-707-1771 (FAX)

photoduplication@loc.gov (EMAIL)

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that the Miscellaneous Manuscripts Collection of the Library of Congress Manuscript Division contains an item from the papers of Abdul Baha entitled REPORT ON THE WRITING SHOWN ON THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ALLEGED WILL OF ABDUL BAHÁ BY DR. C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL and that the attached photocopies - the title page, the presentation page, 1 unnumbered page [page 1], and pages 2 through 4 - are a true representation from that work.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY FURTHER, that the work is marked with the handwritten notation "Presented to the Library of Congress by Ruth White, September 2, 1930."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the seal of the Library of Congress is affixed hereto on February 22, 2007.

By: Virginia D. Sorkin
Acting Chief
Library of Congress
Photoduplication Service

Presented to the Library of Congress
by Ruth White
September 2, 1930

I have made a minute examination of the writing in the photograph and photographic enlargements of the alleged will of Abdul Baha, and have compared it with the authenticated writing of Abdul Baha in a series of photographs and photographic enlargements received from Mrs. E. Lawrence White.

In the absence of ^{Gift} Mrs. H. Lawrence White's examination of the original document, any conclusions to be drawn from the examination of the photographic enlargements must necessarily be of a provisional character, depending upon the accuracy of the photographic records. Moreover, some of the facts which are taken into consideration in the scientific examination of an original document cannot be perfectly studied in a photographic reproduction, such as, for example, the ink, paper, penstrokes, and so on.

Assuming that the authentic specimens of writing are of approximately the same period as that at which the disputed will is alleged to have been written and signed, the points which can be accurately compared in the photographic enlargements are the points formation of the writing, the changes in pressure, the letters, and the relationship in the size of parts of the letter the whole.

*Presented to the Library of Congress
by Ruth White
September*

REPORT

ON THE WRITING SHOWN ON THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ALLEGED WILL OF ABDUL BAHA

BY

DR C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL

EDITOR OF "THE ANALYST"

85, ECCLESTON SQUARE,

LONDON S.W.1

ENGLAND

JUNE 3rd 1930

[AC3959]

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C.

TEL: VICTORIA 8363.

85, ECCLESTON SQUARE,

LONDON, S.W. 1.

June 3rd 1930

REPORT

ON THE WRITING SHOWN ON THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ALLEGED WILL OF ABDUL BAHÁ.

I have made a minute examination of the writing in the photographs and photographic enlargements of the alleged will of Abdul Baha, and have compared it with the authenticated writing of Abdul Baha in a series of photographs and photographic enlargements received from Mrs. H. Lawrence White.

In the absence of an opportunity to examine the original document, any conclusions to be drawn from an examination of the photographic enlargements must necessarily be of a provisional character contingent upon the accuracy of the photographic records. Moreover, some of the facts which are taken into consideration in the scientific examination of an original document cannot be perfectly studied in a photographic reproduction, such as, for example, the ink, paper, penstrokes, and so on.

Assuming that the authenticated specimens of writing are of approximately the same period as that at which the disputed will is alleged to have been written and signed, the points which can be accurately compared in the photographic enlargements are the mode of formation of the writing, the changes in pressure, the form of individual letters, and the relationship in the size of parts of the letter to the whole.

A fact requiring explanation is the presence of apparent erasures on some of the pages of the will, namely in lines 12 and 13 of page 2, and line 13 of page 4. Without a microscopical examination of the original document it is not possible to state whether a chemical agent has been used, but assuming there have been erasures at these points I think it probable that they were done mechanically, not chemically. The apparent erasure on page 5, line 11, may possibly be the result of an imprint from other written matter while the ink was wet.

The photographic reproductions of authenticated specimens of the writing of Abdul Baha were the following:-

1. Writing from the Book of the Unitarian Church, Montclair, New Jersey.
2. Writing from the Guest Bible for 1912, City Temple, London.
3. Authenticated signatures on two letters to Mrs. Stannard on a photograph, and a possible authentic signature in the possession of Mrs. Devine.
There is no reason to doubt the authenticity of the signature from Mrs. Devine, since it agrees closely with the other signatures.

The Signatures on the Envelope:- A comparison of the four signatures on the envelope of the alleged will with the four authenticated signatures reveals many striking differences in the mode of formation of the characters, as for example:

In the authentic signatures the width of these characters, compared with their height, is much greater than in the signatures on the envelope. The strokes are also much firmer

ll

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C.

TEL: VICTORIA 8363.

-3-

85, ECCLESTON SQUARE,
LONDON, S.W.1.

in the envelope signatures than in the authenticated signatures.

we In the authenticated signature the entire character is roughly $2\frac{1}{4}$ times the width of the open space between the uprights; in the disputed signatures the corresponding figure is twice as great. In the authentic signatures the cusp is rounded; in the disputed signatures it is pointed. In the authenticated signatures the relationship between the depth of the gap and its breadth is as 1 : 1.4 to 1.6, whereas in the disputed signatures it is as 1 : 2.3 to 2.6. Thus the ratio is totally different. In my opinion these differences are not consistent with the signatures upon the envelope being in the writing of the writer of the authenticated signature.

The Body of the Will:- A comparison of the formation of the writing on the envelope with that on pages 9 and 10 of the will shows so many points of resemblance that there is no reason to doubt that they were written by the same person.

I have also studied minutely the photographic enlargements of the writing on the other pages of the will, and have formed the following conclusions:-

Page 2, with the exception of the last two lines, agrees with Page 3.

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C.

TEL: VICTORIA 8363.

85, ECCLESTON SQUARE,

LONDON, S.W.1.

-4-

The last two lines of Page 2 agree with Page 4.

The other pages, namely 5, 6, 7 and 8, agree in the characteristics of writing with the writing on Page 4. That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person.

The writing of Abdul Baha has certain distinctive features, among which are a sudden change of pressure in some of the strokes, wavering formation of some of the curves, and the formation of sharp angles in some of the characters. These characteristics are sharply indicated in the enlarged photographs of the writing in the City Temple, London, and in the Montclair writing.

A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will, and in particular with the lines 10, 11 and 12 on page 5, has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens.

In addition to these differences in writing habits, there are also differences in the shapes of many of the parallel characters in the body of the document compared with the authenticated writing, as in the case of the signatures mentioned above.

C. Ainsworth Mitchell

[Text copy of Dr. Mitchell's Report]

Presented to the Library of Congress by Ruth White
September 2, 1930

Gift Mrs. H. Lawrence White Sept 8, 1930

REPORT ON THE WRITING SHOWN ON THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ALLEGED WILL OF ABDUL BAHA BY DR C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL EDITOR OF "THE ANALYST" 85, ECCLESTON SQUARE, LONDON S.W.1 ENGLAND JUNE 3rd 1930 [Title page]

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C. TEL: VICTORIA 6363.
85, ECCLESTON SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.1. [page 1]
June 3rd 1930

REPORT ON THE WRITING SHOWN OF THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ALLEGED WILL OF ABDUL BAHA.

I have made a minute examination of the writing in the photographs and photographic enlargements of the alleged will of Abdul Baha, and have compared it with the authenticated writing of Abdul Baha in a series of photographs and photographic enlargements received from Mrs. H. Lawrence White.

In the absence of an opportunity to examine the original document, any conclusions to be drawn from an examination of the photographic enlargements must necessarily be of a provisional character contingent upon the accuracy of the photographic records. Moreover, some of the facts which are taken into consideration in the scientific examination of an original document cannot be perfectly studied in a photographic reproduction, such as, for example, the ink, paper, penstrokes, and so on.

Assuming that the authenticated specimens of writing are of approximately the same period as that at which the disputed will is alleged to have been written and signed, the points which can be accurately compared in the photographic enlargements are the mode of formation of the writing, the changes in pressure, the form of individual letters, and the relationship in the size of parts of the letter to the whole.

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C. TEL: VICTORIA 6363.
85, ECCLESTON SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.1. [page] -2-

A fact requiring explanation is the presence of apparent erasures on some of the pages of the will, namely in lines 12 and 13 of page 2, and line 13 of page 4. Without a microscopical examination of the original document it is not possible to state whether a chemical agent has been used, but assuming there have been erasures at these points I think it probable that they were done mechanically, not chemically. The apparent erasure on page 5, line 11, may possibly be the result of an imprint from other written matter while the ink was wet.

The photographic reproductions of authenticated specimens of the writing of Abdul Baha were the following:--

1. Writing from the Book of the Unitarian Church, Montclair, New Jersey.
2. Writing from the Guest Bible for 1912, City Temple, London.
3. Authenticated signatures on two letters to Mrs. Stannard on a photograph, and a possible authentic signature in the possession of Mrs. Devine. There is no reason to doubt the authenticity of the signature from Mrs. Devine, since it agrees closely with the other signatures.

The Signatures on the Envelope:— A comparison of the four signatures on the envelope of the alleged will with the four authenticated signatures reveals many striking differences in the mode of formation of the characters, as for example:—

In the authentic signatures the width of these characters, compared with their height, is much greater than in the signatures on the envelope. The strokes are also much firmer

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C. TEL: VICTORIA 6363.
85, ECCLESTON SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.1. [page] -3-

in the envelope signatures than in the authenticated signatures.

In the authenticated signature the entire character is roughly $2\frac{1}{4}$ times the width of the open space between the uprights; in the disputed signatures the corresponding figure is twice as great. In the authentic signatures the cusp is rounded; in the disputed signatures it is pointed. In the authenticated signatures the relationship between the depth of the gap and its breadth is as 1 : 1.4 to 1.6, whereas in the disputed signatures it is a 1 : 2.3 to 2.6. Thus the ratio is totally different. In my opinion these differences are not consistent with the signatures upon the envelope being in the writing of the writer of the authenticated signature.

The Body of the Will:— A comparison of the formation of the writing on the envelope with that on pages 9 and 10 of the will shows so many points of resemblance that there is no reason to doubt that they were written by the same person.

I have also studied minutely the photographic enlargements of the writing on the other pages of the will, and have formed the following conclusions:—

Page 2, with the exception of the last two lines, agrees with Page 3.

C. AINSWORTH MITCHELL, D.Sc., F.I.C. TEL: VICTORIA 6363.
85, ECCLESTON SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.1. [page] -4-

The last two lines of Page 2 agree with Page 4.

The other pages, namely 5, 6, 7 and 8, agree in the characteristics of writing with the writing on Page 4. That is to say, the writing does not agree with the hypothesis that it was all written by one person.

The writing of Abdul Baha has certain distinctive features, among which are a sudden change of pressure in some of the strokes, wavering formation of some of the curves, and the formation of sharp angles in some of the characters. These characteristics are sharply indicated in the enlarged photographs of the writing in the City Temple, London, and in the Montclair writing.

A minute comparison of the authenticated writing with the writing on every page of the alleged will, and in particular with the lines 10, 11 and 12 on page 5, has failed to detect in any part of the will the characteristics of the writing of Abdul-Baha, as shown in the authenticated specimens.

In addition to these differences in writing habits, there are also differences in the shapes of many of the parallel characters in the body of the document compared with the authenticated writing, as in the case of the signatures mentioned above.

[Signed] C. Ainsworth Mitchell

Mitchell was singularly qualified to judge the authenticity of the purported will of Abdul-Baha:

"In England, C. Ainsworth Mitchell was a public analyst interested primarily in questioned documents and the chemistry of inks during the early twentieth century" (25).

Introduction to Forensic Sciences. William G. Eckert.
Published 1997 CRC Press. Legal Reference / Law Profession. 390 pages. ISBN 0849381010

The authenticity of my quotation from the Introduction to Forensic Sciences above, regarding Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, may be verified by Previewing the book and selecting page 25. On Amazon.com: <https://www.amazon.com/>

NOTE WELL: In 1997, decades after his Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdul-Baha in 1930, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's reputation in the field of "questioned documents" continues to command the respect of his colleagues capable of evaluating his abilities and of educating new students.

"Documents And Their Scientific Examination" (1920) Author: C. Ainsworth Mitchell, Date 1920
<https://www.archive.org/details/DocumentsAndTheirScientificExamination>
[can be downloaded in full]

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage on Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:
https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Will Johnson to a fundamentalist Baha'i who dismissed Dr. Mitchell:

From: "wjhonson" wjhonson@aol.com
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Sent: Saturday, April 21, 2007 10:36 PM
Subject: Re: 4-20-07 - Ruth White. Abdul Baha's Questioned Will and Testament.

>
> That's a bit disengenuous to his memory. Charles Ainsworth Mitchell > wrote several books in which he details pencil, ink, writing styles, > etc. It wasn't a hobby, he was a professional in this type of > analysis.
>

Link to Library of Congress SEARCH for your own confirmation: C. Ainsworth Mitchell

The Library of Congress

Start Over

>> Go to Library of Congress Authorities

DATABASE: Library of Congress Online Catalog

YOU SEARCHED: Author/Creator Browse = mitchell c. ainsworth

SEARCH RESULTS: Displaying 1 through 18 of 18.

#	Name Heading	Name: Main Author, Creator, etc.	Full Title	Date
☐ [1]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Allen, Alfred Henry, 1847-1904.	Allen's Commercial organic analysis; a treatise on the properties, modes of analysis, and proximate analytical examination of the various organic chemicals and products employed in the arts, manufactures, medicine, etc.; with concise methods for the detec	1923
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: QD271 .A45 1923
☐ [2]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Fresenius, Theodor Wilhelm, 1856- [from old catalog]	Introduction to qualitative chemical analysis, by Th. Wilhelm Fresenius.	1921
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: QD81 .F8 1921
☐ [3]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Documents and their scientific examination with especial reference to the chemistry involved in cases of suspected forgery, investigation of disputed documents, handwriting, etc.,	1922
SELECT TITLE FOR HOLDINGS INFORMATION
☐ [4]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Edible oils & fats, by C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1918
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: TP670 .M5
☐ [5]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Expert witness and the applications of science and of art to human identification, criminal investigation, civil actions & history / by C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1923
ACCESS: Law Library Reading Room (Madison, LM201) CALL NUMBER: K2283 .M57 1923
☐ [6]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Expert witness and the applications of science and of art to human identification, criminal investigation, civil actions & history, by C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1923
ACCESS: Law Library Reading Room (Madison, LM201) CALL NUMBER: LAW
☐ [7]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Fibres used in textile and allied industries, by C. Ainsworth Mitchell and R. M. Prideaux, F.I.C.	1910
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: TS1540 .M6
☐ [8]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Flesh foods.	1900
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: TX555 .M5 (Rare Bk. Coll.)
☐ [9]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Forensic chemistry in the criminal courts.	1938
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: RA1057 .M57
☐ [10]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Ink, by C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1923
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms CALL NUMBER: TP946 .M65

☐ [11]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Inks---	1904
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: TP946 .M68
☐ [12]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Inks: their composition and manufacture, including methods of examination and a full list of British patents.	1937
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: TP946 .M68 1937
☐ [13]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Oils, animal, vegetable, essential, and mineral.	1916
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: TP670 .M513 1916
☐ [14]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Recent advances in analytical chemistry. Editor: C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1930
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: QD75 .M5
☐ [15]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Scientific detective and the expert witness, by C. Ainsworth Mitchell.	1931
ACCESS: Law Library Reading Room (Madison, LM201)			CALL NUMBER: LAW
☐ [16]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Vinegar: its manufacture and examination. By C. Ainsworth Mitchell, with 5 plates and 49 other illustrations.	1916
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: TP445 .M6
☐ [17]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Oppenheimer, Karl, 1874-	Ferments and their actions. By Carl Oppenheimer ... Tr. from the German by C. Ainsworth Mitchell ...	1901
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: QP601 .O62
☐ [18]	Mitchell, C. Ainsworth (Charles Ainsworth), 1867-	Tognoli, Edgardo.	Reagents and reactions, by Edgardo Tognoli ... Tr. from the Italian by C. Ainsworth Mitchell ...	1918
ACCESS: Jefferson or Adams Bldg General or Area Studies Reading Rms			CALL NUMBER: QD77 .T6

The Library of Congress
URL: <https://www.loc.gov/>
Mailing Address:
101 Independence Ave, S.E.
Washington, DC 20540

Library of Congress Online Catalog
URL: <https://catalog.loc.gov/>
Library of Congress Authorities
URL: <https://authorities.loc.gov/>

Download All Documents Deposited by Ruth White at the Library of Congress in one PDF:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/WhiteLCDocs.pdf>

Ruth White
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Ruth%20White.htm>

Excerpts from Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942.
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

Professional genealogist Will Johnson's webpage, Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell:
https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Charles_Ainsworth_Mitchell

Also see US District Court of Northern Illinois rules against Haifan Baha'is - April 23, 2008
Amici curiae, Reform Bahai Faith
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USDistrictCourt07.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

CAUTION * Psychological War Zone  Newcomers —

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Caution.htm>

Censorship and disinformation pervade bahai cyberspace

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/censored.htm>

Wikipedia Entry > Baha'i Censorship of FG Page, May 2010

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Wikipedia_Frederick_Glaysher.html

Haifan Baha'i fundamentalists are highly adept at manipulating and controlling information, disinformation and public perception, on and off the Internet, at times using false identities (permissible under taqiyya and hikmat "dissimulation" and "wisdom" to "protect the faith") and smearing dissenters as "paranoid," "disillusioned," given to "conspiracy theories," "covenant breakers," and so forth.

I caution you that appearances are deceiving on Wikipedia, talk.religion.bahai and alt.religion.bahai, as elsewhere in bahai cyberspace, Beliefnet, Talisman9, "unenrolled" Baha'i Yahoo Group, at times the DMOZ and Google directories, and so on, playing the game of "good cop, bad cop," (see below) all of which have been prime tactics and arenas of Baha'i propaganda and used to identify, manage, and suppress dissent.

Time has shown that some false identities are actually double agents pretending to be opposed to the Haifan Baha'i denomination while actually working on its behalf, especially on talk.religion.bahai. Compare "agents provocateurs" on Wikipedia: "The provocateurs try to incite the opponent to counter-productive or ineffective acts to foster public disdain—or provide a pretext for aggression against the opponent." Compare "red-baiting": "such unjust accusations of crypto-communism are used mainly with the intention of discrediting the individual's or organization's political views."

For a historical perspective, "The Baha'i Technique":

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Shunning & Slander > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

Also see comments regarding talk.religion.bahai on Usenet

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Usenet.htm>

bahai-apologetics & BCCA (Bahai Computer and Communication Association)

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BCCA_Ap.htm

Good Cop/Bad Cop, known in British military circles as Mutt and Jeff and also called joint questioning and friend and foe^[1], is a psychological tactic, used for interrogation. It involves a team of two interrogators who take apparently opposing approaches to the subject. The interrogators may interview the subject alternately or may confront the subject at the same time. The 'Bad Cop' takes an aggressive, negative stance towards the subject, making blatant accusations, derogatory comments, threats, and in general creating antipathy between the subject and himself. This sets the stage for the 'Good Cop' to act sympathetically: appearing supportive, understanding, in general showing sympathy for the subject. The good cop will also defend the subject from the bad cop. The subject may feel he can cooperate with the good cop out of trust and/or fear of the bad cop. He may then seek protection by and trust the good cop and tell him the needed information. The technique is easily recognised by those familiar with it, but it remains useful [\[citation needed\]](#) against subjects who are young, frightened, or naïve. Experienced interrogators assess the subject's level of intelligence and experience with the technique [\[citation needed\]](#) prior to its application, as the technique is often seen as offensive and insulting to those who recognise it, who may thus refuse to cooperate outright. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Good_cop/bad_cop

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Homepage

Questions? CONTACT ME HERE > https://en.allexperts.com/q/Bah-2728/indexExp_113873.htm

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi`ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/WalbridgeL.htm>
Obituary 2002 by Juan Cole

Juan Cole - Menu
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

NEWS FEATURE: "Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism."
By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service

Eds: RNS Online, <https://www.nj.com/RNS/>, printed this with color photos of Cole, Henderson and the Baha'i Worship Center in Wilmette, Ill, accompanying this story.

UNDATED - The first 19 days of March are a special time for Baha'is, members of a worldwide religion with a liberal reputation based on its vision of the underlying unity of all faiths, the oneness of humanity and the harmony of science and religion.

The Baha'i faith grew out of Islam, and like the Muslim month of Ramadan, Baha is set aside 19 days - the month of Ala according to the Baha'i calendar - as a period of dawn-to-sunset fasting and spiritual reflection. The month ends with the Feast of Nawruz, the Baha'i new year. It's a festive time of community gatherings featuring prayers, spiritual readings, socializing and lots of food. For ex-Baha'i Juan Cole, though, this year's feast will be anything but festive. Cole, a professor of Middle East history at the University of Michigan, is among the nation's leading experts on the faith. Until last May, when he formally resigned from the movement, he had been a Baha'i for 25 years. Now, however, he counts himself among a small but influential group of past and present liberal Baha'is angry over what they say is the hijacking of the faith by a cadre of conservative leaders more interested in preserving their authority than the Baha'i principle of "independent investigation of reality."

That principle is among the core tenets of the Baha'i faith first articulated by its founder, the 19th-century Persian prophet known as Baha'u'llah (the Glory of God) and who is revered by the faithful as an incarnation of God akin to Jesus. According to the critics, the National Spiritual Assembly (NSA), which oversees the American Baha'i movement, is dominated by a tight-knit group of authoritarian officials who keep the lid on free expression by threatening dissidents with excommunication and by manipulating the process by which NSA members are elected.

In the Baha' i faith, excommunication includes total shunning by family members and friends.

Spreading their message via the Internet, the dissidents - many of whom, like Cole, once were members of the faith's intellectual elite - say the nine-member NSA also hides the truth about the faith's shrinking American following.
"Baha'is are not open - repeat, not open - about how controlling this organization is, " said Cole. `` Virtually no one who comes into this faith realizes that by becoming a Baha'i you are making your individual conscience hostage to the dictates of the leadership.

"The Baha' is started out Unitarian and ended up Calvinist. "

For their part, American Baha'i leaders, headquartered in the Chicago suburb of Wilmette, Ill., dismiss the critics as an inconsequential group of disgruntled elitists who - blinded by their attraction to the faith's more liberal aspects - overlooked its deeply conservative side.

This includes an emphasis on " administrative order" as a prime religious goal.
Baha'u'llah taught that religions fail in large part because, of the disunity that tears them apart following their initial burst of spiritual energy.
As a result, tight controls are placed on all public statements made by Baha'is -- including the works of scholars, who are required to submit their writings for pre-publication review.

"The Baha'i community as a whole does not encourage antagonistic confrontation,
" said Firuz Kazemzadeh, an NSA-member and its secretary for external affairs.
"We always seek consensus. But if there is no unanimity then the majority must prevail.

Not all Baha'i scholars find fault with this.
"I personally don't buy 'the totalitarian argument, " said Canadian Baha'i B.

Todd Lawson, an assistant professor of Islamic studies at Montreal's McGill University.

"The Baha'i faith posits a non-confrontation version of problem solving. My view is if you opt out of that mode, that's your prerogative. But there are others who take a longer view of things. ... Baha'i ideals are extremely demanding. "

Michael McMullen, an assistant professor of Sociology at the University of Houston at Clear Lake, said prior review "makes sense" because much of the writings of Baha'u'llah and his successors remain untranslated from their original Persian and Arabic, and are therefore inaccessible to the majority of American Baha'is.

"My experience has been that what is corrected are factual errors not interpretation, " said McMullen, who is also a local Baha'i leader in League City, Texas.

The dissidents also claim the Baha'i prohibition against public campaigning or nominating candidates for spots on the nine-member NSA serves to keep it a closed body controlled by the American Baha'i establishment.

Baha'i leaders say they are only following an orthodoxy established by Baha'u'llah and his successors - his son Abdul-Baha and his great-grandson, Shoghi Effendi, who died in 1957.

"It is extremely deprecated if anyone even talks about how the voted " said Kazemzadeh. "Voting is supposed to be a very spiritual act."

Assembly members are elected annually by a fixed number of 171 delegates who represent local Baha'i assemblies across the continental United States.

Robert C. Henderson, a former Atlanta businessman who is the NSA's secretary-general, making him the highest ranking American Baha'i (the faith has no ordained clergy), said there have been 12 changes in the NSA' s membership over the past 15 years.

"That's not indicative of a closed group ," he said.

However, Cole said each change resulted from retirement, death or a member moving out of the country. No incumbent who has sought re-election has been defeated since 1961, he said.

Cole also noted that family and other close associations are common among American Baha'i leaders. Six of the nine current NSA members have family or professional connections.

For example, Henderson's mother, Wilma Ellis, is married to Kazemzadeh. Ellis herself is a former NSA member who has held a variety of prominent Baha'i positions. Currently she is a member of the Continental Board of Counselors of the Americas, which provides advice and other services to elected Baha'i bodies throughout the hemisphere.

Two other current NSA members are husband and wife James and Dorothy Nelson. He is a former presiding judge of the Los Angeles Municipal Court. She is a judge of California's Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. '

Two other members are Juana Conrad, a retired administrator for the Los Angeles Municipal Courts, and William Davis, former administrative executive of the Ninth Circuit Court.

Yet another current assembly member is South Dakotan Patricia Locke, the first American-Indian woman to serve on the NSA. She replaced her son Kevin: Locke. McMullen, the University of Houston sociologist, acknowledged that the prohibition against nominations and campaigning has made it hard for those outside the Baha'i establishment to win election to the NSA.

But on the local level, he added, there is a much higher leadership turnover.

Moreover, on this level of authority, he said, issues, even controversial ones, are freely debated without fear of official disapproval.

Henderson also said that "Baha'is are specifically asked to air their grievances" at local and national conventions. "There are specific channels for such expression, but it must remain within these established channels."
"The Baha'i faith is outwardly liberal but inwardly conservative, " he continued. " It's a matter of scripture."

Baha'is claim a worldwide membership of more than 5 million people living in more than 200 nations and territories. About 2.5 million Baha'is live in India. In Iran - where the faith first emerged in the 1840s when Baha'u'llah proclaimed himself to be the divine manifestation for the modern era there are about 300,000 Baha'is. Considered heretics by the Muslim authorities, the live as a persecuted minority.

The heresy charge stems from Baha'u'llah's claim to prophet status some 1,200 years after Muhammad, the founder of Islam, proclaimed himself God's final prophet.

In the United States, Baha'is claim some 130,000 members - a third of whom are African-Americans. About 21,000 live in California, with the largest concentration - more than 6,000 - in greater Los Angeles.

Baha'is are also relatively strong in South Carolina, Texas, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, Arizona and Washington state.

However, Baha'i critics say the religion's membership numbers are wildly inflated. Citing friendly but unnamed sources at Baha'i headquarters in Wilmette, the dissidents say no more than 30,000 names represent active Baha'is with verifiable addresses.

"Wilmette has no idea who most of these so-called 130,000 Baha'is are," said Steven Scholl, a Baha'i for 27 years until he withdrew his membership last October.

"The large number of inactive members on the roles speaks to the number of people who have simply walked away from the faith out of their upset with the leadership," said Scholl, a publisher of spiritual books based in Ashland Ore.

A 1993 book on Americans' religious affiliations, "One Nation Under God" by demographers Barry Kosmin and Seymour Lachman, estimated the number of adult Baha'is in the United States at about 28,000.

"Every new religious movement that is in a missionary phase tends to overestimate its members," Kosmin, currently at the Institute for Jewish Policy Research in London, said in an interview. "They count people coming in, but never count those who leave."

Kazemzadeh, the Baha'i official, insisted that the 130,000 figure is "essentially accurate." But he also said that "if active means contributing funds and serving locally, it's probably about half the names on the list." Sizable Baha'i communities in the South are traceable to the influx of mostly rural African-Americans who joined the faith in the 1960s and '70s, drawn by its strong rejection of racial prejudice. Jazz musician Dizzy Gillespie is probably the best-known African-American Baha'i.

During those same years, relatively large numbers of white liberals, attracted by the faith's emphasis on a society free of social injustice, also joined. It is mostly members of this group - many of them scholars of Baha'i texts, the Middle East and its languages - that today lead the dissident movement. Linda Walbridge, an anthropologist at the University of Indiana specializing in the growth of Islam in America, became a Baha'i in 1966 when she was a 19-year-old VISTA volunteer on the Navajo Reservation. Despite her anger at the hierarchy, she remains a Baha'i.

Raised Roman Catholic, Walbridge said she was attracted to the Baha'i faith by its promise of a universalist vision. "It was far more open than anything I had experienced. "

Walbridge's public dissent has prompted Baha'i officials to threaten to label her a "covenant breaker" - a form of excommunication that would require her Baha'i husband to divorce her or risk his own excommunication.

"It was supposed to be the most liberal, broad-based religion on the face of the earth, " said Walbridge. " Instead, it turned out to be a straight jacket." For liberal academics like Walbridge, the lack of free expression is a prime bone of contention. However, they also take issue with the Baha'i claim of inclusiveness when only men can serve on the Universal House of Justice the faith's international authority based in Haifa, Israel, near Baha'u'llah's, burial place. Established in 1963 in accordance with Baha'u'llah's dictates, the Universal House of Justice is considered an infallible body by Baha'is.

The critics also take issue with the harsh attitude taken by Baha'i leadership toward sexually active gay and lesbian members, who are subject to official sanction under the faith's general prohibition against all forms of extra-marital sex.

"I understand that this conforms to understanding of Baha'i orthodoxy that the leadership shares, but how is this inclusive? " said Walbridge. " For heaven's sake, let's at least discuss it. Things have changed since the 19th century." To members of the Baha'i establishment, Walbridge's challenge to some of the faith's basic tenets are indicative of the critics' misreading of the movement's conservative side.

"These so-called dissident Baha'is like to be among Baha'is because they were liberal and we appear liberal," said Kazemzadeh. "But they did not y believe in God as Baha'is define it. That raises the question of hypocrisy.

"This is a religious community united by a set of beliefs," he said. " So if a person says he does not believe in these beliefs, why is he a member of the community?"

[Note: A sidebar introduction, plus corrections to the article submitted by two Baha'is, and finally a Baha'i report on the article, including a list of the newspapers which ran it, all follow. Some Baha'is interpreted these articles as excessively critical; see for example the NSA response at "Attacks on the Faith". -J.W.]

Sidebar: Thumbnail guide to the beliefs of the Baha'is
by Ira Rifkin
c. 1997 Religion News Service

UNDATED -- A cornerstone of Baha'i beliefs is the principle of progressive revelation, which holds that God repeatedly sends divine messengers to Earth and that the latest in a line running from Abraham to Jesus and Muhammad was the 19th-century Persian prophet known as Baha'u'llah. Missionary-minded and pacifist-oriented, the Baha'i faith teaches the unity of mankind and the commonality of all religions. It also emphasizes the harmony of science and religion, rejection of all prejudice, independent investigation of truth, equality of the sexes and compulsory education. "The Baha'i Faith's progressive approach to human society originates with Baha'u'llah's emphasis on unity," said a 1992 official profile of the movement. "Indeed, if one were to characterize His teachings in a single word, that word would be unity."

Baha'is have no ordained clergy and little ritual, and are led by elected officials. Despite the declaration of sexual equality, the faith's international authority, the Universal House of Justice based in Haifa, Israel, is doctrinally an all-male body. Baha'is consider the House of Justice to be infallible.

National Spiritual Assemblies direct Baha'i affairs in individual countries.

U.S. Baha'i headquarters are in the Chicago suburb of Wilmette, Ill., site of one of seven Baha'i Houses of Worship scattered around the globe.

Baha'is believe the world is destined to have one government, which will be led by Baha'is and will be based on the faith's administrative framework. The Baha'i faith grew out of Shiite Islam, and like Muslims, Baha'is are not supposed to consume alcohol and are to adhere to a strict moral code. They also believe in the sharing of wealth and the adoption of a universal language.

Considered heretics by Muslims, Baha'is have long been persecuted by Islamic leaders, particularly in Iran. Baha'u'llah spent much of his life in prison or under house arrest. He died while under house arrest near Acre, just north of Haifa, which was then part of the Ottoman Empire. Since 1980, more than 200 Iranian Baha'is have been executed and thousands have been imprisoned, according to reports, leading to frequent condemnations of Teheran by the U.S. State Department. Because of this persecution, the recently organized, 20-member Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on Religious Freedom Abroad has a Baha'i member.

-END RIFKIN AP - NY-02-26-97 1528 EST

Note: Here follow two corrections sent to a Baha'i academics listserv in March, 1997:

On Thursday, March 6, a Baha'i wrote:
"Mr. Henderson was misquoted. Actually, he said, "The Baha'i Faith is SOCIALLY liberal and MORALLY conservative." Another factual error is that Linda Walbridge remains a part of the American Baha'i community; as many of us may remember with sadness, she withdrew from the Baha'i Faith almost a year ago."
Later, she added:

"I happened to be at the National Center last Friday, and Bob Henderson pointed out to some Baha'is that he was misquoted. Actually, it is something that happens all the time in journalism (in the rush of scribbling down notes and all). My guess is that Linda Walbridge was also misunderstood, as she would have no reason to believe that the institutions consider her to be a part of the American Baha'i community."

The US Baha'i Office of Public Information recently mailed their PI NEWS, April 1997, a bi-monthly publication distributed to Baha'i Public Information Reps.
Here is the lead article regarding the RNS article: "News on Opposition National News Wire Article Criticizes the NSA"

"On February 27, 1997, the Religion News Service carried a news article by Ira Rifkin under the title "Critics Chafe at Baha'i Conservatism." The article presented the views of a small group of of disaffected former Baha'is who left the Faith because they rejected certain fundamental Baha'i teachings. The individuals attacked Baha'i institutions and their members attributing to them dictatorial attitudes, accusing them of controlling elections and claiming that Baha'i institutions were dominated by a tight-knit group of authoritarian officials. The article was published in the following US papers:

- 1) Muscatine, Iowa Journal
- 2) Akron, Ohio Beacon Journal
- 3) Kansas City, Missouri Star
- 4) North Carolina Times News

- 5) Charlotte, North Carolina Observer
- 6) Springfield, Massachusetts Republican
- 7) Mobile, Alabama Register

"Local communities responded to the article's publication in a variety of ways. For example, the Baha'is of Springfield, MA, formed a delegation which visited the executive editor of the Springfield, Massachusetts paper. The delegation explained to the editor the Baha'is eighty-year history in the area and noted its community service. During the hour long meeting, the executive editor's tone was apologetic, He stated that he had not read the article before it was placed. Additionally, he promised to feature a positive article on the Faith in the near future. Although published in only seven newspapers, the article is an excellent opportunity to identify issues and teachings to which American media might give a negative interpretation: free speech, the Baha'i electoral process and Covenant breaking to name a few. The Office of Public Information, in consultation with the Research Office of the Baha'i National Center, is developing educational materials for PI Reps which will address these issues.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Censorship and disinformation pervade bahai cyberspace

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/censored.htm>

Wikipedia Entry > Baha'i Censorship of FG Page

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Wikipedia_Frederick_Glaysher.html

FG - RoyalWeb entry

https://www.countyhistorian.com/cecilweb/index.php/Frederick_Glaysher

Censorship and disinformation pervade bahai cyberspace and have since the advent of the Internet. Discussion on Beliefnet's Baha'i Debate and Talisman9 is no exception. Repeatedly, "liberal" moderators have shown themselves as ready to squelch open and free discussion as the worst fundamentalists in control of soc.religion.bahai, AOL's message boards, and other mouthpieces of the bahai administration, such as H-Net Bahai and Unenrolled Baha'i on Yahoo! Groups, intended to monitor and regulate dissent. Use them with caution and realize that you are usually NOT hearing voices of dissent because the sweet and pleasant "moderators" have prevented people from posting their views.

Talk.religion.bahai remains the only place of online discussion that NEITHER fundamentalist nor liberal prejudice and passion can censor, though often manipulated in other ways.... by creating false identities and alias, playing good-cop / bad-cop, double-agents, and other deceptions, including websites that pretend to be critical of Haifan Baha'i positions while actually in their control and promoting subtly positive views and spins.

See CAUTION * Psychological War Zone  Newcomers ____

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Caution.htm>

For a few specific instances of censorship on bahai lists, see

Bahai-Discuss Archive - Fall of 1997

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/BCCAMenu.htm>

For similar tactics used on talisman9 in July of 2004, see

Hate Mail 2004 "babytorturer" - slander by talisman9 "moderator"

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/hate16.htm>

Homepage

Questions? CONTACT ME HERE > https://en.allexperts.com/q/Bah-2728/indexExp_113873.htm

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Fw: [bahai-faith] moderators vs censors
Date: Tuesday, May 05, 1998 6:55 AM

-----Original Message-----

From: LaAeterna <LaAeterna@aol.com>
To: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Date: Sunday, May 03, 1998 10:28 AM
Subject: [bahai-faith] moderators vs censors

>I had a very interesting experience with srb just this past week. I sent in a >post discussing female circumcision and asking what was the UHJ's position on >this barbaric practice. My post posed the rhetorical question: when do we as >Baha'is stop deferring to cultural mores and speak out firmly against those >which harm or injure people? The post was rejected because I had used the >acronym UHJ and I was told in a very rude way I could speak out against the >issue myself if I felt so strongly about it.

>To say I was flabberghasted at this type of "moderating" was putting it mildly >indeed. Has anyone else experienced anything similar? What IS moderating, >anyhow...I'm beginning to think it is censorship based on the limited >understanding of the Teachings of the few whose task it is to review posts by >the readership.

>Nancy

>----

>List Archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>
>To Subscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-subscribe@makelist.com
>To Unsubscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-unsubscribe@makelist.com
>--
>Start Your Own Free Mailing List at <https://www.MakeList.com> !
>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

* The Charade of Dialogue and Consultation ****

I refuse to participate in the CHARADE of dialogue.... THAT is what has infuriated fanatics like Susan Maneck and others....

And I have found ways to reach non-bahai observers with the truth about my fellow bahais, in the best interest of both the Baha'i Faith and of my fellow citizens. More on Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar: <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

The fundamentalists among my fellow bahais no longer uphold the principles and Teachings of Baha'u'llah. Their only standard is their desire for power and control, while the crushing of the individual is merely a corollary of that goal.

Baha'i principles include opposing, identifying, and denouncing the tyrant, as Baha'u'llah did, with integrity, for decades....

I have long been a defender of Abdul-Baha's clear, undeniable, and perspicuous Words, while the fundamentalists seek to cast me as an opponent and heretic, which is slander, pure and simple.

Susan Maneck and the other fundamentalists may ignore others and spam their spin control year after year with impunity. That's the way it works in bahai cyberspace, while maligning anyone with even a modicum of integrity and courage. Usually, newcomers are too innocent to know the difference, is their hope. In the end, the truth will out, which is the fundamentalist fear.

Polluting the atmosphere with moles, who are wildly erratic and aberrant, is one of the tactics that the fundamentalists use (on talk.religion.bahai and elsewhere) to discredit dissenters and liberals before non-bahais and newcomers.

Slander and backbiting are powerful forces, employed nowhere to better effect than by the fundamentalists among my fellow bahais.

Many observers, though, have not been deceived:

See "The Baha'i Technique":

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

--

FG

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

I believe it is the counter on my website, registering over 21,000 hits as of late February 2001, that inspires the desperate, futile efforts of my fellow Bahais to silence and discredit me, as well as their fanatical attempts to suppress any possible knowledge of the truth documented there.

In February 2000, I filed a police report regarding a variety of items and placed a trace on my telephone line. Other actions have been taken.

While my fellow Bahais continue to attack, harass, malign, and slander me on talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, AOL, and elsewhere, falsely accusing me of "spamming," of misrepresenting the intrigues of the "universal" house of "justice" to silence and ostracize people, of being mentally unstable and so on, it has been widely observed by other Bahais and non-Bahais that Bahai fundamentalists routinely refuse all discussion of the facts and EVIDENCE of the oppression and tyranny committed by the uhj.

Those interested in impartially judging my sanity and background for themselves may find my bio helpful:
<https://fglaysher.com/bio.htm>

The non-Bahai observer might want to give careful consideration to the probability that the uhj itself supports and encourages this person in his continual harassment of me since I notified them of his actions on January 30, 2000, and again on February 24, 2001, receiving back confirmation of their receipt of my message, while he continued hounding me for weeks. Therecord of Bahai tyranny since 1970, on my website, documents that fundamentalist Bahais have gone from one attempt to another in the hope of silencing me and many, many others.

On January 30, 2000, I wrote to the uhj:
A Bahai continues to harass me despite my polite requests that he cease emailing me his insults and threats. I hold the uhj directly responsible for the actions of this and other Bahai fanatics. The uhj routinely inspires this type of fundamentalism in my fellow Bahais and then uses them to suppress and control others.
I shall be sending a copy of this message to the uhj along with the individual's name and email address.
As a member of the Bahai faith since 1976, I have every right to express my conscience and beliefs as both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha guaranteed their followers....

--
FG
www.FG.com
The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://members.nbci.com/FG/index.htm>

----- Original Message -----
From: Bahá'í World Centre <secretariat@bwc.org>
To: <EarthrisePress@hotmail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 30, 2000 11:09 AM
Subject: RE: Bahai>>> Continuing Harassment
Dear Friend,
This is an automated acknowledgement.
Your message has been received at the Bahá'í World Centre.
Electronic Communications Operation,
Bahá'í World Centre

When I asked him to desist, he spammed my account with a dozen copies of this message:
>I will post you and I will stand behind everything I wrote.....
One of his earlier messages was:
> You have truly mastered the high-tech form of rhetorical masturbation.
>You continue to post the things which seem to excite you the most to people >who don't really care what you are posting. It is a shame that you feel >that this has become such a deep seated motivation for so much of your time.I have heard all the drivel you are posting, before, and it has always come >from individuals who have had their hand slapped for one reason or another.

>Get over it. The Baha'i Faith is divine and nothing you can say(mostly >imagination) can ever effect it in the least. You will never have the >opportunity to understand the significance of the UHJ or its members in >your lifetime. Jealousy takes all forms. Why not stick to an area of your >expertise and get out of this one? No one here cares anymore about you or >your fantasies.

"Mark Elderkin" <elderkin@nor.com.au> wrote in message
news:JuXu4.20\$1j4.2147@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net...

>
> > It was a common stratagem of the Soviets and > > their academic puppets in the West to smear > > the characters and reputations of people who > > had the courage and honesty to confront the reality > > of the use of terror and tyranny by Stalin and his > > ilk.
> >
> > Comparably speaking, it will require a great effort on > > the part of those interested in the truth about the > > current Bahai uhj if they are not to be misled by my > > fellow Bahais and their deceptions on talk.religion.bahai > > and elsewhere.
>
> It is nice to see that Fred can actually write a real posting here. Now if we can get Fred to quit cross-posting to people who don't want to here or see of him. I have an idea. I think Fred needs to quit hiding behind his > usual spam postings of Patrick Henry. So here goes..... 'give me > liberty or,
> give Fred a call:
> xxXXXX
> and as you can see, I have cross-posted this to all of Fred Preselected > news-servers. Let your fingers do the walking.
> Mark

"Mark Elderkin" <elderkin@nor.com.au> wrote in message
news:hH1v4.125\$1j4.6711@nsw.nnrp.telstra.net...

> Pat and all others concerned,
> I probably misstepped the guidelines by posting Freddys Facts > but I think it will give Fred a chance to realize that he is not-so > anonymous anymore and might wish to quit cross-posting. I understand that > there are a lot of crazys out there that might not like the things he > regularly posts and now he can't hide behind his mothers dress. I have > posted my own phone number before and will always make myself available
for > anyones input. Thanks.
> Always Remember... Let your fingers do the walking.
> Mark

Path:

sn-us!sn-xit-04!supernews.com!europa.netcrusader.net!128.230.129.106!news.ma xwell.syr.edu!intgwpad.nntp.telstra.net!nsw.nnrp.telstra.net!news.acay.com.a u!pmq.intercoast.com.au

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

References: <t9cl8qsfkf4j83@corp.supernews.com>

Subject: Re: REPOST - Petition for a Bahai Reformation

Lines: 12

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 5.50.4133.2400

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V5.50.4133.2400

Message-ID: <3a96e1c0.0@news.acay.com.au>

Date: Sat, 24 Feb 2001 09:23:44 +1100

NNTP-Posting-Host: 203.27.214.6

X-Complaints-To: abuse@telstra.net

X-Trace: nsw.nnrp.telstra.net 982972465 203.27.214.6 (Sat, 24 Feb 2001 10:54:25 EST)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Sat, 24 Feb 2001 10:54:25 EST

Organization: Customer of Telstra Big Pond Direct

Xref: sn-us alt.religion.bahai:23378 talk.religion.bahai:21826

----- Original Message -----

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Sent: Friday, February 23, 2001 5:23 PM
Subject: Re: REPOST - Petition for a Bahai Reformation

> Fred,
> I think it is about time you stop cross-posting to the others. They > assume you are a Baha'i and get pissed off at us. It's about time I get > out your address and phone number and I'll cross-post it here and > I'll make sure to include every interesting NG I can find. I was > presented with a list of para-military groups that have NGs and I'll > include those. I've done it before so don't feel I wouldn't again. You > need to realise that you are causing harm and we're tired of it.
> MEE
> "
>
>

From secretariat@bwc.org Sat Feb 24 04:02:34 2001
Received: from [192.115.146.1] by hotmail.com (3.2) with ESMTTP id
MHotMailBC60EDB9005D40043195C07392010EA73; Sat Feb 24 04:02:34 2001
Received: by bwcpo.bwc.org with Internet Mail Service (5.5.2650.21)
id <1W8X3S09>; Sat, 24 Feb 2001 13:49:08 +0200 Message-ID: <234FCCF3FAEFD21192270090271F45D80386EC2E@bwcpo003.bwc.org>
From: =?iso-8859-1?Q?Bah=E1=27=ED_World_Centre?= <secretariat@bwc.org>
To: "f_glaysher@hotmail.com" <f_glaysher@hotmail.com> Subject: RE: Bahais begin Offensive of Lies, Hate, Misrepresentations, Att acks
Date: Sat, 24 Feb 2001 13:49:06 +0200
MIME-Version: 1.0
X-Mailer: Internet Mail Service (5.5.2650.21) Content-Type: text/plain;
charset="iso-8859-1"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable
----- Original Message -----
From: "Bahá'í World Centre" <secretariat@bwc.org>
To: <f_glaysher@hotmail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 24, 2001 6:49 AM Subject: RE: Bahais begin Offensive of Lies, Hate, Misrepresentations, Attacks

Dear Friend,

This is an automated acknowledgement.

Your message has been received at the Bahá'í World Centre.

Electronic Communication Operations,
Bahá'í World Centre

Path: uni-berlin.de!fu-berlin.de!newsfeed.direct.ca!look.ca!newshub2.rdc1.sfbba.home.com!news.home.com!sjc1.nntp.concentric.net!newsfee
From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
References: <t9kf39t1emgd28@corp.supernews.com>
Subject: Re: - bahai - Renewed Harassment
Lines: 26
X-Priority: 3
X-MSMail-Priority: Normal
X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 5.50.4133.2400
X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V5.50.4133.2400
Message-ID: <3a9ad12d.0@news.acay.com.au>
Date: Tue, 27 Feb 2001 09:02:26 +1100
NNTP-Posting-Host: 203.27.214.6
X-Complaints-To: abuse@telstra.net
X-Trace: nsw.nnrp.telstra.net 983224912 203.27.214.6 (Tue, 27 Feb 2001 09:01:52 EST)
NNTP-Posting-Date: Tue, 27 Feb 2001 09:01:52 EST
Organization: Customer of Telstra Big Pond Direct
Xref: uni-berlin.de alt.religion.bahai:4515 talk.religion.bahai:21702
From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>
Subject: Re: - bahai - Renewed Harassment
Date: Monday, February 26, 2001 5:02 PM

Let's see..... by harassment you mean I put your real phone number and address on ARB/TRB about a year ago. Yes I did that. NO regrets what-so-ever. I can only hope you heard from some of the people you continually spammed and cross-posted to. Grow up Glaysheer..... Your wimpy ranting here every other day have almost no merit. When I posted last year, a few told me that I had broken this and that rule and that it would put me in court and I would lose my ISP and on and on. Nothing at all occurred. ISP couldn't have cared..... No anything. And as far as inspiration I use the posts from other NGs who post here complaining about your antics. And if you think I care about my phone or address being posted here.....

Mark Elderkin 43 Moruya Drive, Port Macquarie, NSW call international: 061265842150

I guess it all boils down to the issue of the morality of your actions..... I don't mind taking responsibility for mine.

MEE

Nima,

I would appreciate your forwarding his phone number and address to me at f_glaysheer@hotmail.com
FG

Path: uni-berlin.de!fu-berlin.de!news.maxwell.syr.edu!intgwpad.nntp.telstra.net!nsw.nnrp.telstra.net!news.acay.com.au

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

References: <t9kf39t1emgd28@corp.supernews.com> <3a9ad12d.0@news.acay.com.au> <905580C9Ddrwalkerfsandp <905588063drwalkerfsandpcom@202.76.4.10> <97g0do$seq$1@gnamma.connect.com.au> <3a9ba495@news-uk.one

Subject: Re: - bahai - Renewed Harassment

Lines: 13

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 5.50.4133.2400

X-Mimeole: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V5.50.4133.2400

Message-ID: <3a9c5864.0@news.acay.com.au>

Date: Wed, 28 Feb 2001 12:51:41 +1100

NNTP-Posting-Host: 203.27.214.6

X-Complaints-To: abuse@telstra.net

X-Trace: nsw.nnrp.telstra.net 983325064 203.27.214.6 (Wed, 28 Feb 2001 12:51:04 EST)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Wed, 28 Feb 2001 12:51:04 EST

Organization: Customer of Telstra Big Pond Direct

Xref: uni-berlin.de alt.religion.bahai:4526 talk.religion.bahai:21739

To all concerned..... AS I see there has been more trash exposed, might I just set the record straight. I am not a Yank living in Australia but have been an Australian living in Australia since January 1992. Passport available on request. Now it might be asked as to why this is important to anyone other than myself and family but it does seem that it must be an issue for someone. If it was said to make a point then I'm afraid that the point is mute when it can be totally dismissed. I'm happy to live in and to be a 'fair-dinkum die' Australian.

Cheers.....MEE

> >Mark is yank living in OZ, not an Aussie.

Path: uni-berlin.de!fuberlin.de!newsfeed.direct.ca!look.ca!newshub2.rdc1.sfba.home.com!news.home.com!sjc1.nntp.concentric.net!newsfee

From: "Mark Elderkin" <elley@intercoast.com.au>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,soc.culture.iranian,soc.culture.israel,talk.religion.bahai,talk.religion.misc

References: <t9se9tkua39287@corp.supernews.com>

Subject: Re: { bahai } Why I Crosspost to Three Newsgroups

Lines: 51

X-Priority: 3

X-MSMail-Priority: Normal

X-Newsreader: Microsoft Outlook Express 5.50.4133.2400

X-MimeOLE: Produced By Microsoft MimeOLE V5.50.4133.2400

Message-ID: <3a9ec8df.0@news.acay.com.au>

Date: Fri, 2 Mar 2001 09:16:08 +1100

NNTP-Posting-Host: 203.27.214.6

X-Complaints-To: abuse@telstra.net

X-Trace: nsw.nnrp.telstra.net 983484931 203.27.214.6 (Fri, 02 Mar 2001 09:15:31 EST)

NNTP-Posting-Date: Fri, 02 Mar 2001 09:15:31 EST

Organization: Customer of Telstra Big Pond Direct

Xref: uni-berlin.de alt.religion.bahai:4540 soc.culture.iranian:330979 soc.culture.israel:380858 talk.religion.bahai:2176

My dear Fred..... apparently you didn't take me

seriously.....

"FG" <f_glaysher@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:t9se9tkua39287@corp.supernews.com...

> My crossposts to soc.culture.israel, soc.culture.iranian, > and talk.religion.misc are entirely within the acceptable > parameters for crossposting to newsgroups related to > the subject at hand:

>

> The bahai faith began in Iran in 1844, the major bahai > religious sites and institutions are *located *in Israel, > all religions may join discussion on talk.religion.misc, > and the unsuspecting public ought to be informed and > have the opportunity to judge and decide the facts for itself.

>

> It should be evident to any intelligent person that bahai > fundamentalists have a hidden agenda and their self-interest > in mind when they malign me and many, many other people on > talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai, AOL, and elsewhere.

>

> Since fundamentalists among my fellow bahais have always relied > on their ability to operate one way in one country and another > elsewhere and the Internet now no longer makes that possible, as > dramatically demonstrated with the former USSR and China, > the universal house of "justice," like other totalitarian regimes, > will have to confront and answer for the consequences of their own > hypocrisy. Their slandering me for "spamming" also won't prevent > perceptive people from realizing what's really going on....

>

> Those interested in judging independently for themselves my > background and whether I'm "unbalanced," as bahai fundamentalist > struggle to portray me, may do so by reading my Biographical Note:
> <https://fglaysher.com/bio.htm>

>

> I believe it is my duty, bahai and otherwise, to inform my fellow > citizens, local and global, of the appalling and incessant hypocrisy > that lies behind the deceptive, progressive facade that the uhj so > often fobs off on the unsuspecting public....

>

> --
> FG

> www.FG.com

> The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
> <https://members.nbc.com/FG/index.htm>

>

>

>

>

>

Questions? CONTACT ME HERE > https://en.allexperts.com/q/Bah-2728/indexExp_113873.htm

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Comments posted to The Chicago Tribune Forum

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

The Chicago Tribune.

Baha'i rift: Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith May 18, 2009

<https://archives.chicagotribune.com/2009/may/18/local/chi-bahai-18-may18> (original link)

Full text original also available through:

WORLDWIDE RELIGIOUS NEWS

<https://wwrn.org/articles/30946/?amp;place=north-america§ion=bahai>

TimesDispatch

Richmond Times-Dispatch

Rift in Baha'i faith becomes grounds for lawsuit

https://www2.timesdispatch.com/rtd/lifestyles/health_med_fit/article/I-BAHA0526_20090604-232004/271998/

November 23, 2010 >>> Opinion Handed Down by US 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, Case No. 08-2306

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/US_7th_Circuit_Court_of_Appeals_11-23-2010.html

Sometime in early June 2011, the discussion thread on Topix.net, based on a Chicago Tribune article, was deleted with over 4,600 messages on the Baha'i lawsuit against several Bahai denominations. Many participants suspect the Haifan Baha'is are involved in its demise. Notice the large number of other older Baha'i threads on Topix that are still included. Haifans have done this kind of thing for many decades, on and off line, rewriting history... so the court case that has been won is a very historic victory.

I saved and repost below all of my messages that I think of as important to preserve knowledge of the issue and the discussion on Topix, because I've seen the Haifans do this consistently over the years, having knocked repeatedly my own website off the Net, early on, way back into the late 1990s, as with other forums, rewriting history. Obviously, the loss of over 4,600 messages from various points of view, and with participants from several Bahai denominations, is quite a revision, to say the least. The Haifans have been desperate throughout the proceedings to keep all information off the Internet about the lawsuit. Initially, there were numerous appearances of the Chicago Tribune article all over the newspaper Internet sites, but most of them have also been deleted, as was one comment critical of the Wilmette Baha'is. I preserved the links to the pages on Topix below.

PDF copies of pages on Topix documenting nearly 4,600 (4,626+) posts to the forum, from Google's cache copies as of July 9, 2011:

Baha'i rift_Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith - Topix1

Baha'i rift_Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith - Topix6

Baha'i rift_Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith - Topix215 (documents 4,626+)

Baha'i rift Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith - Topix229
Baha'i rift Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith - Topix230

See also Thread Orthodox believers can call themselves...

The above discussion forum seems to have been replaced with <https://www.topix.com/forum/religion/bahai-world-faith>

I invite the reader to reflect on the nature of the Haifan Baha'i denomination. After the US Federal Courts ruled against it THREE TIMES, Wilmette Baha'is appear to have taken over or destroyed the Topix Forum that Bahais of several other denominations had used for over three years to discuss the lawsuit against them. This type of fanatical tactic is exactly what Haifan Baha'is have done for many decades, as extensively documented on this website and elsewhere on the Internet. That the Wilmette Baha'is would demonstrate such unmitigated contempt for the ruling of the Federal Court system, probably through Baha'is working in one way or another under the "Continental Board of Counsellors" for "protection and propagation," should give thoughtful people reason for serious concern. For similar incidents:

AOL - bahai Censorship
Soc.Religion.Bahai
Beliefnet.com
Soulpancake
Huffington Post... etc., etc., etc....

Another reprint of the Chicago Tribune article:
BAHA'I RIFT BAHA'IS UPSET WITH ORTHODOX BAHA

Topix - Baha'i Rift - Chicago Tribune - Forum (click link for original)

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post19>

I applaud the Chicago Tribune for allowing their readers to read and decide for themselves what they think about the lawsuit by the Baha'is of Wilmette against other US citizens, which is essentially seeking to deprive other Baha'is of their Constitutional right to religious freedom and conscience.

It should be noted that Judge Amy St Eve, considered an outstanding legal mind by her peers, ruled against the Baha'is of Wilmette in the lower court. In the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Diane S. Sykes stated to the lawyer for the Wilmette Baha'is that their attempt to deprive other Bahai denominations of essentially their religious freedom and liberty, quote, "Clearly raises some Constitutional concerns." Similarly, Judge William J. Bauer shared a similar concern when he repeatedly asked the lawyer for the Wilmette Baha'is what would be the outcome for members of the Reform Bahai Faith.

It is fortunate for Bahais of all persuasions, and our country, that we have judges capable of penetrating the obfuscation and going right to the heart of the matter. Anyone interested in hearing Judge Sykes and Judge Bauer's own recorded words in the Court room may listen to a 3-minute mp3 clip at the following link. <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USCourtAppeals09.htm>. (There's a 30-minute clip also)

Despite the claims of many here, numbers of adherents are not important. The truth is important. Only the individual can decide that for him or herself. Members of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith and other Bahai denominations have followed their consciences and are entitled to their beliefs, before God, and before the legal bar of justice, and woe unto our country should that ever change.

While the Reform Bahai Faith was not a party to the lawsuit, it was slandered or mentioned in court in both lawsuits. Reform Bahais believe the purported will and testament of 1921 is a fraudulent document, despite both Wilmette and Orthodox Baha'is thinking otherwise, and find it sad that the Wilmette Baha'is especially have chosen to sue other denominations, which they also did as early as the 1940s against early Reform Bahais Julie Chanler and Ahmad Sohrab.

To our minds, the oppressive and dictatorial actions they have taken against their own followers for decades, such as requiring or pressuring wives to divorce their husbands (medieval and appalling as it may sound), demonstrates emphatically that they have strayed very far from the Example of universality set by Abdul-Baha when he was in Chicago in 1912.

This lawsuit is merely the latest for those interested enough to examine the truth independently for themselves, via the websites here linked to.

Reform Bahai Faith

<https://www.reformbahai.org>

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahacensorship>

2nd post:

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post23>

[QUOTE who="Janice"]According to Abdul-Baha "religion must be the cause of unity, harmony and agreement among mankind. If it be the cause of discord and hostility, if it leads to sparation and conflict, the absence of religion would be preferable in the world."
[/QUOTE]

Which is precisely why the fraudulent will and testament of 1921, purported to be Abdul-Baha's, has produced so much suffering and misery as that of husbands and wives required to shun one another over religious "truth" and similar appalling abominations within the Wilmette Baha'i denomination, the vast majority of whom have been deceived into believing it's a legitimate document.

Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell, chief document expert at the British Museum, judged it a fraud in 1930, yet it's essentially the fraudulent document which is a the core of why the Wilmette Baha'is are suing and seeking to destroy other Bahai denominations:

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.html

Reform Bahai Faith

<https://www.reformbahai.org>

3rd post:

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post26>

[QUOTE who="Marcello"]I was once very attracted to the "mainstream" Baha'i Faith, and even attended the local Baha'i center fairly regularly. But the more I learned about the authoritarian structure of the faith, the more disillusioned I became. This lawsuit only confirms to me that something has gone very wrong with the hierarchy of the Baha'i faith. The inspiring message of Baha'u'llah is now subservient to the political dogmatism of a misguided bureaucracy. What a shame. [/QUOTE]

Unfortunately, I believe you're right about the "political dogmatism of a misguided bureaucracy." The good news is that Abdul-Baha's supposed will and testament of 1921 is a fraudulent document, independently judged as such with the scientific methods of forensic science in 1930. Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's original Report is deposited with the Library of Congress and available at this link:

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.html

Ruth White and Ahamad Sohrab, early reform Bahais during the 1930s and '40s, wrote several books that fully discuss what went wrong, subverting the universality of Baha'u'llah's Teachings into a corrupt money and power seeking organization. Their works are also available on the Reform Bahai Faith website.

The sad thing is that most Baha'is have been brainwashed and deceived into believing Shoghi Effendi was appointed by Abdul-Baha as a "guardian" and thereby taught not to think and investigate for themselves. As Professor Juan Cole once said, "It's a perfect racket."

We must not despair, though. God has preserved the knowledge, down through the decades, about what Abdul-Baha actually taught, as the Center of the Covenant. His vision is a free and open Bahai Cause, which is still alive, and growing.

Bahai regards,

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

4th:

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post38>

The response by members of the Wilmette Bahai denomination here to this article by The Chicago Tribune ought to give any thoughtful person reason for pause and reflection. Below are a few excerpts for historical context.

Many of the comments demonstrate the truth of what Professor Juan Cole of the University of Michigan observed way back in 1998 in his book Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth-Century Middle East, Columbia University Press, writing that the Baha'i administration has increasingly come under the control of fundamentalists, "stressing scriptural literalism ... theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values" (196).

Similarly he wrote online in 1998, "The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB [Covenant Breaker (heretic)] to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket."

Professor Juan Cole, in February 23, 1999:

"There is nothing to be puzzled by. Right wing Baha'is only like to hear the sound of their own voices (which are the only voices they will admit to being "Baha'i" at all). Obviously, the world is so constructed that they cannot in fact only hear their own voices. They are forced to hear other voices that differ from theirs. This most disturbs them when the voices come from enrolled Baha'is or when the voices speak of the Baha'i faith. The way they sometimes deal with the enrolled Baha'is is to summon them to a heresy inquiry and threaten them with being shunned if they do not fall silent. With non-Baha'is or with ex-Baha'is, they deal with their speech about the faith by backbiting, slandering and libelling the speaker. You will note that since I've been on this list I have been accused of long-term heresy, of "claiming authority," of out and out lying (though that was retracted, twice), of misrepresentation, of 'playing fast and loose with the facts,' and even of being 'delusional.' I have been accused of all these falsehoods by Baha'is, by prominent Baha'is. I have been backbitten by them. This shows that all the talk about the danger a sharp tongue can do, all the talk about the need for harmony, for returning poison with honey, for a sin-covering eye, is just talk among right wing Baha'is. No one fights dirtier than they when they discover a voice they cannot silence and cannot refute.

Further insightful comment from Juan Cole and others at
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

I suggest recalling the words of Judge Diane S. Sykes, to the lawyer for the Wilmette Baha'is in their attempt to deprive other Bahai denominations of essentially their religious freedom and liberty, quote, "Clearly raises some Constitutional concerns." Again, the 3-minute Mp3 file of her actually making this statement in the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals may be found at <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USCo...>

It's long past time that the people of Chicago and the United States should know the Wilmette Baha'is for the fanatical and oppressive organization it actually is. The Chicago Tribune is to be applauded for allowing its readers to decide for themselves.

The Reform Bahai Faith
<https://www.ReformBahai.org>

5th
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post108>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
Reply »|Report Abuse|#108Monday May 25

Long suppressed by Bahais of other denominations, Reform Bahais have returned to, and renewed,
Abdul-Baha's authentic 1912 Covenant.

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Of the several Bahai denominations, the Reform Bahai Faith is the only denomination that follows Abdul-Baha's authentic Covenant, and not what many have believed is the fraudulent will and testament of 1921.

FG
Reform Bahai Faith
<https://www.reformbahai.org>

6th
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post109>

Wilmette Bahai Shunning
Rochester, MI
Reply »|Report Abuse|#109Monday May 25

The reporter Manya A. Brachear mentions an appalling fact, entirely glossed over by every Wilmette Baha'i poster to this thread: "Goldberg's wife was encouraged to divorce her husband."

What Ms. Brachear doesn't report is that Wilmette Baha'is who refuse to "shun" their spouse are themselves in turn shunned from the denomination.

It's difficult to think of a more spiritually sick practice than this one that the fraudulent will and testament has produced, carefully hidden from new Baha'is and the general American public.

For the stories and comments of about dozen people who have experienced or witnessed the effects of Baha'i shunning, see Shunning > Menu https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm

FG
The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

7th
Reform Bahai Faith

Join the community
Rochester, MI

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post152>

Janet wrote:

Shame on all of us ... Here we are arguing and suing each other over who's in charge... Once again I urge all those who might come across this note to pray for their hearts to be open and for detachment and to offer that same prayer for all living beings. God will guide us....

Friends,

I urge you to consider that all this contention is further rotten fruit of the fraudulent will and testament of 1921, driven by a hunger for power and control, proven a forgery by modern forensic science in 1930.

Reform Bahais have returned to, and renewed, Abdul-Baha's authentic 1912 Covenant, an open, sane, simple, moderate document, preserving the dignity and freedom of the individual in community, advancing no scheme of theocracy and triumphalism, but God's loving Covenant for His creation, in this Day and Time, as Interpreted by the Center of the Covenant.

<https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html>

To speak with or invite a Reform Bahai speaker to your community, see our website.

To attend a Reform Bahai Fireside, see https://www.reformbahai.org/fireside_meetings.html#fireside

Reform Bahai Faith

<https://www.reformbahai.org>

8th

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post168>

Religious Liberty

#169

All of the many points of view here dramatically demonstrate for the people of Chicago that, despite the shameless lie of the Wilmette Baha'is before Judge Amy St. Eve in its nsa-memo.pdf in 2006, claiming, while distorting the earlier 1966 court's decision, "No question of religious liberty is involved." In fact, the lawsuit is ESSENTIALLY about religious liberty. See near top of page 2:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/archives/nsa-memo.pdf>

Judge Amy St. Eve wisely perceived it as such, despite all the obfuscation. God willing, the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals will do so likewise, and thereby set aright for American citizens what a forged will and testament has created.

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles - Abdul-Baha's Covenant

The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

9th

#180

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post180>

amishindian wrote:

"Fred, having been an unenrolled believer in Bahauallah for the last 29 years and never been a member of any other Bahai group other than the Haifa one, I am not planning on joining any group including the Reform Bahais. Still I appreciate what you are doing. My days of contention on Bahai issues are over."

Dear AmishIndian,

Thank you for your appreciative words.

If you don't mind my saying so, there seems to me to be two misconceptions underlying the thinking you express.

First, the very notion of "unenrolled" plays into the hands of the putative organization that "enrolls," as though it were the legitimate one by its very existence. The "unenrolled" remain controlled by, marginalized, and subordinated to the Baha'i denomination they imagine they're leaving or avoiding the taint thereof. In fact, "unenrolled" Bahais are playing into the hands of the organization that dominates and controls believers in Baha'u'llah through its fraudulent will and testament. The logical step for the "unenrolled" is to understand the implications of Abdul-Baha's own Interpretation that the Bahai Cause cannot be "organized." The irony is that they ARE attempting to follow the actual Teaching of Abdul-Baha without fully recognizing its implications, which is what Reform Bahais are doing and seeking the meaning of, the moderate organization he implied and taught.

Second, the notion of "contention" seems to conceive of religion as though it alone of all human endeavours and fields of activity should be free of healthy debate and exchange of opinions. Abdul-Baha stated "The shining spark of truth cometh forth only after the clash of differing opinions." Why should religion be any different? Similar to the common allegations from prevailing culture, the atheist debates, if you will, etc., in modern society, as in the academic world and so forth, ALL fields of human exchange follow the standard of Abdul-Baha--He does not imagine an utopian world free of clash and conflict, nor should we. The issue is the "shining spark of truth," arrived at only through the exchange of views and individual thought, prayer, and struggle. Totalitarianism, censorship, etc., are not the way to achieve unity, but uniformity and suppression, according to the Teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha.

Bahai regards,

FG

The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

talk religion bahai
Rochester, MI
#189
Monday Jun 1

Quinn is quite right about the manner in which many have approached talk.religion.bahai i.e., the same way the Haifans approach Constitutional rights as demonstrated in our courts of law....

For a distillation of Haifan tactics over the years on talk.religion.bahai, see talk.religion.bahai on Usenet
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Usenet.htm>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
#284 Monday Jun 8
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post284>

Jeffrey wrote:

"What I would like to see from the commentators here is TOLERANCE for each other. You believe your version of the Baha'is is truth, so go ahead and practice it. If you truly have faith that you are the true Baha'is, then you already know that your version of the Faith will prevail and the others will not. So what need is there to try to shun, sue, and make personal attacks?"

I think Jeffery is asking a very important question here, one members of all Bahai denominations might benefit from reflecting on.

One small, respectful caveat. I don't know that the Reform Bahai Faith "will prevail and the others will not." I believe that the Reform Bahai Faith is the closest Bahai denomination to Abdul-Baha's Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings, an Interpretation that brought the Bahai Cause into the modern, democratic, pluralistic world.

There is no reason, given the agreement on most of Abdul-Baha's Interpretation, that the various interpretations of the Bahai Faith that now exist cannot continue to exist and live peaceably, tolerantly, and respectfully together. The three major denominations form naturally around one's understanding and belief of what happened at Abdul-Baha's passing and subsequent developments, namely, those Baha'is who follow Shoghi Effendi as the one and only Guardian; those who believe he had a successor; those who return to Abdul-Baha's Interpretation.

Following and emulating the example of the religions of the past should be deplored by all Bahais.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
#293 Monday Jun 8
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post293>

Peace144 wrote: <Fredrick, your statement is a little nebulous, please explain."

Ruth White's books and British Museum document expert Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's 1930 Report on the fraudulent will and testament that was passed off on the Bahai community as Abdul-Baha's address the major issues involved. Those interested might investigate independently to the degree they wish on the Reform Bahai website, under Early Reform Bahais.

Bahai regards,

FG
Reform Bahai Faith
<https://www.reformbahai.org>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
#318
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post318>

Reform Bahai Faith wrote:

"There is no reason, given the agreement on most of Abdul-Baha's Interpretation, that the various interpretations of the Bahai Faith that now exist cannot continue to exist and live peaceably, tolerantly, and respectfully together."

Jeffery wrote:

Frederick, I agree with this and thought I was actually making that point. My statement about believing that your version of the Faith would ultimately prevail was trying to communicate the notion that if you truly have faith in what you believe, then you would not be threatened by the fact that others believe differently and you would not have any need to attack the others. The reason why I think the Wilmette NSA is attacking us is because deep down they really don't believe in their version of the Faith and they are trying to keep their own members from learning the truth.....

Jeffery,

I don't mean to quibble unnecessarily over words. You had used "know"; I was emphasizing "believe," a term allowing more humility. Anyway, you may be right. There's a very deep insecurity and fear and lust for power undergirding the fanaticism of the Haifans, their use of lies, distortion, and intimidation, among other reprehensible tactics. Their interpretation of the Bahai Cause cannot but evoke comparisons with the worst of modern Utopians.

The sad thing is, from my point of view, they've damaged, confused, and ruined so many innocent lives, as the 300 plus messages here demonstrate, those really guilty of the exploitation sitting smugly out of sight.

Fortunately, one's freedom of conscience is God-given and not dependent on them, nor on any US court of law.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

Reform Bahai Faith

Join the community

Rochester, MI

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post378>

The good news is that Abdul-Baha's supposed will and testament of 1921 is a fraudulent document, independently judged as such with the scientific methods of forensic science in 1930. Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's original Report is deposited with the Library of Congress and available at this link:

https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report.html

Ruth White and Ahamad Sohrab, early reform Bahais during the 1930s and '40s, wrote several books that fully discuss what went wrong, subverting the universality of Baha'u'llah's Teachings into a corrupt money and power-grubbing organization. Their works are also available on the Reform Bahai Faith website.

The sad thing is that most Baha'is have been deceived and brainwashed into believing Shoghi Effendi was appointed by Abdul-Baha as a "guardian" and thereby taught not to think and investigate for themselves. Hence, the spectacle here of all this overwrought reaction to Manya A. Brachear's excellent article, "Baha'i rift: Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith." (Remember that, that's what we're supposed to be talking about!) The comments here by Wilmette Baha'is clearly vindicate her editorial blurb and demonstrates why the real issue of the lawsuit is religious liberty: "Mainstream group doesn't want the name Baha'i by any other group."

Again, for those in doubt, consider that after 374 messages I may be the only voice that has acknowledged even the truth of her reporting that wives and husbands are REQUIRED to shun one another even unto DIVORCE! "Goldberg's wife was encouraged to divorce her husband."

Incidentally, looking at her article again afresh, let me correct one other thing. Wilmette Baha'is do shun people they consider heretics even in business relations. They just claim they don't because it's against the secular law of the land. Jeffrey, they have been knocking down your office door for legal representation, have they?

Fortunately, the fake will and testament is just that. Abdul-Baha actually taught none of this nonsense. His 1912 Covenant, immediately suppressed after his death, is as clear and simple as he intended. His vision is a free and open Bahai Cause, which is still alive, and growing.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
#409

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post409>

[QUOTE who="Wahid Azal"]Sen, Mirza Badi'ullah outright names the fabricator of the will and testament of Abbas Effendi and the circumstances whereby that will was made-up, i.e. Shoghi Effendi's own mother and Abbas Effendi's daughter.

What do you know? For all your [McGlinn's] pretensions to scholarship you haven't even mastered the languages yet...

[/QUOTE]

While I don't have the time at the moment to respond fully to Sen McGlinn's mistaken attempt to discredit Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's Report, I will point out briefly the key fact:

What's purported to be Abdul-Baha's will and testament has never been probated or authenticated independently of those who were and are its beneficiaries.

All of McGlinn's arguments are variations of the same old calumnies that the Haifans have always used to smear Dr. Mitchell and Ruth White, following Shoghi Effendi's despicable example. They are not any more convincing coming from a supposedly excommunicated Haifan trying to redeem himself with his masters than when Mirza Sohrab essentially did the same thing, though with more subtlety.

McGlinn concedes in his attack on Mitchell that "I am not a forensic handwriting expert" and knowing a language is irrelevant to forensic experts. His assumptions about what Mitchell did are merely that.

McGlinn's other tactics are unseemly and entirely in keeping with those widely used by members of the Haifan denomination based on the fraudulent will and testament.

Bahai regards,

FG

The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, MI
#484 Tuesday Jun 16

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post484>

Larry Rowe wrote:

"Howdy Peace, Yes what Shoghi stated is clear and needs no interpretation. Note that he also clearly states: "hereditary" as well. Thing is that Remey was no more hereditary when it came to Shoghi than I am. Of course Orthodox Baha'is conveniently gloss over this fact with arguments that have no logical weight whatsoever.

As well, this divisiveness to do with lineage that occurred in the Baha'i faith after Shoghi's passing was nothing new. In fact, for the Baha'i faith, it was business as usual. The Bab appointed Baha'u'llah's brother Azal to be the inheritor of his covenant after his death. Baha'u'llah not liking this decided to go it on his own and create a new religion even though it had only been 19 years since the Babi/Bayani faith had been created, hardly 1000 years!!!!

Then Baha'is begin killing Babis, according to some witness's at the behest of Baha'u'llah himself. In a court of law I doubt that Baha'u'llah would have been able to plead ignorance of his followers plans to murder several Bayanis; in fact this is not even disputed by Baha'is, as well as the fact that he did nothing to circumvent those murderous plans which made him complicit in those plans.

.... Another gaping hole in the covenant of Baha'i.

Then Shoghi dies without leaving a W&T and the Hands take control over the affairs of the Baha'i Faith even though they clearly had no authority whatsoever to do so, which Ruhiyah Khanum openly admitted:

How to assume the reins of authority, with no document to support us, other than the general theological statements about the Hands?

(Custodians, Ministry of the Custodians, p. 9)

And so it goes. A minor religious cult with no more legitimate claim to spirituality than any other minor religious cult breaks apart because of the thirst for worldly power and authority. Reminds me very much of the intrigues within the Radha Satsang Beas to do with their lineage: vain gurus who seek to have authority over the spiritual lives of their followers are the same world over.

Cheers

Larry Rowe

Hi Larry,

Thanks for sharing your views on all of this here. Let me say that, in my opinion, you're leaving out one very important Covenant, Abdul-Baha's authentic 1912 Covenant, the one he openly taught and promulgated to Bahais when he was in the United States:

"After Abdul-Baha—whenever the Universal House of Justice is organized it will ward off differences."

<https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html>

So important was it to him and to early Bahais, it was repeatedly published in 1912 and thereafter many times prior to his passing in 1921. Yet it was already being suppressed in the last months of his life. With its broad, simple emphasis on God's eternal Covenant with humanity, it contains nothing redolent of the hatred and shunning of the forged document that was to bring in all the woe alluded to by Baha'u'llah in the Tablet of the Holy Mariner. Note also that it emphasizes that after his passing it would be the organization of a properly elected Universal House of Justice that would guide and unify the Bahais. That institution has yet to properly elected and organized, but, in time, God willing, the Ark of His Covenant shall prevail.

Hope you don't mind my sharing my views with you.

FG

Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, MI

#486

Tuesday Jun 16

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post486>

Jeffrey wrote:

"What are we going to do about this?: "The fundamental purpose animating the Faith of God and His Religion is to safeguard the interests and promote the unity of the human race, and to foster the spirit of love and fellowship amongst men. Suffer it not to become a source of dissension and discord, of hate and enmity." Baha'u'llah

It seems to me that Jeffrey makes a very important point. Instead of throwing stones, he is asking a sincere question, one that we all should reflect and consult on. Let us all think of Abdul-Baha as gazing upon us from the Abha Kingdom and strive to follow his Example of universal brotherhood and love. With the Master before us, as it were, Bahais of all denominations, ought to make an effort to listen and understand one another and find ways to co-exist and respect one another, as fellow Bahais, instead of repeating all the terrible deeds of past religions.

All that does not mean that each denomination cannot candidly state its views and beliefs, what distinguishes and defines each. It's a matter of HOW it's done, the Spirit that counts. None of us are without blame, myself included. Instead of repeating the mistakes of exclusivism, I second Jeffery's reminder that Abdul-Baha called us to a path beyond "dissension and discord, of hate and enmity."

What are we going to do about that?

FG

Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience

#528

Wednesday Jun 17

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post528>

Larry Rowe wrote:

"As for any claimed Baha'i covenant whether it is Haifan or Orthodox such a covenant was flawed from the beginning....

Neither was Abbas Effendi's covenant expressed in his W&T fulfilled.

The Baha'i covenant is a joke. A mere bludgeon used to threaten and to coerce. Coerce religionists of both Haifan and Orthodox sects into believing in a supposed world order of Baha'u'llah of which they are the true inheritors; which is quite obviously a mutilated non-existent world order. Which is further proven by the dialogue that is occurring between members of these two Baha'i sects here in this thread."

Cheers

Larry Rowe

Larry,

I don't want to sound like a broken record (how's that for leaving oneself open for attack!), but they're all based on a forged will & testament. THAT's the source of all the problems. Over the decades, people have all been brainwashed into believing what they're told, told by those who benefit from the lie.

Here's the document conveniently suppressed after the Master's death:

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Simple, clear, broad, & universal. What's wrong with it? Can't control people with something like that, with anything that respects their individuality and conscience....

Bludgeon is the right word. Often used in the past on talk.religion.bahai & elsewhere, by Juan Cole, myself, others....

FG

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Freedom of Conscience

Rochester, MI

#533

Thursday Jun 18

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post533>

Part I

MJUBC wrote:

"Welcome to reality."

"The court will dismiss the Trademark infringement claim. That's reality."

I agree with your assessment. That's the reality of the issue. The judges demonstrated that they're well aware of what the Wilmette nsa is actually trying to perpetrate against Bahais of other denominations and opinion. The irony is that Baha'u'llah Himself was against the kind of fanaticism that Wilmette Baha'is have tried to conceal from their fellow citizens for decades.

Baha'u'llah removed jihad, in the violent sense of the word, and other assortments of fanaticism from the Book. Here are a few excerpts in which He and Abdu'l-Baha discuss it:

"The deniers and contradictors hold to four words:

First: Destroying men's lives.

Second: Burning the books.

Third : Shunning other nations.

Fourth: Exterminating other nations.

Now, by the Grace and Authority of the Word of God, these four great barriers have been demolished. These four manifest decrees have been effaced from the Book, and God hath changed brutal manners into spiritual qualities.(37-38)

Abdu'l-Baha:

"Thus Baha'u'llah presented the fact of the oneness of the world of humanity, while in all the past religious books humanity has been divided into two parts, one part looked upon as belonging to the faithful, the other part as belonging to the irreligious and infidel; the first part consigned to the Mercy of their Creator, the second part considered as objects of the Creator's Wrath. But His Holiness Baha'u'llah proclaimed the Oneness of the world of humanity, and this Teaching is unique to the Teachings of Baha'u'llah, for He submerged all mankind in the sea of Divine Generosity. At most, some of the people are asleep—they need to be awakened. Some are ill—they need to be healed. Some are children—they need to be trained."(100)

(Both quotations from The Universal Principles of the Reform Bahai Faith. Baha'u'llah & Abdul-Baha. Edited by FG, with a new Introduction and the original 1912 Foreword. Reform Bahai Press, 2008. 148 pages.$19.99. 2nd printing now available. Hardcover: ISBN-13: 9780967042138. Reform Bahai Press. https://www.reformbahai.org/Reform_Bahai_Press.html)

#534 Jun 18

Part II

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post534>

While Baha'u'llah and Abdu'l-Baha "removed from the Book," such unseemly practices, Shoghi Effendi, with the help of the fraudulent "will and testament" essentially put them and other repulsive practices back into the Bahai Cause. Denis McEoin discusses Shoghi Effendi's use of language in this regard in his 2008 Response to thefatwa of Mulla Momen:

"Shoghi Effendi (1897-1957)... devoted many passages to individuals. Here is an abbreviated list of terms applied by him to 'covenant-breakers', dissidents, apostates and opponents:

"Diabolical, ambitious, malevolent, deluded,'shameless apostate', brazen, infamous, insidious,'vile whisperer', Antichrist,'the living embodiment of wickedness, cupidity and deceit', blasphemous, unspeakably repugnant, perfidious, unquenchable animosity, arrogant, treacherous, despicable,'blind, uncontrollable animosity','the most shameless, vicious, relentless apostate', 'the incarnation of Satan','fiendish ingenuity and guile', infernal, nefarious, defectors, betrayers.

"All this in the mid-20th century. This is the intolerant world to which Momen [and other Haifan/Wilmette Baha'is], as a true believer, belongs, and I think it not unreasonable to suppose that his analysis of Baha'i apostates derives ... from this tradition...[i.e., Shoghi Effendi. For more details about this article and my own "Response to Takfir," see <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/apostates.htm>]

"All this," one might add, in the twenty-first century, with a fraudulently established Haifan / Wilmette organization seeking to use the federal courts to prop up their reprehensible practices, prop up their bogus trademarks, all of which were even in the public realm for decades prior to Abdul-Baha's death. Obviously, something else is involved than what they're pretending to in Court. Fortunately, the judges are on to 'em.

FG

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Freedom of Conscience

#544

Friday Jun 19

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post544>

Larry Rowe wrote:...

A person should ask themselves why were the holy family such abject failures at the practice of the oneness of humanity? Were Shoghi's family members, including his own parents, all:

"Diabolical, ambitious, malevolent, deluded, 'shameless apostate', brazen, infamous, insidious, 'vile whisperer', Antichrist, 'the living embodiment of wickedness, cupidity and deceit', blasphemous, unspeakably repugnant, perfidious, unquenchable animosity, arrogant, treacherous, despicable, 'blind, uncontrollable animosity', 'the most shameless, vicious, relentless apostate', 'the incarnation of Satan', 'fiendish ingenuity and guile', infernal, nefarious, defectors, betrayers.... simply because they refused to quit a job, because they went on a trip to America without first getting Shoghi's permission, because they had arranged a marriage Shoghi didn't approve of, because they refused to disassociate from fellow family members who had been unjustly black balled because of Shoghi's power tripping?

Let face it, it was Shoghi's dysfunction which caused him to become alienated from his entire family not visa versa. Dyfunctional because he gave lip service to the teaching of the oneness of humanity but didn't even practice that oneness within his own family.

Here's some of Shoghi's dysfunction ranting to do with his own brother:

In December 1949, Shoghi Effendi sent the following cable to the Bahá'í world.

"Faithless brother Hussein [Husayn], already abased through dishonourable conduct over period of years followed by association with Covenant-breakers in Holy Land and efforts to undermine Guardian's position, recently further demeaned himself through marriage under obscure circumstances with low-born Christian girl in Europe. This disgraceful alliance, following four successive marriages by sisters and cousins with three sons of Covenant-breaker denounced repeatedly by 'Abdu'l-Bahá as His enemy, and daughter of notorious political agitator, brands them with infamy greater than any associated with marriages contracted by old Covenant-breakers whether belonging to family of Muhammad-'Ali or Badi'u'llah." [32-16](Adib Taherzadeh, The Covenant of Baha'u'llah, p. 362)

The actual word's of your hero-guru Shoghi show him for the type of person he truly was, narrow minded as well as bigoted.

Cheers

Larry Rowe

Larry,

Thanks as always for your steadfastness on these issues and sharing your views.

I think you're quite right that it comes down to Shoghi Effendi's own bigotry and dysfunction, personally, intellectually, spiritually, and so on. His dealings with his own family demonstrate so thoroughly what's wrong with the Haifan denomination.

Free speech and conscience is a wonderful thing. It's very difficult for those who are certain they have the exclusive truth of all of human history to understand. Invariably they run to extremes and convict themselves with their own words. They are the greatest protectors of a free and open society, did they but know it, whether the fanatic is someone like Shoghi Effendi, with all his Shiite Iranian detritus, or one of the many online minions.... they open their mouths, and anyone with any sense can see what they really amount to, as in a court of law....

The Chicago Tribune and Manya A Brachear have really done the people of Chicago a service with their excellent article, despite a few minor inaccuracies, and allowing here in this forum discussion to take place so that citizens may judge for themselves.

FG

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Freedom of Conscience

#549

Saturday

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post549>

Please compare the following to Denis McEoin's already-cited article:

Excerpt from Mirza Ahmad Sohrab's Broken Silence: The Story of Today's Struggle for Religious Freedom. New York: Universal Publishing, 1942.

"A Dangerous Doctrine. In considering the problem of fear, let us for a while study the writings of Shoghi Effendi, the Guardian of the Cause, and see how he handles this vital subject.... The three published volumes of Shoghi Effendi are Baha'i Administration, The World Order of Baha'u'llah and The Advent of Divine Justice, which works consist of the letters which he has addressed to the National Spiritual Assembly in the course of the last 20 years. Now, I have read these three books and find that the words enemies and adversaries are greatly featured. Baha'u'llah has said: *Consort with all men with joy and fragrance, yet Shoghi Effendi, in his very first letter, dated January 21, 1922, written after his assumption of the guardianship, recommends *the absolute shunning of whomsoever we feel to be an enemy of the Cause. (*Bahai Administration, page 16.) Now, I cannot bring myself to the point of believing that absolute shunning of whomsoever we feel to be the enemy of the Cause is a principle of Baha'u'llah. Is every one going to let his feelings guide him in the matter? Can we not take for granted that frail human beings as we are, a great deal of personal caprice and spite may enter into our calculations as to who is the enemy of the Bahai Cause? This is a very dangerous doctrine, and yet one finds it in different forms throughout Shoghi Effendi's communications. He practically never mentions the names of the enemies or adversaries to whom he constantly refers. He simply creates ogres and bogey men, and fills the hearts of the Bahais with apprehension and fear. In this way, the fountain-head of free and open comradeship is dried up and the flowers of loving-kindness wither away" (409-410).

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/SohrabEx.htm>

It seems more than one person has noticed these things about the cult figure Haifans have been brainwashed into worshipping.

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Freedom of Conscience

#569

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post569>

Larry Rowe wrote:

Hello Fred,

Yes fear was even more central to Shoghi's Baha'i faith than the oneness of humanity.

Of course the UHJ has continued on sowing the same fear as well:...

Even though none other than Baha'u'llah himself had removed such antiquated religious practices Shoghi and the UHJ in his stead counceled Baha'is to practice those very religious practices that Baha'u'llah had supposedly abolished:....

Until Baha'is leave such antiquated religious practices behind them their religion will remain part and parcel of the problem of religion being: "the most harmful agency on this planet"* as Abdul-Baha' himself put it.

Cheers

Larry Rowe

Hello Larry,

I fully agree that Shoghi Effendi and the uhj have created what I would call a cult based entirely on FEAR, and all its offspring, COERCION, PARANOIA, violation of the individual's God-given conscience, highly analogous to all the oppressive systems and regimes of history, whether secular or religious.

In my view, ever since Abdul-Baha's death, the monster, leviathan really, created by the spurious will and testament, has been bent upon the destruction of all voices and views contrary to its criminal aspirations of social, material, and political dominance of not just any one nation, but of the entire world. That's a lot for any local leader in a government position to realize and believe--but that's the fact--all of which is thoroughly contrary to what, as you say, Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha taught.

With the passing decades, it has become even more difficult for Bahais to penetrate the immense veil of lies and fabrications and recover the truth of the Founders own Teachings. But it is possible. Their Teachings were wide and open, addressed to the public. Ultimately, they cannot be suppressed, not even by the corrupted, criminal uhj and its pathetic minions. Corruption is the very essence of the Haifan denomination, for it is built squarely upon a corrupted document. It can never renew the Bahai Teachings. For it has become, as you cite Abdul-Baha, "the most harmful agency on this planet." They've proven it for all the world to see with their obscene lawsuits against other Bahai denominations.

In my view, only a renew Bahai denomination returning to Abdul-Baha's broad and universal Interpretation for the modern world can do that--the Reform Bahai Faith.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Freedom of Conscience
#898

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post898>

Jeffrey wrote:

"Many of the comments here by the heterodox Baha'is reveal an intellectual dishonesty about the court action that is appalling. They take a few things out of context in order to make their fallacious arguments. The bottom line is that the Court ruled that legally --- under federal secular law of the United States --- the OBF is not the same organization as the Remey organization. That is not a slap in the face or repudiation of anybody but instead is a technical ruling of law. The courts in the United States DO NOT decide religious disputes or any matter of religious belief, and it is time for the Baha'is to get clear on this. If you want to argue the religious truths, you don't do it in federal court."

Jeffrey,

Thank you for clarifying for everyone again what the legal perspective or issues are.

Just glancing at the headlines in the news, regarding many countries, I'm grateful that we Bahais who are citizens of the USA are blessed with its citizenship and tradition of Western law.

I was just reading Abdul-Baha this morning and your comments bring back to mind these passages:

"I am pleased with the English King and Government, and with the people. You may thank God that in this land you are so free. You do not know what lack of freedom there is in the East...."

"The light of liberty is the light of the West, and the intention of government is to work for truth and justice in Western countries."

Thank God that the judges involved in these lawsuits have demonstrated they're interested in liberty, truth, and justice.

Bahai regards,

FG

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles - Abdul-Baha's Covenant
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience

#921

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post921>

There's a fine passage in Abdul-Baha in London, near the end, in which he says,

"The beginnings of all great religions were pure; but priests, taking possession of the minds of the people, filled them with dogmas and superstitions, so that religion became gradually corrupt. I come to teach no new religion. My only desire is, through the blessing of God, to show the road to the Great Light."

One might add mullas and "administrators" and all those who would cram the Spirit into a little box, suing anyone who doesn't repeat their shibboleth....

Another fine passage, full of the freedom and liberty of the Bahai Spirit, the authentic Covenant and Teaching and Interpretation of Abdul-Baha:

"You can be a Bahai-Christian, a Bahai-Freemason, a Bahai-Jew, a Bahai-Muhammadan. The number nine contains eight, and seven, and all the other numbers, and does not deny any of them. Do not distress or deny anyone by saying 'He is not a Bahai!' He will be known by his deeds."

Bahai regards,

FG

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles - Abdul-Baha's Covenant
The Reform Bahai Faith
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience
#963

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post963>
May 18, 2009. The Chicago Tribune. Baha'i rift: Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith.

For my various Comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum, now easily available on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Also, available on Yahoo Group - ReformBahai
<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Bahai regards,

FG
The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience
Rochester, MI
#1089
<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1089>

Jeffrey wrote:
<quoted text> Why cannot your organization tolerate free speech?
Jeffrey,

A very good question. Abdul-Baha was not afraid of free speech: "The shining spark of truth cometh forth only after the clash of differing opinions."

Incidentally, Jeffrey, I certainly don't think you're a fundamentalist and respect your views and conscience, though we regard the will and testament differently. You might recall our various discussions on talk.religion.bahai, which were candid and cordial.

Bahai regards,

FG
The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai
<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Freedom of Conscience
#1090

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1090>

"This is that matter which shall never change. Know that in every age and dispensation all divine ordinances are changed, according to the requirements of the time, except the law of Love which, like unto a fountain, flows always and is never overtaken by change." -Baha'u'llah

From The Universal Principles of the Reform Bahai Faith. 2008. Baha'u'llah & Abdul-Baha. Available from the Reform Bahai Press. https://www.reformbahai.org/Reform_Bahai_Press.html

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

Comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum, now easily available on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai
<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Freedom of Conscience
Rochester, MI
#1334

Jeffrey wrote:

"Today is the 1000th day of pending litigation since the court aggression was initiated by the Wilmette NSA against the defenders of the Covenant and the Guardianship."

In my view, 1000 divided by 12 months = 83 years of aggression, in and out of court, against the authentic Covenant of Abdul-Baha.... The math is almost right, 1921 plus 83 = 2004.... close enough.

Bahai regards,

FG

Freedom of Conscience
Rochester, MI
#1335

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1335>

Jeffrey wrote:

<quoted text>To say that the OBF and BUPC are the same entity as the Remey NSA is to completely ignore the ruling of Judge St Eve, which carefully and correctly rejected that idea.

Jeffrey,

As you know, the Wilmette nsa chose to reject Judge St Eve's ruling when they appealed it, which they'll do again, no matter what judgment against the current court issues. They're trapped in the iron-grip of their own fraud and fanaticism.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience
Rochester, MI
#1336

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1336>

Jeffrey wrote:

<quoted text>The great catastrophe did indeed begin on April 21, 1963 with the election of your UHJ when the Baha'i world was plunged into violation."

Alas, the Bahai world was plunged much earlier into spiritual confusion and catastrophe. I would say, though, that Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha both foresaw it and have provided means of recovery.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience
#1337

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1337>

Jeffrey wrote:

There is no question this is a true statement. The attorneys for the NSA were fixated upon this in their writings and in their personal conversations with me--- they were constantly referring to the Baha'i Faith as if it were a corporate business and not a world-wide religion. They constantly spoke about the great earthly power and influence of their organization but displayed little understanding or caring about the spiritual power of Baha'u'llah's Cause. It is there in the pleadings for anyone to read.

AND

I should also add that not once did the NSA's attorneys refer to the spiritual significance of the Greatest Name and its symbols. For them it was a trademark pure and simple. The pleadings on behalf of the NSA are blasphemy! The OBF on the other hand made it clear to the Court that the symbol of the Greatest Name and the Greatest Name itself had the most sacred significance and it was absurd to refer to them as corporate trademarks as if the Baha'is were selling soap

Jeffrey,

As I've pointed out to you before, the Wilmette organization has always taken that tactic in court, misrepresenting or, ironically, accurately representing itself for what it truly is--a hijacked religious cult corruptly based on the teachings of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha, subverted into a business organization. Their thinking seems to be, How can the courts argue with the truth?

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/source/chicago-tribune/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1338>

Jeffrey,

Incidentally, it might interest you to know that the Orthodox Bahai Faith was mentioned at a recent fireside / meeting the Reform Bahai Faith held in London at Speakers Corner.

https://www.reformbahai.org/Speakers_Corner_Hyde_Park_London_UK.html

People had asked about other Bahai denominations and I had mentioned the Orthodox Bahais as well.

Bahai regards,

FG

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1510>

#1510

Freedom of Conscience wrote:

<quoted text>

Susan Maneck - The Video: Shiite Ideology of Baha'i Fanaticism

Baha'i -.... I urge you to consider watching it, not merely for what it demonstrates about her own thinking, but also that of Iranian and "administrative" Baha'is, and what has gone so terribly wrong with the Haifan interpretation of Baha'u'llah's religion, under the counterfeit will and testament of Abdul-Baha.

I quoted and provided this documentation because it corroborates the observation of Jeffrey regarding the lack of ethics this particular Wilmette Baha'i has demonstrated for years, and, I would say, the entire Wilmette Bahai denomination, as shown by its criminal tactics of using the US courts to deprive other Bahais of their religious freedom and liberty.

Dr. Denis MacEoin makes many enlightening observations along these lines in his review of Making the Crooked Straight, in June 2001, a review relevant here to the Chicago Tribune article, which has largely been evaded by Wilmette Baha'is:

"How humanitarian is it to demand that a man's wife and children should shun him merely because he has changed his beliefs?"

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/MacEoinRev.htm>

There's the real Wilmette Baha'i Faith that is currently using the US Court of Appeals in its fanaticism against other Bahais. It is not inappropriate to consider the very long and well documented history of reprehensible tactics and apologetics of both individuals and "institutions," especially when they threaten the very integrity of the democratic society we live and which both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha lauded and largely approved.

The people of Chicago and the United States have the right to know what the true nature of the Wilmette Baha'i organization is--basically a Shiite Iranian cult built on a fraudulent will and testament, hiding behind a deceptive facade of peace and love.

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai
<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

Freedom of Conscience
<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1526>
#1526

The British scholar Denis MacEoin made a very insightful observation in his article "Baha'i fundamentalism and the academic study of the Babi movement," in Religion, Volume 16, Issue 1, January 1986, Pages 57-84:

"More than once in the past century, scholars have had occasion to speak of the intellectual dishonesty of the Baha'is in dealing with matters of historical fact. Unhappily, it has fallen to my lot to reiterate the sentiments of my predecessors and to deplore, as they deplored, the high-handed and tendentious manner in which texts are manipulated, facts swept aside or transformed, and common sense outraged..." (80).

In MacEoin's response to an attack by Baha'i fundamentalists, he observed, in "Afnán, hatcher and an old bone," Religion, Volume 16, Issue 2, April 1986, Pages 193-195, that they were similarly "dishonest and unacademic" in their treatment of his and others' scholarship on Babi and Bahai sources.

These same essentially dishonest and apologetic impulses are evident in the online posts of the Haifan-Wilmette Baha'is here, as they are in their claims in court during this misbegotten case.

That Susan Maneck has exhibited the same "dishonest and unacademic" qualities throughout her various jihads online is no more than to observe the facts of her conduct, easily confirmed by anyone who wishes to independently investigate the matter for themselves. The crude apologists for her duplicities and lack of integrity merely prove the application of Dr. MacEoin's observations in other contexts:

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai

<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

--

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

Freedom of Conscience

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1528>

#1528

Typical of Haifan-Wilmette Baha'i fanaticism that the real issue at hand is evaded and the subject changed, as though it were all personal animosity, ad hominem used whenever needed to obscure the dirty reality that the cult of Shoghi Effendi and his fraudulent will and testament has produced.

Professor Juan Cole speaks with authority on the utter lack of ethics of both Susan Maneck, dishonest online Baha'is like her, and the "mainstream" Baha'i "administration", mainstream only in its polluted interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings:

www.FG.com/bahaicensorship/Cole19.htm

www.FG.com/bahaicensorship/Cole20.htm

www.FG.com/bahaicensorship/Cole74.htm

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai

<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, Michigan USA

www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1616>

#1616

KPS59 wrote:

I don't agree with FG on his basic premise about the W&T of Abdu'l-Baha but as a BUPC I would never approve of any effort to censure, silence, or strip him of his God given right to believe as he chooses. Those Mr. Glaysher is exposing here in general and in particular are working feverishly to do exactly those things, not just to Mr. Glaysher but to any other individual or group which professes the name of Baha' and refuses to submit to their totalitarian regime.

KPS59,

Thank you for your comments. Your willingness to speak out is very important, especially given the BUPC court experience. I think it's essential that the various Bahai denominations set a better example of respecting one another's opinions and freedom of conscience than past religions or the Haifans.

Bahai regards,

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai

<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, Michigan USA

www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1617>

#1617

RossCampbell wrote:

Quinn wrote:

"Fred fell out of the boat because he has no such legitimate interpreter....

Cordially,

Ross

Ross,

Thank you for your comment.

While I respect your opinion and belief, permit me to say that, actually, in my view, Abdul-Baha did not appoint anyone, as he said and warned against repeatedly. The historical record of all of the Bahai books and periodicals published prior to 1921 demonstrate that fact. It's only after the fraudulent will and testament is forced upon the early Bahais, over a couple of generations, really, that people came to believe it--often because they didn't know the truth, despite Ruth White and Dr. C. Ainsworth Mitchell's efforts to wake people up.

Abdul-Baha's teaching was solely that a properly elected Universal House of Justice would guide the community:

"After Abdul-Baha—whenever the Universal House of Justice is organized it will ward off differences."

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

That's it in a nutshell. Far from falling out of the boat, I and Reform Bahais have figured it out and gotten back in it.

Bahai regards,

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai

<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

Freedom of Conscience
#1618

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post1618>

Jeffrey wrote:

<quoted text>I do pray for the Baha'i victims of oppression in Iran, but also that the heterodox Baha'is might learn from this experience and back away from their own oppressive court action against the Orthodox Baha'is. Let us recognize the right of all persons to practice their faith as they see fit, including the BUPC, and that everyone should have the right of free expression to discuss the truth freely and openly so that all persons might decide for themselves what is true.

Amen.

FG

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

My comments posted to the discussion of this article in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai
<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3438>

Larry,
I agree with everything you've written in message #3437 but wonder whether you might not be in denial about the real reason for the dysfunction. As I responded to you before, which you seem to ignore:

>What has brought the Baha'i Faith to this juncture?

A fraudulent will and testament.

>Why is it that respect for the diversity of religious interpretation is missing amongst all Baha'i sects?

"All" is inaccurate. Abdul-Baha and the Reform Bahai Faith respect and permit "diversity of religious interpretation."

The Reform Bahai Faith is NOT a party to the lawsuit before the US 7th District Appeals Court. Baha'is who have been deceived and brainwashed into believing in an unproven forgery are free to make their own decisions.

Abdul-Baha's Authentic Covenant is a broad, open, tolerant, universal Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings, one in harmony with life in the modern world. That some Baha'is chose to ignore Abdul-Baha and to "organize" the Bahai Movement out of their greed for power and wealth does not discredit the veracity of Abdul-Baha's moderate and balanced Interpretation.

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

The real issue and heart of the problem is not Abdul-Baha's Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings, but the corrupt and fraudulent will and testament put in place by Shoghi Effendi and his corrupt family.

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3439>

Also, I would urge anyone actually interested in the truth of the ACTUAL history of the Baha'i Faith to read the works of Ruth White, Julie Chanler, and Mirza Ahmad Sohrab. They understood that something very profound and basic had gone wrong with the Baha'i Faith after Abdul-Baha's death in 1921 and had the courage to speak out against it. They all identified the tactics of slander and abuse used by Shoghi Effendi as despicable and capable of only leading to the destruction of Abdul-Baha's universal Interpretation of the Bahai Movement.

Their books are available on the Reform Bahai Faith website.

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3447>

Hi Larry,

I largely agree with you. Comments below.

You wrote:

>Hi Fred,I'm partly agreed with you. The supposed W&T of Abbas Effendi is highly suspect. Even without the handwriting evidence. The likely hood that Abbas would have been certain about the appointment of Shoghi at the age he is supposed to have is vanishingly small.

My reply:

The handwriting evidence was provided by the document expert for the British Museum, Dr. C.(Charles) Ainsworth Mitchell - Certified Copy from the Library of Congress Report on the Writing Shown on the Photographs of the Alleged Will of Abdu'l-Baha. 1930.
https://www.reformbahai.org/CAMitchell_Report....

Yes, the claim Abdul-Baha appointed Shoghi Effendi when he was four years old or so is ridiculous, but it's the kind of thing that happens once a forgery has been committed.

You wrote:

My search for the truth about the dysfunction of the Baha'i faith has taken me past the UHJ, to Shoghi, but then as well back to Abbas and Husayn Ali themselves.... Both Husayn and his son Abbas put their own personal religious interpretations before living the reality of the oneness of humanity, the oneness of human spirituality, the oneness of family.

My reply:

While I believe it is necessary to go back beyond the uhj and its corrupt organization, I personally don't believe Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha failed to live up to the three onenesses, if you will. In my view, it's important to remember they were living within a very oppressive Islamic climate, and, as Baha'u'llah taught, the Manifestation is human too, part of God's progressive unfoldment of His purpose for humanity. It's anachronistic for any age to project its values upon the dead. I don't believe either Baha'u'llah or Abdul-Baha was responsible for what you seem to be referring to as disunity in their families; they did everything to preserve the unity of their families and the faith, even as they allowed the faith to evolve and develop, unlike what has happened since the fraudulent will and testament of 1921.

Larry wrote:

>Oneness of family is the foundation of all other human oneness....[etc.,Shoghi Effendi]

My reply:

I fully agree when it comes to the family being the foundation of unity. Both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha stressed preserving family unity, so I would have to differ with you on this point. The real hypocrisy sets in with Shoghi Effendi, in my view. The "dangerous doctrine," as Ahmad Sohrab wisely phrased it, stems from Shoghi's perversion of the Master's Interpretation.

Just my views. I respect yours, your conscience.

I believe it is by returning to the simply and moderate Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teaching by Abdul-Baha, as he lived and demonstrated it in the West, that the hope continues to reside for the future of the Bahai Movement. I invite people of all persuasions to investigate Abdul-Baha's Authentic Covenant of 1912 for themselves, without the imposed blinders of Shoghi Effendi's self-serving violation--a violation that demonstrated now for decades how corrupt and destructive it is.

Bahai regards,

Fred

95 Theses - On Bahai Liberty - Articles - Abdul-Baha's Covenant
The Reform Bahai Faith

www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3496>

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3497>

KPS59 wrote:

<quoted text>

I don't know what you're talking about. The link at the top of the post wherein I pasted the entire article goes directly to it. The link I took the article from also goes directly to it. It's a moot question anyway as you can see, by the fact that I posted the article in its entirety here. Just click on the link, and read the article.

Thank you for searching the database for topix.net, google, and the archive for The Chicago Tribune:
<https://www.chicagotribune.com/news/local/chi-...>

You're quite right that the originating article of this forum is available to be found by others through those sources. My point is it is NO LONGER available through the Main Page search window for The Chicago Tribune at all, WHATSOEVER. Go to

<https://www.chicagotribune.com>

In the search window, top right, enter baha'i, then bahai, then baha'i rift--NO hit whatsoever...

Why? I wouldn't say it doesn't matter, since there are other articles going back to 2006. It should be available for anyone in Chicago or elsewhere who specifically or casually The Chicago Tribune, not buried in the archives.

I urge anyone concerned about this discrepancy to contact / email The Chicago Tribune, asking them to make the article available since it has generated some an enormous response and interest as demonstrated by this forum.

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3521>

KPS59 wrote:

<quoted text>

Dear Fred,

Someone mentioned earlier that the individual moderating or at least monitoring this forum had some Baha'i connection of some persuasion but it seemed as though they indicated that it was not aligned with the sans-guardians position. You'd have to go back through the pages here and find that reference for yourself to confirm or correct my recollection as I'm not that concerned about it since I have no difficulty finding the article or the forum through other searches.

Even so it is well established fact that the sans-guardians have many times in the past reached profound lows in the practice of repression oppression and control measures which rival and even surpass those of previous corrupt, totalitarian perversions of religious dispensations which began as pure revelations from God through the Manifestations.

KPS,

Thank you for pointing out that a Bahai of one persuasion or another may have the opportunity to skew or distort the availability of information presented here.

You're quite right, as you know, that the Haifan Baha'is often and regularly sink to extremely low levels of duplicity and deceit in their reprehensible efforts to suppress views other than their own.

With all respect for your views, realizing its up to you to decide for yourself what is important and what isn't, I would suggest you might consider, indeed, people here of all persuasions, that we should be concerned if the originating article for this forum has been removed from The Chicago Tribune main site. See message #3497 for details.

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCP...>

It distorts what the general American and international readership can easily find on The Chicago Tribune about the Baha'i Faith in a major newspaper of public record and thereby enables it to suppress the knowledge of its unconscionable attacks on Bahais of other denominations in the US District Courts, attacks against all freedom-loving people. Further, it enables the Wilmette, Illinois nsa of the corrupt and decadent Haifan Baha'i Faith to present itself in a falsely favorable light, which is deceptive and unearned, calculated to mislead the uninformed and innocent.

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3508>

KPS59 wrote:

<quoted text>

So you think it's part of a conspiracy to keep people from finding the original article?

I never used the "conspiracy." That was uttered by apparently a member of the Baha'i denomination that relies on slander and character assassination for discrediting people it cannot otherwise refute or control to believe in their fraudulent will and testament.

My point is merely noting the original article, unlike some older articles even back to 2006, has been removed, despite a huge interest demonstrated in this forum. Why? It doesn't make sense. Not logical to remove articles of interest. Independently thinking people should at least wonder why and be concerned.

The fanatical and deceitful history of the Haifan denomination is well known. See The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience for further details:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

They also demonstrated it to Judge Amy St. Eve and she ruled against them. Judge Diane S. Sykes seemed to understand what caliber of an organization she had in front of her in court last February when she said their tactics "Clearly raises some constitutional concerns." Three minute MP3 recording:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/arch...>

7th Circuit Court of Appeals Judges hammer NSA's attorney 2-20-09

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/USCo...>

Bahai regards,

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3509>

Larry Rowe wrote:

"This human tendency leads only to exclusivity, insularity, disunity, violence, and murder with one group desiring to cure the wrongs of the world through raising their heros/gurus,,their particular religious interpretations, above all others. Baha'is are as guilty of this religious triumphalism as are most reigionists/cultists from all religions and cults.

Larry,

I respect and share your concern about "exculsivity." In my view, the actual teaching and Interpretation of Abdul-Baha of Baha'u'llah emphasizes non-exclusivism. For more than a full decade, teaching in the West, in public, through spoken and written word, that's what Abdul-Baha actually taught.

It's truly only with the fraudulent will and testament that the Bahai Movement was distorted into the fanatical organization it has become. This is discussed with clear examples and citations at Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments...

I invite you to investigate it for yourself.

I do want to say that I respect your recent statement that you consider yourself now basically agnostic. That's a respectable, reasonable view of life and human experience--especially looking around at the way the world seems to work. I do not demean it in anyway, nor should anyone else. Why we all believe various beliefs, not one of us knows this side of the grave, all the more reason to respect one another.

Bahai regards,

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3519>

Larry Rowe wrote:

"I respect and share your concern about "excusivity." In my view, the actual teaching and Interpretation of Abdul-Baha of Baha'u'llah emphasizes non-exclusivism. For more than a full decade, teaching in the West, in public, through spoken and written word, that's what Abdul-Baha actually taught."

Howdy Fred,

What Abbas Effendi actually thought about previous religions was that they were, in his own words: "decrepit", and that: "why should one go so far back". This is hardly a call for inclusivity Fred, a call for a truly ecumenical approach to religious diversity. Is it clearly a call for the supplantation of all previous religions by Baha'ism.

Messianic religions and their followers inevitably, inexorably, fall into this same pattern. A pattern in which they see their religion as the one and only salvation for all of humanity and that it is only the chosen, the believer, who will be saved. Mirza Husayn Ali often spouted such utter nonsense about the recognition of himself as messiah. Little wonder that Baha'is of all sects have fallen into a counterproductive approach to diversity of religion and religious interpretation themselves.

Cheers

Larry Rowe

*The teaching of Buddha was like a young and beautiful child, and now it has become as an old and decrepit man. Like the aged man it cannot see, it cannot hear, it cannot remember anything. Why go so far back? Consider the laws of the Old Testament: the Jews do not follow Moses as their example nor keep his commands. So it is with many other religions. (Abdu'l-Baha, Abdu'l-Baha in London, p. 63)

Buddhists of many persuasions, reformers and otherwise, have said the same thing about Buddhism from time to time.

Abdul-Baha in London (125):

"The beginnings of all great religions were pure; but priests, taking possession of the minds of the people, filled them with dogmas and superstitions, so that religion became gradually corrupt. I come to teach no new religion. My only desire is, through the blessing of God, to show the road to the Great Light."

In Abdul-Baha in London, he then immediately says, "I am no Prophet, only a man like yourself." He was limited by his time and his experience, as Baha'u'llah makes clear every dispensation is in the Book of Certitude. That a hundred years ago someone from a Muslim background would fail to understand Buddhism at the level we easily can today demonstrates how far society has progressed in understanding other religions.

It is the universality at the core of Abdul-Baha's Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's Teachings that is important, along with the example of it given by Abdul-Baha in the West.

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, Michigan USA

www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3524>

Larry Rowe wrote:

True. I have read some things from Buddhists that were not very tolerant of theists.

And you are right about Abbas Effendi; what he wrote, as well as what his father wrote, is a mix. Some of it definitely more efficacious, some of it the same old same old.

...

The only things worth retaining from any of the worlds religions/cults, including Buddhism, are such worthy concepts that are conducive to human progress. All the rest of it is detritus, an impediment to further human progress.

I would add Buddhists have attacked other Buddhists. Japanese history, especially, is unfortunate examples of that. Buddhists have and do disagree amongst themselves about interpretation, organization, etc. Why should Bahai be any different? Human beings disagree in education, government, etc., but when it comes to religion, modern conception is highly unrealistic. Abdul-Baha emphasized truth is arrived at through the "clash of differing opinions." Bahais needn't be afraid of that. The tongue, not the sword, is the standard.

I fully agree with you that SOME of the teachings and concepts of the world's religions are worth retaining. That is what Abdul-Baha himself did with both the Bab and Baha'u'llah's own teachings. He quietly emphasized the universal direction Bahais should take and set the example, though corrupted and usurped by the fraudulent will and testament for most Bahais.

In the long term, God willing, more Bahais will come to realize all this through, unfortunately, if nothing else, bitter experience, the kind you have often cited and alluded to, the court cases, etc.

Bahai regards,

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, Michigan USA

www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3525>

Larry Rowe wrote:

And how many people have been slaughtered in the name of the 'true' religion? How many people have been forced to give up their native faiths because of those who hold to the delusion that their chosen faith is the only true faith?

Such belief only leads to extremism and religious fanaticism.

In every case where a supposedly true religion has been vaunted over all other religious interpretations it has invariably lead to violence and bloodshed.

Abdul-Baha emphasized the Bahai Movement was NOT a new religion, but religion renewed. In London he stated that "You can be a Bahai-Christian, a Bahai-Freemason, a Bahai-Jew, a Bahai-Muhammadan" (98), as he did on other occasions. Universality, not uniformity. It's only the individual soul who knows how to negotiate the path of his or her soul.

Abdul-Baha's whole vision of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, the Bahai House of Worship, is that it should be a place for ALL religions and people to worship together, not enough contending church, though that is what the Haifans have reduced it to.

By returning to Abdul-Baha's basically universal vision of Baha'u'llah's teachings, Bahais can heal the enormous corruption brought into the Faith by the fraudulent will and testament and restore the spiritual health and vigor of all the past religions, help revive what is universal in them too, and move confidently again forward together into the future with our fellow human beings.

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith

Rochester, Michigan USA

www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3558>

janice wrote:

Dear Friends,

I had no idea this discussion was still on! I had tried checking it by going to the Chicago Tribune site several months ago and found it was not accessible. So, I assumed it ended. But, just now, while googling something else, I bumped into it...3492 posts! Wow! Anyway, hello to all that might remember me.

KPS,

Case in point....

PS,

Thank you for pointing out that a Bahai of one persuasion or another may have the opportunity to skew or distort the availability of information presented here.

You're quite right, as you know, that the Haifan Baha'is often and regularly sink to extremely low levels of duplicity and deceit in their reprehensible efforts to suppress views other than their own.

With all respect for your views, realizing its up to you to decide for yourself what is important and what isn't, I would suggest you might consider, indeed, people here of all persuasions, that we should be concerned if the originating article for this forum has been removed from The Chicago Tribune main site. See message #3497 for details.

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCP...>

It distorts what the general American and international readership can easily find on The Chicago Tribune about the Baha'i Faith in a major newspaper of public record and thereby enables it to suppress the knowledge of its unconscionable attacks on Bahais of other denominations in the US District Courts, attacks against all freedom-loving people. Further, it enables the Wilmette, Illinois nsa of the corrupt and decadent Haifan Baha'i Faith to present itself in a falsely favorable light, which is deceptive and unearned, calculated to mislead the uninformed and innocent.

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant

https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3559>

Larry Rowe wrote:

That those who call themselves Baha'is do not accept the reality of this contradiction and hypocrisy can be attributed to that willing blindness and ignorance that religionists of all persuasions allow to veil their sight.

Thus do religionists universally suffer from this same delusion: "If only the rest of humanity would hold to the exact same religious beliefs and interpretations as me all the problems of the world would be solved".

Larry,

I respect your views, even as I don't share them.

There are people in all religions who are "blind" to the worst in human nature and human failings, in and out of their faiths. At the same time, I would say the majority hold to what is best in human nature, stated clearly by Christ and other manifestations as the Golden Rule, which, yes, we human beings, all too easily fall short of. That's not Utopian, that's the nature of our existence and the challenge we find in the life given to us, to strive to rise toward the highest spiritual teachings held in common by all of the religions.

Bahai regards,

Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
www.reformbahai.org/Covenant.html

Comments on Abdul-Baha's 1912 Authentic Covenant
https://www.reformbahai.org/Covenant_comments....

Reform Bahai Faith
Rochester, Michigan USA
www.ReformBahai.org

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3561>

Jeffrey wrote:

I do not believe this forum is being suppressed by the NSA or the Chicago Tribune. The article was allowed to be published in the first place and this forum has not been shut down. It remains in Google. The most likely reason for the link to this forum to be removed from the article is that the Tribune considers it archived and closed. The computer probably automatically removes the link when it moves it into their archive.

It's true, as you say, that the archived version has no link to this discussion:
<https://archives.chicagotribune.com/2009/may/1...>

But it's the fact that articles on Bahai going back to 2006 are still available at www.chicagotribune.com that might be reason for concern. Hackers are very good at changing such things.

Janice's comments shows someone actually tried to do what I'm concerned about--find the article and this forum but couldn't. It's reasonable to believe there may have been others who gave up and many who never heard of its existence in the first place.

Comments in the Chicago Tribune Forum:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chic...>

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3579>

Larry Rowe wrote:

Here's a link to an article by Denis MacEoin a former Baha'i scholar who was threatened by Haifan Baha'i powers that be and told that he must not use scholarly sources that have not been vetted by the Baha'i thought police.

<https://bahai-library.org/articles/babism.mace...>

Denis has written many other fine scholarly articles and papers on Baha'ism that are a must read. Again that is only if you are truly interested in the truth about Baha'ism. If you wish to remain enthralled to the cult of Baha'ism I suggest that you do not read Denis' papers because the truth will set you free....

I have the highest respect for Denis MacEoin's scholarship and articles and urge anyone interested in real scholarship, instead propaganda, to read his work, especially his many articles and reviews in the journal "Religion." That's not to say he's infallible, only professionally honest and sincere about his sources and conscience, unlike Baha'i minions who have no scholarly integrity.

Here's one available on The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience.

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/MacE...>

His Response to Moojan Momen's fanatical takfir is essential reading for anyone to understand what's really being passed off as Baha'i scholarship. Details via <https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/apos...>

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

Comments in the Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chic...>

Yahoo Group - ReformBahai

<https://groups.yahoo.com/group/ReformBahai>

<https://www.topix.net/forum/chicago/TFIIGSPMCPELF67OR/post3727>

Freedom of Conscience

Jan 14, 8:49 pm

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai

From: Freedom of Conscience <s...@website.com>

Subject: Criminals... (Re: ALLBELIEFS site controlled by the BAHAI INTERNET AGENCY: BEWARE!)

Jeffrey wrote:

> Larry,

> This kind of excessive censorship is so unnecessary. Honestly, what > do they fear by the term "Baha'ism"? I understand why they are > against the term "Haifan Bahaism" because it suggests there are other > versions of Baha'ism which they are in strict denial over. Apparently > in the new world order of Haifan Bahaism, if there is something you > don't like, you simply shun it away by refusing to speak or hear of > it. This is really unhealthy!

> Jeffrey

Jeffrey,

As you and other members of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith, not to mention others, should realize by now, you're dealing with criminals who stalk and harass anyone who does not accept their fanatical, corrupt distortions of Abdul-Baha's Interpretation of Baha'u'llah's teachings. Brainwashing ignorant and gullible Americans is one of the dark arts Haifans excel at. Health is the wrong metaphor. Criminal is more precise and descriptive. Seeking to suppress and deprive fellow Americans of their Constitutional right of freedom of religious conscience and belief is a criminal act, as is slandering and libeling citizens who think differently from the Shiite corruptions of the Haifan regime.

Essentially, the Haifans, under Shoghi Effendi's fraudulent will and testament, reverted to the Shiite imamate, creating the mirror image of Iranian obedience to the authority of the imam, the imam of the age, which they called a "guardian," believing, in effect, that he's infallible and must be obeyed in all things. Attempts to create a Bahai imamate are contrary to Abdul-Baha's teaching of a properly elected Universal House of Justice, an institution of Bahai spiritual authority, not worldly. That such a decadent and perverse organization would behave as the Haifans regularly do should come as no surprise to any thoughtful person of normal goodwill and conscience.

Decades of supporting EVIDENCE may be found at the following links:

Chicago Tribune. Baha'i rift. Baha'is upset with Orthodox Baha'i Faith May 18, 2009
<https://archives.chicagotribune.com/2009/may/18/local/chi-bahai-18-may18>

Comments posted to The Chicago Tribune Forum on one page:
https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Chicago_Tribune.html

Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship>

Questions? CONTACT ME HERE > https://en.allexperts.com/q/Bah-2728/indexExp_113873.htm

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Sen McGlinn, Takfir, Excommunicated

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole,neworthodoxy.htm>

See Juan Cole on Baha'i Takfir

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Juan_Cole_On_Bahai_Takfir.html

Written by Alison Marshall

Tuesday, 06 December 2005

Below is a message that Juan Cole has posted to the discussion list H-Baha'i.

It is about the recent disenrollment of Sen. Juan talks about how the Baha'i community is becoming a faith community that is based around doctrine.

The two doctrines that Juan cites as now being requirements for Baha'i membership are: the absolute infallibility of the House of Justice. I was disenrolled for arguing against this. that the Baha'i institutions will one day take over the civil ones (a theocracy). Sen was disenrolled for arguing against this.

I would also add the doctrine that women will never serve on the House. Michael McKenny was disenrolled for arguing against this.

Alison

Date: Mon, 05 Dec 2005 16:02:31 +0000

Subject: disenrollment and the New Orthodoxy

To: H-BAHAI

As a historian of religion, I would argue that the disenrollment of Sen McGlinn is another in a series of signs that the Baha'i Faith is becoming a church in the Weberian sense, bound together by doctrinal considerations rather than informal enthusiasm (as was often the case in the 1960s and 1970s). The two doctrines, departing from which has resulted in sanctions, are the absolute infallibility of the Universal House of Justice and its future role at the head of a global theocracy wherein Baha'i administrative institutions will also form the civil government. I know that Baha'i readers will object that Shoghi Effendi expressed reservations about the phrase "theocracy," but I would argue that the doctrine of theocracy now being imposed from Haifa is anyway incompatible with the plain texts of the holy figures. So I am using the word as a social science term, since social scientists would typically consider the assertion that religious institutions will exercise temporal rule a form of theocracy.

The doctrine of the infallibility of the Universal House of Justice has evolved radically in recent decades. Abdul-Baha called the institution ma`sum or "guarded from sin by God," but said its 'ismat was derivative, which certainly makes it sound not very strong, and far from absolute. And, of course, he had also expressed the hope in The Secret of Divine Civilization that the Iranian cabinet would prove "ma'sum," or protected by God from making big errors. Orally, he denied his own infallibility. So he did not mean by the term anything approaching "absolute infallibility." Once a body calling itself the Universal House of Justice was actually elected, at a time when the original plans for the structure of the religion, found in the writings of the holy figures, had clearly fallen through, there was a natural tendency for that body and its appointees and clients to put very strong emphasis on infallibility. It is a way of asserting leadership of a disparate community. They developed the doctrine into one of absolute infallibility. This process is a form of their own law of bureaucracy, wherein entrenched elites inevitably have far more power over time to shape things than rank and file "citizens." The absolute infallibility of the Universal House of Justice is an implicit, assumed belief, and for those who uphold it, it is one of the things that define being a Baha'i. The doctrine of theocracy is mysterious in its origins, though Sen McGlinn has given many clues as to its development in the Western communities. It certainly directly contradicts the position of the Baha'i holy figures. Precisely because it is contrary to the scriptural texts, policing this doctrine is all the more crucial for those who believe in it (and who have somehow managed to make believing in it a criterion for rising high in the religion). Otherwise, as a doctrine it is volatile and unstable, constantly in danger of deconstructing itself. Actually, insofar as the most great infallibility was reserved by Baha'u'llah for the Manifestations of God, the absolute infallibility of the Universal House of Justice is likewise not scriptural. (And since Baha'is have to live every day with numerous errors made by that body, it is also contrary to common sense). It, too, is an unstable doctrine and so must be imposed zealously if it is to survive.

The adherents of absolute infallibility and of theocracy are reluctant to promulgate these ideas as a formal orthodoxy to be affirmed, e.g., in a catechism. They certainly would like to do so. But they tend to treat the New Orthodoxy (they would deny it is new) as a goal toward which they want to take the community, gradually and over time. In many ways, this Orthodoxy is often a secret from the rank and file, and many Baha'is only encounter it if they move high up in the administration. When the doctrine of theocracy was first discussed on the old This e-mail address is being protected from spam bots, you need JavaScript enabled to view it in the mid-1990s, many posters remarked that they had never encountered it and certainly did not believe in it.

All of the Baha'i scholars and intellectuals who have been threatened, harassed or sanctioned by the Baha'i administration since the late 1970s have been guilty of publicly disputing one of these two doctrines. Since the high administrators believe that these two doctrines define Baha'i orthodoxy and legitimate membership in the community, an open, public, and vocal challenge to them is almost always met with sanctions. The Baha'i administration is well aware that most Baha'is probably have not yet accepted these two doctrines, but is willing to chalk this phenomenon up to the immaturity of the believers. They are not sanctioned because they are not writers, and have no particular influence, and are not so much opposed to the New Orthodoxy as they are just not convinced of it.

The sociological mechanisms whereby Baha'i administrators and intellectuals throughout the world are inducted behind the scenes into this two-fold New Orthodoxy are unclear and need investigation. Many of the signals given by high administrators lack explicitness.

So, it is clear that the Universal House of Justice has called upon members of the National Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world (is that 1100 persons or so?) to refute Sen McGlinn's book, a powerful signal that they must uphold the doctrine of theocracy. It is also clear that removal of McGlinn from membership in the community is a form of excommunication or takfir (takfir [BOLD ADDED]) is simply saying that someone who considers himself or herself a believer is not actually a believer, because of some essential deficit). And the basis for the takfir is his public refutation of the key doctrine of Theocracy.

Doctrinally-based churches, such as Roman Catholicism, always impose sanctions on believers who publicly reject key doctrines. This move is necessary in part to protect the doctrines themselves, since sanctioning an author brands his or her work with a sort of taboo, making the work less likely to prove able to challenge the Orthodox doctrine within a community eager to stay on the right side of orthodoxy. The Baha'i faith has simply become such a doctrinally-based church. Since so many rank and file believers came in via the old "sect-like" route of popular enthusiasm, the administrative Church above presides unevenly over the remnants of the Sect (in the technical sense) below.

That is why the New Orthodoxy must remain a secret orthodoxy, but must nevertheless be policed, putting the "heretics" in the Kafkaesque position of not knowing exactly why they have been sanctioned. The "doctrine" may not be named as such, the "heresy" may also not be named, and even the sanction, of excommunication of various sorts, may not be called that, either. Naming these things would signal to the rank and file that their administration had become a doctrinal church, of a sort many of them joined the Baha'i faith to get away from.

cheers

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

Juan Cole on Baha'i Takfir

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Juan_Cole_On_Bahai_Takfir.html

FROM Biography of Juan Cole: (if link broken, see juancole.com)

"Being in Evanston, Juan in 1972 encountered the Baha'i religion, which has a temple in nearby Wilmette, and embraced it. The Baha'is said they believed in the unity of the world religions, the elimination of racism, the equality of women and men, and world peace — values that resonated with Juan's own interests and convictions.

"He continued, however, with his studies of Buddhism and Sufi Islam, and was always a fish out of water in the often cult-like and anti-intellectual Baha'i community. Individual Baha'is and families were often very kind to him, and he is grateful to them and respects their beliefs. But it ultimately wasn't for him. It gradually became apparent that most Baha'is do not actually believe in the equality of women and men, excluding women from their elective highest body, the Universal House of Justice, and giving speeches about how women have a different function in society than men and how men are the heads of the household. Then it gradually became apparent that whatever they privately believed about racism, they were unwilling to take a stand, as quietists, against Apartheid— and, indeed, were entirely willing to cooperate with the South African government if their religious institutions thereby gained freedom of action. Then it became clear that they are no more religious pluralists than Roman Catholics or Muslims, admitting partial truth in other traditions, but insisting that only in their own tradition is the fullness of the contemporary truth manifest. Then it became clear that the Baha'i authorities were not exactly pacifists. The top leadership has a secret cult-like belief in a Baha'i theocracy that will rule the world, rather on the same model as the theory of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that Muslim clergy should replace civil governments globally. Some Baha'i communities were frankly reactionary, as with the Chilean community, which kept trying for photo ops with Gen. Augusto Pinochet. The community, for understandable reasons, opposed the Iranian revolution of 1978-79 in Iran, but many went further and privately warmly supported the shah for the most part. Cole gradually lost his enthusiasm for the community and the administration. When he married outside it in 1982, he stopped going to services because his non-Baha'i wife was excluded. He was also increasingly disturbed by the censorship practices imposed on Baha'i writers by the religion's administration, and refused to submit to them.

"(When email lists came along in the 1990s and he was active in Baha'i discussions of the religion's history and policies, in which he retained an academic interest, and some hopes of reform, and he came to be hated by the fundamentalist leadership. In 1996 they had a high official call him at home and threaten him with being declared a "covenant-breaker," i.e. a heretic, because of his critical email postings. Baha'is shun "covenant-breakers" and shun people who are in contact with them. Cole was astonished at the narrow-minded and coercive tactics of the administration, and declined to remain in the community. He angrily resigned. He is now not interested in organized religion as a personal matter. Cole was all along an American liberal, and had thought the Baha'is were on his side, which he discovered to be an error, at least with regard to the secretive and duplicitous leadership. His political and social philosophy is rooted in American traditions going back to the Transcendentalists and going forward to Martin Luther King, Michael Harrington, and other progressives, and all along has been. He vigorously disputes the baseless and misleading editorializing in his current Wikipedia article that his views of international politics in the twenty-first century are still shaped by his youthful Baha'i misadventure.)"....

.... The rise of email lists and of the World Wide Web had allowed Juan to get back in touch with Baha'i studies in the early through mid-1990s. He was able to trade Babi and Baha'i manuscripts in Persian and Arabic with other aficionados, including other scholars and Iranian-Americans, building up a much bigger private collection than he had had before. He was then able to discuss new discoveries and contexts on email discussion groups. This new access to materials, his researches on the Ottoman and Young Ottoman context of Baha'i thought in the 19th century, and the email discussions resulted in his 1998 book Modernity and the Millennium. Unfortunately neither the discussions nor the academic character of the book were welcome to the fundamentalists in the religion's leadership. The book appeared a couple of years after Cole had been threatened with being declared a "covenant breaker" and with being shunned, and after he had noisily resigned from the religion. In many ways writing about Babi and Baha'i issues turned out to be unproductive. Few Western academics are interested in minority Iranian religious traditions, and theory coming out of the study of religion has had little resonance in most academic writing. In Iran itself, the Baha'i faith is a taboo subject and Baha'is are persecuted, and as a result most Iranists avoid the subject. And many if not most Baha'is are hostile to academic scholarship on their tradition. So writing such a book was the closest thing to pure scholarship, since it was unlikely to be widely read or discussed by any of the three discourse communities concerned. Merlin Swartz reviewed the book in The American Historical Review, calling it "carefully researched and perceptive" and "reflective and insightful." Margit Warburg of the University of Copenhagen observed in History of Religions, "Cole analyzes the original writings in Persian and Arabic in their contemporary context of Middle East reform thought and politics, in particular the Young Ottoman movement and dissident governmental circles in Iran. He makes use of a wealth of primary sources in Persian, Arabic, and Turkish, and he uses his extensive knowledge of the Baha'i religion and the history of the Middle East to build up an excellent, convincing, and detailed study of intellectual history. Cole wants to "employ microhistory in order to help diversify our image of the region" (p. 14), and he succeeds in giving the reader insight into the little researched area of political reform thought in the Ottoman Empire and in Iran. He also links these ideas with European, in particular French, political and utopian philosophy, noting the parallel between the Saint-Simonians and the Baha'is, with respect to both their ideas and the social position of their followers (pp. 136-37)."

[other references to Baha'i on his blog biography, via the link above.]

Given Professor Cole's extensive work on the Baha'i Faith, I suggest the newcomer might find it helpful to start with his following first three articles in this order:

"Fundamentalism in the Contemporary U.S. Baha'i Community" Religious Studies Review, 2002. Essential Reading Broad Survey

"The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997" JSSR, 1998. In depth on a briefer period

["Race, Immorality and Money in the American Baha'i Community \[LA\]"](#) Religion, 2000. Focus on one incident

"The Evolution of Charismatic Authority in the Baha'i Faith (1863-1921)," in Robert Gleave, ed., Religion and Society in Qajar Iran (London: RoutledgeCurzon, 2005), pp. 311-345. [Although Cole appears to take the fraudulent will and testament at face value, this article is an insightful reading of the interplay of Max Weber's conception of charisma and money as they play out in the rise of Baha'i Faith. Well worth the effort to obtain and read it.]

Cole on New Orthodoxy of Baha'i Faith 2005

"The Evolution of Charismatic Authority in the Baha'i Faith (1863-1921)," in Robert Gleave, ed., Religion and Society in Qajar Iran (London: RoutledgeCurzon, 2005), pp. 311-345. [Very important article but not available online. Demonstrates and documents the role of money in establishing the Iranian Baha'i orthodox interpretation. Unfortunately, Cole seems yet to realize the purported will and testament of 1921 is actually a fraudulent document.]

"Globalisation and Religion in the Thought of Abdu'l-Baha ." In Margit Warburg, Annika Hvithamar and Morten Warmind, eds., Baha'i and Globalisation. Aarhus: Aarhus University Press, 2005, pp. 55-75.

"The Azali-Baha'i Crisis of September 1867." In Moshe Sharon, ed. Studies in Modern Religions, Religious Movements, and the Babi-Baha'i Faiths. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 2004. Pp. 227-251.

"World Theology and the Baha'i Faith," in Thomas Ryba, George Bond and Herman Tull, eds., The Comity and Grace of Method: Essays in Honor of Edmund R. Perry (Evanston, Ill.: Northwestern University Press, 2004), pp. 391-414.

"Millennialism in Modern Iranian History," in Abbas Amanat and Magnus Bernhardsson, eds. Imagining the End: Visions of Apocalypse from the Ancient Middle East to Modern America (London: I.B. Tauris, 2002), pp. 282-311.

"Behold the Man: Baha'u'llah on the Life of Jesus." Journal of the American Academy of Religion vol. 65, no. 1 (1997): 47-71.

"Baha'u'llah and Liberation Theology," in Jack McLean, ed. Revisioning Theology. (Los Angeles: Kalimat Press, 1997), 79-98.

Extensive documentation of censorship and other fundamentalist Bahai maladies available on Prof. Cole's website:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bhdoc.htm>

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

Patrick Henry May 12 1999, 12:00 am show options
Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai,alt.religion.bahai
From: "Patrick Henry" <patrick_He...@bigfoot.com>
Date: 1999/05/12
Subject: Re: 'Abdul-Baha on how we should see others

<jric...@my-dejanews.com> wrote in message news:7h296b$3oo$1@nnrp1.deja.com...

> I have witnessed the top Baha'i authorities chase educated people out of the > faith for 20 years (there didn't seem to be so much of this in the 1970s). I > have seen the coercive and manipulative psychological techniques of > "counselors" and "ABMs" applied in case after case, with the abused and > frightened victim pouring his or her heart out to me afterwards. It is not a > pretty thing to feel persecuted by your own religion merely for your private > religious beliefs

Juan,

It may very well be that prior to the 70s the same thing was indeed taking place; you were merely unaware of it.

--

Patrick Henry
"Give me liberty, or give me death."
Patrick_He...@bigfoot.com

The point is that the Baha'i institutions have developed a mixture of totalitarian and fundamentalist ideology that disallows academic scholarship (thus the silencing of Fadil Mazandarani, the expulsion of Abbas Amanat, and the charging of Linda Walbridge and me), disallows independent Baha'i media not controlled by the institutions, and disallows the public expression of individual faith commitments at variance with the totalitarian/fundamentalist orthodoxy. Juan Cole, Anonymous3.htm

2003

Selected Messages of Juan Cole for 2003

Cole regarding Denis MacEoin Nov 1, 2003

2002

Re: Individual conscience... and Doug Martin's statement. 5/12/2002 Prof. Juan Cole, University of Michigan

"A weird Baha'i sub-cult has arisen. It structurally resembles al-Qaida..." Juan Cole 2002

Selected Messages of Juan Cole for 2002

See especially [Re: \[talisman9\] Problems with Facts](#)

2001

Selected Messages of Juan Cole for 2001

2000

Selected Messages of Juan Cole for 2000 70k

High Baha'i divorce rate, marginal people

"they are love-bombed and find a high proportion of other marginals in it. A high rate of marginality is fostered by the cultists who have infiltrated the administration, since only such individuals would put up with being ordered around summarily or would eat up conspiracy theories about bands of dissidents seeking to undermine the administration."

1999

Techniques for saving Iranian Baha'is: and for saving the Baha'i community 8/4/99

Baha'u'llah the greatest spiritual teacher of the past two centuries 7/7/99

Shoghi Effendi believed 1963 would be the calamity year 7/8/99

Re: Book recommendation 7/9/99 re Denis MacEoin

Re: censorship on Baha'i Studies 7/29/99

censorship on Baha'i Studies 7/28/99

Re: Baha'i Historian and Distorting History 7/10/99

Re: Character Assassination 6/26/99

Re: The Most Right Scholar 6/27/99

Re: Letter of resignation 6/28/99 (Of Paul Dodenheoff)

Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers 6/28/99

Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers 6/28/99

Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers 6/28/99

Another Inquiring Mind 6/28/99

Re: Members of the Universal House of Justice 6/30/99

station of scholars and historians in the Baha'i faith 6/10/99
Re: Bahai Dialogue Magazine 5/13/99
service and its prerequisites 5/13/99
Re: Bahais, Administration and Juan Cole 5/11/99
Re: Resignation 5/8/99
Re: Censorship - Bahai Chairman Steals from Dead Widow 5/7/99
Re: Religions unified this century 5/7/99
'Abdul-Baha on how we should see others 5/6/99
Re: Baha'i Scriptures and Universal Declaration of Human Rights 4/26/99
Re: Obedience, humanism, etc 4/24/99
Dismissal of Chair of US NSA for Financial Improprieties 4/6/99
Re: sanctions for email 2/23/99
Re: Baha'i backbiting 2/23/99
Re: Baha'i Schools of Thought 2/16/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/15/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/14/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/13/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/12/99
Re: What is a Cult? 1/29/99
Re: Ms Maneck, Dr Cole 2/21/99 Comments on Susan Maneck
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/10/99
Re: An apology to Fred 2/10/99
Re: Houses of Justice 2/5/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/6/99 **
"Counselor" Birkland calls Cole in the night **
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/5/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/4/99
Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience 2/3/99
Re: Some thoughts 2/2/99
Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion 2/1/99
Re: bickering intellectuals or why can't the UHJ read texts? 1/31/99
Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion 1/30/99
Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion 1/29/99
Re: What is a Cult? and McKenny case 1/29/99
Re: What is a Cult? 1/29/99
Re: What is a Cult? 1/29/99
Baha'u'llah against tyranny 1/29/99
Re: What is a Cult? 1/28/99
Re: What is a Cult? 1/27/99
destroying intellectuals 1/20/99

1998

[Re: \[bahai-apologetics\] Cole part 1](#) 11/14/98 Includes all five parts.
on the bites on my back 10/12/98 Maneck's slander on AOL mutilation theology and Dr. Maneck 10/5/1998 Regarding AOL & Maneck's "misrepresentations."
[\[bahai-faith\] Re: Checks & Balances \(was fw Juan Cole mutilation theology\)](#) 9/16/98
 No checks and balances
[Re: \[bahai-faith\] mutilation theology](#) 9/4/98 No checks and balances
[\[bahai-faith\] mutilation theology \(further\)](#) 9/4/98 No checks and balances
Re: 4 year plan 6/27/98 Initiative of individuals crushed
Re: driving Ms Scholars 6/24/98 Talisman I Re: 4 year plan 6/23/98 Driving people out of the Faith Re: Mazandarani and the Interrogation 6/12/98 Victimized friends, the technique of driving people out of the Bahai Faith
Re: uniting Talisman and Irfan 6/11/98 anti-intellectualism Re: discussions of problems 6/11/98 Falsely and outrageously threatened me and my friends, techniques of Scientology

Freedom of Conscience and Women's Service 6/11/98 `Abdul-Baha promised freedom of conscience and speech.

Re: fw from Poland \(was: censorship\) 6/10/98 Bahais backbiting

Re: shunning and the law 6/5/98 Bahais backbiting

[Re: \[bahai-faith\] Fw: fw Juan Cole: censorship](#) 6/3/98 Bahais backbiting

RE: institutions and circumstances associated with birth of Faith 6/1/98 Deteriorated into a narrow organized religion censorship 5/27/98 FG's report of censorship practices at SRB mirrors my own experience.

Re Kalimat Press 5/11/98 Inquiry about my book

Re: Covenant Breakers 3/3/98 170 Individuals subscribed to Talisman I

two wrongs make a wrong 2/10/98 Dr. Hossein Danesh charged by three women patients w/ taking advantage of them

criticism and attacks 2/10/98 The typical stance of the Baha'i Right

Re: New Zealand shunning of non-Baha'i 2/8/98 U.S. case law on shunning

New Zealand shunning of non-Baha'i 2/8/98 two non-Baha'is are being shunned by the Baha'i community.

Re: Shunning and religious tolerance 2/8/98 Leaders rideroughshod over human rights

New Zealand shunning of non-Baha'i 2/8/98 Ms Pauline Smith has broken the Covenant and expelled from the Faith

Re: Control of media? 2/8/98 NSA of Australia injured Nima Hazini's rights

Re: Control of media? 2/8/98 Authoritarian and anti-intellectual streak to the Baha'i organization

Re: Control of media? 2/6/98 Harrassed by Baha'i authorities, subjecting my academic writing to prepublication censorship

Re: Khomeinism and phenomenology 2/3/98 Shunning in Iran and the USA

1997

Re: democratic \(ha!\) 12/15/97 Dnuffingout individual initiative

democratic \(ha!\) 12/12/97 The point of these inquisitions and expulsions is to ensure conservative hegemony

Re: forward too to UHJ? 12/3/97 They are going to declare you a covenant breaker eventually

[Re: Re\[2\]: anonymous remailers](#) 12/3/1997 Persons were signed on to Irfan under false pretences, as, essentially, spies

[Re: Re\[2\]: anonymous remailers](#) 12/3/1997 Bahais backbiting

Re: anonymous remailers 12/3/1997 Bahais demonizing others

anonymous remailers 12/3/97 Under investigation by the counselors

Freedom of speech and conscience, and Interpretation #2 10/22/97 Abdul-Baha advocated freedom of conscience/speech

Freedom of speech and conscience, and Interpretation 10/21/97 Vast chasm between Baha'i scriptural ideals and practice

Administrative Expulsion #3 1/31/97 Administrative rights taken away for publicly criticizing the National Spiritual Assembly

Administrative Expulsion #2 1/29/97 Administrative rights taken away for publicly criticizing the National Spiritual Assembly

Administrative Expulsion 1/29/97 Administrative rights taken away for publicly criticizing the National Spiritual Assembly

1996

Denial of Freedom of Conscience in Bahai 10/22/96 Comments on reactions to his withdrawal from the Bahai Faith

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan R Cole <jrcole@umich.edu> Newsgroups: soc.religion.bahai Subject: Re: Denial of freedom of conscience in Baha'i (fwd) Date: 22 Oct 1996 19:58:05 -0700 Organization: ---- Lines: 85 Approved: rdetweil@primenet.com (Richard Detweiler) Distribution: world Message-ID: <54k1jt$mr@nnrp1.news.primenet.com> X-Posted-By: rdetweil@206.165.5.111 (rdetweil) Path: zeus.moa.net!news2.acs.oakland.edu!news.tacom.army.mil!news.webspan.net!www.nntp.primenet.com!nntp.primenet.com!news.primenet.com!news.primenet.com!not-for-mail >From Professor Juan R. I. Cole, Middle Eastern History, University of Michigan:

I guess I am disappointed at the responses that have come in replying to my plea for greater open-mindedness in the Baha'i community and for a consideration of where it might have gone wrong in departing so vividly from its original ideals, which were not so different from the Unitarian Universalism to which I now adhere.

The responses from Baha'is fell into three basic categories. Some denied that there was any freedom of conscience or speech in the Baha'i faith to begin with, misusing the Kitab-i Aqdas to this end. But Baha'u'llah advocated parliamentary liberties in the Absolutist Middle East; he criticized the sort of liberty that led to immorality, but he advocated human rights. So too did `Abdul-Baha, in Secret of Divine Civilization, A Traveller's Narrative, and his talks in the West.

`Abdul-Baha explicitly said in his Persian talks in Palo Alto and Budapest that in the Baha'i faith there is freedom of thought and speech, but not freedom of behavior, and that houses of justice are forbidden to persecute Baha'is on the basis of mere beliefs. (This does not mean there can be no criminal speech, such as libel; but `Abdul-Baha did not want doctrinal disputes to be a matter for prosecution). In my view, current Baha'i practice has diverged from `Abdul-Baha's high ideals. Some maintained that the Baha'i institutions are not democratic. But Shoghi Effendi did say they should be democratic in their methods and he said that the declaration of conscience by a Baha'i was a right. The word Baha'u'llah used for consultation of the sort Baha'i houses of justice were to undertake, mashvirat, was a synonym in the 19th century Middle East for parliamentary deliberation, for what we would now call democracy. All elective institutions can run the gamut from being more democratic (with greater popular input, constitutional guarantees of individual rights) to being elective dictatorships, what the German sociologist Max Weber called Fuehrerdemokratie. I suppose Baha'is have a choice of which they want their institutions to be. I know that Unitarian Universalism looks a lot more genuinely democratic, and I think it is a superior way of doing things, and IMHO probably closer to what Baha'u'llah himself had in mind for the future of religion.

Others, on the basis of no knowledge, accused me of desiring some sort of high position for myself. I hope that is not true; I certainly don't believe it to be true, nor do I believe the record supports such an allegation. All I wanted was to be free to conduct my independent investigation of reality.

A third sort of response expressed a knee-jerk support for whatever the Baha'i authorities did. These people have a vision in which those in control of the Administrative Order can make no mistakes. They have given up the independent investigation of reality in favor of blind obedience, just as the Shi'ites are to blindly obey their ayatollahs. This mindset in a religious group is always dangerous, and Baha'is should really ask themselves whether it is wise to surrender all their critical faculties to persons about whom they are relatively ignorant.

`Abdul-Baha seemed confident that if those in authority made an error, and the community supported them in it, then eventually the error would be corrected. But empirical evidence suggests that in fact for the community always unquestioningly to support those in power leads to abuses of individual rights. There is a problem here, which Baha'is of good faith really ought to seek to address.

Some kind persons did express their gratitude (which I certainly do not deserve) for some of the provisional translations I did while I was a Baha'i. Those who wish to see these may do so at a Web site I put up, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>. My Web page can also be found by looking me up by name in Lycos or Altavista.

I forgive those individuals who made serious charges against me, precipitating my resignation from the Baha'i faith. They thought they were doing something admirable. I continue to admire much in the Baha'i religion, and wish my Baha'i friends well. But you really could all learn a lot from more seriously considering the Unitarian Universalist principles I posted.

Sincerely,

Juan Cole

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Universal Religion, Jenabe Fazel Mazandarani

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Dagur Nordberg <d_nordberg@hotmail.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Mazandarani and the Interrogation
Date: Friday, June 12, 1998 11:05 PM

Dear Dagur:

You will note that I am not sending my replies to Irfan because I don't think that is the right place for this discussion.

Basically, I feel that you are not open to what I am saying, and I therefore am not particularly interested in pursuing this with you. You have as much as called me a liar, said I was guilty of character assassination, and so forth. I realize that these responses well up from your faith, and from a reluctance to give credence to charges that, if true, reflect very badly indeed on the leaders of the Baha'i faith. You won't want to believe it, but I have no wish whatsoever to rob you of your faith. I want the Baha'i faith to be better and more successful than it is as an organization. Just as I believe that American democracy is better for the exposure of Nixon's abuses in the Watergate affair and for the anti-war movement during Vietnam, so I believe that a critique of the Baha'i status quo, while painful, will leave the religion stronger and better and more successful in the future.

Let me ask you why in the world you think that I would risk my professional reputation by publicly stating falsehoods? And why in the world would I be so angry at the Martins, Arbabs, Furutans, etc., etc., if they haven't in fact victimized my friends and people I admire? The very technique of the more glaze-eyed among these people is to unbearably bully a Baha'i whom they don't like, use unjustified threats of declaring him or her a CB to silence the individual, and if the person will not be silenced, then to depend upon the gullibility of the Baha'is in refusing to listen to any victim's story because, of course, the Baha'i institutions are infallible and divinely guided and could never do anything wrong. It is a perfect racket.

Of course, this technique of making liberals go away has been enormously successful, and ex-Baha'i liberals have no credibility with the remaining Baha'is nor do most of them have any energy to continue to make a case, either to the Baha'is or the outside world, for the incredible abuses that go on inside this organization ostensibly committed to tolerance!

So, I accept all that, and I knew it when I resigned from the Baha'i faith.

I knew I would be vilified, dismissed, called prideful for refusing to allow myself to be bullied, called dishonest, etc. This is fine with me. I am well aware of my faults. No one is more aware of them. I am the proverbial broken winged bird, a broken man, a man with shattered faith, a man betrayed by supposed friends of 25 years. No insult, no condescension, no charge of dishonesty or madness can take anything more away from me than the power-hungry and cruel men who sat down and deliberately planned out how to rob me of Baha'u'llah.

As for my meeting with Birkland, I shall relate the entire story in detail eventually. Initially it was mutually agreed that there should be a consultation. But unexpectedly, instead of a consultation, he had brought along a pre-prepared set of stupid questions which in fact were basically charges of thought crimes. "How can you say you believe in Baha'u'llah if you talk about him like a historical figure?" "Do you think any passage of scripture can be understood apart from historical context?" "You are critical of the accuracy of texts like Nabil's narrative; but these heroic narratives have done rather well for us." The idiocy, the absolute idiocy. It was the fast, and I kept my cool. I did not throw him out of my house and I did not speak sharply to him. I now wish I had, but I didn't. I was too nice, too obedient. He wrote a report to Haifa which resulted in heresy charges against me. He called me up after ten p.m. on a Tuesday and informed me that the ITC had concluded that I had 'made statements contrary to the covenant.' "I'm sorry." he said in a funereal tone.

Many of the Talisman I discussions are up on my web site. Anyone can read them to see if they think I was expressing the sincere views of a convinced Baha'i.

Incidentally, Birkland also interrogated John Walbridge and others in exactly the same way. He gave a pledge in writing to share with Dr. Walbridge his report to Haifa. He reneged on that pledge. He is a liar in addition to being an inquisitor.

But Birkland is not important. He is a gopher. If the people in Haifa had told him to come to my house and kiss my feet, he would have done that. The ones who drew up those stupid questions were people like Doug Martin. They hide behind the screen of institutions with grand names, and plot on how to chase out or silence anyone who does not fit their narrow-minded conception of what a Baha'i is. Why do you think Denis MacEoin and so many other thinkers who were once so devoted to the faith are no longer Baha'is? These people were mean to them behind the scenes. And then all the Baha'is see is an angry person denouncing how the Baha'i faith is run, and they have no sympathy for the one victimized. You'd be surprised how effective making someone's life hell can be if you are supposed to be his religious leader and he begins by being full of awe for you, and what you want is to get rid of him. It is as with love. A sudden betrayal can break a heart, and then it is over.

Am off on vacation. Don't be prideful in my absence. :-)

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Universal Religion, Jenabe Fazel Mazandarani

Brief Quotations - Professor Juan Cole

Selected Messages

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Dagur Nordberg <d_nordberg@hotmail.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; irfan1@umich.edu <irfan1@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: uniting Talisman and Irfan
Date: Thursday, June 11, 1998 7:29 PM

Dear Dagur:

I know it is hard to hear that one's religious leaders are human beings who have foibles, since for most people religion is about creating a fantasy world that serves as an alternative to the real world. In the 'real world' people can make mistakes. But, of course, the Shi'ite ayatollahs, the popes, the hands of the cause and the members of the house of justice, the televangelists, the Hindu gurus, the Buddhist monks--these are not ordinary human beings, don't have prejudices, are pure and kind and angelic.

For anyone who believes such a thing, of course, it is almost impossible to supply evidence to the contrary.

Let us take Furutan, for instance. When Fadil Mazandarani published the third volume of his monumental history of the Babi-Baha'i religions in Iran in the 1940s, Furutan was on the Iran NSA and he hit the roof. This book, he said, contained reprinted Babi primary sources that contradicted the accounts in Nabil's narrative. This could not be allowed. Furutan organized an assault on Mazandarani, made him withdraw the book from circulation, and made him sign a prepared confession that it was wrong of him to have published those sources that contained discrepancies with Nabil. Mazandarani was permanently silenced in Iran, and his children are not Baha'is. His massive 9-volume history of the faith has never been allowed to be published.

Now, Furutan may love children and dogs and be able to summon a kind smile when greeting pilgrims. But he is an Inquisitor. He ruined Fadil Mazandarani's life and destroyed the foundation of Baha'i historiography in the twentieth century. Why? A) Because he had this moronic, narrow-minded idea that Nabil's Narrative should be canonized as an unchallengeable piece of scripture and that all other Babi historical texts should therefore be suppressed (even if earlier and more reliable) and B) because he had gained the power to do so by virtue of the transformation of the Baha'i institutions into Leninist vanguards in the 1930s and 1940s.

I repeat that this man is a bigot, and by his anti-intellectualism and fundamentalism contributed to the destruction of the Baha'i faith as a religion for thinking people in this century. Of course, perhaps now he is sorry for what he did to Fadil Mazandarani, whose shoes he is not good enough to have shined. Perhaps he has changed for the better. I don't know. I know he's never publicly apologized for his inquisition or his destruction of Baha'i intellectual life.

The comforting thing is that if the Baha'i faith hasn't dwindled into nothingness in 500 years (a real possibility if its leaders go on in the present direction), people will still be reading Fadil Mazandarani's histories, and Furutan will be remembered only as a footnote in that great man's biographies, rather as the cardinal who persecuted Galileo is now known for nothing else that he did.

So is this enough evidence for you?

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Burl Barer <burlb@bmi.net>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: 4 year plan
Date: Tuesday, June 23, 1998 12:52 PM

Dear Burl:

Here are some instances of individual initiative in the Baha'i community:

- 1) In the early 1970s young Baha'is showed initiative in opening up South Carolina to mass teaching, with enormous success. As a result, Firuz Kazemzadeh and others on the NSA closed down the mass enrollment process, diverted funds away from teaching, and ordered the successful teachers out of the area, thus stopping the entry by troops there.
- 2) In the late 1970s young individuals in the United Kingdom showed individual initiative in beginning academic conferences on Baha'i studies. They were slapped down with nasty letters from Haifa and the person with the most initiative, Denis MacEoin, was driven out of the faith by AQ Fayzi, David Hoffman, Ian Semple, and others.
- 3) In the late 1970s young intellectuals in the Los Angeles area showed individual initiative in setting up a study class for Baha'i studies. Local Baha'is declared them outside the covenant because the meetings weren't sponsored by any Baha'i institution. When other individuals showed initiative in asking for typescripts of the discussions, they showed the initiative of putting out a newsletter. They were slapped down by nasty letters from Wilmette, and ordered to submit the newsletter for official Baha'i censorship. Gradually the class petered out.
- 4) In the mid 1980s young intellectuals in the Los Angeles area showed initiative in beginning Dialogue magazine. They were immediately informed through intermediaries that people like Ian Semple felt they had showed way too much initiative, and they were ordered by Wilmette and Haifa to take the word 'Baha'i' out of their title and subtitle. After the magazine had run for a couple of years, with the editors submitting the articles for censorship, the editors were attacked on false charges by Firuz Kazemzadeh at National Convention in 1988, their personal letters were read out by him on the convention floor, and the NSA interrogated the editors in an attempt to intimidate them, which succeeded, and the magazine closed.
- 5) In the late 1980s and early 1990s John Walbridge and Moojan Momen showed initiative in beginning and editing the Baha'i Encyclopedia. After Farzam Arbab was elected to the universal house of justice in 1993, he stopped this project in its tracks, had nasty letters written to everyone involved in it, and insisted it be redone along fundamentalist lines.
- 6) In 1994 John Walbridge showed individual initiative by beginning a listserv for Baha'i studies, talisman@indiana.edu . After a couple of years he and several other prominent academic posters there were accused by the Baha'i authorities in Haifa of 'making statements contrary to the covenant' and threatened with being shunned if they did not fall silent. The listserv was disbanded and those accused either fell silent or left the faith.

7) In the mid-1990s Said Khadivian showed initiative in trying to get mass teaching off the ground in Houston. When some success began to be realized, Henderson insisted in coming in and taking over the project, which then collapsed, and Khadivian was ordered back to Taiwan.

I take away from all this the distinct impression that the praise of individual initiative by the institutions and persons you list is an instance of 'words, not deeds,' and, indeed, a smokescreen for the severe disapproval in which individual initiative is in fact held by the entire Baha'i administrative apparatus, which is far more interested in maintaining control than in expansion, either of numbers or of Baha'i culture.

When they match their words about individual initiative with deeds, then the Baha'i authorities will have some hope of growing the faith, in quantity and quality. At the moment it is stalled in the West, and the blame rests squarely on the shoulders of the nsa and the universal house of justice.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Bjaff@aol.com <Bjaff@aol.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: 4 year plan
Date: Tuesday, June 23, 1998 7:02 PM

Well, I have to admit that I am exercised about this problem of over-centralization and repression. I genuinely believe that it seriously hurts the growth of the Baha'i faith, numerically and culturally and spiritually. It annoys me to think of 25 years of my life being spent in intensive labor on something that ends up being screwed up by incompetents.

When people used to complain to Shoghi Effendi about these sorts of problems, he generally answered with advice to expand the community through teaching and thus to sidestep the rigid and problematic Baha'is. But in actual fact, the very dominance of the community by hardliners who see covenant breakers under their beds, whose first instinct is to attack and to squelch innovation, has made it very difficult to grow the community substantially.

I am sorry to say it, but a good third of Baha'is are just very unpleasant people to be around and make it their business to drive out of the faith anyone who doesn't agree with them (something they are quite successful at). That third also somehow seems to be the recruitment pool for the administrative order. What happened to Michael McKenny (whom the Baha'is had been lucky to have) is only a somewhat spectacular example of a phenomenon that is repeated hundreds if not thousands of times each year in North America. Narrow-minded people summarily forced a Baha'i with whom they did not agree out of the faith.

My own advice to Baha'is who run into these problems is just to do their own thing. Your community is unpleasant? Find some Baha'is in cyberspace with whom you enjoy hanging out and create a virtual community. Sign up under an electronic pseudonym if you would otherwise be afraid of speaking your mind. Enjoy writing about the Baha'i faith but can't stand Review? Found a Web magazine and publish to your heart's content. Your community is unhappy with policies in Wilmette? Keep the money at home and do things with it the local community appreciates. Would rather have a local mashriqu'l-adhkar than yet another monumental neoclassical building in Haifa? Build a local Baha'i center and refer to it in your heart as a mashriqu'l-adhkar. Attend the local Unitarian Universalist fellowship as well. Want to read more of Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha than has been officially translated? Frequent the provisional translations on the Web. The agencies of repression are very powerful, but they can be sidestepped.

Baha'u'llah was a Great Soul, and his spiritual and social teachings are a mighty River. Small beavers who think they are divinely guided can attempt to dam the river, but in the end their sticks and mud and hollow trunks will be swept away and the river will flow on, mightier than before.

cheers Juan

At 04:48 PM 6/23/98 EDT, Bjaff@aol.com wrote:

>I'm amazed by the list of individual initiative programs that have been shut >down and discouraged. This points to overt oppression and I see a revolution >in the works. Proclaiming the problems from the internet mountain tops is one >thing, but finding solutions is another. There must be Justice manifest in
the >world, yet the UHJ seems to be contradicting itself by using unjust methods of >control. Maybe it would be beneficial to investigate alternative answers. Is >there anyone who has an acceptable solution to addressing these problems?

>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Burl Barer <burlb@bmi.net>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: driving Ms Scholars
Date: Wednesday, June 24, 1998 1:25 PM

Dear Burl:

I have great respect for Peter Khan. However, the Sept. 1995 talk he gave in Wilmette did enormous damage to the Cause of Baha'u'llah. By insinuating that the prominent academics on Talisman were "insidious lukewarm intellectuals" comparable to the German Baha'is who stuck to

`Abdul-Baha's policies and rejected Shoghi Effendi's authority, he gave a "green light" to hardliners in Wilmette who wanted to move against Talisman

1. Very soon after that talk, Robert Henderson initiated the process that ended in David Langness's administrative rights being removed, simply because Henderson's version of the Dialogue events differed from David's.

When you get to the point where posting an email with an alternative (even if inaccurate) view on history is a sanctionable offense in Baha'i law, you have arrived at a very weird, surreal, and authoritarian place.

I also fear that positioning the counselors as the happy mean between the over-critical, destructive academics and the overly rigid traditionalists just won't work (except perhaps with regard to Khan himself; I don't know).

Denis MacEoin wasn't doing anything destructive in his studies of the Babi era, and he certainly wasn't doing anything that would have caused him to be forced out of normal religions. Nobody at all was doing anything destructive on Talisman I; it was just an email discussion list, for God's sake. And, alas, my experience with the counselors leads me to suspect that the gap between most of them and the overly rigid traditionalists has somehow been miraculously erased.

Also, while I agree that it is highly regrettable that the best Baha'i historians of this generation have for the most part been either silenced or driven out of the religion, I am confused as to why anyone would think that "regrettable" but continue to endorse the methods of behind the scenes bullying and false and outrageous charges of covenant breaking that resulted in their departure. I would also note that the general reaction of the Baha'i authorities to these departures has been one of self-congratulation and gloating rather than regret.

As for my respect for Burl, it is quite simple. I have enormous admiration for anyone who can publish any kind of fiction with a respectable publisher. No one who hasn't tried has any idea how difficult this is, and what sort of special intelligence is involved. I admire Denis MacEoin in this regard as well.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan R. I. Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>;
irfan1@umich.edu
<irfan1@umich.edu>
Date: Tuesday, February 03, 1998 8:23 PM
Subject: Re: Khomeinism and phenomenology

Dear [X]:

The vast majority of Iranian Baha'is do not experience discrimination in the form of physical violence. They experience it in the form of being shunned by their wider society, and from facing disabilities that come from being shunned. I can't tell you how many Iranian Baha'is have bitterly and at length complained to me, sometimes with tears in their eyes, about the >social discrimination they faced in Iran. People wouldn't invite them over to dinner, or if they did they considered the Baha'i guest ritually polluted and would break the plates they ate on after they left. I always listened to such stories of shunning and discrimination with a great deal of sympathy, and they continue to pull at my heart strings. People should not be shunned for their beliefs. Nowadays, things are even worse. Iranian Baha'is may not attend university.

However, I was threatened with being shunned by the Baha'is for my beliefs, and some of my old friends in the community now shun me, and don't invite me over to dinner, or even answer my email greetings. And no doubt some of them would break their plates if I ate off them.

Of course, it would be much worse if I had actually been declared a CB instead of only being accused of "making statements contrary to the covenant." I would have become a non-person to a lifetime of friends and family. A Baha'i intellectual who was declared a CB would not be welcome to use Baha'i libraries or archives or to benefit from Baha'i educational activities, in exactly the same way as the Iranian Baha'is are excluded from Shi'ite universities.

Moreover, to suggest that the existential hell that a believer is put through by being "dropped from the rolls" or being accused of contravening the covenant is trivial is to take a cruel and instrumental view of human suffering. The Baha'i authorities are not welcome to treat human beings as though they are chess pieces, and as though they have no rights. And I predict to you that if they go on in the direction they are going, sooner or later they will land in legal trouble. Already the governmental authorities in Germany, who have a special sensitivity to fascism, have their eye on the Baha'i faith as an organization that might be being run like a cult.

To the extent that the Baha'i authorities (we are talking about Firuz Kazemzadeh, Robert Henderson, Douglas Martin, Farzam Arbab and Ian Semple among others) actually do run the religion like a cult, they will increase the surveillance of their activities by civil libertarians and the civil authorities in charge of protecting civil liberties in the free world. Already last fall, plans were made to send a German Counselor across the border to a neighboring country to silence a Baha'i living there. Don't the Baha'i authorities have the slightest idea of what that would look like if it got into the European press?

Anyway, I don't actually see the slightest difference between the way

Baha'is treat those they think should be shunned for their ideas and the way some Shi`ites shun the Iranian Baha'is. Nor do I see much difference in the authoritarian style of the chief Shi`ite authorities and that of the so-called universal house of justice and its counselors. The only difference is that the Baha'is don't yet have control of the apparatus of a state, and so can't jail dissidents. Whether they would execute them if they could remains to be seen.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Cc: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Subject: Re: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology
Date: Friday, September 04, 1998 2:06 AM

Someone asked where Shoghi Effendi spoke of the administrative order being mutilated without a Guardian. It is World Order of Baha'u'llah p. 148:

"An attempt, I feel, should at the present juncture be made to explain the character and functions of the twin pillars that support this mighty Administrative Structure--the institutions of the Guardianship and of the Universal House of Justice. To describe in their entirety the diverse elements that function in conjunction with these institutions is beyond the scope and purpose of this general exposition of the fundamental verities of the Faith. To define with accuracy and minuteness the features, and to analyze exhaustively the nature of the relationships which, on the one hand, bind together these two fundamental organs of the Will of `Abdu'l-Bahá and connect, on the other, each of them to the Author of the Faith and the Center of His Covenant is a task which future generations will no doubt adequately fulfill. My present intention is to elaborate certain salient features of this scheme which, however close we may stand to its colossal structure, are already so clearly defined that we find it inexcusable to either misconceive or ignore. 13 It should be stated, at the very outset, in clear and unambiguous language, that these twin institutions of the Administrative Order of Bahá'u'lláh should be regarded as divine in origin, essential in their functions and complementary in their aim and purpose. Their common, their fundamental object is to insure the continuity of that divinely-appointed authority which flows from the Source of our Faith, to safeguard the unity of its followers and to maintain the integrity and flexibility of its teachings. Acting in conjunction with each other these two inseparable institutions administer its affairs, coordinate its activities, promote its interests, execute its laws and defend its subsidiary institutions. Severally, each operates within a clearly defined sphere of jurisdiction; each is equipped with its own attendant institutions--instruments designed for the effective discharge of its particular responsibilities and duties. Each exercises, within the limitations imposed upon it, its powers, its authority, its rights and prerogatives. These are neither contradictory, nor detract in the slightest degree from the position which each of these institutions occupies. Far from being incompatible or mutually destructive, they supplement each other's authority and functions, and are permanently and fundamentally united in their aims."

The uhj tries to interpret this passage away by pointing out that the Guardianship operated just fine without a house of justice, so obviously the house of justice can operate without a living Guardian. Moreover, the lack of a living guardian does not detract from the fact that the guardianship did exist at one point, leaving a great deal of guidance.

The problem is that the Guardian did think it essential that a house of justice come to be asap, and he constantly put things off or made rulings provisional upon their future acceptance. Obviously, this schema cannot work the other way around--the uhj cannot put things off or rule only provisionally on issues in hopes of a future guardian arising, since there can be no further guardians. Moreover, it is also clear from his diction that he felt that key checks and balances in the Baha'i system were provided by a living Guardian.

On pp. 154-155 of World Order of Baha'u'llah, Shoghi Effendi continues,

"The hereditary authority which the Guardian is called upon to exercise, the vital and essential functions which the Universal House of Justice discharges, the specific provisions requiring its democratic election by the representatives of the faithful--these combine to demonstrate the truth that this divinely revealed Order, which can never be identified with any of the standard types of government referred to by Aristotle in his works, embodies and blends with the spiritual verities on which it is based the beneficent elements which are to be found in each one of them. The admitted evils inherent in each of these systems being rigidly and permanently excluded, this unique Order, however long it may endure and however extensive its ramifications, cannot ever degenerate into any form of despotism, of oligarchy, or of demagoguery which must sooner or later corrupt the machinery of all man-made and essentially defective political institutions."

Shoghi Effendi is referring to Aristotle's division of government into rule by the one, rule by the few, and rule by the many. Aristotle thought each of these forms of government, in turn, had a virtuous and corrupt form. Rule of the one is ideally a virtuous monarchy, but it could deteriorate into despotism. Rule of the few is ideally a noble aristocracy, but it could deteriorate into oligarchy (we would say a junta). Rule of the many is ideally a just Republic or Polity that protects the rights of minorities; but it could deteriorate into demagoguery and a tyranny of the majority.

Shoghi Effendi was saying that the Baha'i system had all three elements: rule of the one was the Guardianship, rule of the few was the Hands (?), and rule of the many was the elected officers of the houses of justice (including NSAs and LSAs).

Now, according to Aristotle, the rule of the many, i.e., the rule of the houses of justice, was liable to deteriorate into demagoguery and the tyranny of the majority (a sort of populist fascism, we might say). Shoghi Effendi says explicitly that it is the hereditary principle of the Guardianship (i.e. the Baha'i equivalent of monarchy) that keeps this deterioration from occurring. Obviously, in the absence of a living Guardian and with the end of the institution of the hands of the cause, the Baha'i system no longer has a living, breathing representative of the monarchical principle nor of the aristocratic. This means that the houses of justice have become a Republic. And according to Shoghi Effendi's analysis, this Republic is open to going bad and becoming demagogic. Notice that he does not say that what prevents the uhj from becoming tyrannical is its own infallibility, or divine guidance, or anything so airy fairy. He is concrete and explicit. It is the simultaneous presence of the monarchical, aristocratic and republican forms of governance that act as institutional brakes on one another. That institutional brake is no longer effectively present.

And this is the only way I can understand how things have gone so wrong in the Baha'i faith. Things are so corrupt that people like Firuz Kazemzadeh go about publicly and explicitly identifying the elected officials of the faith with an "aristocracy!" This does so much damage to both Aristotle and Shoghi Effendi (not to mention common sense) that one cringes. I suppose it must be nice for Firuz, though. And one of the reasons I left was that in spring of 1996 the uhj mangled the interpretation of this passage by insisting that it is the 'rule of the one'! Well, of course, they aren't authorized to interpret things, though, are they?

What would replace the role of the Guardian in keeping the elected officials from becoming demagogues? Well, maybe nothing can. But maybe public opinion could. Just the censure of ordinary Baha'is. And the wonderful thing for the Baha'i faith at this juncture, and the thing that gives even me hope for those still clinging to the crimson ark, is that cyberspace is creating a Baha'i public opinion, and the uhj and the nsa's are beginning to feel pressure from it. They hate it. They had liked thinking of themselves as 'aristocrats' (or actually oligarchs given how they often have behaved). But they had better shed the velvet robes and dump the silver wine goblets, with the $200 million palaces, and get back to being plain democratic representatives of the Baha'i Republic or eventually they will lose all their power and perquisites, altogether.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi`ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN

February 27, 1997, Religion News Service

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/WalbridgeL.htm> Obituary 2002 by Juan Cole

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Subject: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology (further)
Date: Friday, September 04, 1998 3:06 PM

All the various quotes you assembled only show that Shoghi Effendi agreed with Baha'u'llah that the universal house of justice is the legitimate head of the Baha'i faith. Even as an outsider, I am perfectly willing to concede that.

However, Shoghi Effendi also did accept the Aristotelian principle that good forms of government are liable to deteriorate into bad forms of government. And he specified the checks and balances in the system he elaborated that would prevent the republican, elected, element from deteriorating into demagoguery; and they consisted in the living Guardian, the embodiment of the monarchical principle. Without the latter, the universal house of justice is still the legitimate head of the Baha'i religion, but it is at risk for deteriorating into an authoritarian populism and of acting in ways that are cult-like.

I survey the field of the religions. I see, for instance, among the Episcopalians, a theologian like Bishop John Spong. He challenges many traditional Christian doctrines. The Episcopalians haven't ostracized him, threatened him, or shunned him. In fact, they appear to have made him a bishop.

The Episcopalians appear to be rather broad-minded. I see the Unitarian Universalists, who would never dream of kicking a Ph.D. out because of his work on UU history. I see Quakers, gentle and engaging in a sort of consultation every Sunday morning. I see Sufi groups in Islam, chanting and laughing and loving, accepting all who wish to learn wisdom. I see many branches of Hinduism and Buddhism that are highly tolerant.

But then I see other sorts of religion. I see Khamenei's Iran, where people are jailed for their theological views and even killed. I see Roman Catholicism, where Matthew Fox was forced out because of his vibrant Creation Theology, where Leonardo Boff was silenced and forced out because of his Liberation Theology, where Hans Kung was put on trial and denied the opportunity to teach Catholic theology for his reasoned, modernist theology. I see Sunni Islam, where Nasr Abu Zayd was actually forced into exile from Egypt for his Higher Criticism of the Qur'an, and threatened with being divorced from his spouse.

And given what happened to Denis MacEoin, Abbas Amanat, Steven Scholl, Linda Walbridge, Bill Garlington, Geoffrey Nash, and many, many others, I can only conclude that the Baha'i faith is now being run like the second group of religions. Indeed, among those Baha'i thinkers threatened with being shunned were persons whose shunning might well have resulted in a forcible divorce of exactly the same sort the Egyptian mullas threatened Abu Zayd with. The Baha'i faith is being run like that by the universal house of justice. This is so obviously not what Baha'u'llah intended, with his calls for tolerance and universalism, that obviously the religion he created has been mutilated. Now, this wasn't supposed to happen. But it has happened. And I think the lack of institutional checks and balances in the current structure, which Shoghi Effendi thought so essential, are an excellent explanation for why the mutilation of the Baha'i faith has occurred. Someone accused me of conducting a personal vendetta. But this is not about personalities. The structures are the problem; even really promising people are corrupted by absolute power, which is what the Baha'i institutions now have within the community.

But you know what? The Vatican has been forced to back down on a number of issues by public outcries in recent years. It had to apologize to Galileo (some Jesuits still grumble that what was done to him was perfectly all right!). It had to reinstate a Sri Lankan priest who had dared to compare Christianity and Buddhism (John Paul II is has a bigotted hatred of Buddhism). And even the Iranian Ayatollahs were forced to back off their pogroms against the Baha'is, not completely, but in some part, by the world outcry. So religious authorities of the persecuting kind are not completely autonomous in the contemporary world. And neither is the moth-eaten guardianless universal house of justice. The checks and balances that would have been supplied by the 'good king' will have to come from public opinion, within the faith and without. The assiduous attempts to prevent the emergence of such a public opinion are failing. And the Baha'i faith will in the end be a much better and less predatory place for it.

cheers Juan

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi`ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Richard Schaut <RSSchaut@email.msn.com>
Cc: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: Checks & Balances (was fw Juan Cole mutilation theology)
Date: Wednesday, September 16, 1998 2:06 PM

Dear Rick:

I wish you would spend more time getting rid of those 'fatal protection faults' that make us Microsoft users' lives hell (which somehow don't seem to be a problem for Apple users) and less time expounding Aristotle. :-)

I thank you for your comments on my note, which I hope to expand as a paper, and, of course, the process of dialogue and criticism can only make it a better paper.

I am sorry you used the word 'absurdities,' however, since I do not believe my perspective is absurd even if it may need refinement, and I do not believe that my studies of Baha'i texts have ever been frivolous in such a way as would legitimately call for such an insult.

You wrote:

>>From a political science perspective, the existence of some form of checks >and balances requires a tension between powers and authorities granted to >various branches of government. Specifically, it requires two or more >separate institutions to have authority to limit each other's functions.

But the Guardian himself said what prevents the various elements of the Baha'i system (rule of the one, rule of the few, and rule of the many) from deteriorating from their good form (monarchy, aristocracy, republicanism) to their bad form (despotism, oligarchy, demagoguery). That is, when he says on WOB p. 154 that the administrative order cannot degenerate into despotism, oligarchy or demagoguery, this is coming as the conclusion of an argument earlier in the paragraph: the reason for which it cannot degenerate is because the administration "embodies and blends with the spiritual verities on which it is based the beneficent elements which are to be found in each one of them"--that is, it embodies the beneficent elements of monarchy, aristocracy and republicanism.

Now, obviously, logically speaking, should the system cease to "embody" all three of these "beneficent elements", and instead be left with only one of them (rule of the many via their elected representatives), then we would have a different system. With the end of the guardianship, that is what has happened. (The fiction that rule of the one continues through the Guardian's writings is just propaganda; those writings can be interpreted in many ways, and when they are misinterpreted for narrow institutional purposes they can't talk back the way a living Guardian would.) The rule of the many, as we all know, is in constant danger of becoming demagogic and a tyranny of the majority. And there is no 'beneficent' rule of the one--the Guardian--to offset this tendency.

Note that in the U.S. system, the Supreme Court also could not come in and make foreign policy, 'over-ruling' the Cabinet. It would have to respect the executive sphere of authority. I doubt it could even rule a foreign policy unconstitutional. But in other respects the existence of an independent judiciary that interprets the laws does limit the ability of the executive branch to act in a despotic fashion.

It is certainly the case that a living Guardian would have been in a position to deter the other 8 members of the universal house of justice from acting in a dictatorial fashion. As Interpreter of the text, he could simply tell them that his interpretation of the scriptures ruled out falsely accusing college professors of covenant breaking as a way of silencing them or discrediting them in the community. The latter sort of action, of which the present universal house of justice has been egregiously guilty, clearly violates not only enormous numbers of scriptural texts guaranteeing freedom in thought, speech and intellectual inquiry, but violates the constitution of the universal house of justice itself, which constrains that body to protect the rights of individual Baha'is. (Ha!). A living Guardian could not have over-ruled such a malicious, mad and slightly stupid plan, but he could have weighed in, using his charisma and interpretive authority, to prevent the Hyppolyte Dryfuses and Auguste Forels of a later time from being railroaded by fundamentalist electrical engineers and narrow-minded failed businessmen and actors. And I firmly believe he would have.

I think Rick Schaut knows very well that there are areas of corruption and unjustified repression in the Baha'i administration. He has a faith that all will be well nevertheless. I have had that faith shattered by witnessing my universal house of justice, in which I used to repose such high hopes, act like a group of ayatollahs or inquisitorial cardinals, falsely accusing decent, energetic, loving Baha'is like Linda Walbridge of verbal covenant breaking as a way of silencing their voices. They don't have the right or the legitimate authority to silence individual Baha'is from their expression of individual interpretation. This is something 'Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi guaranteed the Baha'is. They are acting like despots. And whether my explanation of how this could have come to be is completely correct or not, some explanation of it is required.

cheers

Juan Cole
Professor
History
U of Michigan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>

See also Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: bahai-faith@egroups.com <bahai-faith@egroups.com>

Subject: [bahai-faith] on the bites on my back

Date: Monday, October 12, 1998 12:34 PM

I guess I'm distressed that I am being libelled on an email bulletin board somewhere at AOL, in my complete absence and with no opportunity of reply or even being cc'd by the persons discussing me! Unlike the Baha'i administration I don't have regularly employed spies and therefore it was entirely possible that I might not even have seen these scurrilous attacks!

I have been accused of being 'status seeking.' This is a typical way for anti-intellectuals to dismiss anyone who dares speak. Meanwhile, the people who are really status seekers are considered humble and self-effacing! Even denouncing intellectuals is itself a way of getting status in the Baha'i community. As for myself, if I had wanted status I would have allowed myself to be silenced and 'turned' by the high-up cultists in the administration; they intimated that that way I might even have had a shot at membership on the NSA. By speaking out against injustice I have lost all status in the Baha'i community, being completely humiliated as an apostate and critic. I myself publicized the false and scurrilous ITC/UHJ charge against me of 'making statements contrary to the covenant.' What status did I gain from that? I have spoken out precisely because status is not important to me. Human rights are important to me, and I believe Baha'u'llah stood for them in a way his supposed trustees do not. And for me, Baha'u'llah as one of the great spiritual teachers is who is important, not some strutting martinet who managed to get himself elected to something.

I have been accused of uttering 'slanderous' 'lies.' I can only say that I have never, on email or in print, written anything that I did not believe was true, and which I did not believe I had good reason to think was true.
I have never 'slandered' anyone, which in the law requires that one utter a falsehood publicly about another person with full knowledge that it is a falsehood, in such a way as to damage their property or reputation. I have never done this. I know that Maneck believes I have, or says she believes I have.

I cannot explain why she believes this except that she desperately wants to. Because admitting that I am entirely sincere and also that I am brutally honest would mean she would have to take my critique of the more cult-like side of how the Baha'i faith is run seriously.
How much easier
(if intellectually lazy and irresponsible) it is simply to dismiss me as a 'hatchet man.' Of course, this particular account assumes her good will.
When we take into account that she actively and systematically breached editorial confidentiality by spying on me for Counselor A.M. Ghadirian (who did not have the decency to instruct her to cease invading my privacy), we have also to raise the question whether she hasn't been given the mission by someone of doing a hatchet job on me. Isn't it sort of suspicious that she shows up at AOL backbiting me so assiduously on a forum where I am not even present?

Maneck criticizes me for reading Baha'u'llah through an 'Enlightenment'
lens. But Maneck cannot even read Baha'u'llah's Arabic well enough to know what he said or in what context. She knows no Ottoman Turkish. She has no basis for dismissing my argument about Baha'u'llah's Young Ottoman (and therefore pro-Enlightenment) stance. She decided in her youth that she was against the Enlightenment and has misread Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha as equally against it. She is a prisoner of her prejudices and cannot do the research that would be necessary to prove her argument and disprove mine.
A wiser person under such circumstances would be more circumspect.

As for my article in the Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion this past summer, Maneck knows full well that everything reported there is true.

She knows that a "counselor" libelled a Baha'i academic by telling Baha'is in the Minnesota region to 'shun him as though he were a covenant breaker' when he was no such thing. She knows that David Langness and Steve Scholl were railroaded by the Baha'i administration. She told friends in the wake of the 1988 crackdown on Dialogue magazine that she did not know if she could continue as a Baha'i in the face of such injustice.
Now she is whistling a different tune, all of a sudden justifying all sorts of injustices. She even incorrectly made statements about Steve Scholl on SRB that she had to retract. Is the only way to stay a Baha'i to capitulate morally in this way? If so, surely it is not worth it.

She herself was given the opportunity to comment extensively on a draft of my article and I tried my best to take account of her comments Unfortunately, she simply has no serious training in the social sciences and her atomism and nominalism make her unable to understand the structure of my argument, leading her to dismiss it. Note that the structure of the argument passed through rigorous double blind refereeing at a major social science periodical. She can argue that the reviewers may not have been knowledgeable about the Baha'i faith (though we cannot in fact assume that); but they certainly would be attentive to methodology, documentation, and argumentation, and they recommended it for publication. She once said she would have no quarrel with anything I could get into print under those circumstances. That was before I got things into print that she did not like.

I really would appreciate not being further libelled on AOL. I am not guilty of any 'slanders' or 'hatchet jobs.' The only 'status' I'm interested in is being recognized as a broken man of shattered faith, betrayed by numerous old friends like Susan Maneck. I'm just trying to do my job, as a public intellectual, in the best, most upright and most responsible way I know how. That includes blowing the whistle on coercion, manipulation and abuse by Baha'i administrators of innocent adherents. I plead for all right thinking and compassionate persons to join me in trying to reform the Baha'i administration by critiquing it. It is out of kilter.
Its members know it is out of kilter. It needs to be righted.
Kowtowing
only keeps it out of kilter.

Cheers Juan Cole

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Kalimat Press
Date: Monday, May 11, 1998 1:10 PM

I'm not sure which list the inquiry about my book being 'reviewed' came from, and hope Dean will be willing to forward this reply to Ed Price and others with this question.

The official position of the Baha'i institutions as I understand it is that articles and books not written by members of the Baha'i faith are not required to be refereed, and Baha'is are free to read such materials as they wish. For instance, any Baha'i may read Edward Granville Browne's works on the Babi and Baha'i religions. Likewise, when questions were raised about whether the Baha'i Distribution Service could legitimately carry Abbas Amanat's Resurrection and Renewal about the Babi period, the UHJ replied that since Professor Amanat is not a Baha'i, the book could be distributed at will. This came up at a meeting in London a year or so ago in which Baha'is asked UHJ member Ian Semple if it was alright to read Juan Cole's translations of the Baha'i scripture, and Semple said it was, and that there had always been provisional translations.

For those with an open mind, the very fact that my book was not produced under conditions of ecclesiastical control, but is rather an honest piece of spiritual and academic free inquiry, will recommend it.

For other Baha'is, I think the decision about whether to read the book must be very complicated. They must take into account that it is written by someone who was a Baha'i for nearly a quarter of a century, who pioneered in Beirut during the civil war and who while pioneering in India fell ill for months, who served on LSAs and national committees (abroad), and did extensive travel teaching, who defended the Iranian Baha'is in journals of record such as History Today and the Encyclopedia Iranica; but who was in 1996 accused by the Counselors of the International Teaching Center, at the instigation of Douglas Martin, Ian Semple and Farzam Arbab of the UHJ, of 'making statements contrary to the covenant' on Talisman@indiana.edu in 1994-1996; and who had his faith in Baha'u'llah's religion shattered by these false and outrageous accusations coming from persons supposed to be trustees of Baha'u'llah's own message of universal love and tolerance. I think they should all know these things about the author, and should make their individual decisions about whether in consequence this is a book they wish to read.

As for me, I really don't care one way or another. I didn't write the book for a readership. I wrote it for the sake of the truth, and for Baha'u'llah, that Great Soul. I am quite sure He is pleased with it. And I will go to my grave with that certainty and that is all that matters to me.

cheers

Juan Cole
Professor
Department of History
University of Michigan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>

See also Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>

Subject: [bahai-faith] mutilation theology and Dr. Maneck

Date: Monday, October 05, 1998 12:39 PM

Someone forwarded to me the below. I'm not on AOL and have no idea how to post there; my reply may be freely forwarded.

I wish Susan Maneck well. We became friends in the early 1980s and I supported her, speaking well of her in the Middle East and South Asia fields where she was attempting to make a career. I have never harmed her in any way, and have until now practiced a sin-covering eye in her regard.

However, she has behaved toward me in an academic setting with dishonesty and deceit in such a way as deprives her of the right to debate me publicly. She spied on me and lied about it. She betrayed confidences in such a way as to cause her academic colleagues to demand and get her resignation from a position she had held.

I sympathize with her devotion to the Universal House of Justice. This is after all the body that called upon American Baha'is to pioneer in Lebanon during the Five Year Plan of 1974-1979, a call that I myself, an idealistic new Baha'i, answered in part because of a desire to serve that institution, and despite the danger involved in trying to be there during the beginnings of the Lebanese Civil War. All who become Baha'is wish to believe that the Universal House of Justice is a better sort of institution than the ones we deal with in ordinary life. I am sorry to report, however, that the more I learned of its modus operandi the more it became clear to me that there is something cult-like about its operations. It depends upon behind-the-scenes manipulation and coercion of consciences through using the threat of declaring 'prominent' people covenant breakers merely

for expressing views at variance with whatever the orthodoxy happens to be in Haifa at that time. The current nine members are claiming all sorts of powers and prerogatives that are not theirs according to the explicit scriptural texts (as Dr. Maneck herself admitted to me privately), and have acted in a shamelessly dictatorial way toward people like John Walbridge and Steven Scholl, who tried actually to accomplish something with regard to Baha'i intellectual life. I came to the conclusion with the greatest reluctance that the current Universal House of Justice is behaving as a tyrant. As late as 1995 I was arguing that that body was morally infallible. But the evidence of my own eyes cannot be denied. The Baha'i Universal House of Justice differs from the Ayatollahs in Iran only in refraining from using violence to suppress freedom of thought and expression, employing instead threats of excommunication and shunning that can sometimes be just as effective. The UHJ is committed to a vast global apparatus of prepublication censorship that stifles and kills Baha'i intellectual life, and has stunted the growth of what should have been a beautiful and upbuilding new religion.

I do not agree that coming to this conclusion means we should 'walk away.'
The Universal House of Justice was ordained by

Baha'u'llah himself. It is necessary to the Baha'i faith. Even those of us who do not feel we can remain within the Baha'i framework given the current system of tyranny must hope that it can be perfected even if it does not start out perfect. The Universal House of Justice needs to be better than it is, to get back on track, to begin operating more democratically, as Baha'u'llah himself envisaged. I do not criticize it to condemn it, but in hopes of drawing its attention to deficiencies in the way things are currently done. Just as good writing is produced by critique and re-writing, good administration is produced by public critique and rethinking of processes. The Universal House of Justice is not beyond redemption. It can yet contribute to tolerance and loving-kindness in the way Baha'u'llah intended. I myself have felt nothing from it but hatred, threats of shunning, and bullying. But it can be better than that. Knee-jerk defenses of its intolerable actions such as those of Dr. Maneck only impede that improvement process.

Dr. Maneck's message below is full of misrepresentations which I believe are willful. All the academics I listed who left the faith have in fact left, as she well knows and has proclaimed loudly in the past, and the weird way in which some people are entered and kept on the rolls without their initiative (and even simultaneously declared 'not Baha'is' by the UHJ) while others, like Michael McKenny, are thrown off the rolls against their wills because of their private email correspondence, only underscores how arbitrary and even cult-like contemporary Baha'i administrative practice is.

All the academics who left, left because they were at one time or another victims of administrative repression. The person Maneck claims simply lost his faith in God was once reported to his National Spiritual Assembly by an ABM for protection because of an academic talk he gave on the faith, and this began his disillusionment with the Baha'i administration. Baha'i intellectuals don't just 'lose their faith in God' or 'lose their faith in Baha'u'llah' all on their own. They are pushed out by the narrow-minded and authoritarian personalities who so dominate the Baha'i administrative machinery. People are sensitive, especially about their private religious beliefs, and what the hate-filled Baha'i rightwingers have discovered, to their delight, is that it is pretty easy to so injure the feelings of a liberal-minded person that you drive him or her out of the faith and destroy his or her belief. No one who hasn't felt the betrayal of having one's own religious officials suddenly turn on one and put a knife in one's back can imagine what it feels like.

I have never censored anyone. The lists I set up on my own, such as talisman@umich.edu and irfan@umich.edu, are unmoderated and there is no mechanism whereby anyone can be prevented from sending messages to those addresses. We were also involved a purely academic list, where messages are sometimes rejected because they are not formulated according to the norms of academic discourse as opposed to statements of personal faith. The Baha'i covenant can be and is discussed by the academics (who include many non-Baha'i professors of many faiths from a number of countries) on this list, but only if it is studied, not if it is proclaimed as a method of silencing some voices or foreclosing some avenues of investigation--which is precisely the way Dr. Maneck sometimes did wish to use it.

The person Dr. Maneck claims was censored for pro-Nixonian views was in fact declined the opportunity to post because he was not a member of the list and did not have the credentials to become a member of the list. That he continued to support the innocence of Richard M. Nixon after all the impeachment proceedings had begun and the Woodward and Bernstein investigations were published, however, also did suggest to me that he may be a crank. I'm afraid Dr. Maneck's formulation of these issues is such as to suggest the same thing to me about her.

I did not remove Dr. Maneck from her position at the academic email list in question, although it is true that I took her to its Editorial Board over her disruptive behavior at the insistence of the other editors. It is also true that at the same time she attempted to have me fired. In the end, she voluntarily resigned her position after she accidentally let a major indiscretion be known to its editorial board. It is monstrous that she should accuse me now falsely in this regard.

Sincerely

Juan R. I. Cole
Professor
Department of History
University of Michigan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

>From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
>Reply-To: talisman9@onelist.com
>To: talisman9@onelist.com
>Subject: [talisman9] exit interviews
>Date: Sat, 22 Jan 2000 02:38:10 -0600

>
>From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

>
>
>Someone on another list asked about my reply a couple of weeks ago to Steve >Marshall's report on 'life in Dunedin'. This is what I told him:

>
>In the US retention rates for Baha'i declarations are only 50%, as compared >to 80% for most religious bodies here. One reason for this poor retention >rate in my view is that the Baha'is are overly eager to chase people out of >the faith for relatively minor instances of non-conformity. My email >interviews with those who have exited (many of them old Baha'i friends of >mine from 20-25 years ago whom I rediscovered on the internet and with whom >I had had no contact for decades) are not scientifically weighted sample.
>They are intended to be qualitative research lending texture and greater >specificity to the bare fact that half of those who enroll as Baha'is >depart the faith.

>
>The only solution I can see to the problem I mentioned, of the overly >repressive character of Baha'i institutions, is for them to lighten up.

>
>I do not advocate a slackening on matters of principle. But in almost >every case of which I have become aware wherein a Baha'i left the faith >because he or she encountered the 'ceiling,' that ceiling formed no part of >scriptural principle.

>
>That is, obviously someone who liked to drink and/or gamble would run the >risk of losing administrative rights. Some LSAs are more lenient than >others, but the risk is there and I would agree that it is unavoidable.
>LSAs are bound by Baha'i laws.

>
>But I was not talking about such clear-cut issues. I was talking about >cases such as the following: a young man on an LSA has some doubts about >the more repressive aspects of Baha'i administration and wants to consult >the friends about the problems he sees. The LSA calls in an ABM for a >meeting. The ABM snubs the young man with the doubts, actually flicks his >nose at him, and treats him like dirt. In another instance, an ABM >actually grabbed someone around the neck and angrily shouted into his face, >spraying saliva, over some difference of opinion.

>
>Or an artist does some Baha'i art but is told by members of the >institutions that it can't be sold or displayed, whereas he knows another >artist who is given such latitude. Or someone's administrative rights are >removed by the NSA because of a single email message presenting an >alternative view of events of a decade before to that of the NSA secretary.

>

>Or an academic (not me) is threatened by a counselor behind the scenes with >being declared a covenant breaker for his researches in Baha'i history and >thought. Or a devoted long-time Baha'i is interrogated and threatened by >two ABMs because he has a more mystical vision of the faith and would like >to see local houses of worship built.
>Or an ABM and an LSA gang up on a woman who brings her non-Baha'i spouse to >the non-administrative portions of feast and orders her to cease in such a >way as to infuriate her.
>
>One of my colleagues in the History Department here was a Baha'i for 15 >years in Alaska. She told me she left when she had a problem in the >community and consulted with the LSA and they told her she would just have >to accept something that she felt was completely unacceptable. I don't >know details in this case, but I know the sort of thing she is talking >about. Baha'i institutions often demand a sort of resigned fatalism from >victims of injustice. In one instance I know of, a rape by a low-level >employee at the National Baha'i Center in Wilmette, of another employee, >was covered up by the NSA and the victim was asked not to press charges >'for the good of the faith.' She became inactive and ultimately left the >faith.
>
>In all these cases, two of the victims of repression or injustice remained >in the faith, but most left. The one who had his administrative rights >taken away has been more or less shunned by old Baha'i friends ("the phone >stopped ringing.")
>
>Most Baha'is are unaware that there is this relatively hidden hardline >culture among ABMs and Counselors and many LSAs, and only when they trip >the wire by some minor act of nonconformity do they encounter it. Since >they then often leave, most Baha'is who remain in remain unaware of what >goes on.
>
>I don't think you can ask a rape victim to cover up the crime against her >for the good of the faith, and yet retain her ardent loyalty. I don't >think you can threaten conscientious Baha'is with being declared covenant >breakers over some minor email messages and expect them to have the same >enthusiasm. I blame the people in the Baha'i administration for acting in >this hardline way, so at odds with the teachings on tolerance of >Baha'u'llah and the other holy figures. I do admire the individuals who >manage to remain faithful despite being mistreated, but the religion can't >depend on a few such virtuous souls if it really wants to grow. Most >people won't put up with being bullied and shepherded and mistreated.
>
>cheers Juan
>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Copyright and Talisman@indiana.edu

Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 11:04 AM

Talisman@indiana.edu was a public listserv run publicly from a public university. All the messages are still probably in the Indiana University Mainframe and they are on hard-drives of subscribers and non-subscribers all around the world. They were public in nature and are mirrored at a number of Web sites, not only my own.

The messages sent to talk.religion.bahai are likewise public, are permanently on the Web, and linking to them or displaying them on a Web site simply is not a violation of copyright. However, note that in deference to Dr.

Bramson-Lerche, I did agree to remove her name from her public postings, which was far more than I was required to do under the law. (I checked the law extensively with University counsel).

Talisman@umich.edu is a private club only with regard to membership. FAQs have repeatedly informed subscribers that they relinquish copyright when they post there.

However, the publication of private letters to individuals with attribution is a very different matter. The inability of intelligent persons to understand a simple distinction between messages sent to a public listserv with hundreds of subscribers and messages sent privately to a private individual with expectation of confidentiality is a puzzle to me.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <wahdat@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
Date: Friday, April 21, 2000 4:16 AM

From Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

<snip>

I don't know if you have seen my article, but I argue that all the basic provisions of the UDHR are already present in Baha'i scripture. Check out:

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/bhpapers/vol3/rights.htm>

There is no distinction between civil law and religious law in Iran, either. It is a theocracy. All law is religious law and no law may be enacted that contravenes the Muslim canon law. This hegemony of religious law is guaranteed by the Supreme Jurisprudent, Ali Khamenei (who happens also to be head of state) and by the Guardianship Council of clergymen. If the UDHR does not apply to religious institutions, it does not apply to Shi'ite Islam in Iran, which just happens also to be running the state. Shi'ites maintain that they are obliged to kill apostates from Islam such as the Baha'is because God has so revealed the immutable Law. When you tell them that they may not do so, you are asking them to change their religious beliefs and practices. My question to you is, on what grounds are you asking Shi'ites to change their beliefs and practices when you say that the UHJ need not change its? Either the UDHR's provisions apply to both or they apply to neither.

And wouldn't you agree as an ethical matter that it would be better if Baha'i institutions did meet basic human rights standards in their dealings with Baha'is?

The UDHR is not a law. As with all human rights declarations, it is a set of peremptory moral obligations that are being asserted by the international community. The international community meant to lay these obligations on all organs of society and on all individuals, including the Baha'is. While the UDHR, not being a law, cannot be employed to direct Baha'i authorities to behave better than they are behaving, it most certainly is a basis for calling upon Baha'i authorities to adopt its basic provisions into their procedures. This includes the desirability of due process, which was not observed in Alison's case.

In the Jehovah's Witness cases I referred to, there is nothing vague. The church by-laws stipulated that people can only be expelled and shunned if they do X. The persons shunned had not done X. The church leaders just didn't like them personally, so they expelled them. The court found that you can't arbitrarily have people shunned in contravention of your own by-laws. I think the case is even stronger in the Baha'i instance since most Baha'i assemblies are incorporated, and incorporated bodies are governed by a whole host of civil laws. Fareed Akhtarekhavari filed a civil lawsuit in Cook County against the NSA for removing his administrative rights in the early 1990s in a way that contravened Baha'i practice, and it was not thrown out of court. However, the NSA mysteriously returned his rights to him and the case has been dropped.

By the way, there is nothing in US law that makes Golf clubs accept African-American members, and some still do not. Likewise religious congregations; as late as the '70s Jimmy Carter had to vote in his Baptist church to admit blacks. It isn't illegal for a church to exclude them. My point was that it would be illegal, if the organization had by-laws that stipulated that race could not be used to exclude members. The courts could enforce the organization's own by-laws against it. I don't see anything anywhere in the constitution of the UHJ where they can summarily remove members from the rolls; in fact there seems to be language there about protecting the rights of individuals. And this was not the practice of any of the Holy Figures or of Shoghi Effendi. Moreover, the language of Baha'i law appears to offer Alison guarantees against being persecuted within the religion for her conscientious beliefs.

In law, precedents also count. All through the 70s and 80s there were Baha'is around the world trying to get off the membership rolls, and they were told they'd have to write a letter renouncing Baha'u'llah. Those who did not write the letter are still on the rolls, against their will. This has been Baha'i practice for ages. Alison did not write a letter renouncing Baha'u'llah, and by traditional Baha'i practice she can't be removed from the rolls. This is not like the Pope disallowing female priests. This is like the Pope excommunicating a New Zealand Catholic outside the procedures of canon law and in contravention of all Catholic law and tradition.

cheers Juan

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: <wahdat@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights & Marshall Case
Date: Saturday, April 22, 2000 3:56 AM

From Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

--

<snip>

Shi`ites don't recognize the Baha'i faith as a separate religion. They believe Baha'is are Shi`ite heretics. Baha'is are Shi`ite covenant breakers, since the Shi`ite covenant is that there shall be no more prophets after Muhammad. Nowadays the Shi`ite covenant also requires assenting to the absolute authority (vilayat-i faqih) of Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. Baha'is don't recognize that authority.

If you impose on Shi`ites an outside, external definition of the Baha'is as a separate religion then you are coercing the religious conscience of Shi`ites. You are also interfering in the internal affairs of the Shi`ite religion, which defines Baha'is as heretical Shi`ites and imposes penalties according to the shari`ah or divinely revealed Islamic law.

There is not any substantial difference between your interference in Shi`ite belief and practice and any outside body's interference in Baha'i procedure. I maintain that I am a liberal Baha'i who is being unfairly persecuted by the Baha'i fundamentalists who have taken control of the Institutions. My self-definition is different than that of the AO, which simply defines me as 'not a Baha'i.' It is the mirror image of the situation in Iran where Baha'is define themselves as a new religion but the Shi`ite authorities classify them as Shi`ite heretics. It is exactly analogous.

The documentation on the McKenny case is at:
<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/docs/vol3/mckenny.htm>

Neither Alison nor Michael were accused of backbiting or fomenting disturbance. We have all seen Alison's lovely, kind, spiritual postings for years on Talisman. In both cases the implicit argument appears to have been that they rejected some element of the new fundamentalist -defined orthodoxy of the 1990s, that the UHJ is completely Infallible in all its doings and women may never serve on it under any circumstances now and forever. Challenging either of these dogmas is now grounds for disenrollment, which is itself a new sanction not to my knowledge ever practiced before.

Although the US NSA may have the right to determine membership requirements, the practice (and thus the precedent) throughout the 20th century was that no one has been disenrolled without prior consultation and without a clear renunciation of belief in Baha'u'llah. You can't just arbitrarily change longstanding practices that adversely affect other parties. Not even large corporations can get away with this. This is another principle of law.

But don't you think we should leave these niceties and talk about the Golden Rule? Would you like to be put in Alison's position? Would any of the UHJ members like to wake up one morning to a palace coup in which 8 of his colleagues had expelled him from the faith while he was sleeping, all unawares? It is very simple. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. All the prophets have said it, including the Bab and Baha'u'llah. And that is the real reason for which the due process called for in the UDHR is relevant here. It is just a restatement of the Golden Rule. None of us wants to be the victim of an arbitrary summary judgment. Alison was.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Cole reply to backbiting by the BWC/Doug Martin
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2000 5:37 PM

Some here may be interested in my commentary on a letter being sent out concerning me by the Secretariat at the Baha'i World Center, which was authored by Doug Martin. It is under "documents" for June 27, 1999 via my Web site, below.

What I don't get is that when I complain here in public about specific actions taken by Baha'i administrators, everybody here gets on a high horse and says I'm 'backbiting.' But if Doug Martin can get himself elected to the UHJ and get access to the secretaries at the BWC, he apparently has carte blanche to backbite me to people all over the world behind my back, with nothing but vague innuendo, libel and lies?

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Cole reply to backbiting by the BWC/Doug Martin
Date: Friday, June 23, 2000 10:21 PM

The Universal House of Justice has openly written that any Baha'i who wishes to is welcome to buy and read my book, Modernity and the Millennium. It is rather ignorant and petty of you to paint this issue as one of "business" or "money" or "parasitism." The Universal House of Justice is not concerned with the business aspect of all this. Besides, academic books don't make any significant amount of money; I'd be lucky to get back my photocopying and microfilm costs for the manuscripts I obtained. I didn't write the book to make money, which is just as well, since it won't. Moreover, I consider myself a Baha'i, and I have risked my life for Baha'u'llah, as well as getting out front on issues like the persecution of the Iranian Baha'is, so 'parasitism' doesn't enter into it.

What I am complaining about is that this message, which is being sent out from Haifa to any Baha'i who enquires about me, is incorrect in many respects. I don't mind being critiqued for specific actions, but this is just a broad gauge attack on my character. Since it was being sent out to dozens of persons I don't know behind my back, it is a form of backbiting.

Pat suggested that I had it coming. But this is quite different. I don't spend my time talking about Mr. Martin behind his back. And when I did want to post a critique of his Baha'i career, I did it in the open, for everyone to see. I didn't send private emails one after one to people he doesn't know. Moreover, I have plenty of links in to fundamentalist Baha'i sites and material of a sort of which Mr. Martin would approve. I am not an exclusivist.

The whole thing is just sleazy, and a sad commentary on what the Baha'i faith has come to.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Kohli replying to Cole
Date: Friday, June 23, 2000 10:31 PM

Pat:

You have been the victim of misinformation. It was alleged here that in my article "Panopticon" where I discussed the closing down of the mass teaching in South Carolina in the early 1970s, I attributed the motive to Firuz Kazemzadeh of racism. The person who made this charge was just engaging in propaganda and attempting to divert attention from the uncontestable fact that Kazemzadeh did in fact close down the mass teaching. I denied categorically having imputed this action to racism on his part, and I quoted the article to prove that this is untrue.

However, I did go on to say that my oral history interviews with African-American Baha'is did lead to me suspect that Charlotte Linfoot was uncomfortable with the Civil Rights movement and was not in favor of punishing white Baha'is in the South who refused to serve African-Americans, and that since she was on the NSA when the mass teaching was shut down her attitudes may have influenced her vote on the issue. I said that this was only one person and one factor, and anyway was not what I was talking about in Panopticon.

I can document that the NSA, with Firuz taking the lead, did close down the mass teaching in South Carolina. And I can document Charlotte Linfoot's discomfort with Baha'is being involved in the Civil Rights movement and her complacency toward Jim Crow. As a historian, I write up the history of what I can document.

It is very odd to me that you would instance any of this as a justification for Mr. Martin's broad-ranging and vague attack on my personal character, which he sent out to dozens of inquirers among Baha'is whom I do not know, behind my back. I'd say that constitutes backbiting. Whatever I've had to say, I've said in public. And it has been specific, not a global condemnation. To suggest that public critique justifies secretive backbiting is very odd in my view.

But I do thank you for your even-handedness.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Old Friends

Date: Tuesday, June 27, 2000 2:13 PM

Dear Michael:

It was so good to see your name, and thanks for continuing to post at Baha'i venues. It is so important to demonstrate that people cannot be made simply to vanish by heavies like Doug Martin just by the expedient of removing them from membership rolls.

I still think it is funny in a darkly tragicomic way that they chose you to come after. I can't think of anyone more gentlemanly and courteous, more wedded to the key Baha'i principles of tolerance and love of humankind.

As to your reference to my continued faith in Baha'u'llah, I hope you will read my book Modernity and the Millennium. I think he stood for democracy and the separation of religion and state, and for freedom of expression. I also think his teachings about the divine transcend mere monotheism. That his followers have misunderstood him and sought to create social structures more reminiscent of the Spanish Inquisition than of Baha'u'llah's gentle and all-embracing faith is not his fault. Human beings are human beings. There have been intolerant polytheists, too, you know. The RSS in India are polytheist fascists of the first water. There is no 'framework' that can escape the human tendency to seek inordinate social control. All we can do, in our various traditions, is stand up for human rights and speak out when we see things veering in the wrong direction.

I cannot say how much I admire you for having done so.

cheers Juan

>

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Building Bridges

Date: Tuesday, June 27, 2000 2:31 PM

[Actually my perception of David's behavior is a little different from his. I find him to be extremely intolerant of any suggestion that things aren't perfect in the community, and constantly to be blaming the victim whenever a moderate or liberal Baha'i has been victimized by fundamentalists. I also thought both his reply to our discussion about the high divorce rates in the community and his posting of reactions to it here on a different list to be rude. Basically, instead of dialoguing he simply contradicts the other person over and over again and then if others don't buy his contradictions he throws a tantrum and starts quoting Doub Martin's anathemas.)

Dear David:

I am sorry you are so angry, but it really is inexcusable for you to blow up like this in the midst of a sincere discussion of a problem in the community.

First you cast doubt on whether the divorce rate in the Baha'i community is higher than that of general American society. Then when I pointed out that this was a finding of the NSA itself in a 1987 survey, you acknowledged the point, but suggested that in 13 years the divorce rate in the community may have changed for the better. But you gave no evidence that this was so, you simply expressed the hope.

Then when I suggested some factors that may have affected the divorce rate (mainly focusing on a culture of utopianism, not, as you suggest, 'blaming the AO'), you denied each in turn, offering no evidence except that you had not witnessed any such phenomena. Now when others corroborate having seen such things in the community, you explode and threaten to walk off, and call me names.

Why don't we back up. Just let's posit for the sake of argument that the 1987 NSA poll was correct, and the divorce rate in the community was higher in the 1980s than the U.S. average. What factors would you point to, in order to explain this phenomenon? You haven't tried to add to our understanding. You just presented a series of denials and then a tantrum. If you present an alternative explanation that is better than mine, I'd be glad to acknowledge it.

I would like to point out that if I am right and the problem is rooted in American Baha'i utopianism, that there is a solution, which is to adopt and spread a more realistic ethos about marriage in the Faith.

cheers Juan

>

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Doug Martin's attack on Modernity and the Millennium

Date: Wednesday, June 28, 2000 1:16 PM

David:

Your attempt to make me look like the aggressor here is frankly bizarre. This vicious letter has been being sent out behind the scenes to dozens if not hundreds of Baha'is who inquire about who I am from people like Doug Martin. The scale of it makes it public. The only difference is that now it is public with my reply.

To compare this to Firuz's reading out of confidential letters addressed to the institutions by the dialogue editors in 1988 is to commit so many category errors at once that it probably sets a new record. I didn't publish a letter sent in confidence to me. I never received this letter from Mr. Martin directly. It is another piece of backbiting that several other people have sent me, as an example of what is circulating in the community.

I sent a message to your friends in Haifa in May of 1996, to which I have not ever had the pleasure of a reply. The ball is in their court.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Model Issues: Critique of Modernity and the Millennium

Date: Wednesday, June 28, 2000 1:28 PM

Dear Pat:

Lots of historians of religions are believers, and when we write theology it is perfectly all right to use theological language. I have myself. So has Hans Kung, for example.

Academic history is so constructed that theological language is excluded. It is not denied, it simply does not form part of the discourse. When we write in that genre, we abide by its rules. It is a useful genre because of its universalism. Everyone from any background and participate in that discourse, whereas only Baha'is would find a fundamentalist account of Baha'u'llah plausible.

In my own view, the material and the spiritual are like two heads of a coin. Baha'u'llah the historical man and Baha'u'llah the Manifestation of God co-existed in time and space, and are two facets of the same gem. It is possible to speak of one facet without the other, without denying that the other exists.

The basic mistake of fundamentalism in every religion is to insist that only theological language can ever be used about the prophet, and that neutral, academic language is out of bounds. But this is not the Baha'i historical tradition, as witness what Mirza Abu'l-Fadl said. It is a tradition imported by American Baha'is from Jerry Falwell, and by some Persian Baha'is from Ayatollah Khomeini.

Baha'u'llah himself disliked the fundamentalist mentality that has to hedge everything about with divine interventions and miracle stories. In fact, he upbraided Nabil, the author of the Dawnbreakers, for including that sort of material when he had asked him to write a straightforward history of the faith. That is why Shoghi Effendi abridged so much in his translation of the Dawnbreakers; he left out the multitude of divine interventions. So, I conclude that I wrote the sort of book about Baha'u'llah that Baha'u'llah himself wanted to see, and those fundamentalists like Doug Martin who are moping around complaining that I left out the miracle stories and divine interventions are actually out of step with Baha'u'llah's own desires.

cheres Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
 Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
 Subject: Re: Doug Martin's Attack on Modernity and the Millennium
 Date: Thursday, June 29, 2000 1:36 AM

Dear Pat:

It is true that academic historians do not introduce God into their books as one of the personae dramatis. This is because academic history is about what we can understand of the past based upon documentary evidence and the exercise of reason on that evidence. God does not show up in history directly. Beliefs about God do show up, and we discuss those beliefs.

That history is about what we can know of the past through documentation and reasoning about that documentation excludes consideration of the supernatural as an explanatory factor in such writing. However, the exclusion of the supernatural is not necessarily a denial of it. For some historians it may act as such, but for others it is simply an omission.

I will turn your meta-stages theory against you. Physics, chemistry, biology, and human psychology are all sciences and each one in this list concentrates on more complex phenomena than the one before. Molecules emerge from atoms, cells from molecules, the brain from cells. These are emergent stages. If someone writes about an atomic process, this does not deny that molecular interactions occur. At the atomic level, molecules are too big and complex to be factors. Academic history is like writing about atomic-level practices. Fundamentalists may complain that there is a bigger picture. There are emergent levels that are being ignored if we attend only to the atomic level. You can explain uranium that way but you can't so much as explain the digestion of milk in the stomach at the atomic level; you need molecules for that.

But if one is a physicist, attending to a lower level of reality, one is not interested in lactose. One is interested in atoms and electrons and protons. These, in the big picture, go on to make up chemicals, cells and brains. But it would be silly to blame the atomic physicist for ignoring psychology in her researches. Nor would you like to argue that doing physics implies a denial of chemistry or biology.

I think that spirituality is an emergent level beyond the ordinary psychological. `Abdul-Baha's hierarchy of spirit in Some Answered Questions confirms this. Academic historians stop at the level of ordinary psychology and do not proceed to the higher level of spirituality. They are like the physicists who stop with the atom and do not proceed to the molecule or the cell. Not all of them deny the spiritual, they simply are not speaking to that higher emergent level.

So, I was writing the Baha'u'llah of History, not the Baha'u'llah of faith, in Modernity and the Millennium. I believe that this was a valuable undertaking and that much can be learned from the Baha'u'llah of History, perhaps some things that can't be learned from the Baha'u'llah of faith. One does not deny the other; rather, like atomic physics and chemistry, they complement each other.

Peter Smith's Babi and Baha'i Religions, Abbas Amanat's Resurrection and Renewal, the journal articles of Moojan Momen, and many other works carried by Baha'i publishing trusts use the same methodology, by the way. Of course, some of these authors have also suffered, more quietly than I, whisper campaigns of backbiting behind the scenes from some of our friends in Haifa (Farzam Arbab seems especially bigotted in this regard).

For fundamentalists like Doug Martin to attack this Modernity and the Millennium, and to backbite me as "embittered," having a "personal ideological agenda," providing a mere "intellectual underpinning" to some sort of "long-running scheme" (say wha' ???), and then to damn the book for being history rather than theology, is merely to fall back into the unfortunate mistakes of the medieval era. In medieval times historians were under the thumb of the Church and theologians, and many were burned at the stake for writing history that did not suit Church leaders. Doug Martin, at least, has not proposed (publicly) any burnings at the stake, only the organization of Mafia-like campaigns of shunning against hapless historians who run afoul of his iron Orthodoxy. But he has in this letter departed from the basic spirit and teachings of the Baha'i Holy Figures and tried to recast the beautiful faith of Baha'u'llah into something ugly and anti-intellectual.

And here is what `Abdul-Baha (remember Him, our Exemplar?--He seems to have gotten lost in all this) had to say about such medieval repression of the life of the intellect:

"As regards religious zeal and true piety, their touchstone and proof are firmness and steadfastness in noble qualities, virtues, and perfections, which are the greatest blessings of the human race; but not interference with the belief of this one or that one, demolition of edifices, and cutting off of the human race. In the middle ages, whereof the beginning was the time of the fall of the Roman Empire, and the end the capture of Constantinople at the hands of [the followers of] Islám, fierce intolerance and molestation of far and near arose in [all] the countries of Europe by reason of the paramount influence of religious leaders. The matter came to such a pass that the edifice of humanity seemed tottering to its fall, and the peace and comfort of chief and vassal, king and subject, became hidden behind the veil of annihilation. Night and day all parties were slaves to apprehension and disquietude: civilization was utterly destroyed: the control and order of countries was neglected: the principles and essentials of the happiness of the human race were in abeyance: the supports of kingly authority were shaken: but the influence and power of the heads of religion and of the monks were in all parts complete. But when they removed these differences, persecution, and bigotries out of their midst, and proclaimed the equal rights of all subjects and the liberty of men's consciences, the lights of glory and power arose and shone from the horizons of that kingdom in such wise that those countries made progress in every direction; and whereas the mightiest monarchy of Europe had been servile to and abased before the smallest government of Asia, now the great states of Asia are unable to oppose the small states of Europe. These are effectual and sufficient proofs that the conscience of man is sacred and to be respected; and that liberty thereof produces widening of ideas, amendment of morals, improvement of conduct, disclosure of the secrets of creation, and manifestation of the hidden verities of the contingent world. Moreover, if interrogation of conscience, which is one of the private possessions of the heart and the soul, take place in this world, what further recompense remains for man in the court of divine justice at the day of general resurrection? Convictions and ideas are within the scope of the comprehension of the King of kings, not of kings; and soul and conscience are between the fingers of control of the Lord of hearts, not of [His] servants.

- `Abdul-Baha, A Traveller's Narrative.

cheers Juan

(P.S. Thanks for the comments on my code; I did refresh and wasn't reading off a cache, and I know to close a bold mark. I can't explain the problem. Luckily, Dreamweaver has a nice program that will clean up code automatically, and I ftp'ed the clean version, so it should be right now. I should use wysiwyg web creation pages more, since mistakes are harder to make, but I learned HTML back in 1995 and I got used to writing code; usually I think I do a fair job of it).

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Doug Martin's attack on Modernity and the Millennium

Date: Thursday, June 29, 2000 1:46 AM

I posted as much of the Martin/BWC letter as came to me from various sources, so you can read it yourself.

I find it bizarre beyond words that because I found out I was being backbit behind the scenes with this letter going to dozens, maybe hundreds of inquirers, and I replied to it, now I am being blamed? Have you read what Martin said? It is quite vicious. Protesting against being backbitten is not backbiting, Mr. Little. You people always manage to blame the victim, don't you?

I am not estranged from the Baha'i holy figures or the Baha'i teachings, and nor am I estranged from the Baha'is as a community. I haven't done anything at all. However, there are some glaze-eyed cultists in positions of great power in the Baha'i administration who obviously have an attitude toward me, or rather toward the way I think. The way I think is a matter of my individual conscience, which `Abdul-Baha said should be off-limits to religious leaders. So it is Martin and the others who are "estranged"--from the true Baha'i teachings. I can't help their estrangement or the compunction to attack and threaten people like me. They'll have to work through the demons that drive them to this un-Baha'i-like behavior themselves. When they have exorcised them, I'd be glad to be friends again.

In the meantime, I urge everyone to read Modernity and the Millennium for themselves, to see with their own eyes and hear with their own ears. It is available in an inexpensive paperback edition from amazon.com and the order information may be clicked on below.

cheers Juan

In article <8jdlrs$rmpp$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, rlittle95@my-deja.com wrote:

> Dear Juan and Pat

>

>

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Doug Martin's attack on Modernity and the Millennium

Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2000 12:52 AM

Actually, we who have actually dealt with the Baha'i World Center are perfectly aware that the UHJ as an institution assigns to its members "portfolios," and individual members most often are behind a particular thread of correspondence. In my correspondence with the UHJ in the early 1990s attempting to dissuade them from continuing "review" (prepublication censorship) forever, it was quite clear that the letters I was receiving from "the Secretariat" were actually from Glenford Mitchell, simply because they showed his English style and betrayed knowledge and interest that only he would have.

The vicious attack on my book and my character posted at the bottom of the Documents page on my Bahai Studies Web site is clearly, likewise, the work of Douglas Martin.

How interesting, that the loyalists on this list believe it is perfectly all right to malign and lie about others, as long as it is done behind the veil of an "institution." And then if a victim of agitprop dares protest, that is backbiting! You begin to see how some of the worst human rights abuses of the 20th century occurred. There are always a lot of yes-men out there willing to march in lock-step.

cheers Juan

>

> That Dr. Cole would attribute the letter to Mr. Martin reveals much about

> Dr. Cole's agenda.

>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>
>

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Doug Martin's attack on Modernity and the Millennium

Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2000 12:52 AM

Actually, we who have actually dealt with the Baha'i World Center are perfectly aware that the UHJ as an institution assigns to its members "portfolios," and individual members most often are behind a particular thread of correspondence. In my correspondence with the UHJ in the early 1990s attempting to dissuade them from continuing "review" (prepublication censorship) forever, it was quite clear that the letters I was receiving from "the Secretariat" were actually from Glenford Mitchell, simply because they showed his English style and betrayed knowledge and interest that only he would have.

The vicious attack on my book and my character posted at the bottom of the Documents page on my Bahai Studies Web site is clearly, likewise, the work of Douglas Martin.

How interesting, that the loyalists on this list believe it is perfectly all right to malign and lie about others, as long as it is done behind the veil of an "institution." And then if a victim of agitprop dares protest, that is backbiting! You begin to see how some of the worst human rights abuses of the 20th century occurred. There are always a lot of yes-men out there willing to march in lock-step.

cheers Juan

>

> That Dr. Cole would attribute the letter to Mr. Martin reveals much about

> Dr. Cole's agenda.

>

> Regards,

> Rick Schaut

>

>

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Copyright and Talisman@indiana.edu
Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 11:04 AM

Talisman@indiana.edu was a public listserv run publicly from a public university. All the messages are still probably in the Indiana University Mainframe and they are on hard-drives of subscribers and non-subscribers all around the world. They were public in nature and are mirrored at a number of Web sites, not only my own.

The messages sent to talk.religion.bahai are likewise public, are permanently on the Web, and linking to them or displaying them on a Web site simply is not a violation of copyright. However, note that in deference to Dr. Bramson-Lerche, I did agree to remove her name from her public postings, which was far more than I was required to do under the law. (I checked the law extensively with University counsel).

Talisman@umich.edu is a private club only with regard to membership. FAQs have repeatedly informed subscribers that they relinquish copyright when they post there.

However, the publication of private letters to individuals with attribution is a very different matter. The inability of intelligent persons to understand a simple distinction between messages sent to a public listserv with hundreds of subscribers and messages sent privately to a private individual with expectation of confidentiality is a puzzle to me.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==----- <https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own From:
"Juan Cole"
<jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: high Baha'i divorce rate
Date: Tuesday, June 27, 2000 2:41 PM

[I posted this to another list. But since Mr. Fiorito brought it up here I thought it may as well be posted for all to make up their minds about.]

An internal Baha'i household survey done in 1987 found that the divorce rate in the U.S. Baha'i community was higher than that in American society as a whole. The report was never released to the public.

My own suspicion is that the high divorce rate has several causes. First of all, Baha'is are encouraged to utopian ways of thinking. Two young people with little in common save that they are recent converts to the faith will be encouraged to marry. I have seen this sort of thing over and over again with my own eyes. This utopianism is widespread in the faith and is the same reason for which so many other

Baha'i enterprises end up doing damage to people. That both are "Baha'is" is not a basis for a marriage. One may be a liberal and the other a fundamentalist; current norms against such labeling make it difficult for people to identify one another on that basis, but you'd better believe the difference would show up in a marriage!

Young married Baha'is are also encouraged to pioneer, whether abroad to places like Haiti and Nicaragua, or homefront. Being uprooted from their social networks and families and isolated in a strange environment is not good for them as young marrieds.

In smaller communities the Baha'i committee work is a killer, and may isolate the two spouses, who spend less time together just cocooning and watching t.v.

And it is my estimate that from a third to a half of U.S. Baha'is are what the sociologists would call marginal people--persons with poor social skills who are emotionally needy and who join the faith because they are love-bombed and find a high proportion of other marginals in it. A high rate of marginality is fostered by the cultists who have infiltrated the administration, since only such individuals would put up with being ordered around summarily or would eat up conspiracy theories about bands of dissidents seeking to undermine the administration. Marginals would have higher than normal divorce rates, obviously.

Finally, the Baha'i faith encourages a great deal of ego inflation in the individual. Each Baha'i thinks he or she is saving the world and is a linchpin in the plan of God. This inspires in them great (and often quite misplaced) confidence in their own judgment--I've seen them pronounce authoritatively on astronomy, biology, Qajar history, and many other subjects on which they are woefully ignorant. Such ego inflation and over-confidence in personal judgment would not be good for a marriage.

cheers Juan

[P.S. I should have also included that the exclusiveness of the Baha'i community, non-attendance of non-Baha'is at Feast, pressure to convert spouses, etc., was also probably a contributing factor to Baha'i divorces where only one spouse was Baha'i.

P.P.S. Milissa- I said I thought about 1/3 of Baha'is were lacking in social skills, not all of them. This is a common phenomenon that sociologists have found in New Religious Movements. I'm not sure why you think the statement of it offensive, but I don't know how you can have been around and not met a fair number of such folks.]

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: loyal opposition in Baha'i
Date: Tuesday, December 14, 1999 1:32 AM

The 'infallibility' of the House of Justice just means that it is the ultimate authority on what the law is. You may as well say the U.S. Supreme Court is 'infallible.' It does not mean it cannot be wrong on some policy in some objective sense. Within the system, it is 'ma`sum.' If it could not commit errors, then there would be no reason for Baha'u'llah's prescription that subsequent Houses of Justice may abrogate the decisions and legislation of their predecessors.

Besides, Baha'u'llah not only never called the House of Justice infallible, he explicitly said that the Most Great Infallibility was reserved to Manifestations of God. The body that `Abdul-Baha was referring to had a living Guardian on it and was elected according to Western parliamentary procedure, and thus is not an institution that any longer exists.

The present House of Justice is just 9 of our brothers serving as trustees. They are not God, they are not perfect, and they should not be made graven idols. They make mistakes, and I've seen them do so over and over again. Some of them have done things to friends of mine that are not very nice. They have supported NSAs when the NSAs were in the wrong. But the institution on which they serve deserves our ultimate loyalty, whether we agree with them or not, because they are the Trustees of the Cause of Baha'u'llah.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Before you buy.
From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The distinction between disagreement and opposition
Date: Monday, December 13, 1999 7:14 PM

Dear Daniel:

I haven't raised any posse (whatever could that mean, when all I've done is send some emails?). I have simply declared my views and expressed my conscience. Others may agree or disagree. I can't see that anything I've said since 1994 has had any effect whatsoever inside the community, nor do I care whether it does or doesn't. I am an Baha'i intellectual, and I enjoy thinking about the Baha'i faith, and I enjoy thinking about it with people on email. Your attempt to make this some sort of crime seems to me sort of pitiful and if many Baha'is think in this Luddite way, the community has all the future of Shaker furniture makers.

I do not believe that `Abdul-Baha seriously envisaged 'literature review' to work in the way that it does now, nor do I believe that a guardianless House of Justice has the authority to impose its interpretations on the believers through its agency. I am glad if, as reported to me by a pilgrim, Peter Khan generally likes my book, Modernity and the Millennium. But he is an electrical engineer, not a historian, and isn't welcome, singly or in a collectivity with other electrical engineers, to tell me how to write history, no matter what they have been elected to. In return, I promise not to do the wiring on his house in Haifa. (And a good thing for him, too.)

And yes, obeying a law you think criminal is a form of hypocrisy. That is why Thoreau went to jail, Daniel. Remember when Emerson came to visit him and asked, "What in the world are you doing in there?" And he said, "What in the world are you doing out there?" When illegal demands are made on a citizen by the state, the proper place for the citizen is jail.

As for there being no place in the community for minority views, such a sentiment is always the sign of a tyranny of the majority and thus of tyranny itself.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Before you buy.From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: loyal opposition in Baha'i

Date: Monday, December 13, 1999 1:49 AM

We were having a discussion of the issue of "loyal opposition" to official policies on talisman and I thought folks here might be interested in such a discussion. This is what I said:

I think the key term in "loyal opposition" is not "opposition" but "loyal." The real question is whether someone is loyal or not. For instance, there are lots of Americans who dislike the US Supreme Court's stands on some issues. But there are very few Americans (perhaps less than 12%) that reject the legitimacy of the authority of the Supreme Court. If they say, well, I recognize the Supreme Court's authority to say what the law is on this issue, but I don't like the outcome, then they are not traitors to the US government. They are in loyal opposition to a particular ruling. I don't see why it makes a difference whether we are speaking of a civil government or a religious institution. Hans Kung, the great Catholic theologian, describes himself as the Pope's 'loyal opposition.' I think Kung's stance very admirable. It is a religious one. The only religions that do not allow a loyal opposition are cults, like Scientology, or authoritarian structures like those of the Khomeinists in Iran. I refuse to believe that any Baha'is really want those to be the models for our religion.

Moreover, I don't think the conception of 'loyal opposition' per se is objected to by all the members of the House of Justice.

Baha'is have always shown loyal opposition to policies they did not like. Howard Colby Ives admitted to `Abdul-Baha that he just couldn't give up smoking, and `Abdul-Baha said, well, half a pack a day isn't all that much. Mostly, Baha'is just showed passive resistance. Shoghi Effendi complained endlessly in his correspondence to the US NSA that his directives to the US community under Horace Holley were often never implemented. In fact, a major reason that that correspondence has never been published appears to be that it would demonstrate how little the NSA members attended to his policy directives. The generation of the 1960s that invented the 'Beloved Guardian' way of speaking is said to have done so in part out of guilt that they hadn't actually paid all that much attention to Shoghi Effendi while he was alive.

The House of Justice has a lesser station than the Guardian. I remember one time discussing some issue with Hushmand Fatheazam, around 1979, and I was careful to say of this House policy, 'I don't mean to disagree.' He said, 'Disagree all you like.' or words to that effect. Now, of course, some may feel I took him too literally at his word. :-) But I think his sentiment was genuine. One may disagree with the House of Justice if one's conscience leads one to do so, and may express that disagreement in private (I suppose 'private' means 'among a small circle of trusted friends', perhaps 'among less than 9 people?'). What was objected to is the public expression of disagreement with House policies (over 10 people? Including strangers?).

The problem as I see it is that the advent of cyberspace has severely weakened the boundaries between private and public views. I see this in academia all the time--the underlying premises of scholars' work is being exposed on discussion lists, whereas in the past they might well have remained unknown except to the author's own circle.

So, I just don't think old, discrete sort of loyal opposition (which has always existed in the Baha'i faith) works any more. At a Staff meeting in Wilmette, Ill. at the National Baha'i Center one morning in the early 1990s, Bob Henderson (Secretary-General of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the US) picked up a recent letter from the House of Justice, slammed it on the table, and said, "Look at what they've done to us now!" He was expressing loyal opposition. There isn't any question that he is loyal in a general sort of way to the UHJ. But he disliked the policy in that letter and thought it inimical to the best interests of the US NSA or US community. And he said so, in front of all of these loyal Baha'i staffers (one of whom told me about it). I am simply adopting the same stance as Mr. Henderson, but doing it on email rather than behind closed doors, and it is this issue of where the loyal opposition is expressed that makes for the difference in how his stance and mine have been received. I am afraid I think that the demand for only private expression of policy differences is a form of institutionalized hypocrisy, and I'd rather be an outcast than a hypocrite.

But, as I said, the key term in the phrase 'loyal opposition' is 'loyal.' And remember it is only on some issues that I differ, and they aren't really key. After all, I believe in world peace, in world federal gov't as an instrument to that end, in the unity of the religions, in the equality of women and men, in all the Baha'i social principles. I believe that Baha'u'llah is the Manifestation of God for this Day. I have worked tirelessly for the human rights of Iranian Baha'is. I began the email petitions to the Iranian gov't in fall of 1998 in protest of the closure of the Open University, and I printed off the hundreds of names my Web site garnered from educators and students around the world and sent them off to Mr. Khatami and Ayatollah Khamenei and the Iran UN Ambassador with my own hands. This tactic was so successful that NSAs around the world picked up on it and promoted dozens of such petition drives by Baha'is at universities. I think it was in part because of the revelation of how the academic world around the globe feels about this issue to Mr. Khatami through these petitions that he made his recent pronouncement in Paris that Baha'is should have basic civil rights in Iran (a first for this government!).

So, so what if I think 'temporary' Review should be abolished? Some members of NSAs have also said this publicly. So what if I think women should eventually serve on the UHJ? Late UHJ member Borrah Kavelin's widow, and, it is said, Ruhiyyih Khanum herself, agrees with me. So what if I believe the House of Justice has only legislative, not Interpretive, authority? They admitted this to me themselves in a letter. These minor differences do occasionally put me in a 'loyal opposition.' But I am not alone there, and even some UHJ members concur. It is absurd, after all the things I have done for the Baha'i faith, that a few minor stances of conscience on my part (expressed on email!) should be used to make me into some sort of pariah. I think it is important to begin changing the culture of hypocrisy. We should be free to declare our consciences and express our views. Shoghi Effendi said so.

As for Baha'u'llah's example, of course it is there. He was obedient to the Sultan and the Shah, but he called on them to institute parliamentary democracy in their realms. As absolute monarchs, they hated to hear it, hated to hear that above all else, but he said it. He said it publicly. He was in loyal opposition to the supreme Caliph of the Sunni Muslim world. He also wanted to reconfigure religion, away from Caliphism and toward participatory democracy. We have a duty to be loyal to that vision of Baha'u'llah's. It is what is really revolutionary among all his teachings.

cheers Juan

Community email addresses: Post message: talisman9@onelist.com Subscribe: talisman9-subscribe@onelist.com Unsubscribe:
talisman9-unsubscribe@onelist.com List owner:
talisman9-owner@onelist.com

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: "Nima Hazini" <lotusapt@wxc.com.au>
Subject: Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Monday, June 18, 2001 1:45 AM

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu.>
Date: Mon Jun 18, 2001 12:48 pm
Subject: Refutation of Peter Khan

My refutation of Peter Khan's June, 2000, talk in New Zealand may be found at

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2001/khancole.htm>

Both it and the original talk are at:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bhdoc.htm>

I enclose the text below:

Reply of Juan Cole to Peter Khan Talk in New Zealand of June, 2000.

Dear friends:

I have been listening to Peter Khan speak since the early 1970s, when he was teaching electrical engineering at the University of Michigan and I was an undergraduate at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. Khan's family was originally from Pakistan, where they had been Punjabi Sunni Muslims, but they emigrated to Australia and converted there to the Baha'i faith. Khan was brought up as a moderate fundamentalist, suspicious of liberal arts scholarship but nevertheless committed to education and to the sorts of science (e.g. engineering) that would not disturb his scriptural literalism. Those who knew him in Australia remember him as a fierce anti-communist cold warrior, a man of the political Right.

I remember him from thirty years ago as among the more level-headed Baha'i speakers then on the circuit. He often attacked popular Baha'i folk beliefs such as the idea that each soul had another soul predestined for it in marriage, which he said he could find no authenticated text from `Abdul-Baha about. I met him at a conference on human rights sponsored by the State Department in the mid-1980s, where I was part of the Baha'i delegation. He was then a counselor at the International Teaching Center, and on the cusp of being elected to the Universal House of Justice. By that time he seemed colder, more haughty, less level-headed than the man I had heard speak a decade and a half earlier. After his election, I attempted to correspond with him, and especially pressed on him the urgent need to abolish "Literature Review," the system of prepublication censorship imposed on all Baha'is by his institution. He wrote genial but unresponsive replies, and the correspondence lapsed.

Then when the talisman@indiana.edu email discussion group was founded in the mid-1990s, Khan came to the U.S. in 1995 and gave a number of talks. I heard him in Ann Arbor in September of 1995. Khan has perfected a personal style of address that allows him to telegraph to other fundamentalists in the community that he is one of them, while not appearing to attack the liberals. This stealth fundamentalism, which resembles American President George W. Bush's "compassionate conservatism," is an attempt to muddy the waters, to promote a far rightwing agenda while not enraging the majority of persons who would oppose it if they understood what was being advocated. I remember in Ann Arbor how he criticized the U.S. retail chain Walmart for refusing to carry a t-shirt emblazoned with a plea for a woman to be elected president of the U.S. Baha'is, he said, would support a woman for president. This tack appears to have been his way of papering over the fact that the Universal House of Justice on which he serves is all-male, and, as a Pakistani-Australian brought up in a highly patriarchal family, that he is among those most dedicated to keeping it that way. At one point Khan spoke of the fall of communism, and he almost spat the word "communist." His nose flared, his eyes blazed. Then he spoke of the likely criticisms "Western liberals" would make of Baha'u'llah's Most Holy Book. And, he almost spat the word "liberals." His nose flared, his eyes blazed. If you hate both communists and liberals, I'm not sure who is left to admire but fascists.

The talk he gave in Wilmette in September of 1995 was much more hardline. He appears in some large part to have intended it as an attack on the talisman discussion group, without coming out and saying so. This was certainly the way the talk was perceived by members of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly. Friends of mine with contacts in Wilmette said it was seen as a "green light" to try to crack down on the free discussions on talisman and to attack its more prominent posters. It was in the wake of Khan's visit that David Langness began being threatened with removal of his administrative rights, apparently for disagreeing with Bob Henderson about what had happened during the NSA's crackdown on dialogue magazine.

Gradually it has become apparent that Khan has for some time been a secret hardline fundamentalist, and that he has used his influence in the counselor corps and now on the Universal House of Justice to push the Baha'i faith in a strongly fundamentalist direction. He appears to think that it should adopt all the same main positions as the literalist Sunni Islam that is his family's background. The problem of undeepened Baha'is from Muslim societies trying to import into the Faith of Baha'u'llah the literalism and rigidity of their upbringing is a huge challenge, especially given how centralized the institutions of the faith are and how just a handful of fundamentalist Baha'is can push the whole organization in an unsavory direction completely at odds with Baha'u'llah's writings. Indeed, Khan has begun saying that Baha'u'llah's principles are not very important, that what is significant about the faith is its administration. This is a sort of administration-worship, adminolatry. He talks about loving committees! It is a frightening heresy, to put aside Baha'u'llah's teachings for the sake of the prerogatives of counselors (never mentioned by Baha'u'llah!) and UHJ members.

In this talk of June, 2000, Khan delivered some fluff about five "developments" during the completion of the "Four Year Plan." These Communist-style "plans" have been a feature of our religion for decades now, and it is time they were done away with. In actual fact, between 1987 and 1997 the Baha'i faith was completely stagnant around the world with regard to numerical growth. In that decade about 400,000 new Baha'is came in around the world (only 40,000 a year globally!) and these converts were offset by withdrawals and deaths. There is no reason to think that this stagnation ceased in 1997. In the U.S., as well, there hasn't been real growth for a long time. The plans have accomplished nothing recently except to make the Faith more regimented and cult-like, and if anything they are probably driving away potential converts.

So, Khan droned on about his five points. First, the faith has spread around the world. But this is not new with the Khan Administration. The Faith had spread to many parts of the world already in the 19th century. There have not been any really significant numbers of conversions anywhere in the world for a decade and a half (the rumors about Albania were vastly exaggerated). So, this is just to make people feel good. We have coreligionists in Mozambique. (How many? 50? 100?). My question would be, what are we doing for them? Or for Mozambique in general? My guess is, almost nothing. And, this talk of a "rise" in the "receptivity to the Faith" and the US telephone campaign is just cheerleading. There is no practical evidence of such a "rise." If anything, the hardline persecutorial actions of Khan and his cronies toward Baha'i intellectuals and moderates in the past decade have alerted thinking people in the West to some very serious human rights abuses within the Baha'i religion, as can be seen on discussion groups on the internet.

Then he talked about the "completion" of the "Mount Carmel projects." Well, no doubt this was a big accomplishment for a small religious community (there are probably only really about 1.5 or 2 million of us, folks). That is, to be able to spend some $300 million over 15 years on major building projects is remarkable. Of course, a lot of the money came from Gulf Baha'i billionaires. But there was lots of individual sacrifice, too. I can't, however, for the life of me understand what this "accomplishment" has to do with the Baha'i principles. How have we helped humankind by building these terraces? How is anyone's life better? What have we done in the meantime for the poor, the homeless, the persecuted? The national budget of the US community in the 1990s was only about $20 million a year on the average. The Universal House of Justice took an average of $6 million a year from that. It impoverished the US community. It funneled enormous amounts of money to these projects. Local communities were left strapped. And, when one local community expressed its aspiration to build a local Mashriqu'l-Adhkar (house of worship), the UHJ sent agents out to bully these devoted Baha'is and make it clear to them that such a step (which would after all interfere with building terraces in Haifa) was out of the question and they should shut up and sit down, Or Else. Yet `Abdul-Baha commanded the building of local houses of worship, which he said was an urgent goal. And, the problem is that the "projects" are hardly completed. These Baha'i officials in Haifa have thought up loads of building projects. They want to go on spending $20-$30 million a year of our money on these white elephants for the next few centuries. In the meantime, local communities have to sit on the floor of someone's apartment during Feast and the Faith spends almost none of its own money on charity or development. We don't help anyone. We build large buildings and do landscaping. This was the purpose of Baha'u'llah's suffering 40 years in exile??

Khan then talks about the Faith "triumphing" in Iran over "severe persecution." I am unable, as one who follows these matters rather closely, to see any improvement whatsoever in the past four or five years in the situation of the Iranian Baha'is. Moreover, any change that has occurred has not been because of anything Peter Khan did! Frankly, I don't know what he is on about. There is enormous work to be done in emancipating them, and his glib suggestion that the kind of persecution they face every day is just fine now, and we don't have to worry about them any more is just incomprehensible.

In fact, the last time the Iranian government tried to pull a mass arrest, I started a massive internet petition drive on their behalf among university people. This was enormously successful and spawned hundreds of spin-off petitions. It was only adopted by the "Institutions" after some waffling and hemming and hawing. And now, of course, people like Khan have written those grassroots petition drives out of the story altogether. Everything has to be about him.

He says: "The Universal House of Justice is divinely guided, it is not omniscient." It actually hasn't lately been acting like it is either one. Indeed, I find the idea that any divine guidance comes anywhere near people like Doug Martin and Peter Khan absolutely impossible to swallow. My grandmother was more saintly than either of them.

His fourth point is that he and his colleagues have "succeeded in accomplishing major change of tone and emphasis in the Baha'i community." This is more Orwellian double-speak from a true master of the genre. What he really means is that he and his cronies have been trying very hard to push the Baha'i community in an ever more fundamentalist and even cult-like direction. They want a community that goose-steps and shouts "Heil!" to everything Khan and his associates ordain. Their emphasis on "training institutes" refers to cult-like mind-control sessions that use constant rote and repetition to dull the minds and indoctrinate them into unthinking submission. Thinking people who have suffered through these religious equivalents of Amway sessions complain bitterly about how mind-numbing and senseless they are. They give no opportunity for serious, open consultation. If 100,000 Baha'is were put through this hell over the past 4 years, no wonder the number of the glaze-eyed among them seems to have increased. These sessions have nothing to do with real "knowledge of the Faith." In fact, many of the serious scholars of the Faith have by now either been bullied, intimidated, or chased out. "Knowledge of the Faith" would threaten Khan's plan to put administration in the place of Baha'u'llah.

Finally, he says that there has been an increase in respect for the Faith in the wider society. I don't know how you would quantify such a thing. Baha'is have their niche, and have had it for some time. Outsiders don't know much about it. Mostly they are told about Baha'u'llah's wonderful principles, without being told that Peter Khan thinks these are old hat and that absolute unthinking obedience to him is what the Faith is really about. I know that my own book, Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i faith in the 19th Century Middle East (Columbia University Press, 1998), has been read by thousands of academics, students, and journalists in the past three years. They will have gained a positive impression of the faith from it, despite the fact that Khan has acted behind the scenes to ensure that it is not carried by Baha'i Publishing Trusts.

Now in Part Two, Khan comes to the meat of his mission to New Zealand. He says, "These three components are firstly, the development of the world centre of the Faith, governed by the Tablet of Carmel of Baha'u'llah; secondly, the development of the Administrative Order, governed by the Will and Testament of Abdul-Baha; and thirdly, the spread of the Faith all over the world, governed by the Tablets of the Divine Plan revealed by Abdul-Baha."

But in fact what he means is that the Universal House of Justice envisages itself continuing to hog the lion's share of the Baha'is' material resources for the foreseeable future. "Development" of the world center really just means more big buildings, more landscaping, more infallible pronouncements that no one can contradict without facing ostracism. The development of the "administrative order" means promoting the power of counselors and ABMs to dictate policy to local assemblies and national assemblies, turning the Faith into a centralized dictatorship instead of a democratic, consultative community. It has nothing to do with `Abdul-Baha, who bestowed no such primacy on anything called "counselors." And the 'spread of the faith all over the world' is not really the spread of the Faith of Baha'u'llah in Khan's mind, but a spread of theocratic dictatorship. He never mentions the main themes of Secret of Divine Civilization or the Supplements to the Aqdas. Since the latter speak of the need to cut down on fanaticism, Khan is poorly placed-being a fanatic of the first water-to represent Baha'u'llah's desires here.

He then says that the Western Baha'i world's main need is "to develop a heightened spiritual consciousness." What he really means by this spiritual consciousness is that Baha'is should give more and more money to Khan and his cronies so that they can build more and more buildings in Haifa, and that Baha'is should proffer abject, unthinking, knee-jerk obedience to whatever Khan and his 8 colleagues summarily decree. He means by "spiritual consciousness" the transformation of people into glaze-eyed cultists sacrificing their families' well-being and their own autonomous consciences for the sake of Khan's particular values. Notice that he never mentions anything about helping anyone in need, unlike `Abdul-Baha.

He says: "And if we don't do that, we will be swept away. And already we're seeing signs of this. In your community you may be aware of the fact that people are drifting away from the Faith. Why? Because they have neglected that sense of heightened spiritual consciousness. They're becoming bitter, they're becoming disillusioned, they're becoming frustrated, they're giving up on the Baha'i community - not because there is anything wrong with the Baha'i community or the Baha'i Faith, because they have failed in their primary duty as Baha'is to develop this sense of heightened spiritual consciousness. We will be swept away with them also over the years to come unless we make this our highest priority."

This is among the most flagrant exercises in blaming the victims in Baha'i history. What Khan is referring to, without being brave enough to come out and say it, is that he and his colleagues summarily declared Alison Marshall of the Dunedin, NZ community, to be "not a member of the Baha'i community." They declared her an infidel, which in Islam is called a decree of takfir. Such decrees were forbidden in the Baha'i faith by `Abdul-Baha, but of course Khan deeply dislikes `Abdul-Baha and everything he stood for, so this doesn't matter to him. Alison Marshall was never contacted by any Baha'i institution with any concerns about her email messages. She was investigated behind the scenes but never contacted directly. She was never warned, never cautioned. Her messages were to small, private email lists with no-forwarding policies. So even the "evidence" of her objectionable views could only have been obtained by Khan through spying, as with the Stasi spies for the communist party in East Germany. And, her objectionable views appear only to be that she thought women should be able to serve on the House of Justice and that intellectuals have been badly treated. She woke up one morning to find that Khan and his colleagues had decided she didn't belong to her own religion, with never a by your leave. It is like something out of Kafka. And, of course, the New Zealand Baha'is who knew the particulars and had any backbone were outraged. This is the "disillusion" Khan is speaking of. It is the disillusion of devoted Baha'is who thought they were joining Baha'u'llah's religion of universal peace, love and tolerance. They have suddenly found themselves in Khan's religion, where Khan straps on his scimitar, binds up his pugri turban, and issues the fatwa of being a despicable infidel against inoffensive New Zealand business consultants. And, of course, if these New Zealand Baha'is object to people's souls being toyed with, that means in Khan's view that they aren't "spiritual" enough!

As for his condemnation of "materialism," this is pretty funny coming from someone who has wheedled $300 million out of a small, poor community for the construction of faux classical buildings to house his and others' offices in Haifa. Couldn't he have done with a less ornate office? Who is materialistic here?

Khan goes on to reveal his fundamentalist traditionalism when he says: "The whole question of obedience to the laws of the Faith is far more than a rational or a logical issue, it is a spiritual issue. If somebody wishes to argue about the laws of the Faith, 'why, why do I have to follow this, why not follow something else', we get nowhere, if there is not a spiritual perspective."

But Baha'u'llah forbade blind obedience (taqlid) in his religion. He wanted people to consult (i.e. argue about) the meaning of the Baha'i faith, including its laws. He commanded them to do so. Such consultation is the cornerstone of the Baha'i faith. But Khan, with his Sunni Muslim background, wants to make blind obedience to the dicta of the council of jurisprudents (i.e. the House of Justice) the touchstone of "spirituality." In other words, he wants to put blind obedience, which Baha'u'llah ordered us to forsake, at the very center of Baha'i spiritual life. By no accident, the blind obedience owed is to Khan and his 8 colleagues. How convenient.

He adds, "There is no way in the world in which you can sit down logically and prove to somebody that this group of nine individuals who gather in the holy land several times every week and deliberate and make their decisions, that their decisions are divinely guided by the Bab and Baha'u'llah and are free from error."

This is because their decisions are obviously not free from error. In fact, their decisions since 1996 or so have frequently been inquisitorial, fascistic and illogical. Moreover, dragging the poor Bab into it seems awfully cruel. I have seen him in dreams, and he deeply disapproves of what they did to Alison. Khan says that Baha'u'llah guaranteed the houses of justice "divine guidance" but he did not do so in a blanket way. Baha'u'llah says that they are centers of divine inspiration when they engage in true consultation and strive to do what is best for their constituents. Baha'u'llah says that no one but the Manifestation is infallible. Khan then tells little anecdotes about the way he managed to turn new Baha'is into glaze-eyed cultists ready to accept the infallibility of X institution "because Baha'u'llah said so." Khan never actually quotes Baha'u'llah because he knows he said no such thing.

Khan says of this attitude of blind obedience to infallible authority, "It gives us also insight to Baha'i strategy. For example, consider the Baha'i strategy to spend a vast sum of money on beautifying Mt Carmel at a time when the world is crying out for hospitals, for schools, for more effective means of agriculture, for scholarships for bright kids to get a good education." He is practicing misdirection here. He admits that many in the community are disturbed by this set of priorities. His answer? We just have to blindly obey whatever Khan and 8 of his colleagues order us to do, or else we aren't spiritual. Then he mumbles something about the fulfillment of prophecies. But no prophecy requires the deliberate investment of $300 million. If it is a good prophecy it will take care of itself. And, our children can have toys and shoes and not live in penury to fulfill it.

Now Khan lets his bombshell drop. He says, "One of the very pressing needs in countries such as New Zealand is a big improvement in the moral character of the Baha'i community. We need in New Zealand as well as other countries - I'm not picking on this poor country more than anybody else - but in this country as well as others, we need a far greater commitment than we have at the present time, as far as I can see, to the moral life of the Baha'i community - to the extent to which believers follow our moral teachings, particularly our teachings on chastity and holiness; the extent to which their sexual conduct conforms to the laws of the Faith; their freedom from involvement in narcotics; from involvement in criminal activity; to the observance of the rectitude of conduct. We need in this country, as in others, a far greater commitment from the rank and file of the Baha'i community to the pursuit of the moral, ethical teachings of the Faith. If this does not occur, the community will disintegrate. Masses of people will become inactive, or leave the Faith, or become sour on it. The time is late. This should be given the highest priority in this community."

The 3,000 or so Baha'is in New Zealand are not in fact, of course, sex-crazed drug addicts. Khan's audience was clearly shocked at what he said to them. But what was apparently going on in the obscure cult-speak of the Baha'i Right, was that he was blaming the whole community for producing independent-minded Baha'is like Alison Marshall and many others. On the theory that the best defense is a good offense, he is deflecting criticism for the high-handed, arbitrary actions of himself and the other House members against Alison by attacking the nice, perfectly law-abiding New Zealand Baha'is as pot-smoking bohemian orgiasts. It is a basic principle of the cultic manipulation of adherents' minds that you keep them off balance, deprive them of self-esteem, make them guilty for no reason. That way you can control them more easily. We are seeing this sort of cultism in action in Khan's shameful and completely unjustified attack on the Kiwi Baha'is.

Then he tells some potted anecdote, the point of which is that in some country a local spiritual assembly was lenient with a druggie Baha'i youth and didn't sanction him, and this failure on their part almost led the Faith to be embarrassed in the press, especially before the baleful eyes of the Iranian Shi'ites. But the real point of the story was not to attack the LSAs for being unduly lenient about drug use among their congregants. It was to attack them for being too accepting of moderate and universalist Baha'is who were not Khan's sort of hardline theocrat. He wanted to stiffen the backbone of the LSAs in throwing out the independent-minded. That he makes the justification for all this the angry gaze of the Iranian Shi'ites is doubly ironic. Fascistic discourse often appeals to the notion of the "nation" being humiliated before the gaze of outsiders, which justifies training the young people to goose step and wear brown shirts.

Khan finally breaks down and at least hints at what he has been driving at all along:

"The House of Justice has been appalled in recent weeks to receive vitriolic, nasty, vicious letters from New Zealand Baha'is concerned about actions the House of Justice took with regard to a believer from the South Island. I'm sure you are aware of it. These letters are not many, there are a few of them, but they're probably the worst letters I have ever seen written to the House of Justice and they came from people who are part of the New Zealand Baha'i community. That, if nothing more, is an indication of the need for a far greater attention to this issue in this country as well as in other countries. New Zealand surely doesn't want to go down in Baha'i history as the community that has produced such nasty correspondence. Correspondence of such a kind that I am embarrassed to have my secretary see it because of the kind of language that it uses. Anyway, be that as it may, it's their spiritual problem and they will deal with Baha'u'llah as they wish."

In other words, Khan is outraged that some Baha'is in New Zealand (and, actually, some non-Baha'i friends of the Faith) dared protest the arbitrary, summary expulsion of Alison Marshall to the House of Justice. The letters of protest I have seen were not the sort of poison pen letters Khan describes them as. They were polite but firm, and were unyielding that this sort of action is unacceptable to civilized people. Khan wants a community of yes-men, so of course any letter of protest would seem to him "vile." Dictators never like being called on the mat for their tyranny. The irony is that news of what they did to Alison hadn't in fact penetrated a lot of the New Zealand community, and in the videotape the audience is clearly puzzled and dismayed at Khan's words. They have no idea what they have done wrong or why he is ragging at them like this.

Khan goes on ranting, "But the point is that here it is an indication that something is fundamentally wrong with the Baha'i community in this country in terms of its depth of understanding of the covenant and the authority of the institutions of the Faith. What you take as normal is not normal, but abnormal."

Of course, all cultists would say the same thing. Jim Jones wanted his People's Temple followers to believe that drinking poison cool-aid, which they quite reasonably thought was not normal, was in fact normal. While Khan is only advocating that we surrender our independent moral judgment to him, rather than urging mass suicide, the former is the prerequisite for the latter. That is, once any community is taken over by glaze-eyed cultists and deprived of their individual moral compass, it becomes easier and easier for some tragedy of the People's Temple sort to occur.

Khan says, "What is normal is to have in a Baha'i community a number of Baha'is who are very knowledgeable about the covenant who can share their insights with others so that the entire community has a good knowledge of the covenant and follows it."

In other words, what is "normal" is to have a permanent Spanish Inquisition, in which the Baha'is who are "knowledgeable" about the "covenant" constantly spy on, inform on and bully the community into abject surrender of any hint of independent thinking.

He goes on, "And if that is not done, then what I foresee in the future in New Zealand is more of the same - more vitriol, more foulness, more people rebelling against that crowd of kill-joys in Haifa who call themselves the Universal House of Justice and what do they know and this kind of stuff."

In other words, Khan considers that crowd in Haifa who call themselves the UHJ to be omniscient (contrary to what he says above). They always know about any "stuff" they choose to take up. Why, they are Oxford dons when they write history, and they are Cardinal Ratzinger when they promulgate doctrine, and they are Ayatollah Khomeini when they lay down the law and declare Baha'is to be infidels. If anyone ever utters so much of a peep in contradiction of some silly thing they have done or said (and by now the list is a long one), then that is "vitriol" and spiritually dangerous, little short of murder on the scale of sins.

Khan says, "Finally, let me mention, associated with this, a need for a vastly greater study of the writings of Shoghi Effendi. People read Gleanings, people read the Kitab-i-Aqdas, they read the Hidden Words, they read Some Answered Questions, they read Seven Valleys and so on and so forth. What is not being studied well enough, not nearly well enough, not a quarter well enough, are the writings of Shoghi Effendi."

Funny, I remember `Abdul-Baha ordering us to read Baha'u'llah's Supplements to the Most Holy Book before all else. How remarkable, to find Khan discouraging Baha'is from reading Baha'u'llah. What am I missing here? Aren't we Baha'is? But perhaps Khan is not a Baha'i, in the sense of a follower of Baha'u'llah. Shoghi Effendi spoke of the dangers he saw in a group of Baha'is he called "the extreme orthodox." It seems to me that in this talk, Khan has given every evidence of being one of those "extreme orthodox." Indeed, much to Shoghi Effendi's dismay, this group has now taken over the religion and is perverting it to the extent that people are being discouraged from reading Baha'u'llah's works!

On the belief of Baha'i cultists that the world was going to end or eternal peace come or something in the year 2000, Khan quotes a questioner as saying: "Related to that is the question: 'I'm still waiting for the unseen calamity by the end of the 20th century. Are we still getting it?'"

He replies, "I've got news for you folks, you've got it. This stuff going on in New Zealand at the present time, if this is not a calamity, what is? Would you rather lose your spiritual life and your spiritual condition and go through all eternity spiritually crippled by this? Is that worse or better than the physical calamity of having your house blown up or having a war occur or something like that? Our values are spiritual. The things we value most are spiritual things. We are facing spiritual tests and a spiritual calamity is before us. And one of the things I wanted to do this morning is to alert you to my understanding that the Baha'is in New Zealand are facing the very real prospect of a spiritual calamity unless urgent and immediate measures are taken."

In other words, Khan is reinterpreting the Calamity that Baha'is have been waiting for (and which obviously hasn't come in the way the cultists expected) as the tendency of New Zealand Baha'is actually to think for themselves and not bow down in glaze-eyed uniformity before the infallible pronouncements of Peter Khan. This is so extreme, so absurd, that it is hard for me to believe that the audience didn't just walk out on him at that point.

Khan continues answering questions. Someone asks him, "Why is it not appropriate to exchange the word 'he' or 'she' when reading a healing prayer for a woman?" He replies: " This is part of a much broader issue in terms of gender neutral language and you find that what we're doing is, rather than adjusting to the existing system, we want to move the goal posts. What we want to do is to recover the original meaning of 'he', which is the meaning in the Oxford English Dictionary, where 'he' is used as a generic term applying to male as well as female. This will take probably some generations to do, and in the interim it feels a little awkward to be using 'he' when referring to a woman, but one can condition oneself psychologically to return to the original meaning of the word, where 'he' is used as a generic rather than a male term."

Not content to engineer everything else about our lives, Khan now intends to retool the English language. The fundamentalist mind is astonishing to watch in action. Once a premise is perceived to be from God, everything else has to be moved around to suit the premise. Moreover, what Khan says here is grammatically absurd. "He" has never been used to refer to a woman in English. What in the world is he talking about? This is the mouthpiece of infallibility???

The next day Khan answers more questions. He says, "There are always extremes in the Faith to be avoided. The other extreme is the witch hunt. And there are some personalities that derive a great deal of satisfaction from witch hunting, psychological satisfaction. There are people who like to go around because it gives them a sense of superiority, who like to feel that they're sort of holier than thou and they know what's going on, and who will be very happily snooping in key holes unless we stop them. And this is not so, this is not what the Baha'i Faith's about. It doesn't have a CIA or a KGB or anything like that. It doesn't go around snooping on people."

Mark Twain said that there are lies, damned lies, and statistics. This particular load of horse manure must be one stage beyond statistics. Khan as a counselor ran odd people called auxiliary board members for "protection" who of course are the KGB of the Baha'i faith. And of course they snoop on Baha'is and conduct witch hunts against them. Alison Marshall was the victim of one such witch hunt. I was. The Walbridges were. Denis MacEoin was. There have been more witches burnt, metaphorically speaking, by the Baha'i authorities in the past 20 years than in all of Salem's history. This is typical of Khan's technique of misdirection, which is that you admit the main critiques against yourself obliquely at the same time that you deny their validity. The witch hunt Khan went to New Zealand to prosecute can now be confidently characterized as "not a witch hunt," because Khan says we don't have those. George Orwell was an unimaginative piker next to these people.

Khan says: "Next question concerns my reference to a situation that had occurred in the South Island of New Zealand, which seemed to elicit some rather um, some rather condemnatory responses to the House of Justice from some friends down there. And the question points out that most people don't know what the devil I'm talking about or what on earth I mention and why don't I tell them, and obviously I'm not going to do anything like, the laws of backbiting still apply to all of us."

This is further confirmation that while Khan thought he was coming down to condemn Alison Marshall and put out any fires her summary takfir had caused, his audience hadn't the slightest idea for the most part what he was talking about. I find it extremely amusing that Khan says he doesn't want to "backbite" Alison by actually mentioning her name. But he backbit her relentlessly without naming her! And what is worse anyway, backbiting someone or kicking them out of their spiritual community for no good reason?

He continues: "But there is nevertheless an important point to be made and that is: the reason I raised it is that it relates to our approach to the covenant. It relates to an extreme form of behaviour where a few individuals felt they had the right to judge the House of Justice's actions on the basis of an incorrect piece of information that they received from heaven knows where."

I don't know what "incorrect" information he is referring to. The New Zealand protest letters were complaining that Alison Marshall suddenly and without warning was declared not a member of the Baha'i community, and that such an action contravened not only civilized norms of governance but the explicit procedures of Baha'i law. And, look at what he says: No one has the right to judge the House of Justice's actions! They are above judgment, above the law. They are a theocratic dictatorship before which the entire world must bend the knee in clenched silence, no matter what acts of tyranny they commit! What an awful world this man is trying to build, so reminiscent of medieval theocracy and absolutism. It is everything that Baha'u'llah stood against.

Khan ends on this note:

"Another intriguing form of questioning that's becoming more prevalent in the present day concerns the word "infallible". And this is a very interesting way to try and erode the authority of the House of Justice, because "infallible" is a pretty bad word - you know, nobody likes to talk about things that are infallible or individuals who claim infallibility, it's sort of an unsavoury concept. So in that sense, one of the forms of opposition at the moment that's being spread in a clandestine way, is to say: well, the word is mistranslated, it really doesn't mean "infallible", it means "immaculate" in terms of integrity, or sinlessness, or freedom from moral stain or anything like that, and that somehow these folk in Haifa have taken it to be "infallible" and they go around sort of parading up and down the place saying that they're free from error in their decisions. And the problem with that school of thought, whether you can speak Arabic or Persian or Turkish or any language at all, the problem is that Shoghi Effendi has, as authorised interpreter, used the word infallible over and over again, explaining that he means this, even though it doesn't mean that, and so on and so forth. So one then has to tackle Shoghi Effendi, and that leads you then to have to tackle what Abdul-Baha said about Shoghi Effendi and his authority as interpreter in the Will and Testament, and then you have to deal with Abdul-Baha and so it goes on. So, these are issues that I think we need at least a few friends, if not as many as possible, in the community to be very clear on so they can be a help and a guide to the other believers when these sorts of issues become prevalent, because they become the basis for assertions attempting to erode the authority of the House of Justice."

This argument is so ridiculous that I wonder if I need say anything about it. First of all, the word ma`sum in Arabic does not mean "infallible" in the Roman Catholic sense. It does mean protected from sin, among other things. How Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha used it in the original is not irrelevant to understanding it. That Shoghi Effendi translated it "infallible" does not tell us everything that the word means in the Baha'is scriptures (but then, Khan has already announced himself opposed to reading these). Basically, Khan is using the mere fact that Shoghi Effendi translated the word in this way to impose his fundamentalism on our understanding of it. And, any attempt to understand the concept from the original sources is a form of "undermining" Peter Khan's authority. God forbid. I wonder if the man knows Pakistani generals. They often think in just exactly the same way.

Sincerely
Juan Cole
Professor
Department of History
University of Michigan

.

From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Tuesday, June 19, 2001 2:39 AM

Dear Michael:

In answer to your questions: Yes, this talk by Peter Khan was given in June, 2000 in New Zealand. It has taken this long for the Kiwi Baha'is who had a tape of it to type it up and send it around. The talk is excruciatingly boring and it was a great sacrifice for anyone to spend all that time on such a banal set of thoughts. I am sorry to inflict it further on you all. I think I had a complete text in May, but I am only now far enough into the summer and away from other obligations to reply to it.

The New Zealand audience was clearly very puzzled by several of Khan's tirades, since most of them were not wired and they hadn't heard about the UHJ's declaration of Alison Marshall as an infidel. I can't imagine mainstream Baha'is walking out on a UHJ member (despite all protestations to the contrary, we all know they have been made into little gods). But they just seemed confused by his ranting at them.

It is important to note that far rightwing fundamentalists like Peter Khan would never have written these sorts of comments down. When he writes for an educated audience he is all sweetness and light and concerned to attack fundamentalists even further Right than himself in the community, so as to give a false impression of open-mindedness.

So, the advent of the Internet has been extremely important in outing the more cult-like elements in the Baha'i administration, who typically tried to keep their more outrageous comments only oral, so as to leave paper trail in their subversion of true Baha'i ideals.

With regard to my statement that the "Baha'i World Center" intends to go on spending hundreds of millions of dollars on monumental building works in Haifa, this is admitted by Khan himself if you read between the lines. But it is anyway common knowledge among the cult network in our religion. After all, the shrine of Baha'u'llah has yet to be built (I like the simple arrangement that now exists, but it will be buried under faux classical kitsch), and the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar of Haifa has yet to be built (the truly awful, ugly design of Mason Remey will be used, apparently), and lots of other things remain to be done. I don't think the building works in Haifa are even mainly the point. I think they are being pursued precisely in order to keep local communities poor and without resources, the better to dominate them from the Center.

I do not believe that the National Spiritual Assemblies or the Universal House of Justice spend any significant amount of money on charitable works that actually help people. Some Australian friends of mine told me that they were informed in the early 1990s that 75% of the national budget in that country went to the NSA and its members for their activities and perquisites. They said they were told by an NSA member not to reveal this to other community members, because it might unnecessarily dishearten them. A staffer at the National Baha'i center in the US told me in the early 1990s that our NSA maintains a slush fund of several hundred thousand dollars for NSA members' perquisites, such as air travel etc. While the Baha'i administrations loudly trumpet their "development" work, if you look carefully you will see that it either uses other peoples's money or is insubstantial or consists of Baha'i Sunday schools. Our US NSA maintains an old people's home, but runs it as a profit-making business and pays US taxes on the profits. I don't really think there is any other religion, the national and international leaderships of which, do less to help humankind than the Baha'i Faith. It is quite ironic and very disheartening. Shoghi Effendi said that a charity fund was essential to Local and National Assemblies, that it should be among their main activities, and that it should be spent on non-Baha'is as well as Baha'is. I don't think such separate charitable funds exist very frequently.

Michael, I think you can corroborate for me that talisman@umich.edu has always had a limited no-forwarding policy, and that in fact I tossed Iskandar Hai off it in 1997 for violating it with regard to a particular liberal Baha'i scholar of the time. Therefore, it is certainly true that "evidence" against Alison Marshall was gathered unethically.

The community in the midwest that wanted to build a local Baha'i House of Worship had purchased the land and just wanted to put up a sign saying that it was the site of a future local Mashriqu'l-Adhkar. Goons from the central Baha'i administration appeared, who insisted they take back down the sign. This, despite `Abdul-Baha's strict and urgent instructions that local Houses of Worship be built everywhere as soon as possible.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Democratic Conservatism was Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Tuesday, June 19, 2001 1:59 PM

Dear Michael:

When I said that if you condemn Liberalism and Communism then you are left with only Fascism to admire, I was using "liberalism" (it should have been with a big "L") to refer to the democratic tradition generally.

Of course, this sort of Millian Liberalism nowadays would encompass all the major positions in Canada and the US, whether they be W.-style conservatives or Teddy Kennedy-style "liberals" (with a small "l") or Michael Harrington Social Democrats. Peter Khan's public pronouncement prove him to be profoundly anti-Liberal in the sense that he rejects democracy in any form.

I think the more cult-like elements of rightwing Baha'ism are basically fascists in their political philosophy and outlook. I don't mean fascism as just an insult. I mean it as a political philosophy, a la Mussolini. They believe that the organic unity of the community outweighs individual rights. They believe in patriarchy. They hate parliamentary governance, seeing it as factious, preferring a form of central committee rule. They hate free expression, believing strongly in censorship. As you say, their positions on these matters are 180 degrees away from what Baha'u'llah taught. But then, they are not interested in Baha'u'llah, by their own admission.

cheers Juan

bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (Michael McKenny) wrote in message news:
<9gl1n5$htt$1@freenet9.carleton.ca>...

> Greetings, Nima and Juan.

> Juan asks if you hate Communists and Liberals who is left to admire > bur fascists. I certainly understand the context behind this rhetorical > question, and I would like to take this opportunity to underline that > what is reprehensible about the behaviour of the UHJ is that it is > acting precisely as have acted those whom Baha'u'llah condemned and it > is oppressing its own people not because it is neither communist, nor > liberal, but because it is anti-democratic, because it violates the most > essential Baha'i principles of freedom of thought and expression.

> In this country there is an ongoing debate of considerable proportions > among those of conservative viewpoints and one of the most heartening > aspects of this debate is the extent to which the term and attitude of > democratic conservatism is used and demonstrated. The guy who, in my > opinion, is the most articulate talk show host in this city is a great > example of this. He continually and sincerely invites the expression of > all points of view, admits he is expressing his own opinion, which may > not be correct and certainly isn't the only one and states his opposition > only to the view that there is only one permissible opinion.
> It is, in my opinion, essential to stress this point in the Baha'i > context. Holding conservative views and expressing them is perfectly > legitimate and in accord with the universalist approach of Baha'u'llah.
From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Refutation of Peter Khan

Date: Thursday, June 21, 2001 2:21 PM

Here's Juan being honest about what Shoghi Effendi's true priorities were.

Trying to blame him for the way the Baha'i faith has been turned into an ATM for high Baha'i officials is despicable. He cared about helping people. Actually helping people. And he tried to put that goal at the center of Baha'i administration. The money-grubbing officials like Peter

Khan haven't even allowed such passages to be translated from Persian and promulgated to the people to whom Shoghi Effendi addressed them!

From:

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/trans/vol3/charity.htm>

Translations of Shaykhi, Babi and Baha'i Texts, vol. 3, no. 2 (March, 1999)

Shoghi Effendi the Charity Fund

Translation and Commentary by Juan R. I. Cole, History, University of Michigan

In a large manuscript in my possession that contains some of Shoghi Effendi's largely unpublished early letters to the local spiritual assembly of Tehran and then the Iran national assembly, there is a striking emphasis put on the establishment of local and national Charity Funds. Emphasis is too weak a word. He is quite insistent. Such funds must help the poor and needy among non-Baha'is (aghyar), and are "absolutely obligatory." Such charity work is identified with the meaning of the phrase, 'service to mankind.' The Charity Fund must be founded the moment a local assembly is. Administering this Fund and teaching the faith are mentioned as the two paramount duties of the local assembly. Until such funds are established, the 'most beloved of hopes' will never show her face. They are "absolutely pivotal" and by them will the cause be promulgated.

The emphasis found below on the LSA being in control of the funds and its decisions about disbursement being final come because this step was necessary to prevent corruption and also to prevent powerful local clans from lobbying to have some "charity" thrown their way. In societies like Iran that consist far more of families than of individuals, any philanthropic or development effort is often stymied by the tendency of anyone who oversees money to feel he has to share it with his cousins. Shoghi Effendi was attempting to instill Weberian bureaucratic rationality into this process and to fight such nepotism and corruption.

I know that the Iranian Baha'i community did major philanthropy and ran at least one major hospital. So Shoghi Effendi's pronouncements were taken seriously there. Although a few passages on helping the needy can be found in Shoghi Effendi, Baha'i Administration (Wilmette, Ill.: Baha'i Publishing Trust, 1968 [1933]), they are not as explicit or emphatic as these Persian passages are:

“A careful study of Bahá'u'lláh's's and `Abdu'l-Bahá's's Tablets will reveal that other duties, no less vital to the interests of the Cause, devolve upon the elected representatives of the friends in every locality . . . They must do their utmost to extend at all times the helping hand to the poor, the sick, the disabled, the orphan, the widow, irrespective of color, caste and creed.” Baha'i Administration, pp. 37-38.

Despite this fleeting mention, I am not aware that there has been any similar strong stress put on charity work in the U.S. administrative tradition. But I wonder whether similar letters were sent to the U.S. NSA and never published. (Apparently the vast majority of Shoghi Effendi's letters to the US are still in the archives).

Shoghi Effendi/LSA of Tehran, 19 December 1923

"In addition, you must endeavor to found, ensure the continuation of, and widen the scope of a charitable fund (sandúq-i khayriyyih). It is necessary that such charities be founded in every spot. Both members [of the local assemblies] and non-members must, to the extent they are able, contribute to this charitable fund voluntarily rather than being obliged to do so. Whatever is contributed should be given into the care of the local assembly's treasurer, so that it may be disbursed as considered right by the members of the spiritual assembly, on philanthropic causes and spreading the cause of God. Helping the poor, needy, orphans, widows, aged and indigent among non-Baha'is is most necessary and absolutely obligatory. For by this means the most great reality of the teachings of the divine Cause, which is service to the world of humanity, shall be vindicated and made manifested."

Shoghi Effendi/National Spiritual Assembly of Iran, 1305 s./ August 1926

With regard to helping the friends via the charity fund, it has previously been clearly emphasized that as soon as a spiritual assembly has been founded and formed, without the least delay a Charity Fund must also be founded and announced. The members of the assembly must at every moment, generally and in writing, call upon and encourage the divine friends to contribute to it. Whatever sums are collected for this charity fund must in their entirety be completely, absolutely and forever under the administration of the members of the spiritual assembly. No one has any right to intervene or interfere. Whatever the members of the consultative assembly unanimously decide, and whatever sum they dedicate to this purpose, must be disbursed by the treasurer without anything being added or subtracted. If unanimity of views cannot be achieved, whatever the majority decides must be implemented. No one has the right, as an independent individual, to intervene in the receipts of the spiritual assemblies. The assembly must, after consultation, examination and investigation into the requirements of the cause and the needs of individuals, and in accordance with its own capabilities, apportion its resources. Thus will the poor, the weak, and the needy from all classes receive help as the days pass, and thus will both public benefits and the interests of the cause also rapidly be realized.

In the same way, the formation, continuation and expansion of a central Charity Fund at the national level for Iran must be considered the most urgent of necessities, and as a basic issue has not till this moment been enabled in the way it must be. The divine friends and the handmaids of the All-Merciful throughout the nation of Iran must be guided with respect to this important matter. Aiding the national Charity Fund is even more important than donating to the local Charity Fund. For it is an important factor, or rather is absolutely pivotal for the progress, institutions and foundations of the Cause. It is better and more fitting that the generality of persons throughout Iran and the spiritual assemblies in Baha'i regions should jointly donate on a continual basis to the national Charity Fund. Thus will the means to promulgate this mighty Cause in the center and in all regions be brought together as is necessary and appropriate. The receipts of the national Charity Fund are in their entirety under the absolute authority and administration of the members of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Shoghi Effendi/National Spiritual Assembly of Iran, 30 December 1926

. . . They must respect, honor, praise, and follow those with special expertise in arts and technology, must respect and venerate those possessing knowledge and erudition, must stand for freedom of conscience, must refrain from criticizing or opposing the beliefs, rituals and practices of individuals and peoples and religions--these are binding and fundamental obligations upon the trustees of the all-merciful, the representatives of the Baha'is, the members of the spiritual assemblies. Self-sacrificing friends!
The most beloved of hopes will never show her face in these lands until charitable trusts are founded, their continuation is assured, and their scope widened, as mentioned and underlined before in the letters of this servant.
Note how emphatic and explicit is the pen of the [Center of] the Covenant in this regard:

"Charitable foundations are among the institutions of the Lord of humankind. For they raise orphans, provide comfort to the poor and old and indigent, educate children, and teach the cause of the All-merciful. You must give the charitable foundation the utmost attention, [in addition], so that teachers of the faith can be appointed and promulgate the word throughout all regions, reciting the verses and spreading fragrances and chanting the words. Every soul who contributes to a charitable foundation will be the recipient at all times of divine aid and confirmations, such that all his or her faults will be made into perfections, and it will become a cause for the eternal glory of such a soul. Beloved of God, this incontrovertible decree is incumbent upon you! . . ."

By charitable foundation is meant the Charity Fund, which with the passage of time, as it grows, will be overseen with great care and trustworthiness by the members of the assembly, who will constitute as its principal the contributions of the friends. All the proceeds and benefits of this charitable foundation will be spent on the advancement and progress of the Cause of God and on extending public benefits.
From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Wednesday, June 20, 2001 2:03 PM

Dear Michael:

The policy on the old talisman list was "no informing." This is what I called a limited no-forwarding policy. It is always unethical to report to religious or governmental officials on the private discussions of a small group of friends unless they are doing something illegal (and even then each individual would have to consider what was at stake ethically; I wouldn't turn people in for talking about pot use--that would make you a narc). That people who have been turned in and who admit being upset by the experience should then turn around and do it to others says everything about their character.

These fascist idiots who support the cultization of the Baha'i faith are always talking about how it is a "private" organization and can do as it pleases. A community claiming millions to which a public accommodation is made by dozens of governments is private. But our little email list wasn't private? Give me a break.

The fact is that the more cult-like and dishonest segments of the Baha'i community are as committed to informing on their neighbors to the authorities as Ayatollah Khamenei's SAVAMA spies in Iran are. Vigilante informing is a key element of fundamentalist religion. It is a very ugly practice, and those who engage in it make themselves ugly in character. They justify to themselves what they do by saying that it is like a Mafia informer turning state's evidence. But what they omit to say is that the people they inform on are not criminals. Rather, what they do is more like what Ezra Pound did for Mussolini.

Peter Khan, of course, got to be where he is by spying and running spies within the Baha'i community, and he is deeply committed to this totalitarian ethos of panopticon.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Why does everyone have to be so Goddamn mean?
Date: Thursday, June 21, 2001 7:55 PM

Dear Milissa:

Small tend to be characterized by a great deal of hostility and aggression. Freud speaks of this somewhere. Most email discussion groups are about the size of a village. Anyone who has actually had anything to do with villages (not the romanticized version of them but the real thing) knows that they are rife with feuds, gossip, backbiting, and taunts.

These aggressive tendencies are reinforced by the internet. After all, if you go too far in a face to face encounter, you may get beat up. And, the person you are talking to will begin to give off body language so indicating. But out here you can't see faces, expressions, or the curling of a hand into a fist. Nor is there much that anyone could do to you apart from hacking your system, which bears risks. Even so, I know there have been LSA meetings or even feasts broken up by fistfights or the threat of them, certainly by people exploding with bad language. That is in the real world where there are consequences. Here there are very few consequences, usually.

Then, too, because of the anonymity, people will confess their true views on the internet in a way they would not at a Baha'i fireside. A lot of the peace in the community is artificial, coming from everyone showing by their body language that only superficial platitudes and smiles are wanted, not real opinions about real issues. Precisely because fundamentalist Baha'is have used such techniques to gain a lock on discourse inside the community, they are furious that the internet has allowed other Baha'i opinions to be heard. Since they cannot stop this (though they initially tried), their only recourse is to attack the authors of the unwelcome ideas if they want to combat it (which they desperately do). Fundamentalism is about largely ignorant persons finding ways of gaining power over knowledgeable ones. It is not a nice process, either in goal or method.

Then, some people use the internet to blow off steam, launching jibes and insults here that they would not typically use in ordinary conversation. Maybe it depresses you to see it; but maybe it is cathartic for them. How do we weigh your discomfort against someone else's satisfaction?

Of course, reasoned and persuasive discourse is always preferable to mere insult in the course of any discursive dispute. It is more likely to gain a hearing. But sometimes people just want to shout at you at someone, not gain a hearing.

I am philosophical about it. Anyway, TRB is nice compared to most of the Usenet. Pat Kohli is very active here, and while I don't often agree with him, he is a gentleman and an ethical person. Michael McKenny is the soul of propriety. Even some of the more annoying characters out here don't usually just call you an asshole if they disagree with you. Of course, it happens.

In my view, Usenet allows the expression of the full range of Baha'i opinion, including a heated dialogue driven by disagreements as well as sometimes personal animosity. But we have been told that in the end, from the spark of differing opinions, the truth emerges. I think over time the truth is emerging here, and even if along the way there are some sophomoric antics, it is all worth it.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Friday, June 22, 2001 2:10 AM

Shoghi Effendi's letters in Persian were about the duties of the Local Spiritual Assembly in general, not about a specific situation in Iran.

And, he wrote in a similar vein to the West, as I quote, though the Persian passages are more extensive and revealing of his intentions. Many of the letters of this period on such subjects are addressed not only to Iran but also to India. So, no, we don't have "charity in one country." In a global faith with standardized national by-laws for each NSA, why would anyone think that these letters of Shoghi Effendi have no relevance to Baha'i administration nowadays. Some little note his secretary wrote to a little old lady in Topeka is regularly used to over-rule Baha'u'llah's principles by Baha'i fundamentalists. But a whole book of detailed instructions specifically about the way LSAs are to be run and what their duties are is ignored and remains untranslated!

Could it be if we took Shoghi Effendi seriously then we would have to build Baha'i hospitals in the US and some homeless shelters and even give some of the administration's money away to--gasp--non-Baha'i needy, and this would divert money from sculpting ever more $300 million building projects to beautify some obscure Israeli port town?

By the way, Shoghi Effendi legislated temporarily all the time. The very invention of "administrative rights" and their "removal" was his. No such sanction existed in `Abdul-Baha's time nor is it mentioned by the Holy Figures. If he had wanted to declare Baha'is infidels, he would have done it. He did not do it, even to people like Sohrab whom he saw as great threats to the Faith, because he knew that `Abdul-Baha had forbidden it.

I'm still waiting to hear about all the charitable trusts and separate charity funds the Baha'i local assemblies in the US have established.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Refutation of Peter Khan
Date: Thursday, June 21, 2001 7:34 PM

Dear Michael:

Yes, right on! It is so good to hear you, one of the few true Baha'is I have known, speaking truth to power.

Just so you know, I spent about an hour combing my archives from 1996 for your message on Enochian chess. I regret to say that it appears I did not archive it.

Ask on talisman--there may be some old irfanian there who retained it.

By the way, Shoghi Effendi did not lay down any specifications for removing Baha'is from the membership rolls. In fact, he never once did any such thing. He took away Baha'is' administrative rights or he declared them to have broken the covenant, in neither case bringing into question their being Baha'is. The passage that cultists like Peter Khan, Doug Martin and Steven Birkland use from Shoghi Effendi to declare Baha'is infidels was meant as a guide to local spiritual assemblies in deciding whether to enroll someone in the first place. Using it for the purpose of declaring enrolled Baha'is to be infidels is completely at odds with Shoghi Effendi's intentions. (And, the reason Shoghi Effendi did not declare Baha'is to be infidels was because he knew that `Abdul-Baha had forbidden this practice.) The cultists keep saying they are only implementing Shoghi Effendi's instructions, but in fact they are contravening his most deeply held convictions. They are the ones who are betraying Shoghi Effendi, never mind Baha'u'llah Himself.

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: No Room for "Dialogue"
Date: Saturday, July 21, 2001 7:09 PM

Glenford Mitchell wrote a big report on race relations in the Baha'i faith in 1967 and was allowed to distribute it to the delegates at the 1968 National Convention, with his name on it. He was immediately elected to the NSA.

In fact, one of the reasons Kazemzadeh was so petrified of the "Modest Proposal" was that he had seen this done with Mitchell, maybe even been a part of it. The Dialogue editors did not know how National Convention works and so had no idea that just by making some suggestions they were becoming "prominent."

But, people who condemn Steve Scholl and David Langness have a duty to condemn Glenford Mitchell, too, if this is what they are complaining about.

The logical conclusion is that all Baha'is must be quiet all the time lest their words become well thought of and a route to election to the NSA. But, gee, some Baha'is aren't quiet at all. In fact, one wonders what Schaut is running for, exactly.

cheers Juan

Modernity and the Millennium: the Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the Nineteenth Century Middle East* (Columbia University Press);
https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=995756781/sr=1-1/ref=sc_b_1/002-1042367-1938400

bighappymonkey@yahoo.com (Dave Fiorito) wrote in message news:
<f0853486.0107190731.56fa4be9@posting.google.com>...

> Rick,

>

> > > Stop and think about it. The delegates are there to choose the nine > > > people they feel will best serve on the NSA. If they get a document > > > with a list of suggested changes at the national level. If that list > > > were to strike a cord with a delegate it could influence their vote.

> >

> > Actually, Dave, I'd have to agree with Paul on this one. There is very > > little evidence that would even suggest that these people sought any > > authority or "power" for themselves.

>

> The active search for power does not need to be intentional. If you > circulate material at convention that positions you as one who has > answers to national questions then you may be influencing the > delegates. Forget that we are talking about a specific incident and > think about it in general terms.

>

>

> Cheers,

>

> DaveFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: A Bahai in Perfectly Good Standing

Date: Sunday, July 22, 2001 4:04 PM

Dear Warren:

Your confusion comes about because the ultra-conservatives at the top of the Baha'i administration have suddenly changed the rules on us.

It used to be that "covenant-breaking" consisted of claiming to be the leader of the Baha'i faith or trying to create a schism.

And, it used to be that you could not get off the rolls of the Baha'i community unless you wrote a letter explicitly denying faith in Baha'u'llah.

Around 1996 the semi-cultists now running things changed both these rules. "Covenant-breaking" now consists of saying things on email lists that annoy powerful Baha'i officials in Wilmette and Haifa. Mainly these consist of the expression of liberal, high-minded sentiments. Most people are not "prominent" enough to get into trouble this way, though (you are probably not in danger). The charges would be launched only at someone considered "prominent" who is not toeing an unspecified party line.

Then in 1997 they changed the rules again. Although `Abdul-Baha forbade the practice of takfir or declaring a Baha'i to be not a Baha'i, the UHJ did this to Michael McKenny. They just summarily removed him from the Canadian rolls. Apparently they did not like the things he was saying on email, in particular his argument that women should be able to serve on the House of Justice. They did the same thing, even more arbitrarily, to Alison Marshall in 2000.

As far as I can see, the official rules are now that you may be assured of remaining on the rolls only if you do not believe women should be able to serve on the UHJ. That is, this is now the definition of a Baha'i: someone who accepts that ultimate authority in the Baha'i faith is patriarchal in nature and women must be excluded from it.

It does not matter any more whether you believe in Baha'u'llah. He is now irrelevant. The question is whether you kowtow to Doug Martin and Peter Khan and Ian Semple and Farzam Arbab, and their narrow, fundamentalist and high patriarchal view of the Baha'i faith. That is, an orthodoxy is being established, which at the same time creates the rest of us, who do not share it, as heretics. The main tenets of this orthodoxy sound much more like Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson than like `Abdul-Baha.

People who feel uncomfortable with the direction that these powerful fundamentalists are taking our beloved Faith are welcome to join our more moderate discussions at talisman9@yahoogroups.com .

cheers Juan Cole

inqu329960@aol.com (Inqu329960) wrote in message news:

<20010722104126.19624.00000585@ng-ca1.aol.com>...

> An ammendment to a previous post

>

> Dear Fred: I read the letter also The letter said that the basis for membership > in the Baha'i Faith was that a person accepts the claim of Baha'ull'ah to be > the Manifestation of God for this day and age. It says it is entirely up to > the individual to decide what level of involvment they may chose.

>From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: A longish rant

Date: Monday, July 30, 2001 2:09 AM

Dear John and Warren:

There are alternatives to the fundamentalist version of the Baha'i Faith, which resembles the Christian Reconstructionists in desiring to erect a future Baha'i theocracy and ram their rigid misinterpretations of the Writings down our throats. I don't think either of you have a problem with Baha'u'llah, as Karen has also been arguing.

A lot of this vision is being elaborated over at <https://www.yahoogroups.com/talisman9/> , a liberal Baha'i email list that you are welcome to join and pursue your questions. It has functioned for many Baha'i moderates and liberals as a spiritual home, since they have been ostracized by the militant fundamentalist Baha'is in their local communities.

Do come on over . . .

cheers JuanFrom: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Sunday, January 14, 2001 3:20 AM

I do not have the time or the inclination to spend a lot of time on usenet right now, but since I have been slandered (and not for the first time) by Susan Stiles Maneck in her recent posting, I am forced to reply (yet again) to these falsehoods.

But first, I would like to make my own mea culpas. I retract almost everything I said about the faith on email between May 4, 1996 and January 30, 1999. I was very depressed in the wake of the false charges that were launched against me, and as a result had temporarily lost my faith, which had been at the core of my being for 24 years. I am a very sensitive person, and this was a nightmare ordeal for me. I had the misfortune of being among the first persons in history to live through such a period of disorientation in the age of the Internet. Lots of rightwing Baha'is were eager to misrepresent themselves as my friends so as to get out of me my innermost thoughts, and these have been archived in Haifa, and Maneck posts private messages from me from that period occasionally in order to discredit me. Well, if it matters, I know I said a lot of things that were overdrawn or overly emotional, in my hurt, and I disavow them now.

I consider myself a follower of Baha'u'llah again, now (however much I am unwanted), and while I am empathetic with my unbelieving self, that is no longer me.

I am glad to admit I got lots of things wrong. Peter Khan's family was Muslim before becoming Baha'i. An Australian Baha'i misled me that they had at one point been Christian. I was wrong. The members of the House of Justice have all kinds of cars and not just Mercedes. However, they do preside over a budget that runs to hundreds of millions of dollars, and their refusal to publish any budget breakdown does raise questions about the nature of finances in Haifa. However, if I got their car types wrong or imputed to them chauffeurs they don't have, I am glad to retract. Accuracy means a lot to me. Pilgrims had told me these things, and they were pilgrims I trust more than I trust Maneck, but where there is doubt one cannot claim certainty. Moreover, some of my motives in talking about the members' lifestyle were hurt at the enormous injustice they had done to me, which was an unworthy motive.

>And the hypocrisy of their actions became increasingly apparent. They >would complain of censorship and then tell me when I was moderator of >H-Bahai that I shouldn't allow somebody to post because they were >an "ultramontanist" and a "big Nixon supporter."

Let's talk a little bit about hypocrisy. From about August of 1997, when Maneck started secretly working for "counselor" Ghadirian, she began sending him regular spy reports of the confidential deliberations of its academic editors. She began attempting to disrupt the list and "muddy the waters" in accordance with her instructions. We have a rule that subscribers should have a master's degree or more in the humanities or social sciences, to ensure an academic tone to discussions. She suddenly announced that she was going to start enrolling persons without those credentials. One of the persons she proposed to enroll in this maverick way was a lawyer who is also an Auxiliary Board Member for Protection, and who is no academic. I said no. I said that, moreover, the person had kooky ideas about Nixon having been innocent & etc. I mentioned his thinking Dick Nixon was the innocent target of a smear campaign (!!!) as yet another piece of evidence that this person was not a bona fide academic; but lack of credentials was what was determinative.

Maneck's announcement that she would ignore the rules and do as she pleased; her frequent rejection of posts from Steve Scholl and other liberals on purely ideological grounds; her vicious insults directed at a prospective liberal moderator with the intent of scaring him away from helping the list; her constant spy reports to Ghadirian; her expression of delight that a subscriber had signed off that she viewed as a 'covenant breaker' because she intended to mount a campaign on the list to firm the academics up in the covenant; were all capped by a demand that I resign as editor. Ultimately she voluntarily resigned from her editorship in disgrace because she inadvertently supplied evidence, in the course of her persecution of me, that she was spying on the list for Ghadirian. She later publicly accused me on this very list of having fired her! While I would have if I could have, that was for the Editorial Board, and she did not give even them the opportunity.

The fact is that she was misusing her position on an academic list to undermine its independence in favor of the imposition of some wacky fundamentalist orthodoxy, and she is still sore at having failed.

> When they tried to persuade me that the Faith had been > taken over by a secret cabal going back to Mason Remey and Horace > Holley, I really had to step back and ask myself just what had I gotten myself into?

If you knew anything about American Baha'i history you would know that both those individuals were deeply involved in creating a rightwing Baha'i culture. As for a cabal, I was upset when I said that. But it isn't far-fetched that the rightwing Counsellors who have taken over the Faith have some sort of at least informal network that allows them to politick so successfully and to come to power and remain there. On the other hand, this phenomenon could be more haphazard. I frankly don't know. At the time, I was commiserating with someone I thought a friend. And people say I never admit having been wrong!

> Then I was sent a rough draft of the Panopticon article and saw it was filled > with distortions about matters where they author had to know better.

The Panopticon article is not filled with distortions. I believe every word of it to be true, and I believed so when I wrote it. And, I sent it to Maneck for her comments, virtually all of which I incorporated into the final draft. So, if it was 'filled with distortions' she had every chance to set me straight on all of them, and it is her own fault if she did not.

> Meanwhile, unfounded charges were being made saying things like the House had > ordered Abbas Amanat expelled from the Faith which I knew simply weren't true.

If that is what you thought was being said, no wonder you thought it wasn't true. What I said was that Derek Cockshut waged a brutal campaign to protest the Bahai Publishing Trust's carrying Abbas Amanat's Resurrection and Renewal in 1989 when it came out. And that the NSA took the issue to the House of Justice. And that the House of Justice wrote that it was all right to carry the book because Abbas Amanat "is not a Baha'i." Abbas, however, was and is an enrolled Baha'i in the US community, and he has never disavowed faith in Baha'u'llah. In the wake of the 1990 letter the NSA sent him several insulting letters demanding to know his conscience (I thought there was no confession in our religion?) He declined to reply, last I knew. `Abdul-Baha in the Hizar Bayti said we don't have the Muslim custom of declaring believing Baha'is to be infidels because we don't like their views, and I found the arrogance of the 1990 letter breathtaking. It was my first clue that something was very rotten in Haifa, and it wasn't just Wilmette. If Maneck turned against me because of this statement, she really wronged me!

> Or I was told that the NSA of Canada had sold off a important collection within > their archives to prevent it from falling into the hands of academics, > something which proved to be utterly false.

First of all, I've said publicly a number of times that I was wrong about that. It seems to me a relatively minor little affair, anyway. I got the story's details wrong, and a more knowledgeable poster corrected them. However, I am unaware that the NSA of Canada has provided its INBA set (manuscript facsimiles of the Baha'i Writings) to any scholars, and I think Maneck knows that it is problematic whether they would do so.

> And something else would happen as well. I would start have arguments with

- > people on Talisman on basic issues like the existence of revelation and began
- > to realize that the people I was supporting didn't really believe in it in any
- > meaningful way.

In other words, we had to be basically fundamentalists or neo-Calvinists or something, or else Maneck would gleefully join in the auto-da-fe against anything we said. Her idea of "Revelation" isn't dogma that all Baha'is have to accept, and her problems with deism are her problems.

- > But it was becoming increasingly apparent that if I went down, I - > wasn't going down alone and began to realize that for the sake of
- > these Baha'is I needed to search for solutions rather than add to the
- > problems. So I began to behave much less recklessly.

If you had behaved less recklessly that would have been fine. You turned into a Stasi-like spy, a fifth columnist, and an Inquisitor. And you decided that only by waging a smear campaign against me could you hope to make Baha'i scholarship acceptable to the fundies. That, you didn't have to do. These actions warped your personality and made you a poor Baha'i.

- > Right around this time there was a very lurid thread going on on Talisman
- > discussing some prominent Baha'is supposed sexual indiscretions. Then Juan came
- > bursting on to Talisman saying, "I've been backbitten and so have you!" It was
- > in reference to a talk Counselor Gharian had made in London critical of the
- > Talisman list.

Ghadian's talk in London wasn't critical just of the Talisman list. He libelled me and David Langness and did all but issue Anathemas against us just as though he were an ayatollah in a turban. (And I thought you weren't supposed to backbite; David was a particular victim in this). Ghadian should be careful. In the U.K., libel is easy to prove. As for the other issue, that a high Baha'i official resigned in disgrace from his profession for sexual harassment and then was immediately appointed to a cushy Baha'i job in Geneva was of interest to talismanians like Linda Walbridge. She had been threatened with being declared a covenant breaker for advocating more rights for Baha'i women, including service on the House of Justice. And here was a man in the old buddy system of high Baha'i administration who was actually promoted despite a public scandal that was in the newspapers. It wasn't just a matter of gossiping about someone's private life. It was outrage that innocent liberals were persecuted out of the faith and calumniated, but if you had friends in high places you could get away with anything.

- > Ghadian. how his saintliness and love eventually overcame my fears and
- > suspicions.

Oh, yeah, all the saints I know call meetings in London to backbite people, and then have their agents spy on people and make reports about their confidential conversations. Why, the KGB was full of saints in its heyday!! Maneck can't see that the only reason she got love-bombed by this manipulative physician was precisely because of his hope of gaining a spy "asset" known to be in close contact with me. And I have to hand it to him, he did a world-class job of turning her into a mole.

- > I began to realize that the House of Justice
- > was not out to destroy academic scholarship on the Baha'i Faith as I
- > had mistakenly believed all those years,

It seems to be pretty arbitrary. Some people seem to be able to publish and not get in any particular trouble. Others are come down on like a ton of bricks, and it is not always clear why. I wonder if the unpredictability of it isn't intended to disrupt scholarship by making the academics nervous about saying anything at all about the faith. Denis MacEoin told me the story of how House of Justice members Ian Semple and David Hoffman threatened him and chased him out, destroying his faith. And, of course, we all saw what happened to the academics who dared speak publicly on talisman-1.

>and that they did not eat scholars for breakfast

Mainly they seem to threaten them with some form of ostracization if they don't fall silent. But they do this to some and not to others. I have never been able to figure out why.

sincerely,

Juan Cole

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: common ground

Date: Monday, January 15, 2001 2:57 PM

Dear Karen:

Abbas Amanat is from a Baha'i family, was brought up Baha'i. When he left Iran for the UK he was an enrolled member of the UK Baha'i community. When he came to the US, someone in the National Baha'i Center knew about his move to Yale, and transferred his name to the US membership rolls, where it has been ever since. That he privately did not like some of the policies of the UHJ and that he dared write a book about the Babi movement from an academic point of view made him much disliked among high fundamentalist Baha'i leaders. So, when the NSA inquired about whether they could carry Resurrection and Renewal, the UHJ took the opportunity to privately slam him by saying to the NSA that he was not a Baha'i. In the same letter the UHJ said Baha'is shouldn't be upset about Abbas's book since they had a direct line to an inspired understanding of the history of the Faith via the UHJ.

This appears to have been the beginning of the new strategy they had developed of dealing with intellectuals they did not like, which they later applied to Michael McKenny and Alison Marshall. The only difference is that back in 1990 no one in the US administration could imagine that you could involuntarily disenroll a believing Baha'i, and so the US NSA declined to simply delete him from its rolls. There was never any suggestion from his side that he was not a Baha'i. In fact, he has suffered a great deal for the Faith. He lost property in Iran, which he had to flee for his life, and he was named as an enemy of the Islamic Republic in a published booklet, putting him in danger. He has suffered and done far more for the Faith than either myself or Maneck, and it is shameful that the UHJ treated him that way.

Maneck is quoting back my initial public discussion of all this on talisman@umich.edu in such a way as to imply either that I was wrong or have changed my story. In fact, the story is consistent, and it is perfectly true.

I want to warn everyone that Maneck is profoundly dishonest. In her reply to me of 1/15/01, she stated a number of bald-faced lies.

Apparently she for some reason wants to bait me into posting private correspondence that would prove she is lying. She did not, for instance, meekly resign, but rather continued in her attempt to get me removed as editor. She only resigned when she inadvertently let it be known that she had been spying on the list for Ghadirian, to whom she sent numerous detailed accounts of the confidential deliberations of H-Net editors.

I will not be baited in this way. But the evidence is there not only on my hard drive but on that of several others, and eventually it will become part of the public record and will make it clear that she her account is riddled with deliberate falsehoods. Why she wants to throw away any standing she has before History by being so dishonest now is beyond me. We live relatively short lives. Those who live them in a Machiavellian way, with disregard for the truth, merely aiming at accomplishing instrumental purposes in a dishonest manner, sully the memory of those lives and discredit themselves forever. It is not, moreover, the Baha'i way.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: PROFOUND dishonesty vice snookery (was: common ground)

Date: Monday, January 15, 2001 11:30 PM

1) There is a difference between getting some minor detail wrong about contemporary affairs because of a correspondent's error and deliberately setting out to commit a falsehood. I am quite satisfied that I did not lie. As for getting things right all the time, no one does, and more especially no one does in any kind of journalism, which is what reporting on contemporary matters is. That is why newspapers carry retractions. Even the best reporters sometimes err. However, I would say that of factual assertions of any importance, I have gotten it right, and the errors have been minor. Printing a retraction is not a way of saying 'I'm always wrong,' but of saying 'I try my hardest to get it right and sometimes I fail, and it is more important to me that the truth be put out there than than I appear to be infallible.'

2) I was angry for about 2 1/2 years because the top Baha'i leadership acted toward me and my friends in a perfidious manner, and, outrageously, threatened us with being declared covenant breakers for our innocent email traffic on talisman@indiana.edu. These charges were brought precisely in order to inspire anger, so as to discredit us with the community. Baha'is are trained to see all victims of muggings at the hands of their leaders as blameworthy, and to see any protest of such a mugging as a sign that the victim was always in the wrong. I have by now learned that this sort of cult-like manipulation of people is extremely common among Baha'i officials, and my files are bulging with life stories of persons so harmed.

cheers Juan

Sent via Deja.com

[https://www.deja.com/From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>](https://www.deja.com/From: \)

Subject: Re: [bahai] Jenifer Tidwell - Letter to the LSA. of Arlington. Massachusetts

Date: Monday, January 29, 2001 6:22 PM

Actually, the awful, terrible conspiracy to convince Baha'is to build local houses of worship or mashriqu'l-adhkars, in every village and city, appears to have been started by a suspicious character named Mirza Husayn Ali in his secret conspiratorial text, the Most Holy Book.

From there, certain persons with a perfervid imagination and dubious motives, began agitating for the immediate implementation of this horrid plan. A certain Abbas Effendi, styled `Abdul-Baha, appears repeatedly to have commanded his dupes to found as many mashriqs as possible as soon as possible, even in small towns (gasp!).

Then another shadowy individual, about whom we know little, put out scandalous pamphlets suggesting that the very work of the LSA and the essential implementation of Baha'i values would remain incomplete until the local mashriqs were built. Many of these noir-like persons appear to have adopted the Eastern honorific, Effendi, and this one was also so styled, with the first name Shawqi, but to throw people off he spelled it Shoghi.

Did not this rogues' gallery realize what dreadful consequences would ensue from their despicable plan? Would not every local community have a place to worship? Might not non-Baha'is feel comfortable coming there and finding a spiritual home? Might not the faith of God emerge from Obscurity? Would not the perquisites and free airplane tickets of the Counsellors and NSA members and House members be endangered if Baha'is diverted their funds and energies to these local architectural monstrosities? Might Baha'is not actually begin praying together frequently, finding a spiritual core to their faith that would keep them committed to it for more than six months after their conversions? It is all, alas, too horrid, too abominable to contemplate!

But, everyone should rest assured! The Thought Police have identified all the latter-day bohemians who have been misled by these pernicious texts and thoughtless individuals! Some have been tried for buying land and dreaming of a Mashriq. Others have been ostracized and given the Cold Shoulder. Anyone who so much as lays a foundation stone shall immediately be declared a Covenant Breaker worse than Mirza Muhammad Ali. The Cause is very Great, and more than great enough to prevent permanently any threatened outbreak of spirituality or implementation of basic Baha'i laws of worship (`ibadat). The Cause is very, very Great.

- The Grand Inquisitor

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com

<https://www.deja.com/>From: <u375701904@spawnkill.ip-mobilphone.net>

Subject: invalid House of Justice Elections

Date: Friday, April 20, 2001 1:30 PM

As we all know, Baha'i elections are supposed to take place without any nominating procedure, and without campaigning.

I'd like to suggest that in the light of these principles of Shoghi Effendi, the last few persons elected to the Universal House of Justice were elected in contravention of Baha'i electoral law and are guilty of de facto electioneering.

Typically, the punishment for electioneering is that the person's administrative rights are removed and the body on which he serves is often dissolved for new elections.

In 1963-1983, Baha'i elections for the Universal House of Justice, in which NSA members serve as delegates, appear to have been conducted in an upright manner. Several US and UK NSA secretaries were elected. But then people like Hushmand Fatheazam (India) and Ali Nakhjavani (pioneer in Uganda) were also put on.

From 1988, however, almost all electees have been Counsellors with appointments at the International Teaching Center in Haifa. The two exceptions prove the rule. Adib Taherzadeh was a continental counselor and Doug Martin had been brought to Haifa as a publicist for the UHJ. The NSA secretary of the largest Baha'i community, India, has never been ranked that highly in the voting, even though he makes the most sense given that most Baha'is are in the third world and he knows how to administer them. Likewise, NSA secretaries or just NSA members in large Baha'i communities in Africa and Asia are not considered eligible, apparently. There is no true Third World representation on the House of Justice, which is run by Iranian and Commonwealth males.

On Taherzadeh's death last year, Kiser Barnes, yet another Counselor at the International Teaching Center, was tapped to succeed him. He joins Hooper Dunbar, Peter Khan and Farzam Arbab, all of whom came in that way.

Now, one gets to be counselor at the ITC by appointment. If the ITC counselors are now the candidate pool for UHJ membership, which is what the voting pattern of the past decade and a half demonstrates, then appointment of a male counselor to the ITC is a form of nomination.

Counselors at the ITC travel (on your dime folks) all over the world to consult with NSAs, so that they become very well known to the very people who elect the UHJ. This is a form of stealth campaigning. They are also in a position to do favors for NSAs and their members.

It seems to me, then, that Hooper Dunbar, Peter Khan, Farzam Arbab, and Kiser Barnes got to be on the UHJ by nomination and campaigning. The same applies to Doug Martin in my view, but that case is more ambiguous.

Khan and Arbab in particular have shown a ruthless disregard for Baha'i law and basic human decency (as in the scurrilous threats launched at talismanians and the hijacking of the Baha'i encyclopedia by Arbab, and the expulsion of Alison Marshall at Khan's insistence). This pattern of unethical behavior accords well with the illegitimacy of their route to power.

Recently the ITC was shuffled yet again and counselors like Fred Schechter, who were considered too 'soft,' were fired, with extreme hardliners brought in. Not only are the ITC Counselors now 'nominated' for UHJ membership and then sent about to campaign, but they are subject to an ideological litmus test that is ratcheting the center of gravity on the UHJ increasingly toward the Far Right of authoritarianism, disregard for the rule of law, regimentation of the community & etc.

It an ideal world, those guilty of electioneering would be forced off the House, have their administrative rights removed, and the House would be dissolved in preparation for free and fair elections. But, then, in an ideal world, Hell would have frozen over.

Cheers, Juan

--

Sent by jrc1952 from yahoo in field com

This is a spam protected message. Please answer with reference header.

===

jricole

4/21/01 2:10 AM 2 out of 3

One of the reasons that it is objectionable for the counselors at the International Teaching Center to become the candidate pool for members of the Universal House of Justice is that the UHJ appoints them centrally. All the major candidates are thus being determined by one central agency, and it is virtually appointing its own future members.

This centralized nomination procedure is very different from the old situation in which secretaries of major NSAs were the prime candidates. After all, the electorate in each country put the NSA members on, and the NSA members chose the secretary-general. A person had to have a popular base to rise to that position. Hushmand Fatheazam came onto the UHJ in 1963 from being secretary of the Indian NSA if I am not mistaken. And Ian Semple had been secretary of the UK NSA. That process was extremely decentralized.

Decentralized is what Shoghi Effendi was aiming for when he forbade nominations. Nominations allow a couple of major factions to centralize the choice of candidates.

The six or so men on the ITC nowadays are basically nominated to be on the House when the next vacancy falls open. Kiser Barnes smoothly slipped in when Taherzadeh died. Before that Farzam Arbab and Peter Khan had pulled off the same thing. This centralization of candidate-picking is precisely what Shoghi Effendi wanted to avoid when he forbade nominations.

Nowadays, we have an election for the UHJ where there are nominations. And there is campaigning. Counsellor Arbab visits his old cronies back in Latin America, and they say to him, can the House please put some development projects in our country and throw some money our way; or can it please give us the millions needed to build a Mashriqu'l-Adhkar?

And Arbab

says, I'll see what I can do. It is the old scratch my back, I'll scratch yours.

Counselors really should not be eligible for election to the UHJ. But they certainly should not be considered as nominees for the job.

cheers Juan

From: ""First Name Last Name"" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: invalid argument

Date: Thursday, April 26, 2001 1:40 AM

The 1990 Indian census returned 5,000 persons identifying themselves as Baha'is in the entire country. The census is not perfect but could it miss 2 million people!?

Insiders in the Baha'i administration say there are actually only about 100,000 persons in India who have a strongly Baha'i identity. (Most of the declaration cards were signed by Hindus who like to join clubs and were not intending to abandon their religion).

cheers Juan

--== Sent via Deja.com ==--
<https://www.deja.com/>

--

Posted from [207.75.177.122] by way of mail17.bigmailbox.com [209.132.220.48] via Mailgate.ORG Server - <https://www.Mailgate.ORG>From: "Juan Cole"

<jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: A New Babi History - Mazandarani's Tarikh-i Zuhur al-Haqq vol. 2

Date: Tuesday, December 26, 2000 5:41 PM

Date: Tue, 26 Dec 2000 17:24:51 -0600

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@UMICH.EDU>

Subject: Tarikh-i Zuhur al-Haqq, vol. 2

H-Bahai is pleased to announce the digital publication at:

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/arabic/vol4/2tzh/2tzh.htm>

of Hand of the Cause Fadil Mazandarani's Tarikh-i Zuhur al-Haqq, vol. 2, which covers the Babi period in over 500 pages. It is a key companion to his vol. 3, which he had published in 1944. This work is digitally published for the first time from a photocopy of the manuscript.

Mazandarani (d. 1956) had unique access to large numbers of early Babi primary sources, which he used in a more rigorous manner than most Iranian Baha'i chroniclers. The current academic literature on Babism depended heavily on vol. 3, but vol. 2 was heretofore quite rare. It is exciting to think what influence it will have on the next generation of scholarship on Babism.

This publishing event brings to 6 the number of the Tarikh-i Zuhur al-Haqq (History of the Manifestation of the Truth) by this author available at

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/index/diglib/mazand1.htm>

The editors hope eventually to post all nine volumes.

Sincerely

Juan R. I. Cole
H-Bahai Web Editor

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/0>

Sent via Deja.com
<https://www.deja.com/~jrcole>
4/18/01 2:13 AM 53 out of 55

Yeah, yeah, blame the victim. Poor Deborah was dealing with a community where Mr. Victory was telling people arrogantly he is the voice of God (something other residents in the community have confirmed). He even tried to tell people what books they could read. She was being denied the right to see the LSA financial records. Since like $90,000 was embezzled from the Baha'i fund in neighboring Phoenix not so long ago, there is every reason to be alarmed when the LSA officers start locking up the account books. Her attempts to deal with the problems met with stonewalling and intimidation, over years.

I fiercely applaud both her lawsuit and her making it public. Enormous numbers of lives have been ruined and people steamrolled by authoritarian Baha'is who have misused the Baha'i Institutions as their personal fiefdoms. There is no due process in their conception of the Faith, no redress but appeal upward to persons who have every reason to back the more prominent members of the LSA. It is an engine for repression of basic human rights. Of the thousands of Americans who entered the Baha'i faith since 1968, fully half went right back out. It is not because they were not spiritual. It was because narrow-minded bigots masquerading as Baha'is tried to clamp down on their basic decency as human beings, and then insisted that they put up with that in the name of community unity and 'consultation.' It is no little thing to lose half your converts. The National Teaching Committee has pointed out that if those people had been retained, it would have had future exponential effects on the growth of the faith. Other denominations retain 80% of converts.

Nick, of course, is happy to give his human rights away and to call that religion. But then Nick thinks the religion will take over the civil government. So, having given up our rights for religion, we find that the rights are altogether gone in the end, even in civil society. We have Khomeini's theocracy.

But the rest of us are not going to go so quietly. Nick is still peeved that we kicked George III's butt (along with the American Tories who supported his tyranny). We'd do it again, too.

Juan
jrcole
4/18/01 1:48 AM 114 out of 114

The talisman@indiana.edu logs are the public logs.
The rightwingers in the AO were involved in lots of dastardly behind the scenes action that is not reflected in the logs (which are incomplete because it takes so much time to clean them up for posting).
So, Pat, you can't know everything from them alone.

I have gotten really tired over the years at your self-righteous pose as an even-handed investigator of the truth. You have never given anything I've said, or any other Baha'i liberal has said, a fair hearing. You are entirely capable of twisting words and engaging in propaganda, as we have just seen when you called the talisman logs a dodge.

But here you go, Pat, since you seem to like playing prosecuting attorney so well. (In RC I think that would be called playing the devil's advocate). Why don't you extract from the logs statements of mine 1994-April 1996 that you feel are a good basis for prosecuting me as a covenant breaker. You have enough of a pattern of my postings up there to do it if it can be done.
Let's make it a whole new thread. Let's give me the trial I never had. Maybe I can engage defense counsel.

This old crock that the UHJ didn't close down talisman@indiana.edu is a pile of horse manure as tall as the empire state building. Of course it closed down talisman. It had Birkland threaten the listowner and several of the listowners close friends with being declared covenant breakers if they "repeated" the "pattern" of their postings. If you were running a Baha'i list and the UHJ did that to you, I suspect you would close it down, now wouldn't you? Since a reasonable person would expect that to be the result of such brutal threats, I think we may conclude that it was the result being sought by Birkland and his handlers.

Your quotation from Ayatollah Sadiqi did not show there was dissatisfaction with the way talisman was being run. It showed that there are extremely narrow-minded Baha'is who don't like open discourse and will do anything to shut it off. Nolan was always engaging in special pleading for the Right when they got suspended for breaking the list rules. Rather like you.

Birkland, by the way, was only admitted to the list by John on condition that he abide by the list rules, which included not accusing people of being covenant breakers. Birkland agreed to the condition. He also gave his word to John that he would share with him any report he wrote about him to Haifa. Birkland broke his word on both issues. He is a liar and an inquisitor. But, he was just following orders, rather like Eichmann.

Juan

jricole
4/17/01 4:16 PM 100 out of 114

> dschellb
>4/16/01 4:01 PM

>Nobody is simply removed for expressing opinions on emails.

Actually, yes, they have been. That was the grounds for the summary disenrollment of Michael McKenny. He expressed in very polite language the wish for women to serve on the Universal House of Justice, a number of times on email. And he was ordered by the UHJ removed from membership in the Baha'i community of Canada. Since Doug Martin was the NSA secretary in Canada before becoming a UHJ member, this was almost certainly mainly at his instigation. It was quite barbaric. Michael is a very sweet and inoffensive person who had not said anything objectionable.

And, Alison Marshall was quite explicitly dropped from the rolls for her email messages, which were also kind and sweet and spiritual. Only a barbarian could have objected to them.

And, a number of prominent liberal posters were threatened with being declared covenant breakers for their email messages to talisman@indiana.edu. Just for writing email messages. They were not schismatics. They never claimed any authority. They just posted their personal ideas.

None of the defrockings that have been instanced here are at all analogous to what was done to ordinary everyday Baha'is like McKenny and Marshall for mere email traffic. It is monstrous. And no mainstream religious group behaves this way in the US. Tell Episcopalians, Methodists and Unitarians about what was done and they will be appalled. They won't say, Oh, yes, that's the way we behave, as well.

Nor is this Baha'i law. Baha'u'llah never disenrolled anyone for expressing his or her personal beliefs. And sanctioning someone without so much as having a conversation with them is explicitly contrary to Baha'i administrative procedure. Nor were the threats about declaring people covenant breakers Baha'i tradition. `Abdul-Baha did that to persons who stole money from the faith or claimed to be its legitimate head. Not to the often looney toons Baha'is like Edward Getsinger just for having odd ideas.

It is all a crock. Nothing to do with Baha'u'llah or the real Baha'i faith. Just to do with the enormous egos and endless arrogance of Doug Martin and Peter Khan.

cheers Juan
jricole
4/18/01 12:32 PM 57 out of 72

Well, Nick, I don't think American liberties have been taken nearly far enough. There is not too much liberty here, but too little.

Two million Americans are incarcerated, a huge gulag that is per capita far more prisoners than any country in Europe has, and resembles Russia. Last I knew, half of them were African-Americans. While a solid core are real criminals, a very large number simply sold a little pot or something and are no more criminal than my grandmother, God bless her soul. Large numbers are raped and brutalized with impunity while in prison. Some are given AIDS this way, basically receiving a death penalty, often for three misdemeanors or a minor felony.

Many Americans sentenced to death are innocent and are not allowed to use DNA evidence to establish their innocence. This is liberty?

Americans are routinely prevented from unionizing, and may be fired for attempting to form a union, in contravention of basic human rights.

The consolidation of publishing and other media, and the small number of media companies means that voices of critique have a great deal of difficulty finding prominent outlets. Rules against a single company owning the major newspaper and a major broadcast outlet in a single city have been gutted. Rupert Murdoch's version of the world is becoming the hegemonic one.

Given the vast assaults on our civil liberties made by the forces of the Right, whether secular or religious, in the past 25 years in the U.S., to speak of giving up further rights voluntarily is to capitulate to a horrible diminution of human agency.

You may, of course, give up all the rights you like. But I have not given up my rights and I don't intend to allow you to dictate to me that I should.

Conservative Baha'is have all kinds of rackets going on. They'll tell you they just want to subject what you write to 'literature review' to ensure 'dignity and accuracy.' Who could argue with that? But what they really mean is that they want to censor everything you write to ensure it doesn't contradict their cherished prejudices. In short, they are running a vast censorship operation. Too many Americans have died fighting forces that wished to impose censorship and end our liberties for me to ever agree to give those liberties up voluntarily.

The idea that Baha'u'llah or `Abdul-Baha would have *wanted* me to is ludicrous. Read what `Abdul-Baha says about American liberty in Promulgation of Universal Peace.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/18/01 12:37 PM 58 out of 72

No, actually I am, as a professor, quite interested in things like the local Baha'i politics of places such as Albuquerque (where I was born, by the way). We professors are extremely nosey people, and we often take up causes celebres. Voltaire did, as well, in his time. Plus, local Baha'i politics tells us a great deal about the nature of the community. I wrote a journal article on Los Angeles Baha'i politics that has received many accolades from other professors:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2000/dialala2.htm>

I am glad you know "the voice of God" so well. Maybe he'll put in a good word for you with the angels.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/18/01 7:56 PM 66 out of 72

Dear Pat:

The word h.urriyyah which can mean either libertinism or liberty is from the root h.*r*r . In classical Arabic being h.urr meant you weren't a slave. I prefer to be h.urr. The word hu-riyyah with a long u and just one "r" is the Arabic for houri, the divine playboy bunnies promised us pious folk in the next life.

Baha'u'llah in the Aqdas said that he approved of h.urriyyah under some circumstances and not others. He makes it clear exactly what he means. He disapproves of h.urriyyah in the sense of libertinism, of anything that might cause human beings to act like animals, without ethical restraint. And, he approves of h.urriyyah in the sense of political liberty, as he demonstrates by praising British parliamentary democracy and by lauding Queen Victoria for extending the franchise and giving the reins of power into the hands of the people.

Baha'u'llah praised liberty/h.urriyyah in the sense of political liberties many, many times in His Arabic and Persian writings, as did `Abdul-Baha. The ultra-conservative fundamentalist Baha'i misuse of the passage from the Aqdas to criticize the very parliamentary democracy that Baha'u'llah so vehemently praised is just another example of how the fundies have everything in the Faith ass backwards.

Allow me to quote from Modernity and the Millennium:

"[Baha'u'llah] wrote approvingly to the Afnan clan of Shiraz and Bombay in the late 1880s that "in reality, liberty (hurriyyat) and civilization (madaniyyat) and their prerequisites are increasing day by day." In 1889 he wrote a letter in which he characterized his policy of allowing Baha'is to consort peacefully with members of other religions, read their scriptures, and wear Western clothing as the bestowal upon them of liberty (hurriyyat). We have seen that his son `Abdul-Baha, who in this period published nothing without his father's concurrence, extensively argued for liberty of religion and conscience, for equality, and individual rights in A Traveller's Narrative, as well as in his 1875 Secret of Divine Civilization (to be discussed in the next chapter). Only two years after al-Kitab al-Aqdas was completed, `Abdul-Baha was arguing to Iranian conservatives that "This liberty (hurriyyat) in the universal rights of individuals (huquq-i `umumiyyih-'i afrad) " is not "contrary to prosperity and success. SDC"

In fact, I think this subject deserves a thread of its own.

I was born in Albuquerque and maintain that I was perfectly clear in saying so.

I had enormous difficulties with "literature review" when I was a graduate student, and people (including Glenford Mitchell) tried to browbeat me about it. I did not have trouble after that because I paid no attention to it. It has been alleged that this is one reason they came after me.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/19/01 2:54 AM 72 out of 72

Nick keeps ranting about how they don't have any problems with anti-intellectualism or scholarship there in the U.K.

Actually, the first place in the West a major Baha'i scholar was royally screwed over by the fundamentalists was the U.K.

Around 1965 Denis MacEoin, a very bright lad from Belfast, became a Baha'i, in part under the influence of Adib Taherzadeh. He was one of the youth brought to the 1968 celebrations in Haifa of the centenary of Baha'u'llah's declaration to the kings, and was well thought of. He wrote the House and asked them if he could do more service as a pioneer or as an academic scholar of the Faith.

The House wrote back that both were needed services, and the decision was his.

Denis did an MA in Arabic and Persian at the University of Edinburgh. He then wrote his dissertation on the Babi faith at Cambridge. He was the first Western scholar to work in the National Baha'i Archives in Iran.

But, you know what? He was a good historian and he followed his sources. He started finding alternative accounts that did not square with Nabil's Narrative or God Passes By. Not a problem, really. History is messy, and historical accounts differ. Neither of those works is infallible. But people in the UK knew of Denis's researches, and they kept asking him to give talks and summer schools. They expected that he would just reconfirm their prejudices. When instead he gave the latest research findings, they were outraged.

In 1979 or 1980 UHJ members Ian Semple and David Hoffman summoned Denis to a meeting. They told him he would have to fall silent Or Else. Professors don't fall silent when ordered to by failed actors. He subsequently left the Faith and has spoken critically of it on the BBC and in print. So, the UK was in the '70s and '80s the very center of the storm at that time about scholarship. In a sense, the fundies cut their teeth on MacEoin, and just did to the rest of us what had already been proven to work with him.

cheers Juan
jricole
4/19/01 2:12 PM 2 out of 5

It has been alleged that I have posted these quotations from `Abdul-Baha because I believe they apply only to me. Actually, I believe they apply to everyone. They demonstrate that `Abdul-Baha believed in freedom of expression for individual conscience. Of course they apply to me. They also apply to everyone else. And, if I am excluded from their purview, then `Abdul-Baha's principles have been contravened.

It has also been alleged that `Abdul-Baha thought that religious liberty should extend only to the individual's right to choose a religion. Once the individual entered the religion, however, he or she would have to kowtow to whatever the authorities decreed.

This pitiful attempt to pervert `Abdul-Baha's teachings so as to make them safe for fundamentalism is ridiculous on the face of it. What could possibly be gained by having authoritarian religions that oppressed individuals, but giving them a choice of which particular set of ayatollahs they would be oppressed by? Does he mean that Giordano Bruno, burned for his astronomical research, should have had a choice of being burned either by the Roman Catholic authorities or by the Muslim or Buddhist ones? Is that really what `Abdul-Baha is saying here?

According to what `Abdul-Baha has said, I think it is all right for a Baha'i biologist to say publicly he believes in Darwinian evolution. And yet, on talisman-1 when Baha'is said that, they were viciously attacked by the fundies in the community. That didn't look to me like the sort of thing `Abdul-Baha was driving at.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/20/01 1:53 AM 5 out of 5

Dear Don:

I am afraid it is even more complex than simply obeying elected institutions.

First of all, I am sure you will agree that the elected institutions do not have the authority to command us to do something illegal, say to murder someone. There are limits on what they can order us to do. They should not even be allowed to order us to do something unethical, like lie. That they are elected gives them purview over legitimate legislation, not absolute dictatorial authority.

In addition, the elected institutions we have are all houses of justice, and they are purely legislative in their authority. Interpretation was confined to the Guardian. We have no Guardian, and no individual or body may now claim the prerogative of authoritative interpretation.

So, I am a historian. I write Babi and Baha'i history. Local Spiritual Assemblies and even the House of Justice do not have authority over how I write history. It is not a legislative matter. It is a matter of individual conscience. I have to write history truly, in accordance with the highest standards of professionalism.

In the quote I just posted, `Abdul-Baha says explicitly that there is freedom of expression in the Baha'i faith but not freedom of deeds. The Baha'i elective institutions have no authority from Him to intervene in interpretive matters like someone's personal theology, or how he writes history, or his views on evolution, etc. That was supposed to be what made the Baha'i Faith different from past religions, with their inquisitions and heresy trials and declarations that someone is not a believer.

The houses of justice may legislate on deeds. According to `Abdul-Baha. They could legislate that all Baha'i men have to get their navels pierced, and I would be first in line at the local navel-piercing shop. But they can't tell me how to write history. Unfortunately, often they want to, and they do not accept `Abdul-Baha's delineation of their sphere of authority. They also want to tell Alison Marshall what her conscientious beliefs must be. They threw her out over matters of interpretation and conscience, not behavior. They stepped over the line that `Abdul-Baha and the Guardian clearly drew. So you see, there is liberty in the Baha'i faith, according to its Holy Figures. Current practices notwithstanding.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/19/01 7:38 PM 65 out of 68

Chris:

I am not bitter. I am filled with righteous anger at the way the beautiful faith of universal love and tolerance is being turned into something resembling the Spanish Inquisition or Jerry Falwell's church in Lynchburg, Va. Read the book of Isaiah. You'll find a lot of 'bitter' things said there. In this dispensation we all have Isaiah's station. Most of us don't have the gumption to speak out the way he did. Besides, on my part, a little bit of attitude saves me a whole lot of time. Because rightwing Baha'is start out thinking they can just throw [their interpretation of the] scripture at you and a few threats to declare you a cb, and you'll just crumble. And, this all takes a lot of time and is pretty useless. So, I think we've established with remarkable swiftness that such tactics won't work here, and that is a gain to us all.

with regard to public criticism of the Baha'i institutions, I agree that under most circumstances it is counter-productive. You're in some small community, the LSA has a policy you don't like; get over it.

But what if the LSA does something criminal, like embezzlement? Then that has to be exposed, doesn't it? As in Phoenix. That was a multi-year embezzlement, and someone on the LSA knew about it and sat on it. That was wrong. Even though it meant it would become public, the whistle had to be blown. And, what, you were going to complain to the Treasurer of the LSA about it? Appealing to the body you disagree with isn't every often going to produce results, especially if they are involved in something unethical.

Deborah's case in Albuquerque is another good example, of where she tried to fix things over years but was stonewalled. In the end she had to take action. When they're refusing to show LSA members the financial accounts, that is scary.

So then you get to the real big biggie. What if the UHJ does something unethical, as with the disenrollment of Alison? Who are we going to appeal to about that? We just have to silently accept it? That seems pretty shitty.

And, remember that these fundamentalist Baha'is wish to create a theocracy in which the Baha'i institutions overthrow the US government and abolish the Bill of Rights. And then the government will be able to begin treating each of us the way the UHJ treated Alison, in summary fashion with no due process and no possibility of redress. That's what we really needed, folks, more government intervention in our lives. I thought we wanted to get the government off our backs? These people want it sitting in our living rooms, and they want it to have divine exemption from even being criticized.

Worse, they maintain that these are teachings of Baha'u'llah, when in fact Baha'u'llah stood for the separation of religion and state.

cheers Juan

jricole

4/19/01 2:27 PM 1 out of 14

In Islam there is a custom called "takfir" where some Muslims get together and call other Muslims infidels, unbelievers, "not Muslims." Actually, one Shi`ite ayatollah issued such a decree against Shaykh Ahmad al-Ahsa'i, declaring him not a Muslim.

When you are declared 'not Muslim' it puts you outside the law. So, anyone can steal from you, rape you, murder you, without fear of punishment by the authorities. One of the ways the Baha'is from a Muslim background in Iran are persecuted is for the clergy to declare them "not Muslim."

Pithy, Dusty and others have declared Alison Marshall and Karen Bacquet "not Baha'i." That is, they have issued a Baha'i takfir against them.

There is only one problem, folks. In `Abdul-Baha's Tablet of a Thousand Verses He explicitly abrogates the custom of takfir. He says it does not exist in the Baha'i faith. Baha'is are not to declare other persons, who claim to be Baha'is, "not Baha'is."

What about, you may ask, villainous covenant breakers like Mirza Muhammad `Ali? Surely they could be tossed out of the Faith?

Nope. This letter is specifically about covenant breakers. Even they can't have a takfir issued against them.

So, the neo-Muslim-fundamentalist Baha'is on this list who have put on large green turbans, cultivated bushy beards dyed with henna, strapped on a saber about their waists, and called for their amanuenses to issue the dire writ of takfir against Karen and Alison may be very proud of themselves. But they have broken Baha'i law and displeased `Abdul-Baha, who is weeping at their antics as he looks down from the Abha kingdom. He thought we'd be able to get past these feudal customs, of takfirs and heresy trials. It was the point of the coming of a new religion.

People like the old.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/19/01 7:52 PM 5 out of 14

Yes, removal of administrative rights does not stop someone from being a Baha'i. But that isn't what was done to Michael McKenny and Alison Marshall by the UHJ. They were declared unfit to be "members of the Baha'i community." That sounds to me like a takfir pure and simple. I believe that the House of Justice has contravened the Law of God as laid down by `Abdul-Baha in behaving in this way. Perhaps it was in ignorance of the Law, but in that case they should reverse their decision.

As for the rest, Pithy and Dusty have stridently asserted that Karen Bacquet is not a Baha'i, despite her own assertion that she is. That is also a takfir.

Thanks to Pat for pointing out that it is a severe offense in Islam to issue a groundless takfir.

Here's something I've written on the Tablet, with a provisional translation of the key sentence and the citation to the original text. There is no official translation.

"In the religion of God," `Abdul-Baha asserted, "there is no practice of declaring believers to be morally corrupt (tasfiq) or of declaring them not believers (takfir), nor is debasing or showing contempt for others permitted."* In Islam, the ulama declared suspect Muslims to have departed from the faith for reasons of moral lapses or incorrect doctrine. In medieval legal theory,

Muslims found to be actually infidels were open to having their lives and property taken by others without fear of legal reprisal. This practice was distasteful to Baha'is for many reasons.
For one, they were often victims of it at the hands of the Muslim clergy. For another, it offended against the ideals of unity, tolerance and freedom of conscience for which many Baha'is felt their religion stood."

*Abdul-Baha, Majmu'ih-i Makatib, INBA Private Printing Volume 59 (Tehran: National Baha'i Archives, 1978; digitally reprinted, East Lansing, Mi.: H-Bahai, 2000), pp. 340, published on the World Wide Web at <https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/areprint/ab/G-L/I/59inba/inba59.htm>

jricole
4/20/01 1:08 AM 8 out of 14

I have to keep repeating this. The administrative rights of Alison Marshall and Michael McKenny were not removed. They did not experience tard-i idari. Also, they were not declared covenant breakers, which is tard-i ruhani. These are the only two sanctions we know from the time of `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi.

Instead, Michael and Alison were declared to be not members of the Baha'i community and their names were removed from the rolls of the Canadian and New Zealand Baha'i communities respectively. This was never done by any of the holy figures. These two believers were declared to be not Baha'is, which is takfir. Takfir or declaring someone an infidel was prohibited by `Abdul-Baha. Ipso facto, the House of Justice contravened `Abdul-Baha's explicit instructions when they acted in this manner.

And, your point raises the perfectly reasonable question of why, if Michael and Alison had in fact broken Baha'i law, they were not formally charged and tried for doing so, with presentation of evidence, and why their administrative rights were not simply removed. Alison not only was not charged with wrongdoing, she had no idea she was even on trial until she suddenly learned she had been turned into a non-Baha'i. This is like something from a Kafka novel. You are on trial but you don't know what the charges are. You go to bed a Baha'i and wake up a non-Baha'i because people you don't know have decided what religion you are.

I know it is very hard for people to hear criticism of the House of Justice. It is especially hard for those brought up Baha'is, who imbibed reverence for this institution in their childhoods. I understand that and do not wish to hurt their feelings for no reason.

But it is very hard for me to see `Abdul-Baha trashed, to see the clear text of his explicit command blithely ignored. I feel he has been disrespected, major-league. We used to sing about him, "Look at Me, follow Me, be as I am." Don't people sing that any more? Don't they want to be like our Exemplar?

In this case the House of Justice has contravened a clear principle of `Abdul-Baha. There are no easy choices. Either you can sweep aside `Abdul-Baha's concerns and disobey his clear directive, or you can stand up for the arbitrary actions of the Martins and Khans. You may love and want to obey `Abdul-Baha and love and want to obey the House of Justice. But here you cannot do both. If you acknowledge `Abdul-Baha as having a higher station than the House of Justice, then you must recognize that He is right and they are wrong.

The institution is new, is growing in maturity, and will make some mistakes along the way. These expulsions are such mistakes. Recognizing and fixing them will make the Faith stronger and better. Leaving them to fester will undermine it.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/20/01 1:20 AM 9 out of 14

p.s.

The analogy for what was done to Michael and Alison would be more along these lines.

A student is admitted to study in a university. The student goes to classes, pays tuition (McKenny had given the Faith a several-thousand-dollar interest-free loan), thinks she is doing fine.

Then one day she gets a letter from the provost saying she is no longer a student at the University. This is not because she has poor grades. It is not because she has behaved improperly, or at least no mention of any ethical lapses is made in the letter.

The regents have just decided that they don't want people like her on campus. She isn't the right sort of person to be a student at this university. Doesn't fit the profile.

If a university administration actually tried to pull this crap, they'd be slapped with a multi million-dollar lawsuit, and the complainant would win hands down.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/19/01 2:48 PM 117 out of 120

Dear Grahame:

Many thanks for your balanced comments.

In Shi`ite Islam there is a principle that one must give absolute obedience to the Supreme Jurisprudent (Ali Khamenei). It is even illegal to criticize him publicly or to question his absolute authority. Ayatollah Montazeri was jailed recently for doing just that. Sort of as if we should put Gephart in jail for criticizing Bush.

This principle of blind obedience to religious authority is called in Islam taqlid. It is one of the things Baha'u'llah most vehemently denounced. He came to abolish taqlid. Blind obedience to authority was, in his view, to be replaced by the exercise of public Reason or wisdom (‘aql).

Many Baha'is, however, have rejected Baha'u'llah's teachings in this regard, and gone back to the comforts of blind obedience. In essence, they have reverted to Shi'ite Islam, and just substituted their "institutions" for the ayatollahs.

With regard to Alison, the point is not that she is necessarily a saint (though I personally think she is). The point is that by the standards of Baha'i law that have prevailed for the past century, she a) did not do anything wrong and b) did not receive what in Baha'i law is required as due process. She is an example of the new ultra-Rightwing faction that took control of the HOJ between 1988 and 1993 trying to push the community in a cult-like direction. Now, Baha'is don't have rights, even to their own email self-expression, and don't have to be counselled or tried or anything before being punished. Instead of just having their administrative rights removed (bad enough) more extreme steps are taken like throwing them out of the community altogether or threatening them with being declared covenant breakers. This isn't the way the Baha'i Faith functioned when I joined in 1972. It is a new development. And it is very, very dangerous. It is contrary to everything the Baha'i Holy Figures stood for.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/20/01 1:37 AM 120 out of 120

Mark:

Alison Marshall was not "counseled" before she was expelled. She never heard anything from anyone. She explicitly asked a visiting ABM if there were any problems in New Zealand and was told, "no." If anything she was lulled into a false sense of security.

So, the scenario I depicted is perfectly correct in her case, and hers is the most recent major case of sanctions, so it probably points to where things are evolving. It is toward Baha'i Kafkaism. You are on trial but no one will tell you for what. You wake up declared a non-Baha'i but you still think you are a Baha'i.

I don't think Baha'i Kafkaism has any future as a world religion. Maybe some people in Greenwich Village will think it is kind of neat.

cheers Juan
jricole
4/20/01 12:35 PM 78 out of 83

The real story of Nabil's Narrative is that Baha'u'llah asked him to write the history of the Faith, and he did so, finishing around 1888. He showed his draft to Baha'u'llah, who was appalled at all the miracle stories included, and all the unlikely events. Baha'u'llah wrote on this draft in his own hand something to the effect that "we had expected from you a solid history of the Faith" but that that was not we we got.

Nabil was very embarrassed, so he wrote a second draft, which was much more careful and with its feet on the ground.

The second draft appears to have gone into the hands of Mirza Muhammad `Ali and to be unavailable. All the World Centre has is the first draft, of which Baha'u'llah disapproved. That is why Shoghi Effendi edited it so heavily before translating it.

As for God Passes By, Shoghi Effendi disclaimed being infallible on matters like economics, science and history. It is a great book. It has some errors. Moreover, there were lots of sources SE did not have access to.

The attempt to recreate biblical inerrancy by Baha'i fundamentalists using these texts is doomed to fail. But don't worry, if you want infallible history and inerrant texts. I hear the Southern Baptists are looking for converts.

cheers Juan

jricole
4/20/01 6:15 PM 81 out of 83

Don, the reason you don't find so many miracle stories in the Dawnbreakers is that Shoghi Effendi edited them out. He was aware of how Baha'u'llah had disapproved of the first draft of Nabil's Narrative. But the second draft has gone missing, so he exercised his judgment in which passages to translate. What we have in English is not the whole Persian text; it is bits and pieces chosen by SE and woven together by him into a seamless narrative.

As for Baha'is believing the Dawnbreakers is inerrant or unchallengeable, this is a very common belief in the community. Dusty appears to hold it. Zikrullah Khadem was a fanatical believer in it. Furutan made another Hand of the Cause, Fadil Mazandarani, apologize for publishing early Babi texts that contradicted Nabil, and saw to it that his immense 9-volume History of the Faith was never published. A lot of Iranian Baha'is of a fundamentalist turn of mind believe in this infallible Nabil nonsense, and it has seeped over into a lot of the American community. Or maybe the Americans reinvented it.

Nabil in fact makes lots of errors and did not always depend on the best sources, as John Walbridge has shown.

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/bhpapers/vol2/nabilz.htm>

cheers Juan

jricole

4/20/01 12:42 PM 71 out of 82

Dear Chris:

The problem is that you are thinking juridically rather than in terms of human rights. You are focusing on the process rather than on the outcome. This is a basic error of logic.

"Consultation" can produce erroneous decisions. `Abdul-Baha did not say it always produced right decisions. He said the errors would get corrected over time.

The "consultation" that produced the expulsion of Alison Marshall was such an error. All Steve, Karen and I are asking for is that the error be corrected. What is going on here is consultation, as well.

That you do not have the UHJ perspective on the expulsion is one of the things we are complaining about. Nobody was given that perspective, least of all Alison herself. She has no idea what happened! She was never contacted, never received formal charges, never had a chance to defend herself, never received an explanation of any sort. It was completely arbitrary. That is precisely the problem.

I do not believe, if this were done to you, you would accept it cheerfully. Nor do I think you should. Nor should anyone. It is horrible.

cheers Juan

jricole

4/21/01 1:14 AM 80 out of 82

Dear Pam:

The quote you give, purportedly from `Abdul-Baha, is a very bad translation of a text, the Persian of which no longer appears to exist. The translation was also tampered with by later editors. It is certainly a mistranslation, which contradicts everything else `Abdul-Baha said on the subject. It is worthless as evidence of what `Abdul-Baha thought on the subject of the separation of religion and state, which He taught ceaselessly. It is less than a pilgrim's note.

The problem is that in technical Islamic jurisprudence, "siyasi" authority referred to the legislation of post-scriptural prohibitions and ordinances by the duly constituted authority. However, the word "siyasi" came to be used as the new coinage to translate the modern western conception of "politics" through the early 20th century. So, some of `Abdul-Baha's translators misunderstood what he meant by the term when he was speaking classical Arabic or technical Persian. They thought he meant the new sense of 'political' when he was actually talking about a category of law.

Anyone who is actually interested in `Abdul-Baha's views on the separation of religion and state should read his c. 1892 Treatise on Leadership:

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/trans/vol2/absiyasi.htm>

Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha genuinely opposed theocracy or the take-over of civil political regimes by religious organizations. They both believed strongly in the need for world-wide parliamentary democracy that would make a place for religion in public life.

As for accusing me of contacting the enemies of the faith, this really is too much. In 1998 when the Iranian regime closed the Baha'i Open University, I organized massive internet protests and helped contacted the Chronicle of Higher Education to do an article. I gathered hundreds, perhaps thousands of signatures for an academic internet petition on behalf of the freedom of the Iranian Baha'is, and I sent the petitions and signatures to Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and President Mohammad Khatami myself, with a letter signed by me. For a person prominent in Iranian studies to do this was rather dangerous, but I stuck my neck out for my Baha'i co-religionists.

As Rick Burns the Computer Guy says on SNL, "You're welcome . . ."

cheers Juan

jricole
4/20/01 6:06 PM 26 out of 39

Dear Sherry:

You said that you are not saying I am not a Baha'i, only that I am to a lesser degree a Baha'i than you are.
So, how many of us second-class Baha'is are there? And when will Queen Sherry present Parliament with our names so that we can be recorded as "Lesser Degree Baha'is"?

As for your charge that I am attacking the Faith, I am doing no such thing. Baha'u'llah is my hero, and I won't stand for a word to be spoken against him. His Scriptures and His Principles are the greatest thing in religion ever. I have devoted my life to studying them and trying to understand them. Read my book about Him, Modernity and the Millennium, available via amazon.com.

What I am doing is insisting that the hardline fundamentalists don't own the Baha'i Faith. And, believe it or not, 99% of Americans will be really, really relieved to hear this and much more interested in the Faith once they've read what I have to say. It is the authoritarian fundamentalism of some of the posters here which turns people off, and several seekers following this board have even said so.

cheers Juan
jricole

I am indeed sincerely concerned, precisely because I am zealous for the legitimacy and honor of the House of Justice, our legislature.

Shoghi Effendi forbade nominations and canvassing. Period. If delegates to the international elections are allowing appointment to the International Teaching Center to function as a nomination, then they are breaking Baha'i law. Period.

If they are being swayed by not only such a "nomination" but also by the possible favors these Counselor/candidates might do them, then they are breaking Baha'i law. Period.

Any LSA elected like that would be dissolved yesterday and its members sanctioned. How can we expect the LSAs to elect in an upright manner, in accordance with Shoghi Effendi's instructions, if the international elections are flaunting his rules?

Shoghi Effendi well predicted the consequences of this sort of nomination process--the rise of factionalism, the dominance of personalities, the deprivation of delegates of their right to choose more widely among candidates. These are precisely the ills that affect the international administration of the Baha'i Faith at the present, and they flow from the ITC members being viewed as having been nominated for high Baha'i elective office.

The delegates have a responsibility to reject the notion of nominations. They must kick the habit of doing the easy thing and voting for the ITC counselors. But the UHJ also has a responsibility, to put the ITC members and continental counselors off limits for election to the House, the way the Hands were.

Our international administration is behaving erratically, unjustly, unfairly, in contravention of basic Baha'i principle and procedure. We all have a responsibility for righting this problem lest it take us to the jungles of Guyana in the end.

cheers Juan

jricole

5/2/01 2:44 AM 9 out of 10

Ultimately the aforementioned member of the UHJ, Doug Martin, sent a counselor to my house to interrogate me. "How can you say you believe in Baha'u'llah when you speak of him as a historical personage?" he asked me, along with many other similarly stupid questions. The counselor, Stephen Birkland, called me up a month and a half later to say that the UHJ and the International Teaching Center had authorized him to tell me that I had been found guilty of "making statements contrary to the Covenant." This was clearly a threat to declare me a c.b. for my postings on talisman (which can be seen and evaluated for heresy at

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

I felt that for the UHJ (or more precisely Doug Martin) to make such threats behind the scenes was morally unconscionable, and I could not remain a member of any administration that these persons headed up.

And, I didn't know any way of being a Baha'i under such a situation. Plus I was worried about my friends, about the future of the faith, etc. It seemed best for all that I withdraw, since that was apparently what the UHJ wanted.

Over time, however, I found again my faith in Baha'u'llah, and gradually became detached from all the other issues, so that I publicly declared my faith in Feb. of 1999. I have not forbidden anyone to enroll me administratively, but it is all right with me if no one does. I am living for Baha'u'llah now, not for a registration card.

I do not mean by telling you this to attempt to shake your faith in the House of Justice. After all, the latter body existed before 1993 when Doug Martin was elected to it, and will exist after Doug is, alas, no longer with us. It is not the body that lacks legitimacy. It is that some members have recently gotten onto it by electioneering, and have misused their power to abuse the basic human rights of thinking Baha'is. The body itself will survive these shenanigans, and will denounce the perpetrators of these high crimes and misdemeanors in the future.

In the meantime, we have a message to promote. It is the message of Baha'u'llah. It is the oneness of humankind (yes, even the oneness of Doug Martin and Juan Cole, however much he may dislike the idea of being mentioned in the same breath with me). It is love for all, tolerance for all, unity in diversity (which is not the same as demands for uniformity). It is a lot of work. So stop goofing off on the internet and get busy.

cheers Juan Cole

jricole
5/2/01 3:09 AM 54 out of 58

Dear Tranquilplaces:

Shouldn't that be Tranquil?

You know, Senator John McCain was captured by the North Vietnamese and spent years in a prison in Hanoi. While he was there the North Vietnamese succeeded in breaking him. He signed a confession of wrong-doing, condemned the United States, supported Vietnamese communism, etc.

Apparently about 50% of prisoners of war break in this way.

I don't know of anyone who served in Vietnam who is in any way critical of Senator McCain for having caved. He was under enormous psychological and physical pressure. He has gone on to serve his country admirably and has redeemed himself. He certainly would have been a better president than the current incumbent.

Although my own situation is only vaguely analogous to that of McCain, there are faint parallels. Cult-like organizations indoctrinate their members to have a horror of being declared heretics (here, "covenant breakers"), which is seen as a supernatural sort of taboo. In the hothouse atmosphere of 95-96, when the internet was fairly new and powerful fundamentalists on the UHJ were convinced that the genie could be put back in the bottle, I was subjected to enormous psychological pressures aimed at making me either fall silent or resign.

I regret, of course, that I succumbed to them, though it is still not clear to me what else I could have done. But unless you have been in a similar situation, you quite simply don't have the standing to accuse me of being a coward.

By the way, I pioneered for Baha'u'llah in Lebanon during the Civil War, and had mortars go off quite nearby me. I insisted on staying. I don't believe I am a coward. Have you ever risked your life for Baha'u'llah?

Juan Cole

Juan,

Your belief that the uhj is going to reform itself appears to me quite naive. I argue the shape is set for things to come. It's also plausible that the uhj has unavoidably disclosed what the bahai faith is and has been all along.

It's just as likely that the uhj has been following the examples of both Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha: public support and expressions of largely liberal and progressive values while concealing an inveterate fundamentalism....

A conclusion difficult to escape given the past decade and so forth.

FG

jricole
7/3/01 1:40 AM 1 out of 30

The following is also posted at:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2001/colerepl.htm>

Commentary On Amin Banani, "Some Reflections on Juan Cole's Modernity and the Millennium"

Juan R. I. Cole

I would like to take this opportunity to respond to Amin Banani's meditation on my recent book (Amin Banani, "Some Reflections on Juan Cole's Modernity and the Millennium," Baha'i Studies Review, Volume 9 (1999/2000), pp. 159-162). It has been necessary for me to reply on the Internet because the journal itself was forbidden by higher Baha'i authorities to allow me to reply to this review in its pages. Having Banani's reactions to the book is particularly interesting, since he has been so crucial to the development of Iranian studies in the United States during the past half-century. Despite being an immigrant from a very different culture at a time when the U.S. was relatively closed to immigration, he pursued a highly successful academic career in his adopted country, which welcomed him without regard to the issues of religious orthodoxy that had hounded his coreligionists in the land of his birth. His first book, on Reza Shah's modernization program, in many respects still stands today, a remarkable feat. His pioneering researches on Shi'ite passion plays foreshadowed a flood of later work. His sensitive and selfless co-translations of poets like Furugh Farrukhzad, in which he called upon the cooperation of prize-winning English-language poets, constituted a major paradigm shift in our approach to literary translation of Persian. He was also instrumental in introducing this prominent woman writer to English-speaking audiences. At UCLA, he mentored, without any fanfare or due recognition, a stream of doctoral students who went on to make key contributions to the academic study of Iran and the Middle East.

Banani's help and encouragement have thus been important to many scholars of the Middle East over the past 40 years, including to myself. Clearly, he is not responsible for what they go on to write, and it is natural that he would wish in some instances to make his differences with his former students clear. I deeply appreciate his forthright acknowledgment of the value of my book at the beginning of his meditation, in which he points to its importance for Iranian historiography and for the study of modernity in the Middle East. While he does not use the word "brilliant" lightly or often about scholars, in this case his application of it to yours truly, a mere yeoman historian, is surely a sign of his own generosity of spirit more than anything else.

Banani's subsequent comments come under three headings. First, he objects to what he perceives as an implicit assumption in the book that good scholarship is agnostic and incompatible with faith. Second, he is under the impression that I have traced "every bit of what is modern in Baha'u'llah's thought to direct or indirect influences of the West," and have done so with too little real evidence for such influences. Third, he objects to a small paragraph at the end of the book in which I suggested that "some contemporary leaders" of the Baha'i faith were committed to principles such as scriptural literalism, patriarchy, theocracy and so forth.

jricole
7/3/01 1:42 AM 2 out of 30

I would like to reply to each of these points very briefly. First, I wish to query Banani's assumption (that seems to be all it is) that Modernity and the Millennium advocates an implicit agnosticism. His conclusion is certainly not one that other reviewers have come to. The Islamicist Merlin Swartz wrote in his review of my book [in The American Historical Review, Volume 105, no. 3 (June 2000): 1049, the flagship journal for some 17,000 professional historians in the U.S.] that it depicted the Baha'i faith as critical of the excesses of Enlightenment rationalism and Jacobinism, saying:

"Baha'ism insisted that only a religious dimension is capable of providing the kind of constraints that the secularist and rationalist aspects of modernist doctrines need to protect them against excess a concern dramatically underscored by the events of the modern period."

The author of the review then adds:

"To the degree that Cole endorses this Baha'i emphasis on the importance of a religious dimension, some readers will undoubtedly see the present work as in part an apologia for religion. Whether one agrees with the position articulated in this work or not, one must concede that Cole has raised a set of issues that demand careful, critical attention."

Thus, the "agnosticism" of Cole's approach in Modernity and the Millennium appears to be more a subjective impression of Banani than an objective assessment. Other reviewers have seen the book as the work of an "apologist" for "religion." This phrase keeps cropping up among Western academics that read my work. A draft of the article in The International Journal of Middle East Studies that later was reworked into chapters 2 and 3 of the book was criticized by one of the outside readers as "a clever apology for Baha'ism." The editor nevertheless published it.

Moreover, it would be extremely difficult to discover any affirmation of faith in a specific religion in `Abdul-Baha's Secret of Divine Civilization, a book of social and religious reformism aimed at the wider Middle Eastern society, which was published anonymously in Bombay in 1882. Like contemporary academic scholarship, the language of nineteenth-century reformism participated in certain universal assumptions and vocabulary that were not specific to particular religious or cultural groups. `Abdul-Baha unhesitatingly adopted this language in order to reach his audience, suppressing open acknowledgment of the inspiration for many of the ideas he advocated. To the extent that `Abdul-Baha is an exemplar for contemporary Baha'is, one might expect this lack of explicitness to be more common in Baha'i writing about the social principles of their religion than it is.

jricole

7/3/01 1:44 AM 3 out of 30

It strikes me as particularly odd that I should be accused of agnosticism, since I am to my knowledge the only academic Baha'i historian of my generation who has also written theology. If the accusation is that I reserve theological assertions for theology and historical ones for my history-writing, I plead guilty. However, a similar approach to historiography is visible in others. It is difficult for me to see any difference in the style in which Modernity and the Millennium is written and the academic historical writings on the Babi-Baha'i tradition of Alessandro Bausani, Abbas Amanat, Peter Smith, Todd Lawson and Moojan Momen. In a 1983 article for IJMES, Momen actually applied a sophisticated mathematical formula to establish that the class origins of the Babis as Tabarsi were statistically similar to those of Iranians as a whole! (Moojan Momen, "The Social Basis for the Babi Upheavals in Iran (1848-53)," International Journal of Middle East Studies 15 (1983):157-183.) Indeed, I cannot recall Banani himself publishing anything on the Baha'i faith in refereed academic venues outside the Baha'i publishing establishment, which gave any practical demonstration of a successful alternative, pietistic approach to the writing of Baha'i history. It seems to me that my book is being singled out for a style that is commonplace in academic writing on the history of religious movements, which has been employed by a number of prominent Baha'is in good standing.

The second main issue with which Banani is concerned in his meditation is what he sees as my attempt to trace all the major Baha'i principles to Western influences. Here again, I explicitly deny in the book (and I continue to deny here) that this dichotomy is a useful way of thinking. I note that modernity was felt as alien in Europe, just as it was in the Middle East. The antinomy between the "West" and the "Middle East" is itself an artifact of a modernist outlook, rooted in binary oppositions and nationalist claims on knowledge. `Abdul-Baha in The Secret of Divine Civilization denounced the anxiety among Iranian Shi`ites of his time to avoid "Western" influence as a piece of foolishness. Nineteenth-century modernity was global in its origins and impact. "The West" is not a useful category for considering this phenomenon. The Chinese invented printing, gunpowder and bureaucracy, and there is some evidence that Europe derived most if not all of these from East Asia. Algebra and key advances in astronomy were invented by the Muslims. Benedict Anderson has argued that nationalism was first imagined in Latin America. The great colonial empires were Creole, hybrid affairs. A Muslim pilot guided Vasco da Gama to India. Baha'u'llah lived his life in the Greater Mediterranean (including five years on European soil), and responded to the crises and conundrums faced by the people around him who felt the impact of modernity, whether they were Europeans or Middle Easterners. All prophets address both transcendental spiritual and ethical concerns and more immediate social problems, and this book is about the latter.

jricole

7/3/01 1:45 AM 4 out of 30

With regard to peace thought, I talk of India's Akbar and of Shi`ite millennialist traditions and hopes, not just about Western European movements. I give clear evidence of the importance for Baha'u'llah's thinking on collective security of the 1856 Treaty of Paris (which ended the Crimean War), a document hammered out by Middle Easterners like Mehmet Emin Ali Pasha as well as by European and Russian diplomats. To see this treaty, which pledged several Western European nations to go to war to protect the Ottomans from any future Russian aggression, as a "Western" document would be to ignore the Ottoman context of and key contributions to it.

Rather, it was a document that evolved in the interaction and dialogue (violent and peaceful) of the peoples of the Greater Mediterranean, articulating the principle of collective security, which Baha'u'llah approved of as a model for global peacekeeping. I show the ways in which Baha'u'llah presents a severe critique of reigning European ideologies such as Romantic nationalism and Enlightenment deism, and suggest its indigenous roots.

Where I sketch parallel European developments, these are instanced as contributory to the Zeitgeist of the Greater Mediterranean during Baha'u'llah's lifetime, not necessarily as direct influences on him. The evidence for his interactions with progressive Ottoman officials and intellectuals, however, seems to me far more extensive than Banani is willing to admit, going rather beyond casual coffeehouse conversations, to actual correspondence and long association, not to mention awareness of the Ottoman press. The problematic of my book is not Westernization, the old paradigm so crucial to Banani's early work on Reza Shah at Stanford in the 1950s, but modernity and postmodernity with their global contexts and impact. That he insists on reading the latter through the lens of the former seems to me to say more about his unwillingness to abandon the old paradigm of modernization theory than about my book.

jricole

7/3/01 1:46 AM 5 out of 30

Banani characterizes me as having asserted the influence of "fundamentalism" among some contemporary Baha'i leaders, and goes on to say that I was "presumably" speaking of "Shoghi Effendi and the Universal House of Justice." I must confess myself absolutely astonished that a scholar of Banani's caliber and eminence should have chosen arbitrarily to put words in my mouth in this way. Since I was speaking of the contemporary Baha'i community, I obviously did not have Shoghi Effendi in mind. I spoke simply of "some leaders." Moreover, this particular tack in his argument bewilders me because I have listened to endless complaints from him about the Universal House of Justice's policies toward scholarship. He complained about having his own translation work interfered with on a number of occasions. He angrily withdrew his name from his introduction to Muhammad `Ali Salmani's My Memories of Baha'u'llah, when the translation by Marzieh Gail was ordered bowdlerized by the Universal House of Justice in 1982. I heard through a friend that he was criticized for this move in Haifa as "spineless." (Apparently his unwillingness to defend the censorship of primary sources was seen as a sort of cowardice and lack of commitment to the Baha'i Cause.) Nor did the Amin Banani I knew have much respect for the intellectual acumen of the Baha'i establishment in Haifa. He once told me, "The problem with Haifa is that they do not know what they do not know." For him now to insist that there is no hint of religious fundamentalism attaching to anyone in the Baha'i world center, as he does in his "meditation," seems to me contradictory to everything he ever said to me privately on this subject. While I would not ordinarily begrudge him this bit of pious dissimulation, it does seem a bit hard for him now to take me to task for saying publicly what he has long said privately. As for my general point, I cannot see how it differs in any essential way from that of Moojan Momen in his article on fundamentalism in this very journal (Moojan Momen, "Fundamentalism and Liberalism: Towards an Understanding of the Dichotomy," Baha'i Studies Review, vol. 2 (1), [1992]). Momen makes the same argument as I do, that fundamentalist and liberal tendencies both exist in the contemporary Baha'i faith, and that the conflict that sometimes breaks out between the two can be painful for individuals. That this somewhat obvious assertion should cause any controversy somewhat amazes me, since by now there are a fair number of well known such conflicts.

jricole
7/3/01 1:49 AM 6 out of 30

That a small paragraph in a 264-page book, virtually the only passage that is anything but laudatory about the movement, should be the focus of so much commentary, suggests to me that it is being used as a hook rather than being the actual subject. It is a hook for bringing up the discontents I have expressed, not in this book but in other forums, about anti-intellectualism in the contemporary community (the justice of which Banani graciously acknowledges). This book was substantially completed before those controversies broke out, however, and the comments in the conclusion about a contemporary fundamentalist tendency were simply intended to demonstrate the fallacy of essentialism and the fluidity of religious responses to modernity. I should therefore be sorry to see one sentence dominate discussion of a book that is largely about another subject altogether.

Finally, I am disturbed by a particular aspect of the Banani review. He objects to the use of the methodologies of what I called formal academic scholarship in the study of the Baha'i religion. Yet these methodologies are simply the ones of contextualization and historical explanation, the same ones he has used all his life and for which he represented himself to stand before the U.S. academic community. His equation of these methods with the lifework of Shaykh Muhammad Taqi Isfahani Najafi, the prominent Shi`ite clergyman of nineteenth century Isfahan, seems to me actually bizarre. Shaykh Muhammad Taqi, whom Baha'u'llah called "the son of the Wolf," never wrote anything at all employing the modern historical methodologies to which I appealed to in my book. He was simply a traditional nineteenth-century clergyman. He attacked Baha'u'llah on theological grounds, not academic ones. And, of course, he had a number of Babis and Baha'is killed as heretics. To equate a figure like Shaykh Muhammad Taqi with contemporary academic historians of the Babi and Baha'i religions seems to me a category error to say the least. For my own part, I not only have not attacked Baha'u'llah (in whom I am a believer and whose cause I have served for nearly 30 years), but I have been vocal and active in defending the Iranian Baha'i community from persecution. I decline to speculate as to why Banani chose to bring up Shaykh Muhammad Taqi in this context, because all the explanations I have been able to think of are unworthy.

That subject of my book was the alternative image of modernity presented to us by Baha'u'llah, a vision of peace, tolerant spirituality, global cooperation, human rights, the advent of reason among the masses and the concomitant rise of parliamentary governance, the equality of women and men, and the development of the potential of societies and persons throughout the world. Many would call it a hopelessly utopian and unrealistic vision. They would point out that if minor differences concerning the presentation of it are capable of dividing old friends like Amin Banani and myself, who share that vision even if we do not agree about the best ways to achieve it, then it really is nothing more than a chimera. I for one refuse to believe that either of these latter, cynical propositions is true.

Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the 19th Century Middle East (New York: Columbia University Press, 1998) is available from Amazon.com at:
https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=994139535/sr=1-1/ref=sc_b_1/102-3518982-5014567

pdodenhoff
7/3/01 8:42 AM 7 out of 30

Dear Juan,
An excellent response to a very disingenuous article. That the powers that be have forbidden your response from being published in BSR is no longer surprising and indicative of what they perceive "Baha'i scholarship" to be all about.
Nice to "hear" from you again!
Peace,
Paul

jricole
7/3/01 1:17 PM 9 out of 30

1) Hi, Paul! Thanks for the kind words. It is great to hear from you, too. Why don't you join us over at talisman9@yahoogroups.com?

I should be clear that the editorial staff at the Baha'i Studies Review are not to blame for my inability to reply to the review there. This was something imposed on them from higher up, either the UK National Assembly or the Universal House of Justice. Of course, behind the facade of niceness, the Baha'i "Institutions" have a strong totalitarian streak. In-house journals like BSR are viewed by them as places where they can beat up on people they don't like and deny the victims any voice in reply. The same thing happened when I tried to reply to an article trashing me by Nader Saiedi in the Journal of Baha'i Studies. I was not even given the courtesy of a reply by the "editor" Wendy Heller (not someone to my knowledge with any serious academic credentials. Something like JBS (but not BSR) is a kind of front organ for trying to influence academics in a cult-like direction, similar to what the Moonies do.

2) With regard to "Baha'ism" and academics, the use of the term does not imply lack of expertise. I have heard Amin Banani, a Baha'i professor who taught for decades at UCLA, argue that we should use the term rather than the awkward "the Baha'i Faith," which no copy-editor would accept as good English. Academics call the Society of Friends "Quakers", the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints "Mormons," etc., etc. It doesn't mean they lack expertise; sometimes they have studied these movements for decades and know much more about them than casual believers do. I myself use "the Baha'i faith" and have convinced the copy-editors to let me do so, because I want Baha'is to feel comfortable reading my academic scholarship on our religion. But I don't objec to "Baha'ism." And, in some languages, like Russian, even the Baha'is use the equivalent.

cheers Juan Cole

jricole
7/4/01 1:45 AM 12 out of 30

H-Bahai routinely publishes replies from authors whose work has been criticized on the list. It is genuinely an academic list, and follows standard academic procedures as mandated by H-Net. The policies are set by the editorial board, which includes seven or eight prominent academics and archivists who have demonstrated a strong commitment to academic values, who have higher degrees and posts at universities, and who have earned the right not to be smeared by Pat Kohli.

The fact is, Pat, that when a journal publishes a strongly negative review of a book, it has an obligation to allow an author response. I do this frequently at the International Journal of Middle East Studies (Cambridge University Press), which I edit. For the journal to be forbidden to allow an author reply by an NSA or by the UHJ is just sleazy, and demonstrates how radically unfair the typical behind the scenes practices of the Baha'i administration really are.

I don't believe you could quote anything from Modernity and the Millennium that would show
that

I am an agnostic. I believe you might even find that I talk about Baha'u'llah "revealing" Tablets!

As for people who want to criticize the norms of academic writing about religion, they have a responsibility to actually demonstrate how it could be done better. We are waiting for your book published at a university press, Pat.

cheers Juan

jricole

7/4/01 2:39 PM 14 out of 30

Dear Don:

Academic scholarship is not so different from writing software code. There are rules for how to find out why a particular program functions as it does. If you follow the rules, you get a pretty good idea of what drives the program, what bugs it has, etc. Academic historians have developed rules for trying to understand what happened in the past and how it has shaped the present. Mostly nobody minds that they do this. But somehow when they apply the same rules to the history of religions, there are howls of protest. People who have a fundamentalist approach to religion want to deny that their church or religious community has unfolded in history and that its history can be recovered by the same methods as the history of a nation or a civil association. But this is just special pleading. Religions may or may not receive inspiration from outside History, from the Transcendent. That is not something a historian can decide. But whatever their original inspiration, religions are human institutions with a human history just like everything else. Nor are prophets non-human.

As for your problem with Denis MacEoin, no one will assert that any particular conclusion reached at any particular time by a specific historian is necessarily correct. One can always find things to disagree with in the work of any historian. The point is that the academic historian's
methodology is most likely to give us the best over-all view of how a religious movement developed over time. Academic history always involves an argument among historians and their readers, which also tends to bring certain conclusions into question over time and provokes a search for more evidence and analysis. The picture delivered by academic history improves over time. MacEoin was a pioneer. Some of his conclusions may not stand. But he showed the way to a new understanding of the Babi and Baha'i religions that is far more solidly based than that of,

say, Esslemont (which is the kind of thing we had before).

On the specific point you raised, Baha'u'llah disavows the idea of incarnation (hulul). However, it is true that his diction changes over time. In the 1860s and 1870s when he says "Haqq" (Absolute Truth), it is always a reference to God. In the late Akka period he often uses "Haqq" to refer to himself. So Denis may or may not have gotten the nuances right, but his point is not without foundation in the textual evidence.

cheers Juan

jricole on beliefnet
6/10/01 10:50 PM 26 out of 27

Allah'u'Abha, all.

Yes, I am a Baha'i, and a follower of Baha'u'llah. Have been since 1972, with a short hiatus in the mid to late 1990s. I have not been declared a non-Baha'i by anyone to my knowledge, except bigotted ignoramuses masquerading as tolerant and loving Baha'is. I am the only Baha'i author that thousands of non-Baha'i academics and journalists have ever read, so I am not only a Baha'i but I am a well-known one, relatively speaking.

I guess I don't think it is netiquette to put an individual's name in the subject header. We wouldn't allow that at talisman9@yahoogroups.com, where moderators also exclude ad hominem and declarations that so-and-so is not a Baha'i. Those of you reading this who like intellectual, no-holds-barred discussions that are nevertheless not personal slugfests are invited to join us over there.

That said, I recognize that authors are public persons and that it is inevitable that if you write a book at some point people will discuss you. I'm philosophical about it. I wish everyone with any interest in the subject would read Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith in the 19th Century Middle East (Columbia Univ. Press, 1998) and look at two Web pages:

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

and

<https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai>

If anyone has specific questions, I'd be glad to answer them, but please cc me at jrcole@umich.edu and say this is on beliefnet.

And, yes, I accept the legitimate authority of the Baha'i institutions, though I think they sometimes exercise it in a way damaging to the Cause of God, because of their immaturity. And, no, I don't want any followers. People should get their own goddamn schtick. Sheesh.

May the Glory of the All-Glorious be upon us all -

cheers Juan

jricole

4/17/01 1:35 AM 24 out of 30

I was surprised to see my name in the heading of the thread. I don't get time to read these boards very often, and would appreciate not being made the title of postings here unless I am cc'd at my regular email address.

I was called 'not a Baha'i.' I consider myself a believer in Baha'u'llah. I became a Baha'i in 1972. I had resigned under duress May 1996-Feb. 1999 when I re-declared, but for much of even that period my heart was with Baha'u'llah. And it had been for a long time. I pioneered in Lebanon during the early years of the Civil War there and risked my life for the Baha'i Faith. I also became deathly ill in India while pioneering there, was unconscious for several days, and could easily have died. One doesn't normally wish to bring such matters up. But when a coddled suburban American who has never risked his life for Baha'u'llah excommunicates you, you are sort of forced to present counter-evidence.

It is quite irrelevant to me whether some persons wish to set up criteria for throwing people like me out of the Baha'i faith. I have not done anything to them, and I have not brought into question their faith. I have never forced my opinion on anyone. They are acting aggressively toward someone who only wanted to serve Baha'u'llah. That service and that faith will continue whether they like it or not. A lot of people have been excommunicated by their communities. Spinoza was thrown out of Amsterdam's Jewish community by the rabbis. Hindu religious leaders excommunicated Gandhi. Shaykh Ahmad al-Ahsa'i was declared an infidel, putting his life at risk. I am just an ordinary historian and so am even more liable to being so treated than those great souls were. I can't see what harm it did them in the end. We heretics are the ones who write the interesting books, the ones that get read even after we are dead.

So, I am too a Baha'i. Nyaaah.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Sun Feb 16, 2003 2:30 pm Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: Horselovers observation's,

Peter Khan and Martin Douglas kept promising the Baha'is that if only they took away their children's toy money and kept meeting in their living rooms instead of buying local Baha'i centers--and sent the money instead to Haifa for building the Arc, then world peace would suddenly arrive and the Baha'i faith would emerge from obscurity.

I will let the talismanians decide whether the $300 million invested in wood panelled offices for Khan and Martin have actually contributed to the outbreak of world peace. I doubt it could be shown that the Baha'i faith, which has lost loads of LSAs in the past decade in the West, is any less obscure than it was before our children had to start playing with hubcaps and sharp sticks.

And, of course, anyone who objected to the boatloads of money being carted off to Haifa and the starvation of local communities of needed funds for essential activities, was branded "prideful" and "seeking leadership" and contravening "the new culture." The new culture, however, looks a lot like medieval Roman Catholicism or Shiite Islam. The Princes of the Church, ensconced in marble palaces, give the orders, and smear anyone who doesn't kowtow to them.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Tue Feb 18, 2003 2:24 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] The Self

The Encyclopedia of Islam entry on "nafs" or self has the following comments about the Koran's uses of the term:

"I. The Qur'anic uses.

A. Nafs and its plurals anfus and nufus have five uses:

1. In most cases they mean the human self or person, e.g. III, 54: "Let us call ... ourselves and yourselves"; also XII, 54; LI, 20, 21.

2. In six verses nafs refers to Allah: V, 116b, "Thou [Allah] dost know what is in myself [says [Jesus]], but I do not know what is in Thyself (nafsika)"; also III, 27, 28; VI, 12, 54 and XX, 43.

3. One reference, XXV, 4 (cf. XIII, 17), is to gods: "They [aliha] do not possess for themselves (anfusihi) any harm or benefit at all!"

4. in VI, 130 the plural is used twice to refer to the company of men and jinn: "We have witnessed against ourselves (anfusina)".

5. It means the human soul: VI, 93: "While the angels stretch forth their hands [saying,]. Send forth your souls (anfusihi)"; also L, 15; LXIV, 16; LXXIX, 40, etc. This soul has three characteristics:

a. It is ammara bi 'l su'", commanding to evil (XII, 53). Like the Hebrew nefesh, the basic idea is "the physical appetite", in Pauline usage psyche, and in the English New Testament "flesh". It whispers (L, 15), and is associated with al-hawa, which, in the sense of "desire", is always evil. It must be restrained (LIXXIX, 40) and made patient (XVIII, 27) and its greed must be feared (LIX, 9b).

b. The nafs is lawwama, i.e. it upbraids (LXXV, 2); the souls (anfus) of deserters are straitened (IX, 119).

c. The soul is addressed as mutma'inna, tranquil (LXXXIX, 27). These three terms form the basis of much of the later Muslim ethics and psychology. It is noteworthy that nafs is not used in connection with the angels.

(E.E. Calverley)
(I.R. Netton)

Extract from the Encyclopaedia of Islam CD-ROM Edition v. 1.0
© 1999
Koninklijke Brill NV, Leiden, The Netherlands"

All of these five uses of "self" are present in the Baha'i writings as well. The "self" that is condemned is 5 a., the self that commands to evil, or nafs wa hawa, self and passion--which the authors identify with the Hebrew nefesh of the Bible.

The idea that "self" in the sense of taking an ethical stand based on sincere conscience would ever be bad would be laughed at both by the Koran and by the Baha'i holy figures. `Abdul-Baha consistently praises conscience (vujdan, damir) and goes so far as to say that the Baha'i institutions have no right to impose sanctions on persons for politely expressing their conscientiously held views. Sanctions can only be imposed for behavior, such as having an adulterous affair, etc.

`Abdul-Baha's careful distinctions in this regard are, of course, ignored by the power-hungry leaders now in power, who actually secretly do not like ` Abdul-Baha very much because they see him as too liberal.

cheers Juan

www.juancole.com

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu Feb 20, 2003 6:52 pm
Subject: "new culture"

We've been having a discussion on another list of the House of Justice's recent letter calling for a "new culture." This just seems to me warmed over Maoism. They say they are egalitarian and against local leaders emerging in a 'traditional' way. This sounds good because who likes leaders? But what is not said is that this is an easy way of getting rid of anyone you don't like in the local community. Thus, someone like Alison, who dares to post email messages, can be accused of 'seeking leadership' in the 'old' way and so said to be doing something wrong.

And, of course, the people really seeking leadership are the Auxiliary Board Members and Counselors clawing their way up to Haifa, who don't want any competitors for their authority. And they are the members of the elected institutions, who mostly like being reelected every year and enjoy it better when there are no competitors and when local communities are obedient because they lack local leaders. Dictators like Mao and Saddam also pretend that they are against "traditional" ways of doing things that throw up local "leaders," who are evil. But it turns out that this sort of rhetoric usually is just a prop for a one-party state and totalitarian control.

cheers Juan

Date: Tue, 18 Feb 2003 23:52:35 -0500
Subject: FW: A Change of Culture
To: H-BAHAI

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Tue, 18 Feb 2003 01:57:02 -0500
Subject: Re: A Change of Culture

One really cannot speak of Shoghi Effendi's ideas on administration being implemented in the US under Horace Holley. The US NSA very frequently ignored Shoghi Effendi's advice. Indeed, they were so embarrassed by this behavior that to this day they have never published much of his correspondence with them. It would make the disjuncture too painfully apparent. One really has to speak of a Holley style of administration in 1924-1957. Note that long-serving NSA member Alfred Lunt strongly opposed the idea of having a full-time secretary of the NSA; I have a sense that Holley needed the job at that point. Holley won.

With regard to the impact on Baha'i numbers of the Holley approach to administration in the US, I doubt there is any evidence of a decline in the number of committed Baha'is in the early 1920s in the US. But I suspect that the Holley approach to administration in the US, which was far more controlling than anything Shoghi Effendi recommended, represented a long-term opportunity cost.

Old-time Baha'is remember Holley trying to pick their friends for them and interfering in private affairs. Holley threw a fit over the establishment of George Ronald as a private Baha'i press, which he did not think should be allowed. Shoghi Effendi sent GR a personal contribution. It is clear from the Remey letters that he dared not so much as do travel teaching in the US without Holley's explicit permission.

A less authoritarian approach than Holley's would almost certainly have resulted in far greater growth than was achieved in the US. Basically, one started in 1920 with about 1800 and ended in 1960 with about 8000 Baha'is on the rolls. It is only about a net increase of 150 per year in that period, which is nothing to write home about.

When Holley was called to Haifa in 1960 you had a series of moderate to liberal NSA secretaries--Wolcott, Ruhe, early Mitchell, 1960-1978, and voila, the community grew from that 8,000 or so to around 48,000 (if one excludes mail returns, etc.).

On the other hand, with more authoritarian and controlling policies of the 1980s through the present, growth slowed to almost nothing in the US if one excludes the influx of Iranian immigrants. That is, the period of the greatest crackdowns on individual initiative coincides with the period of greatest numerical stagnation in growth through conversion. In contrast, the period of greatest intellectual freedom (especially under Ruhe and with the influence of Dan Jordan) saw the ANISA project, the reestablishment of World Order, and Mitchell's own writings on race come to the fore, along with a big expansion in numbers.

I do think that the Iranian National Spiritual Assembly's style of administration caused a significant decline in the number of Baha'is over time. The Bahiyyih Khanum census of the early 1920s is said to have returned a million Baha'is in Iran. I can only think that 4/5s of those counted were actually what we would now call sympathizers. Even so, there must have been 200,000 committed Baha'is in Iran at that point, at least. By 1978 there were only about 90,000 registered Baha'is in Iran. So I would guess that 1925-1978 the number of Iranian Baha'is was halved by the institution of an authoritarian form of administration, and the great triumphs of `Abdul-Baha in attracting a million Iranians to the faith in one way or another was squandered.

Since the "new culture" began being promoted in the late 1980s, growth of the Baha'i faith worldwide has ground to a halt. In circa 1987-1996 fewer declaration cards were signed worldwide than the number of persons who died or withdrew in that decade. The idea that this is a temporary period of retrenchment similar to what allegedly occurred when Shoghi Effendi took over depends on a misreading of history and most probably a misreading of the present and the future, as well.

Authoritarianism combined with numerical growth is perfectly possible, as the Mormons have demonstrated. But for some reason the Holley/Furutan tradition of administrative overkill, now being repackaged as a "new culture," seems to produce stagnation in numbers. It goes without saying that both the Mormon and the fundamentalist Baha'i styles of authoritarianism are deadly to a vibrant cultural life. For this reason, the most interesting Baha'i thinking I've seen in recent years is not in the Journal of Baha'i Studies but on the talisman9@yahoogroups.com discussion list.

cheers

Juan Cole
History
U of Michigan

www.juancole.com

www.juancole.com

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Fri Feb 21, 2003 3:26 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: "new culture"

Tom, actually it is even more complicated.

You can march in peace marches, as Tom Cole. But you cannot identify yourself as doing it on behalf of the Baha'i faith or its principles.

And, you are actually fairly free to express your political opinions, just not to other Baha'is! There have been Baha'is in good standing who were very politically active. Kazemzadeh used to write against the Soviet Union for Freedom House. It is just that you have to separate out the two.

Of course you cannot actually join a political party, or at least make it known in the community. A friend of mine's wife was once almost investigated by a couple of Auxiliary Board Members for being involved tangentially in a Democratic Party fundraiser. Belonging to a political party gets you investigated.

I personally think we Baha'is should just put our feet down about this nonsense (which comes out of 1920s Iran when Reza Pahlavi was turning it into a dictatorship, of which the Iranian Baha'is initially approved).

Baha'u'llah, in contrast, denounced Ottoman and Qajar tyranny with specifics and even upbraided European countries for anti-Semitism. He was very political. He told the Shah he should give up absolute monarchy and institute a parliament. That would be like telling Saddam today to give up one-party rule!

Baha'is have become more and more weird and cultish, and look less and less like Baha'u'llah's "new race of men." The only way to stop this march to marginality and irrelevance is just to refuse to cooperate with it.

And, with regard to not being told what to think, boy are we in the wrong religion. In 1996, the gang in Haifa actually sent this goombah "counselor" Stephen Birkland to my house to interrogate me, write a report on the deviations in my views (including theological ones), which I was never allowed to see, and then threaten me with being declared a CB if I didn't fall silent. All because I posted some messages to talisman-1. It was like the Jehovah's Witnesses or Mormons or some damn thing. If they think they are going to succeed in telling American university professors what they can and cannot say, boy do they have another think coming.

cheers Juan

www.juancole.com

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Tue Mar 11, 2003 1:30 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] number of bahais

Baha'i officials routinely lie about or distort Baha'i statistics, so it is not possible to have an accurate count. For instance, the last Indian census showed 5,000 persons claiming to be Baha'is in India, but the Baha'i administration claims a million or two million.

In part this discrepancy derives from "declaration fraud," in which "teachers of the faith" distribute large numbers of membership cards to be signed at public gatherings by people who have no idea what they are signing and no intention of following up. Indians like to join things.

In part this discrepancy comes about because Indian Hindus do not think in terms of belonging to a religion the way Protestant Americans do. Most "converts" to the Baha'i faith in India are just Hindus willing to put another guru or avatar on their mantle. I've seen Abdul-Baha's picture next to that of Sai Baba and Krishna. So if the census taker asked them, they would say they are Hindus, but if the Baha'is called a meeting they might go to it (having gone to the Sai Baba meeting the previous evening). Indians like to join things.

Since the administration is largely authoritarian and corrupt, it pushes the phony numbers, both in a bid to make the Baha'is happy about the growth of their community and in a bid to convince the outside world that the Baha'i administration is important.

So everyone will tell you that India is the largest Baha'i community in the world, but maybe it isn't. Maybe the approximately 150,000 committed Baha'is left in Iran or maybe the approximately 60,000 committed Baha'is in the US are worth more than the fabled tens of thousands in India.

Typically in the industrialized West, Baha'i administrations claim about twice as many members as they actually have. In Latin America, Asia and Africa they often claim ten times what they actually have, or even more.

I'd be surprised if there were actually more than about 1.5 million Baha'is in the world.

The first UHJ is reported in The Baha'i World and consisted of Ali Nakhjavani (a former vegetable wholesaler in Iran and missionary in Uganda who developed delusions of grandeur and

closely held the keys to Shoghi Effendi's papers)

Hushmand Fatheazam (a professor of Persian in India and member of the Indian NSA)

Charles Wolcott (musical director of Disney in LA)

Amoz Gibson (African-American/ Native American educator and missionary in the US Southwest)

Lutfu'llah Hakim - a physician from a Jewish Baha'i Iranian background

Ian Semple - a young British actor with Oxford MAs in French and German who became more and more dotty as time went on

David Hofman - a British publisher who became more and more dotty as time went on

Hugh Chance - An American; I once knew but cannot remember now his background

H. Borrah Kavelin - an American real estate investor of Russian Jewish heritage

Several of these persons had dangerous theocratic dreams of ruling the world with an iron fist and stamping out that pesky freedom of speech and the press that infects democratic societies (even though Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha praised this very freedom!)

You would never, ever, get a clear accounting of finances from any Baha'i body, in part because the administration is corrupt and transparency would quickly make this clear, and in part because of authoritarianism.
Knowledge of finances becomes power inside the community, which the administrators hold close. All of this is especially true at the level of the so-called universal house of justice.

cheers Juan Cole

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu Mar 13, 2003 2:19 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] not more poems

There are virtually no Baha'is in Europe.

The UK claims 5,000 but the real number is 2500.
There are a couple of thousand in France and likewise in Germany. Less in Spain, I think.
Daniela can tell us the number in Italy, but I suspect the 2000 range is true there, as well. A lot of countries, like Holland or Denmark, just have a few hundred. So there is an NSA and so forth but it is really more like a family reunion than a national community. The real situation in Eastern Europe is likely to be similar, though via declaration fraud the numbers may look larger in a place like Albania, where there was a supposed influx a few years ago but then the community collapsed back to small numbers.

In short, I'd be surprised if you had more than about 20,000 of Baha'is in all of Europe (which has a population of about 500 million). The science fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard, who started a ridiculous religion in 1950, probably has more followers in Europe (where Scientology is widely disliked) than does the Baha'i faith.

The reasons for the small number of Baha'is in Europe are various, but I personally believe that Europeans were sensitized to the dangers of authoritarianism by Nazism and Communism, and do not like the authoritarianism they perceive in the fundamentalist version of the Baha'i faith proffered to them by hardline Baha'i missionaries. I think the US, which has been democratic for over 200 years, is more fertile ground for authoritarian movements because they remain largely "private" and do not appear to threaten public liberties, which are taken for granted. That is, in a free society some people want more structure. In Europe, where public freedom has been imperilled more than once in the past 70 years, people are more touchy about anything that sounds fascistic.

cheers Juan

>I very much doubt that the bahai faith will grow substantially in industrialized countries over the next 5 to 10 years. I dont know how many real bahais there are in europe (where i live) but assuming there are 300,000, it is most unlikely this figure will >double in the next 20 to 30 years. I may be wrong of course and it wont be the first time!

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Sat Mar 15, 2003 1:07 pm
Subject: Re: [talismán9] Re: bahaullah picture

The photograph of Baha'u'llah under discussion was taken by the Ottoman authorities for passport purposes, I think in connection with plans to exile Baha'u'llah from Edirne (a nice little city) to Akka (then a fortress-prison malaria-ridden dump). Baha'u'llah was not happy about being manhandled by the Ottomans or about plans to get rid of him (which was what the exile amounted to). Initially they even had planned not to send his family and friends with him, so it would have been solitary confinement.

So, this is a picture of a prisoner of conscience glaring at his jailers.

In that sense it would be a wonderful poster for Amnesty International

(which everyone here should join and support). The Beloved of the World

was also a prisoner of conscience, punished merely for speaking and thinking the "wrong" words, by the dictators of his day. I am infinitely

proud of that glower, that frown of supreme disapproval. It is a standing condemnation of the tyranny of sultans and religious leaders who toy with the conscience of human beings.

cheers Juan Cole

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>

Date: Sun Mar 16, 2003 3:15 pm

Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: statistics

The money for grandiose building projects in Haifa (if that is what you mean) mostly does not come from rank and file

Baha'is, though many did make sacrifices to give. The gardens and buildings are estimated to have cost

$300 mn. The US national budget in the 1990s was only on the order of $20 mn. per year, and about $3 mn. was sent to Haifa (a pretty heavy tax on a small community of 60,000 or so). I very much doubt that India provided any significant proportion of the total. The European communities are tiny

and could not possibly have come up with that sort of money, as you note.

The bulk of the money came from petrodollars, contributed by very wealthy

Iranian expatriate Baha'is, who either had made their pile under the Shah

and managed to get their funds out in 1977-78, or who settled in the oil countries of the Middle East and became wealthy there. Hozhabr Yazdani, a billionaire under the Shah and head of Bank Saderat, e.g., is said to have contributed tens of millions. (This is sometimes denied, but when I was living in the Middle East it was common knowledge among Baha'is there). Yazdani's administrative rights were briefly removed in the 1980s because he tried to buy an election in Costa Rica and take over that country, but then his rights were restored (one would not want permanently to turn off the gravy train). Baha'is in the Gulf also gave a very great deal.

The Baha'i faith is distorted by these petrodollars, just as Middle Eastern countries are. Saddam can be a dictator because of his control of the oil money. Ditto the Saudi royal family. The vast sums contributed by a small Baha'i bourgeoisie have essentially bought the Universal House of Justice and its policies. A lot of the authoritarianism and crackdowns on intellectual activities in the West are pushed behind the scenes by wealthy Iranian families who have an essentially Shiite Iranian outlook on theology. If someone willing to give you $50 million wanted you to be a fundamentalist, and all you had to do was stab some penniless California graduate students in the back, could you easily resist that temptation?

(I hasten to add that most expatriate Iranian Baha'is are poor or middle class and many of them are sweet open-minded people; it is a very wealthy and very fascist-minded few of whom I am speaking).

See e.g.: <https://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~bahai/notes/vol2/falsafi.htm> :

"Over time, Bahais regained their influence, and although the ones mentioned below exceeded the limits of mutual help, it is important to cite them as examples of people's irritants. Ayadi was given exclusive rights for Persian Gulf shrimp fishing, was a shareholder in numerous companies, and used his position to help other Bahais.¹⁶ Another example is that of Huzhabr Yazdani, who had started out as little more than a shepherd in Sangsar. Allegedly through the use of coercion and protection from high in the government, he achieved immense wealth and power. Allegedly, when he was investigated by the Imperial Inspectorate Organization (IIO), its head, Gen. Husayn Fardust, was told by Ayadi that he had intervened with the Shah and Fardust should drop the issue."

Likewise, the recent flurry of letters from Baha'i authorities discouraging Baha'is from joining even as individuals in anti-war protests are probably sent in the interests of the wealthy Persian Baha'is. The policy of the Baha'i administration has been since the civil rights movement that Baha'i individuals are free to march in things like peace rallies as long as they are legal and do not identify themselves as Baha'is; so this is a reversal.

My educated guess is this: They calculate that if the war in Iraq goes well, the Bushies might just target the ayatollahs in Iran next. If the Iranian government were overthrown and the Americans imposed a US-style regime there, perhaps putting Reza Shah II on the throne, the Iranian Baha'i bourgeoisie is convinced it could get the ear of the new shah and regain the favored position it held under Muhammad Reza Pahlevi in the 1960s and 1970s when Sabet, Yazdani, and Ayadi were among the wealthiest men in the country. Thus, my guess is that the bankrollers of the corrupt members of the Universal House of Justice do not want namby pamby American Baha'is out in the streets peacefully protesting Bush's Iraq war. They want that war, and they want the next one, on the ayatollahs in Iran. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

cheers Juan

At 10:57 PM 3/15/03 -0000, you wrote:

>If there are so few Bahais, where does the money for building the >Temples come from?

>

>

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>

Date: Wed Mar 19, 2003 1:45 pm

Subject: quashing of dissent

With regard to Baha'u'llah's and `Abdul-Baha's statements praising parliamentary democracy and freedom of the press and freedom of speech, please see my book, Modernity and the Millennium, which quotes most of the relevant passages and puts them in context. (The book is in inexpensive paperback and is also widely available in libraries).

Allegations by an ordinary rank and file Baha'i of financial corruption on the NSA, no matter how well founded, would almost always result in the NSA viciously attacking and smearing the individual, and moving to remove his administrative rights quickly so as to isolate him from the rest of the community. This happened in the early '90s, and a Baha'i travel agent pointed out serious irregularities in the official travel packages offered via the NSA's official travel agency (which later went bankrupt when charged with massive fraud). The NSA immediately reported the individual to the "universal house of justice" for 'backbiting' the NSA. The UHJ replied that the individual's actions were 'outrageous.'

And the NSA members called up the man's Baha'i friends, interrogated them, and framed him as having "libelled" the NSA in private conversation. They removed his administrative rights and published the fact in the American Baha'i, humiliating him (he was an Iranian-American). The individual's allegations were very well founded; I have the documents in a file. I think he eventually, after the passage of many years, got back his administrative rights, in part because he sent out information on his case to hundreds of prominent Baha'is, much to the rage of the NSA.

Basically, the current interpretation of the "administrative order" by the more cultist members of it is that it is a warrant for them to do anything they please and to enrich themselves, and a basis on which any criticism of anything they do can be squelched heavy-handedly. They do not use violence to my knowledge, but short of that they will go to any lengths to smear and marginalize any critic. The other members of the AO support them in all this. It is an Old Boy system for the administrators. Baha'i loyalists will defend all these proceedings, invoking strictures against "backbiting." The world they want to erect is one in which Americans could be put in jail for criticizing George W. Bush for his Texas-era business dealings.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed Apr 2, 2003 2:42 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: questions / for Bahá'í minded people

Actually, the questions about elections to the Universal House of Justice and Peter Khan dovetail. The fact is that national communities like the US and India are shortchanged, because little dinky Baha'i communities like Guinea Bissau have as many votes for the UHJ as they do. Since fundamentalist Baha'is are more likely to 'pioneer' or go abroad to do missionary work, they predominate on the NSAs of Africa, Asia and Latin America. They therefore increasingly have voted for fundamentalist Counselors at the International Teaching Center in Haifa, who in turn are appointed by their fundamentalist buddies on the House of Justice. The entire system has now therefore become circular, ratcheting toward ever more extreme fundamentalism--verging on cultism--and increasingly excluding normal people. It used to be that the secretaries-general of the US, UK and Indian communities had a shot at UHJ membership, but such elected officials are now shunted aside by the appointed ones in an informal 'nomination' process for the UHJ.

There are two seats open on the UHJ this April, and I confidently predict that they will go to fundamentalists on the International Teaching Center, of the sort who came after talisman-1, Alison, and others with threats of shunning and tactics of coercion. The fundamentalists are sort of like a religious mafia, not using violence (for the most part) but using taboos, whispering campaigns, summary expulsions, and threats of shunning to control people. And that is the situation out of which Peter Khan got elected to the UHJ; his election was a harbinger of very bad things to come.

Actually, the best way to fight this creeping Falwellization of the Baha'i faith is to be active in posting on talisman9 and to contribute to the recovering of the original Baha'i faith as preached by the Holy Figures, as well as harmonizing it with contemporary society.

Fundamentalism is opposed to such a Baha'i culture, grounded in Baha'u'llah's actual principles and in rational thinking about our world. It substitutes a set of false and supposedly literalist understandings for the former, and substitutes authoritarian ('soft fascist') techniques for the latter. Baha'i fundamentalism is about blind obedience and surface religiosity, not about the independent investigation of reality and true spirituality. The UHJ is dominated by the former, talisman9 by the latter. And that, Warren, is why Peter Khan is not such a good source of information about the real Baha'i Faith.

cheers Juan

>

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu Apr 3, 2003 2:10 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: questions / for Bahá'í minded people

Dear Paul:

Yes, of course, why go to the trouble? The Faith of Baha'u'llah, for which he sacrificed his liberty and suffered painful imprisonment and perilous exile in delivering his beautiful spiritual message, has been hijacked by narrow-minded little martinets who have perverted his teachings and attempt to use his religion as a vehicle for their own aggrandizement. Tut tut. These things happen. Let's just walk away. Doesn't matter anyway.

I should clarify that my experiment with Unitarian Universalism was short lived. I was deeply hurt and bewildered in 1996 when it became clear that the members of the House of Justice were trying to strong-arm me behind the scenes by sending "counsellor" Stevie Birkland to harass me with late-night phone-calls and sombre intimations that I was about to be declared a covenant breaker. But I found that having become a Baha'i at 19, and having spent thirty years with Baha'u'llah, he is my teacher. I had been brainwashed by the fundamentalists into thinking I could only be a Baha'i if I let them stab me in the back whenever they liked, so I left for a while. But the brainwashing quickly wore off and I began to see how things really were. Then I saw the cult-like things done to people like Alison, the double-speak, the arbitrariness.

I have decided that the reason the Baha'i faith is in the horrible condition it is in is because tyrants like Peter Khan have skilfully set things up so that they cannot be criticized from within the community. If anyone does criticize them, they arrange for him to be made taboo in some way. And what Peter Khan would like you to believe is that he has won definitively and for all time, and his warped vision of the Faith is identical to the Faith and no one can do anything about it. He has buried Baha'u'llah beneath a granite tomb of fundamentalism and now it is only that tomb that can be worshipped.

But once the scales fall from one's eyes, it is obvious that of course this Falwellization of the Baha'i Faith can be fought. All you have to do is critique it publicly. Then the question is only how effective the critique is. I have been trying to write academic sorts of critique that have been published in peer-review journals and are on the Web as well. I find that most Baha'is are injured by the heavy handed fundamentalism in the community but don't even know its name! They don't realize that it is fundamentalism that has injured them. They are confused. They often blame themselves, or think it was an isolated incident. I can demonstrate that it is not, that it is systematic. And once they see what is going on, they often are able to recover their faith.

For instance, Baha'u'llah taught the separation of religion and state. Peter Khan stands for using his religion to impose a dictatorial theocracy. Some Baha'is have left the Faith when they have finally understood the latter. But what about the former? Has Khan abrogated Baha'u'llah?

As for schism, well, of course fear of schism is one of the control mechanisms of the fundamentalists. They can say, 'You may not disagree with us or you have broken the unity of the Faith of God.' But the tables could be turned; they are the true schismatics, after all, departing in many essentials from Baha'u'llah's teachings. And we can query the premise, that difference equals schism. In actual fact all religions consist of varied subcultures (do you really think "Christians" in Zimbabwe are like "Christians" in Toronto?). Religions are umbrellas over diverse communities. Developing a true Baha'i subculture based on Baha'u'llah is not a schism. It is simply a group of Baha'is (of whatever administrative status) recovering their roots. Of course, Peter Khan has denounced 'back to Baha'u'llah' because he doesn't actually care for Baha'u'llah very much. 'Way too liberal for him.

As for Warren's points, many are well taken. But note that in the Aqdas Baha'u'llah says of the Learned in Baha: 173 "Happy are ye, O ye the learned ones in Bahá. By the Lord! Ye are the billows of the Most Mighty Ocean, the stars of the firmament of Glory, the standards of triumph waving betwixt earth and heaven. Ye are the manifestations of steadfastness amidst men and the daysprings of Divine Utterance to all that dwell on earth. Well is it with him that turneth unto you, and woe betide the froward."

The idea that he is here talking about some used car dealer magically transformed into a "counselor" by mere appointment is absurd. He is talking about Baha'is who have immersed themselves in the Baha'i scriptures so as to recover Baha'u'llah's message. Baha'u'llah knew that the written word is ambiguous, and that barriers of time and place and culture and vocabulary interfere with understanding. The learned are the ones who specialize in recovering as far as possible the original meaning. Baha'u'llah is anti-clerical only in the sense of condemning the learned who use their position to reinforce conventional, bigotted understandings (i.e. do what the members of the House of Justice typically do). On talisman9, we all try to become Learned in Baha.

As for your analogy of the ark and the Titanic, it is cute, but it is just a figure of speech. The way I read the story of the ark, expert carpenters constructed it. Anyway, a lot of counter examples could be given. Would you rather fly in a jet (and risk your family's life in one) that had been designed by high-powered, experienced engineers, or in one designed by high school drop-outs?

By the way, I declare Peter Khan to be "froward."

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Sun Apr 6, 2003 6:06 pm
Subject: Re: [talismán9] RE: questions

There is nothing in Baha'i scripture that forbids a multi-party political system or forbids individual Baha'is to belong to political parties. Indeed, Baha'u'llah's endorsement of Britain's parliamentary system of government shows that he approved of both things. And `Abdul-Baha's insistence that Baha'is in liberal republics have a duty to be good citizens implies not only that they should vote but also that they should uphold the central institutions of civil society, including parties. During `Abdul-Baha's lifetime, American Baha'is freely belonged to political parties and Baha'is often held political office.

So what you are talking about is not Baha'i principle. It is temporary policy.

Religious leaders sometimes adopt extra-scriptural policies for particular goals. The Roman Catholic Church forbade Italian Catholics from participating in Italian politics in the late 19th and early 20th century. Most Catholics just ignored them, and the Church eventually stopped being so opposed to democracy (though its earlier opposition surely was wrought up in some way with the rise of fascism). There is also nothing in the Christian scriptures against multi-party democracy or participating in it.

The Baha'i scriptures are committed to multi-party democracy and to the separation of religion and state. Only a weird, obviously phony fundamentalist reading of these scriptures could produce a commitment to dismantle democratic government and replace it by theocratic soviet.

P.S. You cannot belong to both the Republican and the Democratic parties in the US, but it is true that "party discipline" is weak in the US. The main punishment for voting too often against one's national party would be being denied campaign contributions and fund-raising visits by the high party leaders. When these are popular it matters; when they are not, it does not. Democratic representatives often criticized President Clinton. The fundamentalist Baha'i conviction that the odd way things are now done in the Baha'i community, where no leader can be criticized and criticism causes the member to be ostracized, comes from a lack of experience with the real world and from looking at the world through authoritarian lenses.

cheers

Juan Cole

>

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: Juan R Cole <jrcole@u...>

Date: Mon Apr 7, 2003 3:05 am

Subject: RE: [talismán9] questions

Dear Fred:

Shoghi Effendi changed `Abdul-Baha's policies radically, that's all. The change is so drastic that most Baha'is can't even imagine what the Faith was really like in the teens. `Abdul-Baha called on the Baha'is to elect Baha'i members of the Iranian parliament (could that really be accomplished with no relationship to the existing political parties?). Baha'is like Ali Kuli Khan served on the Regency Council of the child king Ahmad Shah. Baha'is in the US were members of the Republican and other parties. Some were socialists. This was never forbidden by `Abdul-Baha to my knowledge. He did get nervous about Baha'is becoming involved in radical politics, but that is a different matter.

Shoghi Effendi in the 1920s seems to have absorbed the distaste for democracy that was common in the British upper crust at places like Oxford. He talked about the "prevailing weakness" of the democratic system. He ordered Iranian Baha'is to avoid the "foul stench" of the parties of the West. He just really disliked democracy as far as I can tell. Although he condemned Hitler for racism and hyper-nationalism, he even seems to have admired the National Socialists' emphasis on one-party rejuvenation of Germany; he seems to have been actually happy about the Anschluss when Hitler annexed Austria. Unification of German speakers and all that. I mean, it is quite appalling, but if you look at what Arnold Toybee and other upper crust British were saying in the 1930s it was often quite similar.

I don't question that Shoghi Effendi had the prerogative of making policy on these matters during his ministry, though I disagree with the choices he made. But where his policies contradicted Baha'i scripture, they have to be seen as temporary and as pertaining to his lifetime. In a post-Guardian world what we've got left is Baha'u'llah's writings and `Abdul-Baha's interpretations and example, and we now have to go back to that. The 20th century was horrible, but it is over. It is time to open the Baha'i faith back out and to become normal people with a real impact on a real world. The good Lord knows it needs that.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Tue Apr 8, 2003 2:18 am

Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: questions

My cites for Shoghi Effendi's dislike of democracy are from his letters, in English and in Persian. They are quite striking in the ways in which they depart starkly from the attitudes of Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha on the issue. But mind you, no extensive study has been done of all this and his position may be nuanced or temporary or something.

cheers Juan

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed Apr 9, 2003 1:39 am
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: questions / for Bahá'í minded people

Dear Paul:

Let me suggest a different way of looking at it all.

Let's take Roman Catholicism, which has a single institutional structure but is actually very diverse (with a billion adherents). There are far rightwing fascist-like Opus Dei members. There are leftist Liberation Theologians. There are neoconservatives who favor the free market. They often have their own organizations within the over-all umbrella of the church. Occasionally Rome tries to intervene to stamp out a movement or favor it (Opus Dei has been favored by JP II, Liberation Theology has been punished). But the Vatican cannot actually control things on the ground, all it can do is boost its favorites and make its betes noires fight with one hand tied behind its back.

In the mid-19th century the Pope condemned almost everything about modernity as a heresy and tried to keep Catholics feudal. In the 20th century a lot of brave Catholic thinkers took the subsequent Popes on about this policy, and sometimes got excommunicated for their trouble. But as a result of their thinking and publishing and suffering, the Vatican II Council was held that incorporated many liberal principles. It did not end the culture wars inside Catholicism, and Opus Dei is trying to gut it. But a major advance did occur as a result of discourse.

So you ask what I want and how it will be achieved. I want a Baha'i Vatican II. And I believe it will be achieved by thinking, researching, communicating, and discussion--i.e. by consultation. Also by being brutally honest and by kvetching. Solzhenitsyn was amazed by how spunky Americans standing in line were when they felt they were being treated unjustly. He said that if Soviet people had complained that loudly about everything, Stalin could never have gotten away with killing millions.

I did not "walk away" from the Baha'i Faith. I was temporarily pushed out by cult-like techniques of coercion and manipulation. I came back after a couple years, as far as I was concerned, and will be here the rest of my life.

Peter Khan is only one person, of course. But the 9 only one persons on the House have enormous power to shape the religion, just as the Vatican helps shape Catholicism. Khan can have Alison kicked out of her own religion, can have my book suppressed at Baha'i bookstores, can have my friends in the faith threatened with being declared covenant breakers or with having their faithful Baha'i spouses divorce them, etc., etc. It is like saying (on a non-violent but still coercive religious level) that John Gotti was "only one person" in organized crime.

If you are saying that working for a Baha'i Vatican II could get a person excommunicated, that is obvious. I don't care. John Courtney Murray, the most important American Catholic theologian, who contributed vitally to Vatican II, was an one point silenced by the heirs of the Inquisition. Or read up on the life of Spinoza a little bit. The rabbis excommunicated him nearly 500 years ago; he is now the favorite philosopher in Israel. The excommunications of the narrow-minded don't always amount to anything under the gaze of History.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed Apr 9, 2003 1:47 pm
Subject: a Baha'i Vatican II is needed

yeah, yeah, yeah. Ultramontane Catholic priests used to make the same arguments, before Vatican II, that Jesus Christ does not permit any change to what he set forth in his writings.

I am not arguing for a change in Baha'i doctrine or law in the sense of Baha'u'llah's vision of those things. I am arguing for a change in contemporary Baha'i procedures and fundamentalist mindset, which have nothing to do with Baha'u'llah. The reactionaries in any religion always substitute their hidebound misinterpretation of the religion for the real thing, and then claim it is the real thing, and then claim that no one can change it because it is the real thing. The whole bit is a shell game for suckers.

As for the argument that only the Universal House of Justice can change current procedure, and only by cozying up to them and convincing them nicely could you hope to influence them, the same thing could have been said of the popes. It is a silly argument, because the popes had a dictatorial attitude and most of them couldn't be influenced by niceness or criticism.

They ruthlessly silenced or excommunicated anyone who spoke for a Catholic modernism.
What the example of those brave Catholic thinkers shows is that even a highly authoritarian institution can be changed, and it can be changed by criticism and by new thinking. The tyrants on the current UHJ won't be there forever, and their ability to clone themselves forever is never secure. And, if a majority of Baha'is begins to know that they are by their actions contradicting explicit Baha'i law, they will eventually be shamed into backing off their indecency.

For example: `Abdul-Baha was implored by the hardline Baha'is of his day (what Shoghi Effendi later called the dangerous "extreme orthodox") to declare Mirza Muhammad `Ali and his group infidels, i.e. "not Baha'is."

`Abdul-Baha replied that he could not do this because in the Baha'i faith, unlike in Islam, there was to be no expulsion of believers for immorality or wrong beliefs. If someone says he or she is a Baha'i, the Baha'is are stuck with them. The most you could do to someone disapproved by Baha'i authorities is to not hang out with them. But you can't say "so and so isn't really a Baha'i because he believes X."
This is the Baha'i Supreme Exemplar speaking, the appointed Interpreter of the Baha'i scriptures. `Abdul-Baha explicitly said that He Himself could not declare the Mirza Muhammad `Ali people "not Baha'is" because it would be contrary to Baha'i principle (see the Kitab-i Aqdas).

The present so-called Universal House of Justice, in contrast, declared our dear Alison "not a Baha'i." They issued a fatwa of takfir against her, declaring her an infidel, i.e., a non-believer. They broke Baha'i law in so doing. When they were challenged on this by Ron House, they wrote back that individual Baha'is couldn't declare people non-Baha'is, but that the UHJ had that prerogative. They have a prerogative that `Abdul-Baha did not? They think they are better than He is? That they have powers He did not have? That they can contradict his explicit instructions in an ad hoc and arbitrary manner, at will? And then it is pretended that they are upholding the real Baha'i faith, which no one can change! If you believe that, well, P.T. Barnum said a sucker was born every minute.

This is what Vatican II says:

"The Vatican Council declares that the human person has a right to religious freedom. Freedom of this kind means that all men should be immune from coercion on the part of individuals, social groups and every human power so that, within due limits, nobody is forced to act against his conscience in religious matters, nor impeded from acting in accordance with it, in private or in public, alone or in association with others. The Council further declares that the right to religious freedom is based on the very dignity of the human person as known through the revealed word of God and by reason itself."

This is what one commentator wrote about the situation before Vatican II:

"Both Gregory XVI in Mirari Vos (1832)² and Pius IX in Quanta Cura (1864)³ condemned the demand for "liberty of conscience" as "insanity" (deliramentum). The latter pontiff also condemned, in the Syllabus accompanying Quanta Cura, the proposition that, "In the present day it is no longer expedient that the Catholic religion should be held as the only religion of the State, to the exclusion of all other forms of worship." His successor Leo XIII insisted that "lying opinions . . . should be diligently repressed by public authority, lest they insidiously work the ruin of the State." "

This is the sort of situation the Baha'is are in now, the situation of Pius IX and Leo XIII. "Lying opinions" according to the Haifa authorities should not be tolerated. Hushmand Fatheazam, a UHJ member, told me that in future when Baha'is control the government, they would just jail dissidents. What is the difference between that point of view and the ideas of the 19th century popes, or indeed, of present-day Iranian Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, the Supreme Jurisprudent?

In contrast, the Baha'i scriptures stand for freedom of conscience and freedom of expression, even within the Baha'i Faith. This freedom has been quashed by the Saddam Husseins in Haifa, and the reign of tyranny everywhere is now coming to an end.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed Apr 9, 2003 6:45 pm
Subject: Re: [talismant9] a Baha'i Vatican II is needed

Well, Paul, if someone acts like a tyrant then it is legitimate to compare them to tyrants. If they don't like it, they shouldn't behave that way.

Baha'u'llah did not establish a House of Justice as a dictator. He hated dictators, and especially hated religious dictators. He established it as a vehicle for consultation, as an institution that would work for the welfare and benefit of the Baha'is. They aren't doing that. They are building marble edifices for themselves, twisting the arms of NSAs for millions of extra dollars, and then going around at the local level and attempting to intimidate in the most monstrous way devoted Baha'is who are actually working for the welfare of the Faith.

If the members are not behaving the way Baha'u'llah wanted, they are not the divine body he hoped for. They are just more corrupt and dictatorial ayatollahs and popes of the sort the world has seen before. Period.

I don't know why that should discourage us about Baha'u'llah. He isn't responsible for the sins of Peter Khan or Ian Semple or Farzam Arbab. How many people blame Jesus of Nazareth for the popes sleeping around and embezzling? It doesn't make any sense.

cheers Juan

>

>Juan,

>I can see how comparing the UHJ to Saddam's reign of terror does not exactly >win you the dearest of friends among those who move within the orbit of the >former. But tell me this: doesn't accepting the founder of the Baha'i Faith >and the validity of its institutions also mean that the Universal House of >Justice must be accepted for the divine body it is supposed to be, within >that very framework?

>

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed Apr 30, 2003 1:40 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Grossman and Jahaveri

While I wish Hartmut Grossman and Faridun Javaheri well, I don't want something to pass without comment. "Counselor" Stevie Birkland of Minneapolis called me up in April of 1996 and informed me that the "ITC" had found some my "statements" on talisman-1 to be "contrary to the covenant." "I am very sorry, Juan," he said. "I had always liked you." (He did the same thing to John and Linda Walbridge, Steve Scholl, and several other dedicated, long-time Baha'is).

That is, Birkland, at least, blamed the Inquisition of 1996 on the International Teaching Center. This was a gross misuse of the Baha'i Covenant as a means of intimidating thinking people into silence or of forcing them from the faith. And, both Grossman and Javaheri were members of the ITC at that time. So these are Inquisitors who have been involved in the serial murder of the spirit among Baha'i thinkers. They helped drive me from the faith I loved because my vision of it differed from their narrow-minded power fantasies.

It is, moreover, highly objectionable that the National Spiritual Assembly members around the world have abdicated their responsibility to prayerfully elect persons in whom they have confidence, and have instead accepted some sort of behind the scenes Diktat that they must put male ITC members on the House at every election.

Look at the elections since 1987 (an off-year election because of a death):
Hooper Dunbar, Peter Khan, Farzam Arbab, Kiser Barnes, Hartmut Grossman and Faridun Javaheri are all male ITC members and all have gone from there to the UHJ. In all this time, only Adib Taherzadeh (a continental counselor and popular author) and Doug Martin (called to Haifa as the UHJ's publicist) were not from the ITC. All of these electees had been appointees of the sitting UHJ. It is completely circular, as though future Presidents of the United States had to come from George W. Bush's cabinet.

The "counselors" at the International Teaching Center in Haifa have often made their bones as Inquisitors chasing people out of the faith. They run the ABM snitches. They are often, in short, cultists. They are, moreover, appointed by the sitting members of the Universal House of Justice. The current procedure violates Shoghi Effendi's prohibition on nomination. Appointment to the ITC now functions as a nomination. And, worse, the nomination is being made by sitting members, of people they agree with. So the UHJ is becoming more and more rightwing, more and more narrow-minded, and more and more dictatorial. Hartmut Grossman and Faridun Javaheri have been part and parcel of these violations of Baha'i law and of the Baha'i spirit.

It is no accident that since this shell game began in 1987, the Baha'i faith has ceased growing world-wide, and fallen into a profound stagnation. Now the big news is of intellectual regimentation of people through the mind-numbing "Ruhi Institutes" (an Arbab favorite). Birkland boasted to me of how many "institute" members had been trained, and predicted, hollowly, that entry by troops was around the corner. They are killing the faith with this cultism.

Grossman and Javaheri have harmed individual Baha'is, and they have profoundly harmed the Baha'i faith as a community, helping destroy its intellectual and spiritual life. Maybe they can redeem themselves. But they begin as criminals--guilty of electioneering and of conducting un-Baha'i Inquisitions--and have a lot of work to do.

cheers

Juan Cole

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>

Date: Thu May 1, 2003 1:25 pm

Subject: Re: [talism9] Re: Grossman and Jahaveri

Hi, John. You blokes must call it something else.

A shell game is one of those street corner scams where the mark is invited to guess under which shell a small object is, and then the prestidigitator moves the shells around rapidly and distractingly. And the mark loses sight of the original shell and is confused.

My point was only that ITC counselors are being cycled into the UHJ in such a way as to make Baha'is think there is a genuine free and fair election going on here, when in fact it is just a matter of moving cronies up. It is a very corrupt system, and you had better believe we are the marks.

Since the major injured party here is the NSAs, whose secretaries lose their previous opportunity to be elected to the House, and who are permanently subordinated to the "counselors" (not even a group Baha'u'llah or `Abdul-Baha mentions!), the NSA members are shooting themselves in the feet by going along with these fixed elections.

Well, they say people get the government they deserve.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu May 1, 2003 2:20 pm
Subject: new members of UHJ & corruption

More on the new members of the UHJ.

Grossman is presumably the son of Hermann Grossman, who became a Baha'i in Leipzig in 1920 and was appointed a Hand of the Cause in 1951. The Baha'i biographies depict him as a victim of the Nazis, and it is true that they came after his sister, other Baha'is and himself for being members of a 'pacifist' organization. What they do not stress is that Grossman defended his sister in Nazi courts on the grounds that she was held harmless from having her property taken by the state because she was a German citizen (code for "Aryan.") This legal tactic succeeded. And, the German Baha'i community kept writing these pitiful letters to Hitler saying they had been misunderstood by the regime and were loyal German citizens. I've always wondered if Shoghi Effendi was the one who instructed them to do this. I suspect that to the outside world some of the Grossmans' actions in the 40s would not look too good nowadays (especially in Israel). Baha'i obituaries are extremely opaque, so I don't even know what Hermann did for a living.

I suspect the Grossmans are less anti-intellectual than US or Iranian Baha'is. But Grossman was on the ITC when it came after me and other Baha'i researchers, so he doesn't have clean hands. And, if he has a thought in his head you couldn't tell it by this:

<https://www.org-tx.com/andrenea/grossman.html>

Javaheri I don't know, but I hear he has been taking a lot of trips to visit NSAs in Asia during the past year, presumably to campaign for office.

He just seems another dreary Iranian Baha'i fundamentalist:

<https://www.lodestone.co.nz/modules.php?name=News&file=article&sid=94>

It is amazing how little there is about these guys on the Web, if they are supposedly well known enough in the community to get elected. Presumably they just suck up to the NSAs from the time they get on the ITC. One could imagine a scenario where Peter Khan or Doug Martin decides to do something nice for some set of NSAs somewhere in the Third World and chooses an ITC counsellor he likes to deliver the goodies, thus building a voting constituency for him. (Note all the "him's").

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>

Date: Sat May 3, 2003 1:15 am

Subject: Re: [talisman9] new members of UHJ & corruption

Dear Wayne:

Most members of the UHJ before 1987 had been secretaries or prominent members of the NSAs of the US, the UK, India or Uganda.

The custom of circulating the voting lists with the top 13 or so candidates existed until recently, and we may still see the list. In the mid-to-late 1990s, US NSA secretary Robert Henderson and NSA chairman James Nelson were in the top 13 just below the counselors. Then Nelson was mysteriously defamed and forced to resign, and the counselors now reign supreme.

Eventually there may be an NSA revolt against this dominance by the counselors. But I suppose they may also fear reprisals from the UHJ if they don't vote as they have been sotto voce instructed behind the scenes.

The UHJ appoints the counselors. They can be either men or women, but only the men are eligible to be moved onto the UHJ itself. There are two kinds of counselors, 1) the members of the Continental Board of Counselors (e.g. North America, South America, Asia, etc.) and 2) the counselors at the International Teaching Center in Haifa. The ones at the ITC both push proselytizing work and also oversee efforts to maintain ideological uniformity among the "prominent" members of the Faith.

Baha'u'llah envisaged his religion as working through consultation and popular election, not through having a central authority essentially appoint its cronies as successors. The religion has been corrupted by this authoritarianism and cronyism, which is very like the problems that afflict many civil governments in Africa and Asia.

In essence, the international governance of the Baha'i faith looks a lot like the hardliners' version of government in Shiite Iran. In Iran, as well, the Guardianship Council elects the Supreme Jurisprudent, and the Supreme Jurisprudent either appoints the people on the Guardianship Council or appoints most of the people who decide whether someone can be on the Guardianship Council. (Parliament is supposed to get to choose 6 of the 12 members, but the appointed Expediency Council often strikes down the names sent over by it). The elected parliament is stymied in any democratic moves by the hardline judiciary (appointed by the Supreme Jurisprudent) and by censorship, heresy trials, and efforts to stigmatize potential candidates as insufficiently loyal to the idea of the infallibility of the Supreme Jurisprudent.

In fact, for anyone who knows Iran, it is startling how much Baha'i governance has come to resemble Khomeinism. Far from a new race of human beings, our leaders have become the old race of mullahs.

cheers Juan

At 04:16 PM 5/1/03 -0400, you wrote:

>Juan

>i do look forward to reading your posts on this newsgroup.

>

>You wrote:

>Since the major injured party here is the NSAs, whose secretaries lose their previous opportunity to be elected to the House, and who are permanently subordinated to the "counselors" (not even a group Baha'u'llah or `Abdul-Baha mentions!), the NSA members are shooting themselves in the feet by going along with these fixed elections

>

>My question is: Surely after years of this happening, the secretaries will see thru it and rebel? also are the Secretaries of NSA's always included in voting for members of the UHJ?

>Finally, how are the Counsellors appointed and are they mainly men?

>Thx

>Wayne

>

>

>

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>

Date: Sun May 4, 2003 2:18 am

Subject: Re: [talisman9] new members of UHJ & corruption

Paul:

There is a difference between being legitimate and always doing the right thing. An institution is legitimate if people generally recognize it to have the authority it claims to have.

Thus, the US presidency is a legitimate institution and Richard Nixon was a legitimate president.

But, Nixon broke the law and so was forced out of office by a threatened impeachment.

Reagan subverted the constitution in Iran-Contra and could in my view easily have been impeached if the Democrats in Congress had not decided to give him a pass.

The presidency remains legitimate, and even Reagan's incumbency remains legitimate, even if the design of the Founders was subverted in a particular instance.

Likewise, the UHJ is a legitimate institution.

But, like some US presidents, its members sometimes act "unconstitutionally" (in this case behave in a manner contradictory to the Baha'i scriptures).

Ordinarily the rest of the UHJ members are supposed to impeach any of their own who becomes corrupt in this way, but because of contemporary cronyism this cannot happen.

The only way I can see to fix the problem is to recognize it, analyze it, write about it, and spread the word that there is a problem. Anyone who does this is a kind of whistle-blower and we all know what happens to whistle-blowers in any organization. So it is not a cost-free approach, as Michael McKenny, Alison Marshall and a whole roster of Baha'i heroes and heroines can attest. But it is the only one I can think of. Obviously, it will only have an effect in the long, not the short term.

Of course, this approach assumes that we are able to study and understand the Baha'i scriptures themselves in the first place, and not just parrot carefully selected phrases by rote.

cheers Juan

**>
>Juan,
>Do you regard the UHJ as lacking legitimacy in the manner it was originally >set up after Shoghi Effendi's death?
>
>If so, how should the Baha'i administration be currently brought into line?
>
>
<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Wed May 7, 2003 6:39 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Re: Grossman and Jahaveri

Yes, I think that the system is now working to ensure that ITC members are elected, and I think that ITC membership for males has become a form of nomination. I object to this system because Shoghi Effendi opposed nomination procedures.

I can't tell you exactly how it was done, but I believe the shift from electing NSA secretaries to electing counselors was deliberately engineered behind the scenes by corrupt Baha'i politicians. Baha'is are naive and depend a lot on Kitab-i Hearsay.

You can imagine the conversation in the Haziratu'l-Quds: "Hey, Joe, I heard that the House says Counsellors' station is higher than NSAs. I've always wondered why that doesn't translate into counsellors getting elected instead of NSA secretaries." Or: "I have it on excellent authority from a friend who works in Haifa that the House thinks the Counselors should now be given a chance to run the Faith." Or: "The House must think a lot of that nice Mr. Javaheri, since it put him on the ITC and then it sent him here to us in Singapore with that donation to our teaching effort." Multiply it out by 196 and voila.

This letter the UHJ sent out saying that the station of the counselors is higher than that of the NSAs is a heresy six ways to Sunday. First of all, all Baha'is have the same station. None is more exalted than another as far as we can tell in this world. Second, Baha'u'llah ordained Houses of Justice. But he did not ordain counselors. Bureaucratic officials thought up by some fundamentalist committee in Haifa in the 1960s cannot have a higher station than an Institution ordained by the Found of the faith. Third, the UHJ has been attempting to have counselors substitute in every way for the Hands. This is a heresy because they are not Hands. They don't have the station and cannot have the function of the Hands. They are not appointees of a living Guardian, which the Hands were. They are just servants of the executive branch. They even only serve 5 year terms, at the pleasure of the UHJ, which means they can never, ever criticize the UHJ. In contrast, the Guardian had the authority to declare that a law passed by the UHJ was illegitimate. The Interpretive Branch was independent. The counselors are not from that branch.

Shoghi Effendi said that the thing that kept the Baha'i faith from becoming demagogic and dictatorial was precisely the existence of these various branches--legislative, interpretive, etc. So, obviously, now that protection is gone.

The UHJ declared counselors' station to be higher than that of NSAs precisely in order to encourage all these heresies and to concentrate all power in its hands. It is a coup. It is the farthest thing from the system that the Holy Figures carefully constructed.

I should clarify and say that the list I was talking about was the list of the top 13 or so candidates who emerged from the voting in Haifa. It was not sent around before the election, but after. It gave their vote totals, so you could see who was in the running. Typically just below the ITC counselors were members of the US NSA.

cheers Juan

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Sat May 10, 2003 7:05 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] No Amnesty International ?

A question like, "does anyone know if a Baha'i has been sanctioned for x" is a trick question. The Baha'i administration, having cult-like aspects, does not operate with standards of transparency and consistency. Information is deliberately hidden from the public about what threats are made to whom and how and why. So there is never a public record that can be cited.

The administration does not like to rock the boat. So if an average Joe Baha'i joined Amnesty, probably nothing would happen to him. But if he became "prominent" in the community and openly admitted he disagreed with a policy of the House, then he would be threatened with sanctions. Such threats are usually enough to silence such controversies.

Thus, Rob Stockman used to say that no one had been sanctioned for refusing to have his or her writings about the faith subjected to "literature review" [i.e. prepublication censorship]. But then I heard from Steve Scholl that Firuz Kazemzadeh had once threatened him with having his administrative rights removed precisely on those grounds. Since Steve did not publish the fact, there was no way to know it had happened. And, when the administration didn't like some of the posters on talisman-9, they sent around a sleazy 'counselor' to interrogate them and then threaten them with being shunned if they did not shut up. This was the threat of a sanction, not the application of one, but it was so corrupt and outrageous that it had the same effect, of marginalizing those so threatened.

As for membership in another religious organization, around 1995 Nima Hazini was threatened with losing his administrative rights by his LSA for joining a Sufi order. He went to the Sufi leader and explained, and asked to be released from membership. The Sufi leader laughed and said there was no such thing in Sufism. Nima just didn't go to the meetings and so was all right for a while, until the crackdown on talisman9, when he (like a number of others) just resigned in disgust.

There are many such stories of behind-the-scenes threats and pressure, most of which can never be known. If they succeed and the Baha'i is whipped into shape, he or she doesn't talk about the incident. If they don't succeed, and the person leaves the Faith rather than be bullied, the individual stops associating with the Baha'is and so no one in the community ever knows the real story.

One way to fight this lack of a paper trail is to do oral histories. I have by now collected large numbers of these, from both long-time Baha'is and from ex-Baha'is. In the case of the ex-Baha'is, there is usually some point at which an Auxiliary Board Member steps onto the scene, bullies the Baha'i over some rigid policy, and fades back into the shadows, watching with satisfaction as the "trouble maker" fades from the Baha'i scene. It is a secretive enforcement mechanism that has, amazingly, managed to retain its anonymity.

cheers Juan

>However, what would be an appropriate question would be whether or not >membership concurrently in another religious community has actually led to >the loss of voting rights or outright expulsion of individual Baha'is.
>
>Does anyone know if this has actually occurred?

<https://www.juancole.com/>

From: "Juan R. Cole" <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu Aug 14, 2003 2:35 pm
Subject: Re: [talisman9] Baha'i influence

Dear Paul:

I am not a fundamentalist, so I don't read Baha'u'llah literally.
At his best, he was a manifestation of the highest attributes of the human character, even though he was also a fallible human being with many foibles. Seeing the best in Baha'u'llah is always a great pleasure, for anyone who aspires to be better than they are, to realize their full potential as a human being. Baha'u'llah is that sort of exemplar for us.

We become better, both as individuals and as a civilization, by hanging around with him.

Baha'u'llah's vision of the Ultimate Truth was the unknowable Essence, the 'Ama' or Supreme Darkness or Cloud of Unknowing. Human beings clothe this reality in human attributes and call it "God," but Baha'u'llah forthrightly says that this is an inadequate approach to knowing Reality
and that It will in fact always remain ultimately unknowable by humans.
All we can get is an intimation of its beauty and its truth, its meaning, and we get that intimation by seeing the best character attributes in the most ethical and high-minded human beings, the manifestations of God among us. (Nor are Prophets the only ones who can show forth those attributes to us; we are surrounded by part-time saints and even some who are closer to full time).

Baha'u'llah says in an untranslated Persian tablet that he did not much change the laws of the Bayan when he wrote the Most Holy Book because he wasn't sent primarily as a law-maker. He was sent to exalt the spiritual character of human beings. That is, his mission was primarily ethical and mystical. A lot of Baha'i used flimflam men have tried to turn him into a high-priced lawyer authorizing the fleecing of the rest of us.
It wasn't what he was about.

Baha'u'llah stretched out his robed arm toward the sky and pointed his finger at the star of truth shining there. Fundamentalist Baha'is busy themselves with counting the wrinkles on his finger, examining the cuticle, admiring the shape, and hating all who do not worship that

Finger. They do not understand that the finger's whole purpose is to point to a transcendent beyond; they never let their gaze follow the finger to the Star twinkling in the firmament of meaning. And if a Baha'i should do so, they start attacking her and muttering about covenant breaking and materialism. The Finger is what is important. And it is what they want to give to us. :-)

All Baha'is read the first passage in Gleanings, which Shoghi Effendi put first for a reason. But few seem to understand its real implications. See below.

cheers Juan

1 Lauded and glorified art Thou, O Lord, my God! How can I make mention of Thee, assured as I am that no tongue, however deep its wisdom, can befittingly magnify Thy name, nor can the bird of the human heart, however great its longing, ever hope to ascend into the heaven of Thy majesty and knowledge.

2 If I describe Thee, O my God, as Him Who is the All-Perceiving, I find myself compelled to admit that They Who are the highest Embodiments of perception have been created by virtue of Thy behest. And if I extol Thee as Him Who is the All-Wise, I, likewise, am forced to recognize that the Well Springs of wisdom have themselves been generated through the operation of Thy Will. And if I proclaim Thee as the Incomparable One, I soon discover that they Who are the inmost essence of oneness have been sent down by Thee and are but the evidences of Thine handiwork.
And if I acclaim Thee as the Knower of all things, I must confess that they Who are the

Quintessence of knowledge are but the creation and instruments of Thy Purpose.

3 Exalted, immeasurably exalted, art Thou above the strivings of mortal man to unravel Thy mystery, to describe Thy glory, or even to hint at the nature of Thine Essence. For whatever such strivings may accomplish, they never can hope to transcend the limitations imposed upon Thy creatures, inasmuch as these efforts are actuated by Thy decree, and are begotten of Thine invention. The loftiest sentiments which the holiest of saints can express in praise of Thee, and the deepest wisdom which the most learned of men can utter in their attempts to comprehend Thy nature, all revolve around that Center Which is wholly subjected to Thy sovereignty, Which adoreth Thy Beauty, and is propelled through the movement of Thy Pen.

4 Nay, forbid it, O my God, that I should have uttered such words as must of necessity imply the existence of any direct relationship between the Pen of Thy Revelation and the essence of all created things. Far, far are They Who are related to Thee above the conception of such relationship! All comparisons and likenesses fail to do justice to the Tree of Thy Revelation, and every way is barred to the comprehension of the Manifestation of Thy Self and the Day Spring of Thy Beauty.

5 Far, far from Thy glory be what mortal man can affirm of Thee, or attribute unto Thee, or the praise with which he can glorify Thee! Whatever duty Thou hast prescribed unto Thy servants of extolling to the utmost Thy majesty and glory is but a token of Thy grace unto them, that they may be enabled to ascend unto the station conferred upon their own inmost being, the station of the knowledge of their own selves.

6 No one else besides Thee hath, at any time, been able to fathom Thy mystery, or befittingly to extol Thy greatness. Unsearchable and high above the praise of men wilt Thou remain for ever. There is none other God but Thee, the Inaccessible, the Omnipotent, the Omniscient, the Holy of Holies.

<https://www.juancole.com/>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

[All five parts included in this file]

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>

Cc: bahai-apologetics@egroups.com <bahai-apologetics@egroups.com>;

talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; bahai-faith@makelist.com

<bahai-faith@makelist.com>

Date: Saturday, November 14, 1998 5:19 AM

Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 1

I can only reply briefly to Mr. Terry's comments, many of which seem to me polemical (rather than apologetic :-)) and which contain serious misreadings of the article as well as displaying a dismaying lack of knowledge about the history and texts of the Baha'i faith, both in English and in Arabic and Persian. In many instances, moreover, Mr. Terry simply says at greater length what I said in my article, giving further credence to my points.

>>>

>>>INTRODUCTION

>>>

>>>Dr. Cole begins his article by referring to Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh and to >>>Scientology by way of introducing what he calls "social control mechanisms >>>in the American Baha'i community."

The point of the references was stated as being that some US religious groups existed for a fair amount of time before social scientists took an interest in them, and so remained relatively little known in the literature. It is not a matter of 'grouping' the US Baha'i community, which is quite diverse, with anything.

>>>Dr. Cole has not demonstrated, in the entire course of this article, that >>>the Baha'i Faith has any of the attributes of a modern "cult," and indeed,

>>>Dr. Udo Schaefer has carefully studied this question, and come to the >>>conclusion that the Baha'i Faith cannot be considered a "cult" except >>>according to the once general definition, namely "a system of religious >>>beliefs and ritual."

This is because Dr. Cole did not set out to demonstrate that the Baha'i faith is a "cult" tout court. There are, however, some cult-like elements in its governance: shunning, threats of shunning, prohibition on publicly criticizing leaders, prepublication censorship, surveillance and informing on adherents by others. But these are "nested," and not necessarily spread uniformly throughout the community. (Most Baha'is are not writers, e.g., and so are relatively unaffected by censorship practices.)

>>> First of all, virtually all of the regulations to which Dr.

>>>Cole refers were enjoined by the Founder of the Baha'i Faith, and enforced >>>by His successors-- 'Abdul-Baha, Shoghi Effendi and the Universal House

of >>>Justice--in their turns as worldwide leaders of the religion.

Actually, almost none of these control mechanisms existed in the time of Baha'u'llah, nor are they mentioned in his writings, and very few existed in the time of `Abdul-Baha. However, since my article simply explained the "regulations" and cited the textual evidence and social practices involved, I don't actually see what the objection is.

>>>What Dr.

>>>Cole calls "mandatory prepublication censorship of everything Baha'is >>>publish about their religion" is a policy which seems to have originated >>>with Baha'u'llah, the Founder of the Baha'i Faith, Who personally reviewed >>>at least two historical works compiled and written by adherents prior to >>>their publication.

This is ridiculous. Baha'is published freely in Baha'ullah's time and there is no evidence to the contrary. That Baha'u'llah agreed to look at a couple of books was his favor to the author, not a kind of censorship; there is no evidence whatsoever that he even so much as commented on what he read. "Literature review" was vastly expanded by the UHJ in 1972. I say explicitly that prepublication censorship has been a Baha'i practice for almost a century, and note that while it is called "temporary" by Baha'i leaders, it appears to be being extended and widened, and to be envisaged as continuing for centuries.

>>>It might be noted that prepublication >>>review is required by publishers and editors everywhere, and that the >>>criteria which govern academic review are much more rigorous and exclusive >>>than those which characterize Baha'i literature review.

Mr. Terry, this is a simple falsehood. Baha'i prepublication censorship is demanded of Baha'i authors who publish at non-Baha'i publishers. Random House only vets my work if I publish with Random House. If Random House turns me down I can go to Knopf. If I am a Baha'i and the Baha'i censors turn me down, I simply cannot publish anywhere. There is no comparison between an editorial process of a publisher and a system of prepublication censorship. Moreover, academic presses have in fact published articles about the Baha'i faith that would not have been allowed to appear by the Baha'i authorities, so your second statement is also false.

>>>Dr. Cole alleges that "blackballing" is one of the "social control >>>mechanisms" employed in the American Baha'i community. He does not define >>>this term, but we understand it to refer to boycott, ostracism, and the >>>exclusion from membership by casting a negative vote. There are no reported >>>cases of such behavior in the American Baha'i community.

Persons whom the Baha'i administration do not like are not invited to speak at major Baha'i venues. They are not appointed to the 'Institution of the Learned.' They are often harassed by the administration with threats of sanctions. I have a number of documented such cases. There are no "reported" cases of such behavior because the censorship apparatus does not allow the cases to be reported.

>>>Dr. Cole has >>>alleged that the American Baha'i community has adopted certain behaviors >>>which effect nominations and which resemble campaigning. If this is the >>>case, then these behaviors are patently inconsistent with the uncompromising >>>Baha'i principles pertaining to this process. In other words, if such >>>behaviors exist, they represent aberrations and transgressions rather than >>>realizations and establishments of Baha'i principles.

That is for you to decide. I am simply reporting what I see as the actual situation. The article begins by saying I am not reporting ideals or essences, only what actually happens.

>>>Perhaps the most alarming of the "social control mechanisms" alleged by Dr.

>>>Cole to be employed in the governance of the American Baha'i community are >>>"administrative expulsion...shunning, and threats of shunning." It must be >>>noted once more that Dr. Cole does not employ the vocabulary used by Baha'is >>>to delineate particular policies and regulations. Virtually every community >>>has requirements for membership.

But not all communities have a system of shunning. That is, someone is declared socially dead and no member may be in contact with the one shunned, and if anyone does contact him or her, that person is then also shunned. Among US religions this is rare. The Jehovah's Witnesses do it and the Old Order Amish do it, maybe some very conservative Mennonites.

Baha'u'llah called for the excommunication of Covenant-breakers >>>(English translation of the Arabic "naqazin"), and indicated that >>>Covenant-breaking is a spiritual disease.

Baha'u'llah never did any such thing. Baha'is were in contact with Azalis all through their history, and in fact is is well known in Iran that there have been Baha'i-Azali marriages. The practice of shunning did not begin until `Abdul-Baha's time, and then it was used in only two cases: schismatics and persons guilty of speculation from the Baha'is. In recent years it has been extended as a threat at least to simple disagreement with the Baha'i administration's party line.

cheers Juan Cole

Free Web-based e-mail groups -- www.eGroups.com

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>

Subject: fw Juan Cole [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 2

Date: Sunday, November 15, 1998 7:44 PM

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>

Cc: bahai-apologetics@egroups.com <bahai-apologetics@egroups.com>;

talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; bahai-faith@makelist.com

<bahai-faith@makelist.com>

Date: Saturday, November 14, 1998 1:21 PM

Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 2

>>>Furthermore, the excommunication of Covenant-breakers is not a temporary >>>policy carried out by rogue Baha'i administrators, as Dr. Cole seems to >>>imply.

I don't imply any such thing. However, it is not the case that the practice of shunning goes back to Baha'u'llah in its current form, and the uses to which it has been put have in fact changed over time. It has certainly become more widely used and more Draconian, at least as a threat, in the 1990s.

>>>excommunication is in >>>the Book, and hence it is entirely beyond the mandate of the Universal House >>>of Justice to alter this law.

You could not prove it was "in the Book" to save your life. It isn't.

>>>Furthermore, he has misrepresented those regulations through >>>his use of misleading terminology and his citation of unreliable sources.

"Excommunication" does not mean "shunning" to most English speakers; "review" does not mean prepublication censorship. My terminology is clear and is not misleading. I cited Lights of Guidance, and other Baha'i texts as well as the best academic scholarship. To say that I cited "unreliable" sources is simply an falsehood.

>>>If he does not approve of these regulations then he should state his >>>objections openly; his affirmation, that "the movement's scriptures are >>>liberal in their orientation" and his implication that these particular >>>regulations--which he conceives to be illiberal--derive from "conservative
>>>Baha'i leaders" rather than from Baha'u'llah, 'Abdul-Baha and Shoghi >>>Effendi is simply incorrect.

Mr. Terry simply does not know much about the evolution of his own religion, the various and differing policies of its leaders, and the changes that have occurred over time, nor about the differing policies of national Baha'i leaderships. He therefore wishes to construct a seamless whole out of something that is disparate. He is simply mistaken. None of the control mechanisms I discussed existed in the time of Baha'u'llah. None. Besides, I don't know why he speaks in terms of "objecting." I simply described the situation, and Mr. Terry has affirmed the truth of my description, simply providing more details.

>>>It has been demonstrated that all of the >>>regulations referred to by Dr. Cole were established by Baha'u'llah and His His
>>>appointed interpreters.

You haven't established any such thing.

>>>While Dr. Cole states that many of his "remarks >>>cannot be generalized to other national communities, and concern mainly the >>>United States" the regulations discussed in this article are enforced >>>throughout the worldwide Baha'i community.

Many Baha'i academics who read the article objected that some practices in the US seemed more corrupt and Draconian than was true in their own countries.

>>>Shoghi Effendi and the >>>Universal House of Justice have affirmed that the liberal and conservative >>>points of view have nothing to do with the Baha'i Faith.

This may be good doctrine but it is sociological nonsense. A liberal-conservative divide is obvious in all major American denominations and religions and it is present in the Baha'i community as well. Denying it won't make it disappear, and attempting to prevent social scientists from discussing it is just obscurantism.

>>>To begin with,
>>>Dr. Cole alleges that the Baha'i Faith was founded in 1863 by

Baha'u'llah.

>>>According to authoritative Baha'i sources, Baha'u'llah made His first >>>declaration of prophethood (to a few individuals) in the year 1863.
>>>However, according to those same sources, the Baha'i Faith did not begin
in >>>1863 but in 1844, and its first Central Figure was not Mirza Husayn 'Ali >>>Nuri Baha'u'llah (1817-1892), but rather, Siyyid 'Ali Muhammad Shirazi
the >>>Bab (1819-1850).

Mr. Terry should go learn Arabic and Persian and read widely in the contemporary mid-nineteenth century primary sources and then come back and nitpick with me about these matters. He is just wrong in almost every particular here.

>>>However, the only source he cites in support of his >>>allegations is fragmentary and anonymous hearsay, and this does make for a >>>credible argument.

The Baha'i administration's archival documentation is not available to researchers for the period after 1960. Historians of the later period therefore must rely on interviews with principals and oral history. I have collected such oral eye-witness accounts for many years. I believe that they are valuable and reliable.

>>>Neither Dr. Robert Stockman nor Mr. Richard Hollinger, perhaps >>>the two best informed historians of the American Baha'i community, has >>>published a detailed analysis of these phenomena.

Well, I hope they will write something about all this. I don't think they will find anything different than I did, which is that a process of mass conversion was started in the field in South Carolina, and was stopped by the NSA.

>>>On the other hand, Baha'u'llah >>>counselled adherents to nurture their families, to serve their secular
and >>>spiritual communities, to be of service to humanity as a whole. How are >>>these admonitions consistent with the isolation alleged by Dr. Cole?

The isolation spoken of had to do with thickness of ties to society. Most Americans belong to multiple organizations in civil society. They are members of a political party and of activist organizations such as Amnesty International or Greenpeace; of a union; and so forth. Many such memberships are denied Baha'is, which leaves them with 'thin' social ties to US society and much more dependent on their Baha'i community and identity. As for service to humanity, I am unaware to discern much US Baha'i activity that could be so characterized. Many Baha'i communities are essentially fundraising-and-proselytizing organizations.

>>>Baha'u'llah insisted that Baha'is not identify themselves with political >>>rivalries, a

Could you please cite for me where Baha'u'llah says this? He doesn't. The ban on belonging to political parties doesn't get unambiguously established until Shoghi Effendi.

>>>that they not attempt to alter the political status quo;

Which is why Baha'u'llah agitated for a move from absolute monarchy to constitutional monarchy in the 19th century Middle East? What a crock.

>>>Dr. Cole alleges that U.S. Baha'is are "anti-liberal"--because they do not >>>reflect what he considers to be a contemporary "liberal" stance.

No, if you would bother to read the books I cite you would see that I am using the word 'liberal' to refer to a general political philosophy that favors parliamentary democracy and open debate in society. It is not a reference to the contemporary pop meaning of liberal. Conservative Baha'is have in common with early 20th century fascists a contempt for parliamentary elections, debate and deliberation, a contempt for the free press, and a generally authoritarian conception of the proper functioning of political authority. This is precisely the opposite of the attitude of Baha'u'llah toward these phenomena.

cheers Juan Cole

Free Web-based e-mail groups -- www.eGroups.com

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: fw Juan Cole : [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 3
Date: Sunday, November 15, 1998 7:45 PM

-----Original Message-----
From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>
Cc: bahai-apologetics@egroups.com <bahai-apologetics@egroups.com>;
talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; bahai-faith@makelist.com
<bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Date: Saturday, November 14, 1998 5:37 AM
Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 3

>>> He alleges that many American adherents >>>believe in "an apocalyptic event or set of events that will radically change >>>American society and lay the foundation for the mass adoption" of the Baha'i
>>>Faith. Dr. Cole offers no objective and credible data to demonstrate how >>>widespread these views are among American believers.

Since Baha'i authorities do not allow the taking of polls among Baha'is, it is impossible to gather such quantitative data. However, belief in the Calamity is quite widespread in my opinion, and I have lived in a number of Baha'i communities and met people from all over the country. It is also reported in such academic writing as Richard Hollinger's edited book on Baha'i Community histories.

>>> However, he >>>has not found that American Baha'is focus upon the disparagement of American >>>institutions and values, but rather that most are oriented towards the >>>affirmation and realization of Baha'i institutions and values.

You've never heard Baha'is condemn the Old World Order???!! We had a former ABM condemn the Bill of Rights in the summer of 1996 on the grounds that it was Old World Order.

>>>Dr. Cole has alleged that many American Baha'is do not believe that the >>>First Amendment freedoms--"Congress shall make no law respecting an >>>establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or >>>abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; of the right of the people
>>>peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for the redress of >>>grievances"--are approved of in the Baha'i Writings, he does not provide any >>>reliable evidence in support of these allegations. Baha'u'llah and His >>>authoritative interpreters have affirmed all of the above human rights,

the

>>>Universal House of Justice has publically supported the Universal >>>Declaration of Human Rights, and Baha'i law guarrantees these freedoms >>>within the Baha'i community as well.

Contemporary Baha'i authorities condemn the separation of religion and state and work toward a Baha'i theocracy; they severely circumscribe freedom of speech and inquiry; they disallow petitions to the Baha'i authorities.

>>>Baha'is believe in equal rights for women;

This is untrue. Baha'i women do not have equal rights with men and cannot serve on the highest Baha'i administrative body.

>>>Paralleling its commitment to the >>>protection of individual human rights, the Baha'i Faith also champions >>>social rights--the rights of humanity as a whole, which include the right to >>>live in peace, to live in a sustainable balance with nature, and to live
in >>>a stable and equitable political and economic system.

This is why the Baha'i leadership is ruining the ecology of Mt. Carmel and Haifa Bay?

>>> Secondly, it is clear, >>>based upon Dr. Cole's papers and recent book as well as this article,
that >>>he opposes theocracy and espouses the separation of religion and state,
and >>>believes that the espousal of such values by certain Baha'is resrepresents
a >>>distortion of the teachings of Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha.

This is true. And . . . ?

Thirdly, by >>>not discussing this subject in a larger context, he invites the reader to >>>fill in the gaps for himself; in view of the recent publicity given to >>>so-called "far right" evangelical Christian and Muslim militants, the reader >>>may be inclined to view those Baha'is who seem to espouse theocratic views
>>>as belonging to the same extremist fringe.

Those rightwing Baha'is who espouse Baha'i theocracy seem to me to be very similar to the right wing of the Southern Baptist Convention (most of whom are also politically quietist but want a Christian theocracy in the US)>

>>>
>>>Dr. Cole compares Baha'is to the followers of the late Ayatollah Khomeini, a >>>comparison which is odious to Baha'is and Iranian Muslims alike. He would >>>have his readers believe that the Baha'i administration, and the Universal
>>>House of Justice in particular are dictatorial in nature, and hence the >>>comparison with the late Ayatollah.

All I know is that the US government allows professors to publish on any subject without prepublication censorship and without threatening to have them shunned. The Universal House of Justice, on the contrary, insists on censorship and uses threats of shunning to coerce consciences and speech.

>>> Furthermore, one of the most cherished Baha'i principles is the >>>"independent investigation of truth" which resembles "American >>>individualism" in some ways: Baha'is insist upon the primacy of the >>>individual's experience rather than upon the over-riding value of the >>>collective consciousness.

Except that when an individual Baha'i's independent investigation of the truth leads him to conclusions, such as those of Michael McKenny, he is summarily dropped from the rolls or threatened with being shunned. Many rightwing Baha'is maintain that the independent investigation of reality must cease when one becomes a Baha'i.

>>>Baha'u'llah makes a distinction between criticism expressed privately to an >>>individual or institution with which one has a disagreement, and public >>>expression of criticism, that is, expression of criticism to any individuals
>>>or institutions which are not directly concerned.

Baha'u'llah never said any such thing!!

Indeed, Baha'is are >>>permitted and even encouraged to question and formally appeal institutional >>>decisions with which they disagree--not just decisions arrived at the local >>>level by LSAs or at the regional level by RBCs, but also decisions made at >>>the national level by NSAs.

In private conversation or a letter to the institution, which may then ignore them. This has the effect of forestalling the formation of a public opinion on an issue and atomizing individuals, making it easy to control or ignore them.

cheers Juan Cole

Free Web-based e-mail groups -- www.eGroups.com

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: fw Juan Cole [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 4
Date: Sunday, November 15, 1998 7:46 PM

-----Original Message-----

From: Juan Cole <jrc@umich.edu>
To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>
Cc: bahai-apologetics@egroups.com <bahai-apologetics@egroups.com>;
talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; bahai-faith@makelist.com
<bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Date: Saturday, November 14, 1998 11:03 AM
Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 4

[Cole reply to Peter Terry, pt. 4].

>>>Public criticism is forbidden by Baha'u'llah for various reasons.

Public criticism is not forbidden by Baha'u'llah, and both he and 'Abdul-Baha engaged in it.

>>>Baha'u'llah has written that backbiting (slander) and gossip are harmful
to >>>the spiritual health of those who speak them, those who hear them, and those
>>>to which they refer.

There is a difference between backbiting/slander and critiquing the status quo in society. The latter is the obligation of all thinking persons.

>>>Baha'u'llah has >>>indicated, as a matter of spiritual principle, that no soul is to be >>>humiliated.

Which is why Baha'is have their administrative rights taken away essentially on political grounds by the NSA (Sobhani, Akhtarekhavari, Langness), which then humiliates them by announcing the fact in the American Baha'i?

>>>He has stated that the confession of sins to another save God >>>is forbidden, inasmuch as this is a humiliating act, and God does not wish >>>any soul to be humiliated.

Then why did the NSA demand that David Langness confess his sins to it?

>>> 'Abdul-Baha counselled Baha'is >>>to say nothing which would sadden another, to avoid hurting other people's >>>feelings at all costs.

Which is why rightwing Baha'is routinely accuse other Baha'is of being covenant breakers.

>>>Public criticism is one of the ingredients of Covenant-breaking, for it >>>challenges the authority of the Prophet, and the obligation of the adherent >>>to follow His ordinances.

This is a vast extension of the meaning of covenant breaking that would not have been recognizable to Baha'is in previous periods of history, and is evidence of a ratcheting of Baha'i culture to the cult-like Far Right.

>>>Baha'u'llah declared Mirza Yahya and his >>>followers Covenant-breakers ("naqazin"). This was not because they did not >>>recognize Him as the prophetic fulfillment promised in the Writings of the >>>Bab and denominated "Him Whom God shall manifest"--for there were other >>>Babis who did not become Baha'is but who were not declared >>>Covenant-breakers. Rather, the Azalis were declared Covenant-breakers >>>because of their implacable opposition to, criticism of and machinations >>>against Baha'u'llah.

And yet Azalis were not shunned.

>>>Dr. Cole alleges that the Baha'i administrative system "denies the need for >>>checks and balances." However, it should be noted that Baha'u'llah and >>>'Abdul-Baha indicated that the Universal House of Justice was assured at >>>all times of infallible divine guidance, and that it would not abrogate a >>>single provision of the Baha'i Scriptures.

So whatever the leaders do is ipso facto correct and there is no external standard of judgment by which their actions could ever be criticized. This sort of thinking is typical of cult members.

>>>Finally, Dr. Cole alleges that the current membership of the NSA has guarded >>>its incumbency in a variety of ways, and that without nominations and >>>campaigning it is a challenge for electors to recognize qualified >>>individuals other than the incumbents. While it is certain that recognizing >>>such prospective members for the NSA has been and continues to be difficult >>>for the American Baha'i electorate, Dr. Cole's allegations are based upon >>>hearsay, and seem to be bent upon undermining the credibility of the NSA >>>rather than discerning the truth.

The American Baha'i community at some point developed a system whereby the NSA nominates candidates to the delegates by various subtle or not so subtle signals, and Baha'i culture is so oriented toward unquestioning obedience that the delegates appear to be quite happy to have the NSA essentially choose those who will fill vacancies on that body. Not only have a number of old-time Baha'is talked about these mechanisms privately, including the practice whereby presence or non-presence on the stage before elections at the National Convention is decisive, but the electoral results point unambiguously to the conclusion that the elections are manipulated. The Nelsons are husband and wife. Dorothy Nelson, elected in 1970, is said to have arranged in behind the scenes ways for Jim to join her on that body in 1971. Bill Davis is Dorothy Nelson's former employee. Juana Conrad is Jim Nelson's former employee. Bob Henderson succeeded his mother, Wilma Ellis, on the NSA, and his mother married NSA member Firuz Kazemzadeh. African-American Alberta Deas was succeeded by African-American Bill Roberts. The Locke family has been filling the 'Native American' seat. That these results could possibly be the result of free and fair national elections is absolutely impossible. The US NSA is riven with cronyism and nepotism, and stands as incontrovertible proof of the corruption of the Baha'i electoral system in the US.

>>> For example, he alleges that >>>"the most widespread approach in the American Baha'i community to scriptural >>>exegesis is literalism, as in fundamentalist Protestantism." Inasmuch as >>>Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha both affirmed that much of scripture is >>>allegorical, symbolic, and spiritual in nature, not capable of being >>>properly understood through a literalistic approach, this characterization >>>of the American Baha'i community seems puzzling indeed. In fact, American
>>>Baha'is study Baha'i scripture (and other scriptures) from a very broad >>>range of perspectives, some academic, some intuitive, some scientific,
some
>>>pragmatic, others mystical.

Yes, but the most wide-spread approach in the US community is scriptural literalism. All you have to do to test this assertion is go on Soc.Religion.Bahai and say you are a Baha'i who believes in Darwinian evolution. You will receive large numbers of replies stating that evolution is wrong because a literal reading of Baha'i scripture says so. Among the 'verbal covenant-breaking' charges launched at Professor John Walbridge by Counselor Stephen Birkland and his masters was that Walbridge denied that Socrates met with the prophets of the children of Israel, contrary to what 'Abdul-Baha said in Secret of Divine Civilization. Not only is literalism the most widespread approach, it is increasingly imposed on pain of shunning.

>>>On the other hand, the only binding, that is, >>>authoritative interpretations of scripture--Baha'i or otherwise--are, >>>according to 'Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi, those found in their own >>>writings and in the works of Baha'u'llah.

In fact, both the counselors and the Universal House of Justice are now de facto claiming the prerogative of engaging in authoritative interpretation of scripture. They simply put some interpretations that they don't like into the category of 'verbal covenant-breaking,' thus in effect anathematizing those views and ensuring that interpretations they favor are the only ones that can be heard. When covenant breaking was only a matter of schism or rebellion, this was not the case. But when you invent a thought crime such as 'making statements contrary to the covenant' then you are asserting the prerogative of authoritative interpretation, which is what the UHJ has done, quite in contradiction to basic Baha'i texts and principles.

>>>According to Dr. Cole, the Baha'i community is rife with informers, with >>>spies, with thought police, and he implicitly compares this to allegedly >>>Islamic norms by noting that this "system of using rank-and-file informers >>>has a venerable history in the Middle East." The present writer is not well >>>enough informed about Middle Eastern history to know whether or not Dr. Cole >>>has slandered one or two religions here.

Haven't slandered anyone. Sultan Abdulhamid II, who had `Abdul-Baha investigated, used to encourage neighbors to report on neighbors in his empire, and enjoyed reading the reports before he went to bed each night. Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlevi (r. 1941-1979) employed an army of secret police informers, who infiltrated classrooms and cultural clubs and reported on the discussions there. Imam Ruhollah Khomeini boasted that whereas the Shah only had a limited number of SAVAK domestic spies, in his regime all Iranians stood ready to report on one another to the state; even children were told to report on their parents; Khomeini said he had 36 million spies (i.e. the whole population of Iran then). A similar commitment to 'reporting' fellow Baha'is exists among very large numbers of American Baha'is.

>>> It is required by law that >>>witnesses report what they suspect to be illegal acts to the police.

So if I criticize President Clinton to a fellow American, it would only be right for that person to call up the FBI and tell them I am a dangerous radical and should be watched?

>>> individual Baha'is may report behavior which appears to >>>break the Baha'i Covenant to one of the branches of Baha'i administration, >>>and this may result in representatives of one of those institutions >>>contacting the individual in question, and seeking to ascertain the facts in >>>the case, or to advise the individual of the possible consequences of his >>>actions.

In other words, my observation in this regard was perfectly correct.

>>> certainly, Dr. Cole has >>>been the subject of many reports to Baha'i institutions, because of his >>>unusual interpretations of Baha'i history and doctrine, and his outspoken >>>public criticism of various Baha'i institutions and regulations. However, >>>the present writer's personal experience and conversations with many other >>>adherents suggest that most Baha'is with whom he is acquainted have never >>>felt that they were "under constant surveillance" by fellow believers.

Obviously, one is not 'reported' if there is nothing to report. However, if Cole were reported on because of idiosyncratic views, then wouldn't we expect everyone with idiosyncratic views to be reported? And what if rightwing Baha'is define everyone else in the community as 'idiosyncratic'? My files are bulging with instances of Baha'is who were 'reported,' by the way; it is very common and no writer I know of in the community has avoided it. (By the way, I was not when I was a Baha'i an outspoken critic.)

>>>CENSORSHIP

>>>

>>>The policy of prepublication review was discussed in the Introduction,

but >>>here Dr. Cole makes some unsupported allegations which call for refutation.
>>>He indicates that "Baha'i authors have been prevented from publishing on the
the >>>controversies of contemporary Baha'i history" and implies that "the history >>>of the community since about 1950 has not been written about in any detail"
>>>because of the mandatory prepublication review of all papers, articles
and >>>books by Baha'i writers. The actual fact is that very few historians have >>>taken up the study of American Baha'i history, and that the two historians
>>>who have done so in recent years, Dr. Robert Stockman and Mr. Richard >>>Hollinger, having begun with study of the early years of the community while >>>in graduate school, have not yet found the requisite time to study the >>>primary sources for the second half of the twentieth century. It is to be >>>hoped that more historians will participate in studying this period in >>>American Baha'i history.

There are lots of potential historians of the American community. You do not mention R. Jackson Armstrong-Ingram, e.g. In fact, privately a number of them have told me that Baha'i censorship has made it impossible for them to publish their work.

cheers Juan Cole

Free Web-based e-mail groups -- www.eGroups.com

From: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: fw Juan Cole [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 5
Date: Sunday, November 15, 1998 7:47 PM

-----Original Message-----
From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Dean Betts <fdbetts@mindspring.com>
Cc: bahai-apologetics@egroups.com <bahai-apologetics@egroups.com>;
talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>; bahai-faith@makelist.com
<bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Date: Saturday, November 14, 1998 11:03 AM
Subject: [bahai-faith] Re: [bahai-apologetics] Cole part 5

[Cole reply to Peter Terry, pt. 5]

>>>As was noted earlier, Baha'u'llah and his successors do not permit
Baha'is
>>>to engage in public criticism of one another, of their government, of the >>>Baha'i institutions, of authoritative statements of Baha'i doctrine.

This is both false and ahistorical.

>>>Cole cites many examples of electronic conversations posted to public >>>forums, and indicates that adherents were subjected to "postpublication >>>censorship" by various "Baha'i officials." What he does not explicitly >>>state, but what is obvious to the reader is that all of the conversations >>>which elicited comment from the "institution of the learned" (that is, >>>Counsellors, Auxiliary Board Members or their Assistants) were public, and >>>all were critical of other adherents, of Baha'i institutions, and/or of >>>authoritative statements of Baha'i doctrine.

This is not true, either. I have gathered up a fair number of instances where email messages sent to a small number of people on a private list were forwarded to the authorities, and as a result of which sanctions were threatened against the author. In several of these cases the author was not critical of the Baha'i institutions, but was simply saying things they did not want to have said. The right of women to be eligible to serve on the universal house of justice is one such hot-button issue that produces heresy investigations. Non-literal scriptural interpretation (e.g. not accepting the Virgin Birth of Christ), and a generally 'liberal' theological outlook appear to be others.

>>> Furthermore, Dr. Cole >>>indicates that "Dialogue" magazine and the "Talisman" list both closed down >>>as a result of active opposition from Baha'i institutions. While neither of >>>these two organs of communication were compelled to cease and desist by any >>>level of Baha'i administration, it is incontestible that both were viewed >>>with considerable concern by the NSA and the Universal House of Justice.

You can't run a magazine like Dialogue in the US Baha'i community when the NSA is hostile to you. The NSA's launching of false allegations against the editors put a chill on the enterprise that essentially closed it, and was intended to. (Otherwise, the NSA could have pleaded with Scholl not to close it down). Falsely accusing the Talisman list-owner and his wife of verbal covenant-breaking was likewise intended to cause him to close the list. You can argue legalistically that these forms of discourse weren't formally ordered closed by the Baha'i authorities. But that would just be apologetics.

>>>The reason for this concern was that "Dialogue" and "Talisman" crossed the >>>line from private--through correct channels and privileged--criticism to >>>public criticism, thereby compromising essential Baha'i principles.

This is false. Dialogue articles were submitted for prepublication censorship to the NSA, and so could not possibly cross the line to public criticism, since their publication could simply be forbidden.

As for Talisman, the Universal House of Justice lied to the members of that list. In May, 1995, that body authorized the continued functioning of the list as legitimate, and characterized such email messages as private correspondence not requiring review. A year later the UHJ comes after posters on the list with false and outrageous accusations that they are verbal covenant breakers. So which is it?

>>> In order to resign from membership in the >>>Baha'i community an individual must publically renounce his recognition of >>>the prophetic station of Baha'u'llah, the validity of his Covenant and the >>>obligatory character of the Baha'i laws and teachings. Anyone who takes >>>such a drastic course of action must assume full responsibility for his >>>behavior. If Dr. Cole is sincere in his renunciation of Baha'i membership, >>>then the present writer will look forward to his transition to a new >>>identity, one not associated with the Baha'i Faith. However, his comments >>>in this article, and his recent book on the Baha'i Faith seem to indicate >>>that Dr. Cole wishes to remain associated with Baha'u'llah, as a protestant >>>and dissident, as a reinterpreter of Baha'i text, doctrine and history.

In other words, unless I write about Baha'u'llah and the Baha'i faith in the way that Peter Terry and his ideological soul-mates like, or unless (better yet), I fall silent, then they will organize a conspiracy to have me and my works shunned.

How would it look if I threatened Peter Terry in this way? 'Unless he stops saying these awful things,' I could say, 'I will throw him off all my lists and contact all my friends and tell them to shun him; I'll see that no one will publish him, and no one will carry his works if they are published.' Of course, I would never try to bully an interlocutor that way. I respect reasoned argument. But rightwing Baha'is do not. They want to hear only the sound of their own voices, and if any other voice is heard, they attempt to strangle it.

>>> All of these dissidents were ultimately unsuccessful at >>>attracting followers, either away from the Covenant of Baha'u'llah or from
>>>the populace at large.

This is the most godawful slander anyone could imagine. Please name even one 'follower' of Cole. I am an Emersonian. I hold for self-reliance. If anyone tries to follow me, I will give them a good kick in the chops. They should get their own goddamn schtick.

>>>CONCLUSION

>>>

>>>In summation, Dr. Cole has made various allegations which, taken together, >>>characterize the American Baha'i community as a cult, and the American >>>Baha'i governing institutions as authoritarian, disingenuous, and >>>un-American.

I haven't characterized the American Baha'i community of any such thing. I characterized Right Wing Baha'is and some elements of the Baha'i governance structure in this way.

>>>He infers that the members of these institutions are routinely >>>depriving American adherents of their basic human rights under the U.S.
>>>Constitution.

Rightwing Baha'i practices of shunning, threats of shunning, prepublication censorship, removal of administrative rights for the wrong email message, public humiliation in the American Baha'i, prohibitions on public critiques of the status quo, and so forth, do deprive adherents of basic human rights as outlined by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

He states that the "N.S.A. maintains the "orthodox" ideology >>>in power and prevents the election to that institution of dissenters through >>>identifying them and ensuring that they do not become visible in the >>>community."

I can give large numbers of examples to back this statement up.

>>>When one considers that there is a very great diversity of >>>perspectives which individual Baha'is bring to the American Baha'i >>>community;

The diversity of perspectives is only allowed among the 'non-prominent,' who are suffered so their pockets can be picked to pay for marble palaces.

>>>when one weighs the notoriety of Dr. Cole and a number of other >>>highly visible dissidents;

I do not understand this argument. What am I notorious for, and why should that affect whether my arguments and evidence are sound? This is just slander and rhetorical fluff.

>>>when one considers that American Baha'is tend to >>>vote for incumbents, and do not have a record of electing "dissenters" to >>>any position of leadership

because the NSA chases out of the faith anyone who seems to be becoming prominent of whom they don't approve, thus rather limiting the delegates' choices.

>>> Inasmuch as the "dissenters" are among the most visible of >>>"believers" in this country, it is nonsensical to suggest that the NSA could >>>ensure that "they do not become visible in the community."

Their administrative rights are removed; Henderson has Janet Rubenstein call up their LSA's and announce that their deepening talks are cancelled; sleazeball counselors are sent to their house to interrogate them and threaten them with shunning; they are blackballed at major Baha'i summer schools. There are lots of ways to prevent visibility so as to ensure unelectability.

>>> Dr. Cole sums up his case, by >>>alleging that these "control mechanisms" discourage "spiritual >>>entrepreneurship and keeps the religion [the Baha'i Faith] from growing in >>>the West." He seems to be convinced that the proliferation of many personal >>>interpretations of Baha'u'llah's teachings would lead to an expansion in >>>membership.

First you say that individual interpretation is fine. Then you see 'proliferation of many personal interpretations' as an evil. This kind of double-think is very common on the Baha'i Right.

If this were the case then surely such an expansion would have >>>occured during the past few years, inasmuch as the expression of personal >>>interpretations has exploded into prominence since the establishment of the >>>Internet.

Baha'i free expression on the internet has been severely curtailed by the expedient of bullying the posters. Go back and see the effervescence on Soc.Religion.Bahai in 1995, and compare it to the pablum posted there nowadays. The great Inquisition of 1996 has been very successful.

>>>the contrary, it seems most likely that this often unbridled >>>evocation of distorted and misguided opinions has led rather to the >>>stagnation or even the shrinkage of the American Baha'i community.

The last time the Baha'i faith expanded numerically in any significant way in the US through conversions was the 1970s. Since then numbers have been stagnant, despite the phoney statistics put out from Wilmette in the desperate hope of giving some other impression. Since the internet only burst on the Baha'i scene as a vehicle for the expression of individual opinion in 1994, it can hardly be blamed for the long-term stagnation that has characterized Mr. Henderson's term in office.

>>>"Spiritual entrepreneurship" within the context of established Baha'i values >>>and institutions is both supported and encouraged, but it would be tantamount >>>to spiritual suicide for Baha'is to operate independently of the Baha'i >>>Covenant.

Terry then quotes Baha'u'llah on liberty in an inaccurate way. I have explained elsewhere that the word liberty was translated by the Arabic al-hurriyyah, which bore connotations both of libertinism and moral license as well as political liberty. In this passage Baha'u'llah is condemning the former meaning, not the latter. He says explicitly that he approves of liberty in certain conditions, by which he means democracy, freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and his other principles. Again, this is a typical Rightwing Baha'i distortion of Baha'u'llah's words.

>>> Regard men as a flock of sheep that need a shepherd for >>> their protection. This, verily, is the truth, the cer-
>>> We approve of liberty in certain circum>>> stances, and refuse to sanction it in others. We, verily, >>> are the All-Knowing.

>>>This is not the sort of freedom that we discuss in mainstream American >>>society, nor in academia for that matter.

Of course it is. Among Baha'u'llah's commandments is that an elected parliament be established and the rights of the people be preserved and due process be ensured. This attempt to use Baha'u'llah to justify arbitrary dictatorship is not only historically flawed, it is disgusting.

cheers Juan Cole

Free Web-based e-mail groups -- www.eGroups.com

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Majnun post

Date: Thursday, February 11, 1999 5:57 PM

It is typical of the Gilbert and Sullivan sort of silliness of high Baha'i officialdom that this little message should have been seen as some deep dark conspiracy. I think it is actually hilarious the way it was taken and is taken by the glaze-eyed, like Maneck.

I was on Majnun. It was a little email list with seven or eight members, most of them Baha'i academics or intellectuals. It was set up at a time when group email was relatively new, so we could discuss things with one another. It was the kernel of what became later talisman@indiana.edu and ultimately H-Bahai (the latter now with a membership moving toward 200). Most of our discussions were about things like Arabic philology, which is evident even in the stray message. For what it is worth, I was personally tepid about making majnun into talisman, and warned that it probably wasn't a good idea, given how many narrow-minded people there were with power in the community.

At one point one of the members was really upset about the prosecution of David Langness for an email message to talisman@indiana.edu. David had his administrative rights removed for differing on a minor historical point with the secretary of the NSA. Moreover, it was clear that Birkland was going to try to use the 'covenant' as a pretext to close talisman@indiana.edu down, and he had already made one feint in that direction. It seemed obvious that the Baha'i administration was at that time unalterably opposed to the existence of an unmoderated email forum not under their control, where views they did not like could be posted.

So this person momentarily lost his head and said he thought someone should organize and that a Manifesto aimed at reform should be published. He also thought that evidence of corruption on the part of some Baha'i officials should be released.

I told this person he was out of his mind. Then the wife of the person who posted below weighed in that this was a very bad idea.

And then the author of this message responded, accidentally sending the post to both majnun and talisman. What did he say?

1. He said that an organization would not be tolerated in the Baha'i community, that this lack of toleration for any Baha'i civil society went back to the time of the Guardian, and that the very attempt would badly damage the Baha'i faith when it backfired, because the intellectuals involved in such an organization would be declared covenant breakers and all intellectuals in the community would be tainted with that brush. I'm not sure why it is bad to say any of these things. Note that other religions permit organizations to exist; look at Roman Catholicism.

2. He pointed out that a manifesto would not work and would in fact simply make things worse. Why is this bad?

3. He opposed any whistle-blowing on corrupt officials, on two grounds. 1) The officials' corruption would sooner or later be its own punishment and 2) any open criticism of such officials would leave the house of justice, which was also unhappy with the situation, no choice but to defend them--in other words criticism would have the opposite of the desired effect. NSA.

4. The poster pointed out that it was unwise to take hasty action in response to the Langness case and also unnecessary. Thus far, talisman@indiana.edu had not been interfered with by the NSA despite the open knowledge that they were very unhappy with its very existence and the 'tone' of some postings. This was viewed as a 'win' situation by this person, not only for talisman@indiana.edu but also for the future of the Baha'i faith. The NSA had made noises about attacking a talisman poster, but we had heard back that they were nervous that Indiana University might take a dim view of their interfering in one of its academic listservs. And, for this poster, the fate of the Baha'i Encyclopedia was still important, and he perceived the NSA to be making a stand that it not be fundamentalized in the way that Farzam Arbab was insisting it be. The poster regrets the language about the NSA eating its horses, which was meant to be a colorful way of saying that one knew they didn't want talisman@indiana.edu to exist, but seemed to feel they could do nothing about it.

I don't actually see what is objectionable about the posting at all, even in a conservative Baha'i context. It might be shocking to conservative Baha'is for its implication that the poster was not on the best of terms with 'the institutions,' but people on the institutions talk like this all the time. A staffer told me about a time an NSA member met with them to discuss a letter from the House that the member didn't like, and slapped on the table, saying "Look what they've done to us now!" It is only the naive in the boondocks who don't know about such inter-institutional frictions.

It may also be shocking to some that the person to whom the posting replied could even suggest organizing and whistle-blowing; though if that person saw real corruption I should think it natural that anyone barnstorming about how best to improve the Baha'i religion might think about both.

In the end, I think the poster who sent out this message was being 'way too naive. In fact, in the Baha'i organization corruption is very seldom punished, because of the horse trading high officials are always doing with one another. Everybody's got something on someone else, and often it is the most morally compromised who are promoted, because their superiors know they can be ruined.

Moreover, of course, the Baha'i institutions did not in fact (and this was already a decision taken by early winter 1996) intend to allow talisman@indiana.edu to continue as it was. They had for a long time controlled all public discourse in the community and had been ratcheting it to the Right, toward scriptural literalism and cult-like conformity. Talisman was intolerable to them. Finally, no one imagined that they would be willing to be so cynical as to use the threat of charges of covenant breaker against professors for their academic email messages!

In the end, the worst possible thing happened, the thing this poster was nobly attempting to prevent. Academics were in fact attacked as covenant breakers, even though they hadn't done anything wrong. And the community was in fact to some extent polarized over this issue, with native anti-intellectualism being reinforced. The reputation of the Baha'i faith in many circles suffered because of the attack on the professors.

And it was all for naught. H-Bahai has replaced Talisman for the academic stuff, talk.religion.bahai for the general schmoozing. (I, incidentally, was the one who put Fred up to promoting talk.religion.bahai, after my discussions with Usenet officials about the censorship policies on srb). Neither list is controlled by the 'institutions'. So they completely failed in their objectives, and just made the faith look bad in the attempt.

At least, the evidence is that they have backed off trying to control discourse in this heavy handed way for the foreseeable future. If I am right about this, it is a wonderful development and augurs very well for the Baha'i faith. I'm sorry about my own faith being destroyed. And I'm sorry that glaze-eyed Inquisitors are continuing the failed Birkland policies of 1996 on talk.religion.bahai, hoping to throw up smokescreens by crying heretic and making the poster the issue rather than allowing substantive conversations. But, well, this is what the Baha'i faith is like for thinking people, so it may as well be public. I hope it can mature and grow.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==-----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Cole's claim, incidentally, that he "was the one who had put" me up to creating talk.religion.bahai is false. I had already taken steps to do so before his suggestion, despite his being characteristically quick to take credit for every liberal development.

Majnun

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Majnun post
Date: Wednesday, February 17, 1999 6:21 PM

Dear Don:

I continue to think that a private message that is accidentally posted more widely is nobody's business among gentlemen and gentlewomen.

I don't know if it will ever be possible to convince you that, yes, majnun was mostly for discussing Arabic and Persian scholarship, and that forays into other things were rare, and that the mis-posted message was unrepresentative (and that the posting to which it came as a reply was absolutely weird and condemned as a non-starter by everyone). I can only say that all this is true.

With regard to the posting you want to talk about, I have already pointed out that far from exhibiting a desire to act in any way contrary to the Baha'i institutions, the author counsels complete inaction with the sole exception of simply keeping the talisman@indiana.edu list going. And the reason for this sentiment is the same reason a lot of people wanted TRB, which is that it is necessary for the flourishing of the Baha'i faith that a public, unmoderated medium of communication be established where everything can be hashed out.

It is true that the author had grievances. He had given a decade of his life to a massive Baha'i Encyclopedia that cost the faith several hundred thousand dollars, and which was at the last moment hijacked by Farzam Arbab and more or less scuttled or ruined. I don't know how you would feel if you worked for 10 years on a book about West African Islam, and then your publisher went through and dumbed it down, introduced inaccuracies, and delayed its publication indefinitely. I'm not sure why it matters that Mr. Arbab managed to get himself elected to the house of justice in 1993, mainly because he had been appointed by his cronies as counselor at the International Teaching Center. Arbab is not a professional editor and knows nothing about making an encyclopedia, and never even bothered to learn Persian! Why shouldn't not only the author of the errant message but all Baha'is be extremely annoyed at him for putting his fingers into something he knows nothing about and ruining it, wasting enormous amounts of money and bullying and insulting the previous devoted Baha'i editors as crass materialist humanists?

Despite his grievances, however, he counseled inaction and steadfastness in the faith. I think this should be a cause for admiration rather than condemnation.

Incidentally, the only person actually named in the errant message had done and said nothing wrong, but because he was young and had made a minor comment, was upbraided. Be annoyed all you like, but it is hilarious (maybe tragicomic) that as a result of his having been mentioned, this young man was vilified in Haifa as "very dangerous" and spied upon by an ABM and had nasty letters written about him to Australia by Robert Henderson, who advised that he be avoided.

Finally, do you really think this sort of silliness is the sort of thing over which a devoted pioneer for the cause of Baha'u'llah who gave his life to the study of the faith should have been so shamelessly bullied and threatened that his heart was broken and he ultimately left the faith? Lives were destroyed over this idiocy. And to what end? The unmoderated lists are more widespread than ever, and the scholarship will still be done, which an attempt was made to stop.

cheers Juan

In article <199902171502.KAA46578@pilot002.cl.msu.edu>,

"Donald Z Osborn" <osborndo@pilot.msu.edu> wrote:

> I suppose the subject of the infamous "inadvertant posting" on the old Talisman > list (already 3 years ago now!) was bound to come up again and the message > itself get reposted on the net.

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====

<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Majnun

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <questioner33@my-deja.com>
Subject: Another Inquiring Mind
Date: Monday, June 28, 1999 1:23 PM

I have been following with interest the recent controversies within the Baha'i Faith. I empathize with those who have asked sincere questions about matters of great personal and social importance, and who have sought to illuminate the roots of the Faith via academic research (which inevitably involves differentiating between hagiography and history, and not taking anything "on faith"), only to be spied upon and rebuked by Baha'i authorities, and threatened with excommunication and social ostracism.

Some twenty-eight years ago, in my late teens, I "declared," and became very active in my local Baha'i community. I devoured as much Baha'i literature as I could, including, of course, the Kitab-i-Iqan. One day I came upon a reference to the covenant, passed from Abraham to Ishmael. But wait a second -- according to the Bible, hadn't it been Isaac, ancestor to the Jewish people, rather than his brother, later sent out into the desert to become the forebear of the Arab people? I checked my Bible and sure enough, I had remembered correctly. At this time in my life I might look at such a discrepancy as a difference that doesn't make much of a difference, the purpose of which might be to highlight the historical "sibling rivalry" between the Jewish and Arab peoples. However, back then it mattered a lot to me. The Covenant, after all, was no small matter; I sought to understand it as well as to support it; and a scriptural discrepancy that pertained to the Covenant was no small discrepancy. I presented my question to senior members of my community, but the best that they could do was to say, "the Baha'i revelation is the most recent revelation, so go with the Baha'i version." I felt that they did not understand the significance that this question had for me, but I did not fault them for it -- I knew more about the Bible than they did, anyway! So I wrote to the NSA a thoughtful and respectful letter. Surely someone in Wilmette must be able to offer a detailed explanation. Several weeks later I received a response. The essence of it was the same as the response I had received from the LSA (only in more high-flown language) -- to paraphrase, "if there is any discrepancy between any scripture and the writings of Baha'u'llah, you should believe the latter, because it is the most recent revelation, and less subject to historical distortion, mistranslation, etc. etc."

In response to an intelligent question, I was given an answer that neither acknowledged the validity of my concern or addressed the substantive questions that I had raised; rather, I was encouraged to _believe_.

Some time later I paid a visit to a large graduate research library. As always, I went straight to the Baha'i shelves. There were all of the books that I had on my own bookshelf, and many more -- including an English-language translation of the Kitab-i-Aqdas! I was quite stunned, as I had been told that none existed. (This was the Miller translation, of course, published in the early '60's.) I flipped through it quickly, then turned my attention to the bottom shelf of books, much of it "covenant-breaker" material. I had been given dire warnings to avoid having anything to do with covenant-breakers -- including reading their literature -- but my inquisitive nature got the better of me. After skimming over a number of titles, I settled on Ruth White's book, _The Questioned Will and Testament of Abdul Baha_, and read it from cover to cover. Regardless of her argument's validity or lack thereof, I was struck by her devotion to Abdul Baha, her sincerity, and her passionate commitment to the independent investigation of truth. It was obvious that the experience of being named a covenant-breaker was an extremely difficult one -- cast out for asking sincere questions, for expressing her conscience, and for attempting to share sincerely held beliefs with those to whom those questions and beliefs might matter the most -- other Baha'is.

The whole shunning bit began to taste very sour to me, as did the assumption that those who asked difficult questions about their religion and its institutions were maliciously and selfishly motivated. I had been attracted to the Faith by its public image of concern for peace, social justice, racial and gender equality, and the independent investigation of truth. However, the ideal of "world unity", to be attained within the framework of a Baha'i theocracy, began to look more and more undesirable when I saw what kind of repression would inevitably be needed to achieve it -- thought police, not a whole lot different from the kind of repression employed by totalitarian regimes.

I began to pull back from my involvement, but not before attending the first Baha'i Youth Conference in Oklahoma City. During the conference, the codification of the Kitab-i-Aqdas was released. I stood there waiting for the boxes to be opened, and bought the first one out on the table. I stayed up all night poring through it. Laws pertaining to the length of men's hair. Laws pertaining to virginity at marriage that applied to women but not to men. Laws, laws, laws -- laws that were probably progressive in the context of nineteenth-century Persia, but that did not seem to present a viable model for social organization in a modern, multicultural society. I had many questions to ask, and the answers I received boiled down to, "these are mysteries that will only be understood in hundreds of years -- you have to deepen your faith."

When I moved, I made no effort to connect with the Baha'i community in my new home. So many years later, when I learned of the Talisman controversy, and read the UHJ's April 7 letter, and Juan Cole's article "The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon", I was dismayed but not terribly surprised.

My purpose in making this post has been to tell some of my own story, and to express my solidarity with those sincere Baha'is who have been alienated from the Baha'i organization because of its repressive tactics that serve to discourage the independent investigation of truth.

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Baha'u'llah the greatest spiritual teacher of the past two centuries
Date: Wednesday, July 07, 1999 3:17 PM

Dear all:

With regard to my statement that Baha'u'llah was the greatest spiritual teacher of the past two centuries, obviously that is a subjective value judgment and a matter of my own personal faith. I did not mean it in a chauvinist way. But on the other hand I would regret political correctness going to the extent of making it impossible for someone simply to state what he or she believes.

But let me try to defend the proposition in a reasoned way, at least to shed light on what leads to this subjective judgment.

First of all, I spoke of the past two centuries because Baha'u'llah was born in 1817. I'm comparing him to his contemporaries and to those who came after him, not to those who came before. This is because the past two centuries are the centuries of modernity, and I'm not sure premodern thinkers are exactly comparable to modern ones. It is a Hegelian argument, I suppose.

For me, personally, it is precisely his synthetic abilities, which some have called derivative, that are the mark of Baha'u'llah's greatness. It is the things he put together into one synoptic gaze: internationalism and globalism; collective security and international peace; a form of early Middle Eastern feminism; concern for the poor and for those against whom prejudices are directed; Illuminationist rationalism and respect for modern science and medicine; Sufi spirituality, chants, meditative techniques, and ideas about the unity of religions; Shi'ite esotericism and cyclical time; simplified Qur'anic law and ritual. The collectivity of his concerns and values seem to me synergistic in the sense that the whole is greater than the parts. Generally speaking, moreover, his spiritual teachings are progressive and compatible with modernity, which is something I find attractive (and which is not apparent to me in Mormonism or Christian Science, e.g.). I think spiritual work done in the framework that he sets out can be extremely rewarding; for me, it is more rewarding than anything else I've tried, and I've tried a lot.

Religion in the past two centuries has often been reactionary. Look at the 19th century syllabus of errors issued by the popes. In their light, Baha'u'llah is quite refreshing and progressive. And I am a rationalist, so I don't appreciate those 'spiritual' teachers who have a magical, miracle-filled view of the world and more especially who discourage people who need a doctor from seeing one.

And Baha'u'llah is congenial to a historian. When Baha'u'llah commissioned Nabil to write his narrative, Nabil filled it with all the miracle stories that the Iranian Babi-Baha'is love so much, and Baha'u'llah rebuked Nabil for it. He wanted a sober, academic-style history. That is why the original of Nabil hasn't been published; Baha'u'llah disapproved of all the abracadabra. That is why it is so ironic that his trustees should be having a fit over the emergence of solid, academic Baha'i historiography that avoids the pitfalls into which Nabil fell, and which looks much more like what Baha'u'llah wanted.

So it is mainly personal preference, I suppose, and the lingering effect of that powerful mystical experience I had when I read the Book of Certitude for the first time, when I was 19. But I also do think there is something more substantial to it; the synergy argument and the compatibility with modernity are the ones I would try to hang my case on.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: censorship on Baha'i Studies
Date: Wednesday, July 28, 1999 12:24 PM

Dear Loni:

I expect not to be discussed on Bahai-St. if I can't post there. A keyword search under "Cole" will show that my name has come up quite a lot in the past 4 months; if I am forced to be "absent" then this is nothing but backbiting. In fact, you have mentioned me there! (I mean by "discussed" that I was discussed in vituperative personal terms; an academic and even-handed discussion of my published work would be unobjectionable. The analogy to Taherzadeh is not useful, since if he wanted to he could reply here.) Attacking me and attributing unsavory motives to me and then preventing me from replying is sort of like tying me up, blindfolding me, and giving me a beating.

And now you are accusing me of "fooling" people without giving me the chance to reply! Many thanks for the lesson in extreme-orthodox "justice." The way people are effectively demonized is, of course, to deny them the opportunity to speak for themselves and represent their own views.

However, I am not such a boor as to post where I'm not wanted, and won't be 'bothering' you again. Note that I was never given any list rules that would explain why that might be (no such indication is on the Web page, and Paul Dodenhof, whose views are broadly similar to mine, has been posting here); and you and Mark have never indicated to me that I would be unwelcome (Susan did, but as you know Susan is often out of control and you can't take what she says all that seriously).

cheers Juan

At 10:01 AM 7/28/99 +0200, you wrote:

>Dear Juan,

>

>You know by now that you have been unsubscribed from the Baha'i Studies >list. We would be grateful if you would stop posting to the list. The >thread you were mentioned on was not a positive one and was stopped before

>or at the same time you started posting.

>

>Sincerely,

>

>Loni Bramson-Lerche

>List Manager

>

X-Sender: ping6566@popost.ping.be (Unverified)
X-Mailer: QUALCOMM Windows Eudora Pro Version 3.0.5 (32)
Date: Wed, 28 Jul 1999 10:23:46 +0200
To: smaneck@stetson.edu
From: Loni Bramson-Lerche <Loni.BramsonLerche@ping.be>

Subject: List Manager Message/Juan Cole
Cc: jrcole@umich.edu

Ditto, this message, Susan. Please send it to the list for me. Loni

Dear All,

I have woken up this beautiful summer morning to find that things are not well on this list. I believe that the thread on infallibility has been stopped. (At least that was the plan. I haven't had time to look at the digest.)

I do know that Juan Cole was briefly subscribed to this list and very quickly unsubscribed. That, of course, cannot stop him from posting. At the same time as this message, I am sending a message to Prof. Cole to request that he stop posting to this list. I have also informed him that the contentious thread has been stopped.

If this is not enough to get things back to normal, then further action will be taken.

Sincerely,

Loni Bramson-Lerche
List Manager

X-Sender: ping6566@popost.ping.be (Unverified)
X-Mailer: QUALCOMM Windows Eudora Pro Version 3.0.5 (32)
Date: Wed, 28 Jul 1999 10:22:47 +0200
To: smaneck@stetson.edu
From: Loni Bramson-Lerche <Loni.BramsonLerche@ping.be> Subject: Re: Cole's Purposes
Cc: jrcole@umich.edu

Dear Susan,

This is the second time this week I cannot send mail to the list. Please post this for me. Loni

Dear Juan,

You know I have feelings of friendship for you. I sincerely hope you will find peace. I am very happy you have been able to refind your faith in Baha'u'llah. However, I believe there is an English saying that goes something like, you can fool some of the people all the time, and all the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time?

You're not fooling me, Juan. Your revision of history is unworthy of you.

Sincerely,

Loni

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Dismissal of Chair of US NSA for Financial Improprieties

Dismissal of Judge James

F. Nelson, Chair of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States, in April, 1999.

April 6, 1999

Delegates to the 1999 Baha'i National Convention

Beloved Friends,

We deeply regret the necessity of informing you that James F. Nelson has been guilty of gross negligence in the performance of his duties as a member of the National Spiritual Assembly and that, although he has expressed his profound regret for the related occurrences, and has effected full restitution of the damage done, he has felt impelled, by his awareness of the high responsibility of the post in which he has been serving, to tender his resignation from the membership of the National Spiritual Assembly, and the National Spiritual Assembly has accepted this resignation.

At this painful moment the National Spiritual Assembly offers James Nelson its loving support and prayers.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHAI'IS OF THE UNITED STATES

[signed]

Robert C. Henderson

Secretary-General

cc: Continental Counselors serving the United States

Commentary

Date: Tue, 13 Apr 1999 09:14:15 -0700

From: Steven Scholl

Subject: Nelson

To: talisman@umich.edu

Here is all I know about the situation.

Jim Nelson was helping an elderly Baha'i in Pasadena with her finances. I believe he had some power to sign checks from her account for paying bills, etc. She told Jim that she wanted her payment to the huquq [the 19% tax on some income to be paid to the Universal House of Justice in Haifa, Israel according to Baha'i law] to be set up as an endowment rather than being a lump sum payment. On her death, Jim placed the huquq funds from her accounts into a new account under his name. This led to protests from the estate's executor and prompted the NSA to go on the war path with claims of wrongdoing. I do not know if the executor of the estate is a Baha'i or not.

Since the huquq funds would be directed to Haifa, one can imagine why [National Spiritual Assembly secretary-general Robert C.] Henderson would be upset by Jim's action. Henderson has been accused in the past of mismanagement of funds, of hijacking contributions earmarked to the World Centre into a special NSA account, skimming off the interest and then at the end of the year sending the principle along to Haifa. But this is purely personal speculation on my part.

This is the only thing I have heard in terms of "wrongdoing" on Nelson's part, whereas Henderson's letter to the delegates refers to "related occurrences" in the plural. As for restitution, I understand that the money never went anywhere and, in the end, the funds were handled according to the wishes of the deceased Baha'i in the way Jim was planning to set up in the first place. So, what does this all indicate? My take is that for years there has been rivalries and factions on the NSA, especially between the West Coast Gang led by the Nelsons (with Bill Davis and Juana Conrad) vs. the Henderson/Kazemzadeh block. I have heard that in their rebuke to Nelson the NSA referred to his "careless" behavior, while in the letter to the delegates they refer to "gross negligence in the performance of duties." My view is that if the NSA was sincere in their concern for Nelson and his spiritual growth, they would have simply accepted his resignation and informed the delegates that after years of service, Judge Nelson has resigned for health or personal reasons. The letter to the delegates seems to me to be a blatant campaign maneuver. It seems aimed at (1) publicly humiliating Jim Nelson and (2) helping guide the delegates in their voting for a candidate from the Henderson/Kazemzadeh Good Old Boys Network rather than from the now suspect Nelson Network.

As someone who has dealt with Henderson and Kazemzadeh in the past and had them use lies and slander in their attacks on my beliefs and behavior, this latest outburst is not at all surprising and fits their modus operandi perfectly. That is to say, the timing and the pure sleaziness of this blatant political maneuvering fits with their history of self-promotion combined with vicious personal attacks against those who might threaten their grip of power over the American Baha'i community.

Having been absent from these Baha'i cultural wars now for several years, I do find it fascinating that since many of us old "heretics" have either left the faith, lost rights, or gone into the grand occultation of self-imposed exile and inactivity, the leadership, at a loss for enemies, seems intent on feeding on each other.

Needless to say, it will be interesting how the delegates respond to this news, whether they will back Henderson and Kazemzadeh by voting in one of their cronies or protest this action by voting in a West coast candidate.

Steve

Date: 4-14-99
To: talisman@umich.edu
From: Juan Cole
Subject: Re: NSA elections

Actually, early twentieth century Baha'is under `Abdul-Baha had perfectly democratic elections, and were instructed to do it that way by `Abdul-Baha. During WW I when there was conflict over whether to support the war effort or adopt a pacifist stance, hawks like Mason Remey organized a campaign for the NSA in 1917 in which they captured it and reversed the previous pacifist policy! Older Baha'is spoke of the times when Republican and Democratic Baha'is wouldn't speak with one another.

The problem with the current situation is not merely that the voting records of the NSA members are completely unknown. It is that the activities and policies of the NSA as a whole are almost completely unknown! What exactly do these people do? What policies have they made? What effect have the policies had? Have they been good for the growth of the community, numerically and spiritually? Without knowing the answer to this question, how can the delegates even begin to vote intelligently? Though, as we have seen, the very rules of the elections leave them with little potential impact.

We know that there were about 48,000 adult Baha'is with good addresses in the US in 1978. There are now about 60,000. In the meantime 12,000 Iranians immigrated. This means that there has been no growth in over twenty years.

None. Of course, hundreds if not a few thousands of people have come in during the past two decades, but enormous numbers of them have gone right back out. Would any CEO who had not increased his earnings a single penny over twenty years be reappointed by the board?

The exclusivistic policies of Mr. Henderson, who is frankly mean-spirited, have contributed enormously to this Great Stagnation. He was the one who cracked down on Dialogue magazine in such a nasty way. He bullied Baha'i travel agents in 1991, for the Lord knows what reward from the corrupt Corporate Travel Consultants. He agitated behind the scenes for a crackdown on talisman@indiana.edu. He has chased travel teachers out of the country, seeing them as an electoral threat should they become successful. I have no idea about the propriety of Jim Nelson's book-keeping practices, but surely for Henderson to publicly smear him after Jim served on the NSA 1971-1999, in circumstances where Nelson cannot even publicly defend himself, is the height of sleaze. Henderson has arranged for himself to live rent free free in a 9-bedroom mansion (having the Bourgeois studio knocked down to build it, against UHJ instructions) with free Baha'i maids and gardeners, and his main business seems to be bullying Baha'is into silence behind the scenes. And I fully acknowledge that he is probably acting rationally given the way the Baha'i system is structured.

So, I think all these things are related: the fact that the Baha'i faith in the US has been going nowhere fast for decades; the fact that the electoral system seems to elect the ambitious and greedy (and paranoid) to the top offices; the fact that even initially upright people are made perpetual incumbents, exposing them to the temptations of absolute power held for decades and corrupting them; the fact that the electoral system provides an incentive for the incumbents to slap down and chase out potential competitors; the fact that it would not be in the incumbents' interest for the faith to expand, become more open, attract a lot of new voters who might rock the boat. Term limits would go a long way toward solving all these problems. In fact, why not have staggered elections for 4-year terms? You could elect 5 members in 2000 and 4 in 2002. People who don't serve as long as Nelson did might not become tempted to act high-handedly. They wouldn't face reelection and so would have no reason to fear being unseated by active young folks. Counselor Fred Schechter, one of the people who falsely accused me, once told a friend of mine that anyone who becomes active in the faith will be attacked (by the faith's officials, it is implied). We hadn't at the time realized that Schechter intended to act on this observation! This is a dysfunctional system, folks. There are ways in which it destroyed Dan Jordan (forcing him to live a lie and to resort to secret trysts), Allen Ward, and now Jim Nelson--not to mention the spiritual harm it has wreaked on the Baby Boom intellectuals who were enticed in with promises of tolerance and justice (!!!). When Glenford Mitchell had become a huge pain in the ass as NSA secretary and was finally elected off it to the UHJ, everyone breathed a big sigh of relief. And when Henderson came in, the word was that he was a good guy, and we were all relieved. And then in a few short years he demonstrated that he was an even bigger pain in the ass than Mitchell had been. Even dumping Henderson wouldn't solve the problem. The system creates the Hendersons and the Nelsons. If anyone cared about the fortunes of the faith as opposed to the size of their marble offices, they would fix the system.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: 'Abdul-Baha on how we should see others
Date: Thursday, May 06, 1999 7:05 PM

I have been doing some thinking as to how so many American Baha'is have come to think of themselves as "fundamentalists" and how, indeed, many of them have begun thinking anyone who does not share that point of view is not really a Baha'i. My guess is that many of them converted to the Baha'i faith from conservative Christian backgrounds, and brought their habitual ways of thinking into the new religion. It has been alleged to me that a third of the white Baha'is are from a fundamentalist or conservative Christian background, and that Jack McCants tends to be their representative on the NSA (he once told a friend of mine that he "missed" being on the NSA, and would have to "go around giving talks to get back on"). Of course, about a third of the U.S. community is African-American; a majority of this group in the general society tends to say in polls that it believes in the inerrancy of scripture. So perhaps 2/3s of the U.S. community are scriptural inerrantists?

On the face of it, it is very strange. The Book of Certitude, for instance, is largely a refutation of a 'fundamentalist' approach to past scriptures, which required that if Jesus said the stars would fall to earth, then by God they would (since stars are suns, they can't "fall to earth." All one would have to do is get close to the earth and it would be vaporized).

Moreover, 'Abdul-Baha's Secret of Divine Civilization takes a Higher Criticism-type approach to early Islamic history. He attacks many shibboleths of pietist Muslim historiography. He praises the exercise of human reason, including with regard to religious thought.

But when many Baha'is consider their own scripture, all of a sudden Higher Criticism is ruled out of court. It is all right to do it to the Christians or Muslims, but our own scriptures and holy figures must be put on an unapproachable pedestal and declared completely infallible in every way.

One problem is that if we use Higher Criticism only for other religions, then we are being hypocrites if we say Baha'is can't apply it to their own scriptures. Another problem is that there are errors in Baha'i scriptures, and so they cannot be "infallible" or "inerrant" in any simplistic sense. For instance, in Gleanings Baha'u'llah says that the language Hebrew got its name because the Children of Israel crossed the Jordan. In Arabic Hebrew is called al-'Ibriyyah, and contains the triliteral root 'a*b*r . The verb 'abara means to "cross over." So Baha'u'llah presents this folk etymology, that Hebrew was named for the "crossing" of the Jordan. Of course, it is a widespread belief that is put forward by many traditional lexicographers.

But it should be obvious that this assertion simply is not true. Languages don't get named for specific actions, anyway. (What do you call what the children of Israel spoke before they crossed the Jordan?) Usually languages are named for peoples. Hebrew probably goes back to Hapiru, semitic-speaking nomads of the second millennium mentioned in the Egyptian chronicles.

There are several such minor errors in Baha'u'llah's writings, which reflect the knowledge prevalent among 19th century Middle Easterners. Empedocles, for instance, was not a contemporary of King David, no matter what the Tablet of Wisdom says.

The problem with adopting a "fundamentalist" stance is that it requires us to try to defend these errors as the truth. And that in turn forces us to set religion above science and to prefer superstition to reason. In other words, we're back to the same old game of persecuting Galileo in the name of religious dogma! Is that really what Baha'u'llah and 'Abdul-Baha brought? Just another dogmatic religion whose adherents won't listen to reason? On the other hand, if we simply say that Revelation is a revelation of Truth with a capital "T", not of minor details about history, science or linguistics, then we can put the anomalies away as trivial. Of course someone writing in the 19th century Middle East reflects the general state of knowledge among his audience! How could he have been understood otherwise?

cheers Juan

In article <372FEFCA.12501FC0@netvigator.com>,
"Brian F. Walker" <bfwkendo@netvigator.com> wrote:
I confess to being a fundamentalist in that I believe > that every word Baha'u'llah wrote was from God, every word He revealed > was from God. If any part of His Revelation is flawed I need to consider > all the Revelation as flawed (because God is not flawed) We need to > reclaim the term "fundamentalist" for faith, and remove the loaded > connotations.
>
> Best regards,
>
> Brian
> --
>
>

> Brian F. Walker
> bfwkendo@netvigator.com
>

--
Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: An apology to Fred

Date: Wednesday, February 10, 1999 11:21 AM

Dear Michael:

In summer of 1996 after I resigned on being threatened with being declared a covenant breaker over my academic posts to a listserv at Indiana University, I did explore the possibility that I had acted too hastily and that perhaps the house of justice should be given a chance to undo the actions of its underlings. This feeling was fueled by a friend of mine who had been in Haifa recently and was in contact with a member of the house, and who assured me that they were sorry about the blow-up and wanted me to reconsider.

I contacted the member of the house of justice, who did make it clear that I'd have to start with a big apology. This would not have been a problem for me. I've made mistakes in my life. I don't mind apologizing for them. However, I was a little mystified why the negotiations began that way, since obviously for things to work out, both sides would have to compromise.

However, at precisely the time I began this dialogue, the house of justice had Birkland send that fascist letter to an academic friend of mine threatening him with being declared a covenant breaker over his academic email posts. I had started the dialogue in hopes I had been wrong about them. But Birkland even openly says he was writing the letter with the direct knowledge of the house of justice (actually, they almost certainly instructed him to write it).

I broke off my negotiations, feeling rather badly used.

In fall, 1996, a friend of mine wrote the house of justice without my permission, asking if and how I could be reinstated. The reply was that I would have to agree to a long list of restrictions. In the meantime a whole slew of evidence of the repressive way the faith is run behind the scenes had come into my hands, and I was hardly interested.

I mean, I'd be glad to be a Baha'i. But not at the price of my personal integrity.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====

<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: censorship
Date: Wednesday, May 27, 1998 10:57 AM

FG's report of censorship practices at SRB mirrors my own experience. The moderators at SRB report directly to a local spiritual assembly and an Auxiliary Board Member about policy, and receive policy directives from counselors occasionally. They fashioned a 'charter' a year and a half ago that Usenet accepted, which forbids posting messages that challenge the 'covenant.' Since most things one could reasonably say about the Baha'i faith in the presence of conservative Baha'is would be branded by them as challenging the covenant, this excludes quite a lot, and accounts for the generally rather low level of discourse on SRB. To be fair, occasionally SRB will let some critical thinking through briefly, and then call a halt to the discussion before it gets to the nitty gritty. It is not a completely censored operation.

SRB is conceived of by the moderators and by the Baha'i institutions as a tool for teaching the faith, not for serious discussion of issues in the community or texts. Why they think that the often silly and illogical and reactionary things that get said there would attract anyone is beyond me, however. Most of my colleagues at the university who have looked in on SRB have recoiled from the fundamentalist and triumphalist tone. (This translates as, they found the Baha'is incredibly stuck up and narrow minded).

What the Baha'is involved in SRB don't realize is that in a pluralist democracy like the U.S., the attractive message for most people is pluralism and liberty. That was the message `Abdul-Baha preached here, which is obvious to anyone who bothers to read Promulgation of Universal Peace. The antiliberal conservatives in control of the institutions of the faith here are peddling, instead, control, conformity, and medieval notions of morality. And that is why there are so few Baha'is in the U.S. The Baha'is are not being true to the essence of their own religion. Instead, they've started talking like fundamentalists. Only a few percent of Americans characterize themselves as fundamentalists. That persuasion is not a growth sector of the population, moreover, since it depends largely on being poorly educated, whereas we are moving to a high-information society. Pitching the Baha'i faith as a form of fundamentalism is in the end a rather stupid strategy.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Bahai Dialogue Magazine
Date: Thursday, May 13, 1999 6:50 PM

Actually, the horse's mouth in this instance is Steve Scholl, whose account of the suppression (that is what it was) of Dialogue magazine by Kazemzadeh and Henderson can be found at:

<https://www.bcca.org/services/srb/archive/970101-970228/0992.html>

I append it below.

This issue wasn't only that "A Modest Proposal" was rejected for publication by the NSA's "review" process. It was that it was made the basis for a set of false charges against the editors of planning to engage in "negative campaigning." Since they submitted the piece for Review, this seems ridiculous. Kazemzadeh stood up at the National Convention in 1988 and delivered one of his typical, long-winded paranoid attacks on the editors. As Scholl notes, anyone who knows anything about Baha'i publishing would know that after that it was very difficult to imagine publishing the magazine any longer. Baha'i publishing requires the NSA's cooperation, and the NSA is in a powerful position to badmouth a publication and so discourage Baha'is from reading it.

The "Modest Proposal" was a set of polite suggestions for improving community functioning. Its title was ironic, drawn from Swift's essay in which he suggested eating Irish babies as the solution to a number of problems. The babes of Dialogue had no idea they were dealing with Aristocratic Lords who would eat them.

cheers

Juan Cole

"The Modest Proposal"

--

Re: Dialogue thread on SRB

White Cloud Press (sscholl@jeffnet.org)
10 Feb 1997 21:06:04 -0700

Dear Friends,

I have been informed of some of the posts on this list re: Dialogue magazine and the article "A Modest Proposal." It seems to me that several key issues remain unclear and, in some instances, the actions taken by the Dialogue editorial board have been misrepresented. Let me attempt to clarify.

1. The article "A Modest Proposal" was a collective effort by a fairly wide group of Baha'is in the Los Angeles area, mostly members of the Dialogue staff but a number of others joined in the consultation process that helped develop the article. The article's primary author was David Langness, who developed an initial draft, presented it to the Dialogue staff and interested friends. This led to a second draft that became the working paper that was submitted to the NSA for review under the full title: "A Modest Proposal: Nine Recommendations for the Revitalization of the American Baha'i Community." We sent this working draft to the NSA even though we realized it was not in final form.

2. At the same time I sent the draft to the NSA for their review, I sent it to seven outside readers to solicit their feedback. To my knowledge none of these individuals were national convention delegates. However, it might be of interest to know who they were. They included Aux. Board members, the head of a permanent Baha'i school, senior NSA staff, two Baha'i scholars, a couple of national committee members. In short, I circulated it to prominent Baha'is who were either on the NSA payroll or close to the NSA--not a bright move if we were planning to take over the NSA! In doing so we sought their feedback to improve the article, to help us make it better and more acceptable to the Baha'i administration and the community at large. Most of the outside reviewers responded positively to the project and offered criticisms to the draft for improving it. None of these prominent and deepened Baha'is contacted me saying they felt we were engaged in any kind of negative criticism or improper action.

3. Once the NSA read the article they reacted in a rather extreme manner. In an attempt to better understand their concerns and to work with them in a spirit of cooperation, we met with two NSA members to go over the article line by line. These NSA members were very open and frank and expressed their concerns and explained how certain wording or specific proposals would be interpreted by the NSA as confrontational, or, in some instances, our initial proposals were, in fact, matters that should be addressed to the Universal House of Justice. We agreed to adopt every one of the suggestions of the NSA members, and Dialogue editor Sidney Morrison was asked to prepare a final draft for the NSA. At this meeting, it was emphasized by the NSA members that they understood the positive spirit and motivations of the Dialogue staff in preparing the article, that the proposals, as they were to be modified based on this consultation, were important and should be circulated within the community. It was even suggested by the NSA members that it is these kinds of ideas that should be circulated to the national convention delegates.

4. Based on this positive meeting, I contacted the Office of the Secretary in Wilmette and suggested that if the revised article met with the approval of the NSA, we would be happy to provide national convention delegates with a copy of the article. I did not expect this to be approved, but in light of the positive response we received from two NSA members, I thought it was a long shot worth asking about.

5. Shortly thereafter I was accused by the NSA of circulating the article to dozens and dozens of delegates in an attempt to engage in "negative electioneering" and to attack the NSA. In fact, to the best of my knowledge only two delegates saw the draft of "A Modest Proposal," and these two were Los Angeles area members of the Dialogue editorial and advisory boards. On hearing this charge, I submitted to the NSA the extent of the circulation of the draft and the cover letter I sent to the outside readers. In my letter to outside readers there was no indication of this being a "dissident manifesto" or any kind of subtle attempt to undermine the authority, or malign the integrity, of the NSA.

6. These documented facts always seems to get lost in the accounts by those who criticize our actions and assume to know our motivations. A proper understanding of the sequence of events is crucial to reaching an accurate assessment of the affair and of the motives of the disputants. It deals with the old Watergate question: what did they know and when did they know it? The NSA was informed very early on that we did not circulate the article to delegates. A full month before they denounced the Dialogue staff at national convention and circulated their accusations of negative electioneering and attempting to sway the delegates, they had all the information from us about who the article had been sent to along with my cover letter to the outside readers. I have requested the NSA or UHJ to provide any evidence of this accusation, to bring forth even one delegate who I sent the article to let alone the "dozens and dozens" of delegates I supposedly contacted according to the NSA. They have yet to respond with any contrary evidence to support their charges.

7. Consequently, I disagree with Susan Maneck when she says things like:

>Apparently

>action was initiated against these Baha'is under the mistaken premise >that they had distributed the article to delegates prior to the >Convention.

While others have their opinions, it is my feeling that the National Spiritual Assembly had to be aware that we were innocent of these charges and I feel that they somehow misled the Universal House of Justice, the convention delegates, and the general community due to what I personally perceive as false accusations.

8. In one post on this list it was noted that Dialogue was never commanded by the Baha'i institutions to cease and desist publication. This is true, but reveals a rather unsophisticated understanding of how Baha'i publishing operates. It seems to me that modus operandi of the NSA re: Dialogue was to make it clear to the American Baha'i community that we were a renegade "dissident" group attempting to subvert the administrative order via our campaign of negative criticisms. This was done by sending out the letter to all Aux. Board members and assistants disparaging our work followed by an open denunciation of the editors by the NSA to the national convention delegates. Furthermore, members of national committees, national center staff, and prominent Baha'is were warned not to have any association with the editors or to write for the magazine. It is my understanding from national center staff that at least some of the Dialogue editors were designated "internal enemies of the faith" and that a blacklist was circulated in high Baha'i circles. In a closed system such as the Baha'i faith, which is a very small community where most information is spread via gossip and backchannel communications, this is the preferred method for marginalizing unwelcome views and those who hold them. There was no need to officially ban the magazine when the magazine could be shut down by more delicate and PR-friendly forms of control. This campaign was, indeed, effective, and we realized that in such a hostile environment it was impossible to carry on with our work. The closing of the magazine was devastating to the staff.

9. I would like to remind the members of this list that Dialogue followed all the established policies and guidelines for Baha'i publishing. Every article dealing with the Baha'i faith was first approved by the NSA's review committee. Prof. Maneck is correct that our work was carefully monitored and scrutinized. I find it unfair for Baha'i institutions to demand that we submit to censorship and then condemn our publishing program as an attack on the integrity of Baha'i institutions for publishing materials that the official review agency approved. You just cannot have it both ways. I am grateful to Prof. Maneck for emphasizing that "A Modest Proposal" was never published and that all the hub-bub was over an article that had been properly submitted for review and was still in the review stages. As I noted in an appeal letter to the Universal House of Justice, if the NSA had honest concerns about the title, the listing of the collective authors names, or any content, all they needed to do was present their concerns to us. If they found the title offensive, we would have changed it. If they did not like a listing of all those involved in the creation of the article as co-authors, we would have dropped the names and run it under "From the Editors" or whatever they suggested.

10. Finally, when I was a Baha'i, I sought in many ways to resolve these issues with the Baha'i institutions, quietly, privately, and in a spirit of openness and reconciliation. But reconciliation requires two parties to come together to seek understanding and healing. Following a meeting in Wilmette in 1987 with the NSA, I expressed my hope that we had put behind us any misgivings regarding each others' motives and that we find a way to work together for the good of the faith. I invited the NSA to suggest a publishing project for Dialogue to work on that would be of assistance to them. I invited every member of the NSA to phone me at any time with any concerns they might have about the magazine. I invited every member of the NSA to contribute an article to the magazine. I suggested that a meeting between the NSA and the Dialogue staff be held at the Bosch School as this would provide an opportunity to spend some relaxed time together in prayer, consultation and fellowship, so that we could come to know each other in a friendly fashion and seek ways to resolve issues and create a sincere love and appreciation for each other. Each and every one of these attempts at reconciliation initiated by me were met with silence.

I trust that these comments are useful in helping those trying to follow this discussion.

With best wishes, Steve Scholl

--

Steven Scholl White Cloud Press PO Box 3400 Ashland, OR 97520
Phone/fax 541-488-6415

-

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan, jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith
at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Baha'i Historian and Distorting History
Date: Saturday, July 10, 1999 2:56 AM

But in fact the Universal House of Justice and its agents *routinely put pressure on Baha'i historians to distort facts, suppress primary sources, and generally act in ways that academic procedures would deem simply dishonest. I felt them myself. Even the text of a primary source like Salmani's My Memories of Baha'u'llah was tampered with at the insistence of the Universal House of Justice, something for which it has never apologized. This would be like the Vatican ordering passages deleted from the Gospel of Mark!

So these are fine sentiments, but they are either bald-faced lies or evidences of hypocrisy.

cheers Juan Cole, Professor, Dept. of History, University of Michigan

In article <7m6n0g$ghr$1@iceman.tac.net>,

"Mesbah Javid" <11111174@3web.net> wrote:

> The fact that the Faith, as the Guardian states,
> "enjoins upon its followers the primary duty of an > unfettered search after truth", should reassure any aspiring > Bahá'í historian that there can be no question of any > requirement to distort history in the so-called "interests" > of the Faith. On the contrary, the combination of profound > faith and freedom of thought is one of the great strengths > of the Bahá'í religion. It does, however, place a great > responsibility upon Bahá'í historians to put forward their > views and conclusions with moderation and due humility.
>
> (obo UHJ, 18 July 1979)
>
>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc@umich.edu/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi`ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/WalbridgeL.htm> Obituary 2002
by Juan Cole

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Baha'i Schools of Thought
Date: Tuesday, February 16, 1999 1:03 AM

Dear Roger:

You are perfectly correct that the house of justice decided as far back as 1995 that it was simply impractical to attempt to control what email lists exist. After the very bad publicity the faith received when trb was voted down the first time (the 'no' votes came in some instances from National Spiritual Assemblies!), the house of justice took the stance that Baha'i institutions should not interfere directly in the establishment of discussion lists.

However, they shifted their strategy from attempting to control the medium (as they do when they demand that print literature be subjected to prepublication censorship) to attempting to control the posters. You don't hear so much about it because even the victims hush it up, but dozens of Baha'is have been pulled aside by ABMs and cautioned for their email messages, and several prominent Baha'i intellectuals have received such horrible threats from Haifa that they have either fallen silent in public cyberspace or have left the faith with broken hearts. In one instance, a couple was targeted and threatened, in part because they were the listowners and attacking them behind the scenes was a deniable way to close down the list. The Baha'i faith is a very small community with relatively few members who are highly educated in the humanities and the social sciences, fields that tend to produce thinkers of a non-fundamentalist bent. These Baha'is, who speak too plainly, are targeted and silenced with threats of shunning. It is therefore possible to intervene surgically to affect the tone and substance of Baha'i cyberspace, opening up spaces like SRB purely for more fundamentalist comment, and ensuring that although TRB exists, no Baha'i intellectual in good standing dares consistently post publicly here in a liberal vein.

As I have said before, however, I think that the bad publicity the Baha'i officials have received as a result of this strategy (which they apparently initially thought could be kept relatively quiet) may have caused them to back off. After all, nothing is now easier than to spread widely on the Net news of religious persecution, and no one who is Wired thinks well of a religious leadership that persecutes over email messages. I am not aware of anyone having been threatened or punished for their email for about a year now, and none of the earlier threats appears to have been followed through on, though the very act of making them broke a number of hearts and destroyed the faith of among the foremost Baha'i thinkers of this generation, including Linda Walbridge.

cheers Juan

In article <36c80af4.38386793@news.newsguy.com>, rreini@wwnet.net wrote:

> On Mon, 15 Feb 1999 04:47:37 GMT, jrcole@umich.edu wrote:

>

> >

> >The UHJ and its agents have attempted since 1996 to erect dogmas to which it > >demands assent, to control the discourse of Baha'is in cyberspace by behind > >the scenes nasty letters and phone calls and threats, and have attempted to > >make the beautiful, tolerant and universalist Baha'i religion into a narrow, > >dogmatic and intolerant sect.

>

> I don't agree with your contention that the House is trying "to > control the discourse of Baha'is in cyberspace." Two years ago, I > wrote to the House asking for some guidance about the 2nd election for > t.r.b. Contained in their response to me (dated Oct. 14, 1997) was > this paragraph:

>

> "In general, the House of Justice has no objection to Baha'is' > participating in public, unmoderated discussions about the Faith, > whether those discussions take place in person or through some form of > electronic communication. The wisdom of participating in particular > discussions, must, of necessity, depend upon circumstances prevailing > at the time. When, through such discussions, the Faith is attacked or > erroneous information about it is disseminated, it may become > necessary for individual Baha'is to actively defend it. In some > circumstances, however, to avoid participating in argumentative > exchanges, attracting attention to enemies of the Faith, or engaging > Covenant-breakers, it will be more appropriate to withdraw from the > discussion. While the institutions of the Faith may, on occasion, > find it necessary to offer the friends guidance related to their > participation in particular discussions, generally this, too, is a > matter left to the individual."

>
> The first sentence is key here: "In general, the House of Justice has > no objection to Baha'is participating in public, unmoderated > discussions about the Faith, whether those discussions take place in > person or through some form of electronic communication." If the > House had thought that participating in open newsgroups like a.r.b and > t.r.b was a bad idea for Baha'is, it could have instructed us not to > participate. It did not.
>
> Roger (rreini@wwnet.net)
> <https://fp-www.wwnet.net/~rreini/>
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Baha'i Historian and Distorting History
Date: Sunday, July 11, 1999 1:38 AM

The Salmani memoirs were set for publication by Kalimat Press in 1982, in both Persian and English; the House had long been apprised of this. Just as the book went to print, Kalimat got this telegram that they had to cease and desist from publishing the Persian, and had to take passages out of the English. Marzieh Gail, the translator, was absolutely furious, and the academic Baha'i who had written the introduction pulled it rather than be part of something dishonest. The deletions in the English text are marked by ellipses (. . .) although apparently the House was annoyed by even this little gesture of honesty on the part of the editors.

But this is only one little incident. The UHJ has routinely suppressed enormous numbers of Baha'i histories and primary texts, which Baha'is have wanted to publish. (They have suppressed almost all the Bab's works and the major Babi chronicles, as well). That is one reason its protestations that Baha'i historians don't have to be dishonest ring hollow. Obviously, a historian who cannot get access to the primary sources because their publication has been forbidden is ipso facto being less thorough than is desirable and is reflecting only one small part of the record (the part that someone has decided can appear).

You will note that although memoirs of Baha'is from the 19th century that have been allowed to appear in Persian are very few, as soon as Adib Taherzadeh got elected to the UHJ suddenly his father's memoirs were published in Germany. But other people's fathers' memoirs can't be published, you see.

The whole system is arbitrary from beginning to end, and its effect, if not intent, is a lamentable lack of historical honesty and forthrightness. Luckily, the advent of the World Wide Web means that the cost of publishing such material is no longer tens of thousands of dollars, but rather a little photocopying and some ftp'ing. So the material will now come out.

cheers

Juan Cole
Professor
History
University of Michigan

In article <931604081.636.0.nnrp-04.c2de8324@news.demon.co.uk>,
"macleod" <macleod@beloved.com> wrote:

>
> Juan Cole wrote in message <7m6qrb$vnv$1@nnrp1.deja.com>...
> >
> >
> > Even the text of a primary source > > like Salmani's My Memories of Baha'u'llah was tampered with at the > > insistence of the Universal House of Justice
>
> That has been mentioned elsewhere but I can't find details anywhere.
Have

> you any more specific information as to what was amended/deleted?

>

>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Baha'i Scriptures and Universal Declaration of Human Rights
Date: Monday, April 26, 1999 8:13 PM

Thanks so much for the kind words, Fred. I hope you will also do some writing, on things like Robert Hayden's spirituality (I know it is far more complex than the biographies allow).

It is true that a subcommittee of the Universal House of Justice composed of Farzam Arbab, Douglas Martin and Ian Semple had the counselors of the International Teaching Center accuse me of 'making statements contrary to the Covenant' in April 1996, just because they did not like my email postings. As a result, I was confused for two and a half years. After all, I had not in my own mind contravened "the Covenant" in any way. I mean, had I claimed to be the 17th Guardian? No! Had I claimed to be able to do more than express my personal and non-authoritative opinion about the meaning of Baha'i scripture? No! Had I made any unreasonable demands on the UHJ? No! At that very time, the UHJ had asked me and I had agreed to help with the retranslation of Some Answered Questions! I had offered them, and they had accepted, my provisional translations of the Tablets. What weird sort of dealings did they have with people, to essentially employ them on the one hand but to horsewhip them on the other? I'm afraid I thought that the only sort of persons went about behind the scenes threatening college professors with being shunned unless they fell silent were wild-eyed cultists, and I'm afraid that is still my opinion of Farzam Arbab, Doug Martin, Ian Semple, Fred Schechter, Monajjem, Stephen Birkland et al. Unfortunately, there are lots of nooks and crannies in the Baha'i administration where cultists can hide out and abuse adherents.

However, I worked my way through things, and found my faith in Baha'u'llah once more, even if I have become convinced by my dealings with them that the Universal House of Justice has in fact been mutilated by the absence of a living Guardian, just as he predicted would happen. But this 'mutilation' can be a good thing, too. I think the reason we don't have a Guardian is because God decided human beings needed to grow up and stand on their own two feet. This maturity of humankind, which Baha'u'llah proclaims when he talks of the "advent of Universal Reason" among "the people," is incompatible with having someone interpret our scriptures for us authoritatively. So, we have been left with a purely legislative body (the UHJ), and everyone is now free to express their conscience and proclaim their views about Baha'i theology and social principles.

Because the UHJ has been, unfortunately, mutilated by the absence of a living Guardian, they have no one, as Shoghi Effendi explicitly predicted, to tell them when they are straying from their proper legislative functions into matters where they have no scriptural or constitutional authority (like the email messages of Baha'i professors or those of Baha'i fiction writers like Michael McKenny). I fear I have concluded that the only force that can in some ways repair the damage of the mutilation, the only prosthesis that can allow the House of Justice to walk normally again, is Baha'i Public Opinion and the consensus of the believers. And that is why I speak out and will continue to speak out every time the Baha'i administration contravenes the Universal Declaration of Human Rights with regard to its own adherents, given the close fit between the ideals of that document and those of Baha'u'llah and the other holy figures.

So, you see, in the end I haven't been 'driven out' of anything. I am a Baha'i, just like any other Baha'i, a believer in Baha'u'llah. Whether others wish to recognize and acknowledge that, and whether they wish to backbite me or listen to others backbite an innocent person, is completely irrelevant to the facts.

cheers Juan

--
Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Bahais, Administration and Juan Cole
Date: Tuesday, May 11, 1999 1:50 AM

As-Salamu `alaykum, ya sadiqi:

I think that sociologically speaking you have to remember that the Baha'i faith is an offshoot of Shi'ite Islam, and in Shi'ism, especially the more esoteric/batini branches, it is not in fact all right just to believe in the Prophet and the Qur'an and the Sunnah. You have to recognize the Imam of the Age, who is the Vicar (vali) of the Prophet, and you must proffer the Imam your unstinting obedience. I think most Isma'ilis, for instance, would find it very difficult to remain in the religion and yet be in conflict with the Imam (whether they are Agha Khanis or Bohras). The founder of Pakistan, Jinnah, was from an Isma'ili background, but converted to 12er Shi'ism, and I think it was because he wasn't on good terms with the Agha Khan of that time. Likewise, even in Twelver Shi'ism today, it is against the law in Iran to question the doctrine of the Guardianship of the Jurisprudent or to challenge the authority of `Ali Khamenei.

Baha'is, likewise, put much less stress on actually following Baha'u'llah's teachings than on immersing their egos in the will of the Vicar of the Prophet, which for them is the Universal House of Justice and to a lesser extent other Baha'i institutions. This Shi'ite emphasis on self-surrender to a living charismatic leader or leaders appeals especially to Americans with a cult-like turn of mind, and for them obedience is what the Baha'i faith is. All that stuff about service to humanity and universal love, etc., means very little to many of them compared with the submission of the individual will to the Institutions (note that the latter are always capitalized) by these people.

So it is not like Sunni Islam where if you don't like the local mosque preacher you tell him to take a flying leap, and pray at home.

In my own case, I was very confused when I saw the Universal House of Justice acting unjustly over and over again, and blundering into areas like academic scholarship or hermeneutics, which are not their sphere of authority. But in the end, I could not deny my belief in Baha'u'llah (things you do when you are 19 tend to stay with you), and I finally understood that it is the lack of a living Guardian that explains why the UHJ occasionally charges flatfooted into something that is none of their business. I also came to believe that this was a problem of the immaturity of the Baha'i institutions, and the way in which the more cultist-like Baha'is have come to dominate some of them, and would be solved through dialogue, consultation and give and take over time. And so I made a private declaration of belief in Baha'u'llah last March. But in order to get to that point, I did have to make at least some peace with the legitimacy of the Imam of the Age.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan, jrc@umich.edu

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

---= Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/> ===
---Share what you know. Learn what you don't.---

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Censorship - Bahai Chairman Steals from Dead Widow
Date: Friday, May 07, 1999 12:37 PM

I do want to dissociate myself from this title heading. In fact, my own complaint is that it doesn't appear to me that there is any evidence that Jim Nelson (a former municipal court judge for Los Angeles) did anything egregiously wrong in this particular instance, and that the executor of the estate has said so, as well. I personally think the Baha'is were owed a more detailed accounting of the incident by the NSA. The way this announcement was made was calculated to signal to the delegates not to reelect Nelson, and because of its vagueness did damage to his reputation beyond, perhaps, what was warranted with regard to this matter. I really wonder if he wasn't made an object lesson by the UHJ--that Baha'i officials are expected to fork over estates willed to huquq (a 19% tax on Baha'is' wealth that goes straight to the Universal House of Justice in Haifa) immediately and without regard to the decedent's wishes for things like putting it in an endowment instead. At the upper levels of the Baha'i administration, obviously, hardball is played and long knives flash in the night. It is hard to think of a "prominent" Baha'i who hasn't been mauled by this stuff.

cheers Juan

In article <3758c3fd.711243571@news.newsguy.com>, kathy@scconsult.com (Kathy Pascoe) wrote:
> On Fri, 7 May 1999 05:58:30 -0400, "Patrick Henry" > <patrick_Henry@bigfoot.com> wrote:
>
> > Dismissal of Judge James F. Nelson, Chair of the National Spiritual > > Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States, in April, 1999.
>
> Did you ask Juan's permission and did he grant it before you added this > to your pantheon of complaints?
> --
> Kathy Pascoe ~ kathy@scconsult.com (at home)
>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: censorship on Baha'i Studies
Date: Thursday, July 29, 1999 11:28 AM

Everyone is welcome on talisman@umich.edu and H-Bahai; two of the Bahai-St. listowners are on the latter and one is on the former. All they have to do is meet the subscriber requirements. I'll let you decide who is being fair and inclusive, and who is being exclusive and bigotted, given that the lists with which I am associated have welcomed persons who in turn exclude me.

In the case of talisman@umich.edu these requirements are that you not inform on fellow posters, not flame them, and not accuse them of contravening the covenant. Anyone willing to abide by those rules is welcome (including Maneck if she will give such pledges and act accordingly), and a very wide range of perspectives is present on the list, including those of persons to the right of many of the Bahai-St. folks.

The point is that it is behavior that determines whether you are on talisman@umich.edu or on H-Bahai (in the latter case, past behavior in the form of getting to graduate school in the social sciences or humanities and acting in an upright way with regard to academic ethics).

In the case of Bahai-St., it is who you are that matters. I am not being excluded from the list because I defended my interpretation of Arabic and Persian terms (from someone who barely knows any Arabic and has never so much as read a 19th century book in the language!). It is because I am viewed as a dissident Baha'i. It is ascriptive, not achieved. And it is therefore a form of bigotry. The statement "Bahai-St. will not allow any 'dissident Baha'is' to belong to the list or post there" is no different in kind from the statement "Bahai-St. will not allow any Jews to belong to the list or post there." It is the exclusion of a whole class of persons on prejudicial grounds, based not on present behavior but upon their membership in a (perceived!) category.

I reiterate that anyone who feels an unfair remark was made about him or her on H-Bahai (or Talisman) would be welcome to respond. But, apparently, I am to be beaten up weekly on Bahai-St. with no opportunity to defend myself there. This is the typical cult-like behavior of the extreme-orthodox party within the Baha'i faith, demonizing people by refusing to allow them a voice or the opportunity to represent themselves to others. The same tactic was used by the National Socialists in Germany against the Jews; Neo-Nazis also have email lists from which persons are excluded because of who they are.

As for my journal articles, I actually suggested to the editor of an academic journal the names of Rob Stockman and Mike McMullen as respondents to my forthcoming piece on the dissolution of the LA assembly. I know that Stockman works for the NSA, but I thought this would be an indirect way of allowing them to reply to my piece, which is critical of them. The editor asked me for respondents. I could have recommended someone more independent. In fact, I also recommended they get a response from Firuz Kazemzadeh, but unfortunately he declined. So I think I have a pretty good track record in seeking to be fair. As for JSSR, it doesn't allow rebuttals; but any Baha'i academic could write a fresh article presenting an alternative view and, if it were a good article, get it published there. That is the way Liberal society works--you allow a diversity of opinions and let the public make up its mind. The extreme-orthodox Baha'is work by suppressing opinions they don't like, being careful what books the Baha'i Publishing Trust distributes, censoring the American Baha'i and World Order, and generally creating a seamless web in which no dissenting voice can be heard. When they can't suppress such a voice, they smear the person speaking, mainly behind the scenes but publicly if they feel it necessary. It is a very sick system.

cheers Juan Cole

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Character Assassination
Date: Saturday, June 26, 1999 6:37 PM

Dear Roger:

First of all, I didn't assassinate anyone's character. I pointed out that Hooper Dunbar was obviously spying on me. In its April 7, 1999, letter, the whole UHJ already admitted to spying on people's email, so this isn't really a revelation, and it can't be character assassination to provide evidence for the truth of their earlier statement.

Second, I pointed out that he was elected to the UHJ from the ITC, and that it seems to me that this is a troubling and growing pattern, since counselors at the ITC have unfair advantage in being able informally to campaign for office with the NSA members who elect them.

Finally, I am sure that Mr. Dunbar showed a great deal of courage and tenacity at his pioneering posts in Latin America. However, he is not alone in that. Many of the people his body has harmed sacrificed a great deal for the Baha'i faith and put themselves in harm's way for it just as he did. Linda Walbridge also showed such courage and tenacity in even more difficult places, like Lebanon and Jordan, and Mr. Dunbar nevertheless is partially responsible for pushing Linda out of the faith by threatening to have her declared a covenant breaker over her talisman@indiana.edu messages supporting women's rights. If he doesn't think that the right thing was done to Linda, he should say so. Otherwise, we are justified in assuming that he supported and supports such intellectual repression. The infamous April 7, 1999, letter also came implicitly over his signature.

Being in the wrong place at the wrong time doesn't make you a good, kind, wise or upright person, Roger.

cheers Juan

In article <7l13kr$iku$1@nnrp1.deja.com>,
rlittle95@my-deja.com wrote:

> Dear Friends

>

> I just read a post here which neatly and methodically assassinates the > character of an individual, as well as the body to which he was elected.

> It demonstrates to me once again that what is important to each one of > us is revealed in what we do and say - our actions.

>

> Many years ago I decided and subsequently volunteered to go pioneering.

> I was asked if I would go to Panama, and in due course flew out of Salt

> Lake City in a snow storm and landed shortly thereafter in Panama City,

> which has to import its snow from Columbia.

>

> I spent two years working out of the agricultural city of David (Dah-> VEED), which lies near Costa Rica. I inherited a feeble Baha'i > community and a sign which said "Baha'i Center", which was attached to > an adobe and tin structure which formerly held something large which > mooded, I think. Two years earlier, during the riots which attended the > transference of the Panamanian government from an elected president to > a military dictator, a large crowd descended upon that very same white-> washed building with the intent to do bodily harm to its American > Baha'i pioneer. The neighbors who lived in the near vicinity of this > Baha'i surrounded his home and defended him from the anti-American > fervor of their countrymen. They risked their lives to save his, not > for money and not because they wanted to be known for aiding a yanqui, > but because they knew he was a Baha'i above and beyond anything else.

>
> This pioneer later went on to South America, leaving behind numerous > stories and legends of his "why not?" approach to obstacles. Everyone > who knew this man liked and respected him. He never turned back, never > decided that he had done enough and now it was time to return to the > soft life, he just kept pushing against the old world order with a > laugh and a prayer, not necessarily in that order.
>
> His name was Hooper Dunbar.
>
> Robert A. Little
>
> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> Share what you know. Learn what you don't.
>

--
Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers
Date: Monday, June 28, 1999 1:12 AM

Roger, you are simply mistaken. The counselors and auxiliary board members and assistants "for protection" routinely keep Baha'i individuals under surveillance. This is not to say that all do, only that many do. My files are bulging with evidence for the systematic and widespread nature of this activity, and Paul Dodenhof, a former assistant to the auxiliary board himself, confirms it.

When I was a young Baha'i, back in the 1970s, an auxiliary board member even asked me to keep an eye on someone.

It is one thing to say that you agree or disagree with this practice. To deny that it occurs is either ostrich-like or frankly dishonest.

cheers Juan

>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: FG <FG@hotmail.com>
Cc: bahai-faith @ makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>; talisman <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: [bahai-faith] Fw: fw Juan Cole: censorship
Date: Wednesday, June 03, 1998 2:58 PM

Dear Miguel:

1) While it is true that both the internet and the Baha'i faith are global in nature, it is also true that a) the vast majority of internet connections are in free, educated and relatively well off societies such as the U.S. and b) the vast majority of literate Baha'is in the world live in the U.S. and Canada. It therefore makes at least a little sense for both the Baha'i faith's administration and for SRB to adopt policies that don't drive off hundreds or thousands of thinking people.

2) I was not arguing against the legitimate laws of the Baha'i religion, which I respect. I was arguing that when the administration gets to the point where they threaten to have university professors declared covenant breakers for running an Indiana University listserv and for making non-fundamentalist postings, then the administration has become not only intellectually bankrupt but also repressive and corrupt in a manner that betrays the basic teachings of the religion's holy figures. And when you betray what you are supposed to be standing for, you guarantee your own stagnation or decline.

Case in point. From May 1, 1997 till May 1, 1998, the gross increase in the number of Baha'is in the U.S. was about 1,500. Subtract withdrawals (formal and informal), deaths, and persons subjected to administrative sanctions, and you probably are pretty close to stagnant. This stagnation is a result of the Baha'i administration not standing for what the religion stands for, of it being overly controlling and overly centralized and exclusivist.

You get invited into the Baha'i faith being assured it believes all religions are one, all humankind is one, that there should be universal peace, love, and harmony, that women and men are equal, and that there should be unity of science and religion.

And then you find out that Baha'is actually are busy shunning other people, are quick to put anyone within the community into the category of 'covenant breaker' who has a different outlook (as Doug Martin did to me beginning in the early 1980s, backbiting me behind the scenes), demand conformity, believe cities are about to be evaporated, believe women should be subordinate to the men on the uhj, believe that all of modern biological science, based on Darwin is wrong because scripture says so, and in general often behave in ways that are intolerant and narrow-minded, chasing people out of the religion, so that it remains tiny. (How many Baha'is are there in Poland, really?)

It is not just a problem of people failing to live up to their scriptural values, as with most religions. It is a problem of people being committed to the diametric opposite of their scriptural values. A child could formulate it. It is a problem of people being mean when they were commanded to be nice. It is a problem of people being narrow and exclusive when they were commanded to be universal and inclusive. And the meanest of all are people like Doug Martin and Farzam Arbab, who now control the levers of power by virtue of having clawed their way on to the House.

cheers Juan

List Archive: <https://www.findmail.com/listsaver/bahai-faith/>

To Subscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-subscribe@makelist.com

To Unsubscribe: e-mail to bahai-faith-unsubscribe@makelist.com

--

Start Your Own Free Mailing List at <https://www.MakeList.com> !

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers
Date: Monday, June 28, 1999 7:45 PM

Dear Saman:

If a letter is written by the NSA to all the delegates to the National Convention, I should think it is a public letter and should be posted to the Web. Do the NSA and the delegates together have secrets from their own electorate? Wouldn't that be scary? Should the President be able to send a letter to all members of Congress that is kept secret from the American people?

As for the bounced messages, it is, of course, entirely possible that Hooper Dunbar just wanted to follow the academic discussion on H-Bahai. He seems to be among the few House members with some intellectual curiosity (I remember discussing the works of the French academic Henry Corbin on Shaykh Ahmad al-Ahsa'i with him once, and he seemed to approve of Corbin and his academic approach to Shaykhism; now that I have gone on to become the major academic authority on Shaykh Ahmad, however, I don't get the sense he has the same interest in my work that he had in Corbin's; go figure. Maybe I should have written in obscure French.)

The only issue with Hooper Dunbar having the H-Bahai messages bounced to him secretly is just that it seems sort of sneaky, that's all. It wasn't a violation of list rules for the messages to be forwarded, since it is an academic list and the posters post precisely for the advancement of scholarly discussion. It is just that if he wanted to read my messages there, he could have openly signed onto the list rather than having an auto-forward arrangement set up for him by one of the other list subscribers.

Also, the infamous April 7 letter of the UHJ, on which Dunbar serves, spent several paragraphs lambasting the academic study of the Baha'i faith by Baha'is, and in fact one such academic (an assistant to the auxiliary board) was so upset about being villainized this way that he has resigned from the Faith. So it seems to me that there are only a few possibilities.

- 1) Dunbar actually approves of the academic study of the Faith by Baha'is, and disagrees with his fellow House members, and insisted on following H-Bahai despite their disapproval.
- 2) Dunbar disapproves of the academic study of the Faith by Baha'is, but just can't help himself from hypocritically sneaking an admiring peak at the analyses of these academics.
- 3) Dunbar is a flaming fundamentalist and deeply disapproves of the academic study of the Faith by Baha'is, and agrees entirely with the April 7 letter of the UHJ, on which he serves, and had the H-Bahai messages bounced to him because he wanted to spy on the list for the purposes of initiating heresy proceedings against Baha'i scholars.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Hooper Dunbar and Austin Powers
Date: Monday, June 28, 1999 7:54 PM

You are being disingenuous. It is precisely because my messages were being bounced to Dunbar that I got the out-of-office memo.

I know by the header which list this bounced message came from. The list logs of that list are closed to non-members, and I know who is subscribed. Dunbar isn't. A few other moderators (whose email addresses are in the header) have also gotten the OOF message.

Dunbar could have applied to become a member, and I would have been glad to admit him. Since he had someone bounce my messages to him in secret, I can only conclude that he wished to read them without my knowing that he was doing so. This in turn seems to me to be a form of spying, regardless of the motives for it.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Houses of Justice
Date: Friday, February 05, 1999 11:06 AM

Dear Michael:

Specialists in the `Abdul-Baha period who have actually read a lot of `Abdul-Baha's letters in the original (unlike those here) note that his vocabulary in referring to various 'institutions' was quite fluid and inconsistent. Sometimes a 'mahfil' or assembly meant a house of justice, sometimes it meant all the believers in a community. At one point he refers to a women's committee as a mahfil-i rawhani, which sounds like an LSA today, but wasn't what he meant. I have been told by one Iranian scholar that `Abdul-Baha referred to the LSA of Tehran as a mahfil-i `umumi or 'general assembly,' the sort of phrase he uses in the 1909 letter to Corinne True about the Chicago assembly, which had the same position in the US as Tehran had in Iran. I admit that it is possible that the 1909 letter referred to the universal house of justice, but it is not a foregone conclusion and the matter needs more contextual study; if that were the reference it would be odd, since Corinne was only corresponding with him about the Chicago situation.

In any case, the reason `Abdul-Baha had given for women not serving on the Chicago LSA in the 1902 letter that Shoghi Effendi mistakenly thought concerned the universal house of justice, was that Baha'u'llah refers to members of such houses of justice as 'rijal' which literally means 'men' but can also mean 'notables' (of any gender). Baha'u'llah demonstrably refers to members of both local houses of justice and the universal house of justice as rijal, and in 1902 `Abdul-Baha felt that this phraseology excluded women from membership in any kind of house of justice. In 1912 he allowed women onto the Chicago LSA, which he repeatedly said was a house of justice in all but name, demonstrating that he completely rethought the basis of his earlier jurisprudential ruling and decided that the phrase 'rijal' was no bar to women's membership in houses of justice. By simple syllogism there is no logical way to avoid the conclusion that this 1912 change of mind is dispositive for women's service on all sorts of house of justice, including the universal house of justice, since the rijal argument thereby fell. Moreover, it is not at all clear that even if `Abdul-Baha did want to exclude women from the UHJ in 1909, that he thought they should be forever excluded.

These are historical issues. They can be addressed by analysis of historical texts. There is no reason for them not to be discussed. Since `Abdul-Baha clearly finally decided that the issue was *not* in fact addressed in Baha'u'llah's own revelation (`ibadat), then this issue clearly falls into the area of leadership (siyasat) which is given to the universal house of justice by Ishraq 8. Given the tangled judicial history, the house of justice would be perfectly within its prerogatives to rule that this is an obscure matter that comes under its jurisdiction and that women can serve on the universal house of justice because of the principle of equality between the sexes and mutatis mutandis (which they admitted in the notes to the Aqdas). They don't have to. But they could. Discussing the historical record is not a challenge to them that needs to be silenced.

cheers Juan

In article <79enn0$4hh@freenet-news.carleton.ca>, bn872@FreeNet.Carleton.CA (McKenny Michael) wrote:

> Corinne True wrote to Abdu'l Baha asking why only men were allowed on > the Chicago House of Justice. This was in the very early years of this > century (1906?). The reply reads something like, "Women may serve on the > teaching committee, this committee and that committee, but..." The Chicago > House of Justice continued to exclude women as ineligible until it was > dissolved in 1912.
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Letter of resignation
Date: Monday, June 28, 1999 1:36 AM

What saddens me is that aside from some sympathetic comments by Mark Foster, no one here seems to want to talk about the very important substantive problems courageously raised by Paul and Lisa Dodenhof in their heartfelt letter. Paul is someone who is an academic student of religion, who has known several religious communities, who accepted Baha'u'llah into his heart and continues to do so. But he and Lisa feel that the statements of the Universal House of Justice, on Baha'i scholars, on academic methodology, on homosexuality and a whole host of other issues, have left them with no spiritual or intellectual space within the community, forcing them out.

We have to ask ourselves, whether the Universal House of Justice is behaving and speaking like `Abdul-Baha, our supreme Exemplar. If it did act and speak like Him, which presumably all Baha'is are supposed to, including the UHJ, then would Paul and Lisa have really felt it necessary to resign from the faith? When `Abdul-Baha wrote Auguste Forel (a man with a lot of problems even though he was a significant scientist, a man involved in scientific racism, an agnostic), did `Abdul-Baha attack him? Did he condemn him? Did he have people spy on him? NO. He tried to show how the Baha'i faith as a live religion was compatible with the life of the mind. He even praised the contributions of scientists who do not believe in God. And yet when the UHJ addresses Baha'i academics, firm believers, moderates like Paul Dodenhof, they do so so harshly as to chase them right out of the faith.

That isn't like `Abdul-Baha. It is just being mean. And that is the whole problem with the Baha'i faith today. It isn't a matter of liberal versus conservative or intellectuals versus non-intellectuals or cultists versus non-cultists, primarily, though those issues are there. It is that a culture of being mean has grown up among Baha'i officials. It bears no relation to the Baha'i faith, and no resemblance to the blessed, gentle and loving life of `Abdul-Baha.

Don't you remember at camp when we were you, we sang, "Look at Me, follow Me, be as I am?" A child could grasp it. But the people who destroyed the Dodenhofs' faith had forgotten that little song, had buried and covered up the example of `Abdul-Baha, and were busy pretending to be mullas and Inquisitors. And that is why they could not retain the loyalty and faith of their own followers.

cheers Juan

>
> Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
> Share what you know. Learn what you don't.
>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: Members of the Universal House of Justice
Date: Wednesday, June 30, 1999 2:33 AM

I think it is certainly true that a number of the members of the Universal House of Justice are wonderful, spiritual people. Some of them have pioneered under difficult circumstances, as Hushmand Fatheazam did in India or Ali Nakhjavani did in Kenya. And for the most part they have admirable values. Look, at the height of the Cold War, when literally tens of thousands of missiles were aimed by each side at the other, at the power and simplicity of their Message on World Peace (1985). In recent times they have been encouraging community development, and support a number of crafts-training centers in India with a distinctly Gandhian overtone. They stand for world peace, for conciliation, for tolerance among the religions, for more rights for women than are common in many societies in the world. I don't know most of them as people, and I doubt they got to be where they are by being unnoticed humble wall flowers, but I'm sure in their own ways most are decent human beings.

But when it comes to a handful of key issues, they have become unreasonable and rigid in a way that is harming the entire Baha'i community. They have decided that academic scholarship undertaken on the Baha'i faith by Baha'i academics is a form of covenant breaking, which just makes them look utterly ridiculous. What, are we to replay Galileo here? They have decided that the Baha'i faith does not after all stand for the unity of science and religion, but only for scriptural inerrancy. Do they think they are Jerry Falwell? They not only don't want to let women serve on the House of Justice, but they don't want to let any Baha'i so much as speculate about whether they ever will. Is this Communist China? They seem to be saying that they think that Baha'is have no human rights with regard to their own institutions, something that would have shocked and saddened 'Abdul-Baha. I guess I can repeat the last question.

And they have been mean to some Baha'is, because they are quite frankly prejudiced against thinking people. Look what they did to Michael McKenny. They summarily expelled him from the Faith. It was barbaric in its lack of due process. This is an anti-intellectualism as ferocious as any we have seen in modern history, and truly frightening. And yes, anti-intellectualism is a Prejudice. It is a way of prejudging people. Those writers, they are prideful; won't be controlled by their betters.

And, moreover, they have so arranged things that there is not so subtle electioneering going on, such that counselors at the International Teaching Centre have a real hope of being elected to the House of Justice. But the House of Justice appoints the counselors to the ITC. So it is a nice little circle, with all sorts of potential for abuse. Note, moreover, that they tend to appoint very conservative whites and Persians. Everyone keeps boasting about the big Indian Baha'i community, but no Indian has been elected to the UHJ or even appointed to the ITC, which is the most likely route to election to the UHJ nowadays. Likewise, no African. No Latin American. No East Asian.

The members are all either ethnic Iranians or British Commonwealth, with the exception of one American. And, of course, they are all men.

If the members of the UHJ were as humble and nice as is being suggested, they could fix the current problems. They could say that they don't much care for academic scholarship, but if Baha'is want to pursue it, that is their business. They could apologize for what they did to people like Linda Walbridge and Steve Scholl and David Langness in 1996 over quite innocent email messages posted to Talisman I. They could say that they can't see a way to legislate women on to the House of Justice, but that the future is unknown and open to further legislative rulings by their successors, and Baha'is are free to speculate as long as they don't have fistfights over it. They could abolish Literature Review (prepublication censorship), which in any case has become a dead letter in the age of cyberspace.

Instead, they write truly awful letters like the one dated April 7, 1999. And I'm sorry, but no dispassionate observer could read that letter and think to himself, "these seem to be nice people." On the other hand, its just a letter. They can write other, better letters in the future. Maybe they will.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion
Date: Saturday, January 30, 1999 5:54 PM

Dear Daniel:

In article <Pine.SGI.4.03.9901301720350.167240-100000@roskilde.mip.ou.dk>, Daniel Grolin <grolin@mip.ou.dk> wrote:

> <Moreover all of its rulings are open to being repealed by later house of > justice so it makes no sense to insist that these rulings are > incontrovertible.>
>
> Quite true. If one perceives that there is something that the House has > not been aware of one should certainly make such concerns known to them.

I don't believe we would consider a society free in which the only recourse someone had, who disagreed with the decision of a body in authority, was to secretly write a private letter to that body discussing the pros and cons of the decision. Let us imagine a non-religious society with that rule, say a post-coup United States. Let us imagine that direct elections were abolished by the putschists, and let us imagine that political parties were also outlawed. Let us imagine that the Electoral College still functioned, but without parties or nominations or campaigning, so that it could elect whomever it pleased president. And let us imagine that the President elected by that Electoral College now forms a Cabinet. And let us imagine that this Cabinet decrees that although there is nothing in U.S. law to support the proposition, henceforward men will be considered the head of the household throughout the United States.

And let us imagine that Gloria Steinem took exception to this decree of the indirectly 'elected' President and his Cabinet. And let us imagine that the Cabinet had passed a law that no newspaper could print any criticism of or dissent from a decree of the Supreme Cabinet. So that the only option open to Gloria was to write a private letter to the President, suggesting that perhaps despite his divine wisdom it was unfair and sexist to make men the head of the household by fiat. Gloria couldn't give public speeches to this effect. She couldn't come on the internet and express this view in her email messages. All she could do was write that letter. And when a perfunctory reply arrived from the Cabinet, she would just have to put her head down and accept it.

I have been criticized for using the word 'totalitarian,' and it is probably a bit strong, but the sort of society I have just described at least has those tendencies. And it is precisely the sort of society the Baha'i Right wishes to erect.

If you want intellectual consistency, explain to me how such a society is in any way consonant with `Abdul-Baha's praise of political and religious liberty!

> <My emphasis. Notice here that `Abdul-Baha is explicitly talking about > two things: the difference between the Baha'i faith and past religions, > and the role of the Baha'i institutions. And what he says is that the > difference between early Christianity and the Baha'i faith is that Baha'i > institutions are not to interfere in the individual expression of > conscience with regard to religious beliefs. In early Christianity you > were persecuted for believing that Jesus was man, not God,>

>
> No this is not what read him as saying. He says there are two things which > this Faith has that ensure, that the disunity that occurred in past > religions will not occur in it. One is the Universal House of Justice > (which ensure that unity under legal litigation) and the other is the > principle that none may interfere in beliefs and conscience (which ensures > unity in dispute over differences in belief).

But then by your own admission `Abdul-Baha is prohibiting the Universal House of Justice from interfering in the expressed beliefs and conscience of ordinary Baha'is. Any other conclusion would contradict the clear text and your own conclusion.

> Splits in Christianity were often due to political agendas. The expulsion > of Nestorius, for example, were undoubtedly due to the power of his > position, which Cyril of Alexandria coveted. The division, is, in other > words, the emergence of two opposing authorities. Regardless of the > reasons put forth, this is in its very essence the nature of religious > division.
>
> The two safe-guards mentioned by 'Abdul-Baha are there to ensure that > this does not happen in the Baha'i Faith.

Daniel, can't you see how self-contradictory you are being? It was precisely the view of the early Christian Councils that Nestorianism and Arianism introduced disunity into the body of Christ and therefore they had to be persecuted and suppressed. Had they not been persecuted they wouldn't have become separate sects, but would have remained tendencies inside early Christianity. It was the persecution and insistence on uniformity of belief and expression that sectarianized them in the first place.

I don't see how your point of view is any different whatsoever from that of early Christian theologians like Augustine of Hippo, who had his theological opponents burned at the stake. You are saying that any view that strikes you as out of the Baha'i mainstream is a "cause of disunity" and its expression is therefore illegitimate. Of course novel ideas cause discussion. Your basic logical error is confusing that healthy discussion with a threat of sectarianism. And I am afraid that most people who take this stance are using the fear of disunity as a cover for a vigorous desire to suppress the novel thinking.

> <Your attempt to constitute some expressions of conscience as > 'speech-acts,' making them into deeds and subject to punishment, does > enormous violence to `Abdul-Baha's way of thinking and departs entirely > from his vision of Baha'i society as one in which individuals are free to > express their views in a way he likened to the freedom of political speech > in the United States.>
>
> The "expressions of conscience" do not constitute what I have termed a > "speech-act". Speech-acts are speech that have the effect of making others > act differently.

One person can't, by merely speaking, make someone else do something. You are blurring very key legal distinctions between speech and behavior that would have the effect of completely undermining the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the U.S. First Amendment.

While the medium is speech the practical effect is > "deeds". The particular speech-acts that I am interested in are those that > 1) claim authority and 2) are opposed to the one existing authority.

The problem is that you equate the statement of a person's conscientious views with a claim to authority. Simply speaking publicly is seen to be a bid for leadership. So, if a Baha'i came on this forum and said, "I believe Baha'is should be permitted to belong to Amnesty International," you would accuse this individual of claiming authority and of contradicting the "one authority." You would see it as an act of sedition for a Baha'i to simply state publicly that he or she thinks it is desirable that Baha'is join an organization that has done so much to save the Iranian Baha'is.

> No matter at what level the case is > such that each member by themselves have no authority. That is to say no > one, no individual, may issue ra'y.

You are misusing the technical term, which means ruling. Obviously, someone with no juridical office cannot issue a ruling. Or if they did, they'd be laughed at. I can't stand in the square and rule that a Baha'i gay marriage is legitimate in Baha'i law, such that my ruling has legal effect. That is the sort of thing that `Abdul-Baha was talking about with regard to the then Baha'i ulama or muballighin. Simply stating a casual opinion is *not* what `Abdul-Baha was talking about.

> These are the issues and the reasons. No one, no individual, is allowed to > create disunity in the Baha'i Faith, by 1) allocating to one self illicit > authority

In other words, individual Baha'is may not state opinions at variance with yours and your leaders. You want to suppress those opinions or persecute those individuals and make them leave the faith. So isn't it you who are claiming authority, to silence people or chase them out? The individual who expressed his or her opinion is not thereby claiming authority, but you can always configure it as so.

>and 2) opposing the established authority, namely the Universal > House of Justice, and its decisions.

> Regards,
>
> Daniel
>
>

"Opposing" the universal house of justice is an ambiguous term. `Abdul-Baha wanted to try to avoid a situation where the legitimacy of the house of justice was challenged, its right to determine Baha'i positive (i.e. implemented) law. Merely to say publicly that a ruling of the house of justice (e.g. forbidding Baha'is to join Amnesty International) needs further discussion is not opposing the house of justice.

However, if the house of justice itself and the rightwing Baha'is interpret such a statement as opposition, and threaten to shun the speaker, all they can succeed in doing is in fact weakening the legitimacy of the house of justice. An institution that over-reaches its authority undermines its authority. And so in the end by attempting to squelch free Baha'i speech, it is the right wing Baha'is who have thwarted `Abdul-Baha's intent. In the process, they have so profoundly perverted his vision of a religious society that nevertheless guarantees liberty of thought and speech as to threaten to discredit the vision altogether, making all `Abdul-Baha's sufferings and work for the faith for naught.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion
Date: Monday, February 01, 1999 9:28 AM

>Dear Juan,

>You wrote:

><I don't believe we would consider a society free ... [snip]>

>Completely, irrelevant.

Daniel, it is not completely irrelevant for us to extrapolate the vision you have of a society and its functioning, for two reasons. First, there are two sorts of proof in the society from which `Abdul-Baha came, `aqli and naqli or proofs of reason and textual/scriptural proofs. A proof from reason was recognized by him as perfectly legitimate, and it is the main way he reasons in Secret of Divine Civilization. If reason can demonstrate that your model of society will produce a situation in which Gloria Steinem cannot write an op-ed piece differing with the decision of the U.S. cabinet, and reason finds such a situation undesirable, then this is a proof in its own right.

"if a scholar has thoroughly mastered a variety of sciences but is not well grounded in logic, his opinions, deductions and conclusions cannot safely be relied upon." SDC 30-31

Second, even with regard to textual proofs, you have to harmonize the whole corpus of `Abdul-Baha's writings. You can't hold fast to one passage and interpret it in such a way as to do violence to the clear meaning of the other passages. This is called the hermeneutical circle. My point in the thought-experiment about the suppression of Gloria Steinem's individual views was precisely that this sort of society does not look like the society envisaged by `Abdul-Baha in Secret of Divine Civilization and A Traveler's Narrative.

"Japan has opened its eyes and adopted the techniques of contemporary progress and civilization, promoting sciences and industries of use to the public, and striving to the utmost of their power and competence until public opinion was focused on reform . . . Observe carefully how education and the arts of civilization bring honor, prosperity, independence and freedom to a government and its people." SDC 111-112.

Note that `Abdul-Baha contrasts Japan and China in this way: that in Japan a public opinion could be freely formed and there were those who strove to influence public opinion toward reform. Obviously, he did not envisage the abolition either of public opinion or of opinion makers, and nor did he think such an abolition would have good results.

"Furthermore, any agency whatever, though it be the instrument of mankind's greatest good, is capable of misuse. Its proper use or abuse depends on the varying degrees of enlightenment, capacity, faith, honesty, devotion and highmindedness of the leaders of public opinion." SDC 16-17

And so he expected there to be independent leaders of public opinion quite beyond the central state. Indeed, in the Japan/China contrast, it was precisely the rigidity of the Chinese state and the lack of a countervailing public opinion, that he was condemning.

"interference in matters of conscience causes stability and firmness [in the one persecuted] and attracts the attention of men's sight and souls; which fact has received experimental proof many times and often." -Traveler's Narrative, 5-6

So, `Abdul-Baha did not approve of interference in matters of conscience, and even thought it was in practical terms counterproductive. Do you really think he wanted the Baha'i authorities to go about interfering in the matters of conscience of individual Baha'is? Do you think he believed such behavior wise?

You wrote:

>The legislative bodies, according to 'Abdul-Baha, are only answerable to their >own conscience, sharing ones considerations with them would therefore be >fruitful, trying to sway popular opinion isn't.

But `Abdul-Baha says:

"In the present writer's view it would be preferable if the election of nonpermanent members of consultative assemblies in sovereign states should be dependent on the will and choice of the people. For elected representatives will on this account be somewhat inclined to exercise justice, lest their reputation suffer and they fall into disfavor with the public." SDC 23-24

That is, the whole point of elective office is that it is less likely to result in despotism, because office holders naturally wish to be reelected and are afraid, if they act despotically, that public opinion will turn against them and they will be turned out of office. But the system of government you envisage, quite unlike that envisaged by `Abdul-Baha, is one in which no public opinion about the performance of office holders may be formed, no criticism may be voiced, and despotism can go completely unpunished. This situation is **manifestly** not what `Abdul-Baha had in mind if we look at the whole corpus of his writings.

>Please carry on as much "healthy discussion" as you wish. Feel free to >think novel thoughts to your hearts content. Feel free to believe that >Baha'u'llah was an out-of-space alien visitor. Feel free to argue it. Just >don't try to impose your belief on anyone else.

And, aside from expressing my views publicly, in what exact way would I be able to impose those views on anyone else? That is, if I simply state my views and even add the disclaimer that they are only mine and have no authority, then that is all right? But that is exactly what I used to do on talisman@indiana.edu, and apparently it wasn't all right.

<<One person can't, by merely speaking, make someone else do something.
<<You are blurring very key legal distinctions between speech and behavior <<that would have the effect of completely undermining the Universal <<Declaration of Human Rights and the U.S. First Amendment.>

>Rubbish. You can make other people do illegal things and be convicted for >it. If you put somebody up to murder, even if it is just by talking, you >can be tried as an accomplice to murder. But neither Human Rights nor US >law are an issue here. We are dealing with a text and neither Human Rights >or US law have any exegetical value in this regard.

The problem is that the level of discussion goes back and forth between simple nonconformity and criminality. And the difference you are eliding is between criminality and nonconformity. Of course, if someone encourages a person to commit a theft or a murder, that is punishable; and if someone slanders another person (defined precisely as knowingly making false public statements about another that have the demonstrable effect of causing real damage to that person's property or substantial damage to the person's reputation) that is also punishable.

But you are saying that you wish to extend criminal law to cover speech that merely advocates change in social policy. If the house of justice rules that abortion is licit when the mother's life is endangered, someone may not advocate, according to you, that abortion be altogether banned. Such advocacy becomes criminal speech just like incitement to murder. And, of course, (no offense) this is what all totalitarian states do. They make speech about policy into criminal speech. Happens everyday in Communist China. How would your society materially differ from that one?

> The claim of authority is a separate act. Some scholars could > make claims on authority by virtue of their education.

You simply misunderstand here the two possible meanings of authority. The first meaning in my dictionary is "1. The right and power to command, enforce law, exact obedience." This is the sort of authority-claim that is objectionable on the part of an unelected individual.

Away down at the bottom of the column is another entry, a lowly 5a.: "An accepted source of expert information, as a book or person." Now, it is not wrong to be an accepted source of expert information. I am acknowledged among some in the U.S. press and government circles as an authority on the Middle East. Perhaps you might so acknowledge me, as well. Since I'm one of four or five academics who have written a whole book about the Baha'i faith, I'm widely acknowledged as an authority on that subject, as well, in this narrow sense of having some scholarly expertise in it. Scholarly "authorities" are different from power authorities. It is the difference between 1 and 5a in the dictionary. It is a different semantic field of the word. The confusion of the two is pernicious. It would lead to it being illegal for someone to have scholarly expertise in a subject, lest he or she become an authority!

Now, scholarly authorities have no actual power to make or enforce laws or to tell people what to do. And nor do their opinions always hold weight. We all know scholarly authorities who are very knowledgeable but who are absolute cranks when it comes to some subjects. Scholars who put forth idiosyncratic theories are checked by other authorities in the field.

`Abdul-Baha did not think there was anything wrong with having experts, and he wanted them to deliberate policy in public. In fact, he suggested they be brought together for that purpose. In the current Baha'i society, expertise is viewed with suspicion and those who have it are most often chased out of the faith.

"In view of the fact that at the present time such fully developed and comprehensively learned individuals are hard to come by, and the government and people are in dire need of order and direction, it is essential to establish a body of scholars the various groups of whose membership would each be expert in one of the aforementioned branches of knowledge. This body should with the greatest energy and vigor deliberate as to all present and future requirements, and bring about equilibrium and order." SDC 36-37

> This of course is only significant in connection with ra'y. For > one to say "I believe Baha'is should be permitted to belong to Amnesty > International," is not ra'y, unless it is advanced as such.

We agree, then. But people have been accused by the Baha'i authorities (in the first sense) of thought crimes precisely for such non-authoritative statements of personal opinion. And does anyone seriously believe that mild-mannered Michael McKenny, a fantasy writer and editor, was claiming authority when he expressed his views on the need for women's equality with men?

<Obviously, someone with no juridical office cannot issue a ruling. Or if they did, they'd be laughed at. I can't stand in the square and rule that a Baha'i gay marriage is legitimate in Baha'i law, such that my ruling has legal effect.>

>Come now. Obviously the days when people made rulings in squares are long >gone. However, you can easily go on the net and make advances of such >legal opinions, and I don't see anyone laughing.

You can't make a ruling on the Net, Daniel. And yes, people would laugh.

>Now I want you to focus on this issue, because it appears to be a key >disagreement in our understanding of the text. You say the passage only >applies to someone in a juridical office. This, however, is nonsensical in >a Baha'i context. No individual holds such an office.

When the passage was written, Baha'is would go to a Baha'i muballigh or learned man for arbitration, and he would in fact give such rulings, which had real legal force in the community. This was the situation `Abdul-Baha was addressing. Nowadays, typically such issues would be settled by the local spiritual assembly, and it is that body that is now under the obligation not to issue idiosyncratic rulings (ra'y) that differ from those of the house of justice.

>Suddenly those men of learning, who had formerly swayed great authority >found themselves bound by decisions of people who often had no legal >education, and could not even read Arabic.

Exactly, and that is fine. But when those who could not read Arabic begin telling scholars what they may or may not say in the way of non-authoritative individual opinion, and whether Baha'i metaphysics has a background in Neoplatonism, and whether Socrates had tea and crumpets with the prophet Daniel, then you have a tyranny of the majority and serious human rights abuses. And that is the sort of thing that is going on.

Ultimately, the real problem is that you do want to criminalize some types of speech. And the exact "speech-act" that might shade over into criminality is vaguely defined in your schema. Thus, anyone who states an opinion publicly could be suddenly charged with having committed criminal speech if anyone in authority desired to do so, and that person would have no recourse but to appeal to the very persons who had accused him!

My uncle fought at the Battle of the Bulge so that the SS couldn't do to people what you wish to allow the Baha'i authorities to do to people--charge them with criminal speech because they dared differ from official policy. I don't think you will find most educated people willing to put themselves into your hands or those of your leaders with assurances that they will be very just in their determination of whether our speech is criminal or not. I'm here to tell you that the system has no justice in it whatsoever.

cheers, Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: ra'y as idiosyncratic legal opinion
Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 11:35 AM

Dear Daniel:

The problem is that you are ignoring other, equally salient statements of `Abdul-Baha that guarantee the individual the right freely to express his or her conscience in polite public speech. There can be no such right, of course, of the individual cannot in fact do so on any issue where the house of justice has made a ruling, since the house of justice rules on a very large number of issues. Moreover all of its rulings are open to being repealed by later house of justice so it makes no sense to insist that these rulings are incontrovertible.

Let's look at Mahmoud's Diary:

"Palo Alto, California, 9 October 1912: Before `Abdu'l-Baha left Palo Alto, a group again had the honor of gathering in the most holy court. Among his blessed utterances was an explanation of religious conflicts, especially those of the Christians. "Some said Christ was God, and some said he was the Word, while others called him a prophet. Because of these differences, conflicts arose among them, such that in the community there was enmity instead of spirituality, and estrangement rather than unity. But Baha'u'llah has closed the door on such differences. By arranging for interpretation to be carried out by an authoritative Interpreter of the Book, by establishing the Universal House of Justice--or in other words the Parliament of the [Baha'i] community--and by commanding that there be no interference in beliefs or conscience, He blocked such breaches from occurring. He even said that if two persons discussing some matter develop a dispute, such that it leads to a polarization, both are wrong and discredited." (Mahmúd Zarqání, Kitáb-i Badá'i` al-Athár, 2 vols. (Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1982), 1:294.)

My emphasis. Notice here that `Abdul-Baha is explicitly talking about two things: the difference between the Baha'i faith and past religions, and the role of the Baha'i institutions. And what he says is that the difference between early Christianity and the Baha'i faith is that Baha'i institutions are not to interfere in the individual expression of conscience with regard to religious beliefs. In early Christianity you were persecuted for believing that Jesus was man, not God, e.g. Now, when Counselor Stephen Birkland came after Steve Scholl and others, condemning their individual theologies, he broke this covenant of `Abdul-Baha and profoundly overstepped the bounds of his authority. When the UHJ sends such individuals out to grill Baha'is about referring to Baha'u'llah as a historical human being rather than as divine (which they have done), they are breaking this covenant of `Abdul-Baha. They are in fact acting exactly the way the early Christian authorities acted, and they are making a liar out of the Master.

Let's look at another proof text:

"In the religion of God there is freedom of thought, for no one can rule over the [individual's] conscience save God. But [freedom of thought] exists only to the extent that it is not expressed in terms that depart from politeness. In the religion of God there is no freedom of deeds. No one can transgress the divine law, even if in so doing he harms no one. For by the divine law is intended the training of oneself and others. For to God, harming oneself or harming others are the same, and both are reprehensible. In hearts there must be the fear of God, and human beings must not commit blameworthy deeds. Therefore, the freedom of deeds that exists in civil law does not exist in religion. As for freedom of thought, it must not transgress the bounds of politeness. And deeds are also linked to fear of God and the divine good-pleasure." `Abdul-Baha in `Abdu'l-Hamid Ishtarq-Khavarí, ed., Má'idih-yi Asmání, 9 vols. (Tehran: Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 1973) 5:17-18.

Again, here the distinction is explicit. Only deeds can be punished by the Baha'i institutions, not the free expression of one's conscientiously held beliefs. Your attempt to constitute some expressions of conscience as 'speech-acts,' making them into deeds and subject to punishment, does enormous violence to `Abdul-Baha's way of thinking and departs entirely from his vision of Baha'i society as one in which individuals are free to express their views in a way he likened to the freedom of political speech in the United States.

And that is why `Abdul-Baha was so clearly speaking of ra'y in the technical sense of making a practical idiosyncratic legal ruling when he said that no one (i.e. no Baha'i jurisprudent, the only ones in a position to exercise ra'y) may issue a ra'y that contradicts the rulings of the house of justice.

American Baha'is come from a Christian culture that had been dominated by questions of dogma. For most Americans, what church you belong to determines what creed you subscribe to. The Catholic church still scrutinizes theologians for their adherence to Vatican dogma. But Islam for the most part has been a religion centered on orthopraxis (right practice), not orthodoxy (right belief). The important thing has been not so much what you believed but how you practiced Islam in law ritual and daily life. `Abdul-Baha viewed the Baha'i faith also as orthopraxis but not necessarily orthodox. And that is why the provision of the Will and Testament concerning ra'y or idiosyncratic legal rulings applies primarily to officers of the religion, since they are the only ones in a position practically to implement behavior contrary to the legal rulings of the house of justice.

Individual Baha'is with no official authority, in `Abdul-Baha's view, are free to express their conscience in public as they please, even if it appears to contradict mainstream Baha'i views, as long as they do so politely, and their views are simply none of the business of the Baha'i authorities (and certainly not of authorities that `Abdul-Baha never even mentioned, like 'counselors') `Abdul-Baha was, for instance, fully aware of the heterodox beliefs of many early American Baha'is, and yet he never threatened or punished any of them, though he did attempt gently guide them. In fact, in A Traveler's Narrative, he had early on acknowledged that threatening and bullying people over their beliefs only makes them all the more recalcitrant. Since he is the Exemplar, it is a shame that more Baha'i authorities do not pay attention to his approach.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Religions unified this century
Date: Friday, May 07, 1999 5:30 PM

Dear Paul:

To be fair to `Abdul-Baha, I don't think the words he used meant "century" in the Western sense. The translations are often not technical, and the Baha'is were often literal-minded, which is a deadly combination. The word often used that early translators rendered as "century" is `as.r, which just means "age" or "era." Even the word qarn, which in Modern Standard Arabic approximates more closely to the Western conception of "century" had a much looser sense in premodern Arabic. It just meant "age," and was a synonym of `as.r. This sense survives in the phrase al-quru:n al-wust.a, which means "Middle Ages" (it doesn't mean "middle centuries" though it uses the plural of qarn). Remember that `Abdul-Baha was educated in Baghdad in the 1850s and 1860s before most of the neologisms that express Western concepts were even invented, and his Arabic has a classical tinge.

I've never seen a text in Persian in which `Abdul-Baha can be read to have predicted anything explicit about something happening within a hundred years. The closest I know in English is some Canadian newspaper interview of 1912, but the Lord knows if the translators and the journalist recorded his views accurately.

I know that there is a danger here of letting the fundie Baha'is off the hook. But what's true is true. `Abdul-Baha's phrases were far more ambiguous than the translation "century" would imply.

As for the unity of the religions and a Baha'i theocratic superstate, `Abdul-Baha did not mean what you suggest by the former and he openly opposed the latter (see his Treatise on Leadership, up on my Web site, which forbids religious organizations from so much as proffering their opinion without being asked to by the civil state). By the "unity" of the religions, `Abdul-Baha simply meant that all members of all religions would adopt a pluralist stance and be willing to admit that each of them was in some sense true. He did not mean that everyone had to become a Baha'i, or would do so. `Abdul-Baha saw the Baha'i faith as a vehicle for inspiring all believers with pluralist theologies, even if within their own traditions.

cheers Juan

In article <37332f10.0@vlnsvr>, pjohnson@vlnsvr.vsla.edu (K. Paul Johnson) wrote:

> The fifth candle is the unity of nations--a unity which is this > century will be securely established, causing all the peoples of > the world to regard themselves as citizens of one common > fatherland. (Selections, p. 32)

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan, jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>
Subject: Re: Resignation
Date: Saturday, May 08, 1999 3:06 AM

Dear Brian:

You wrote:

In article <3733B680.92A83913@netvigator.com>,
"Brian F. Walker" <bfwkendo@netvigator.com> wrote:
> You have problems > with a closed media within the Baha'i faith, and press the need for > openness in research and publication.

This is true. I believe that the Baha'i faith has been woefully stunted by the repressive policies of Baha'i administrators, and believe that if this repression could be lifted, the faith would have the opportunity genuinely to grow and become more influential. (Rather than our simply publishing ever-growing and completely phoney membership statistics that are obviously inflated).

>I accept this need absolutely in > the case of a secular government (Oliver North, Watergate etc) as I > absolutely mistrust any politician.

I am afraid that my observation of the Baha'i power elite during the past 25 years has convinced me that most of them are "politicians" in precisely the sense that you use the term. They subtly "run" for office. They seek to rise in the organization. They repress for the purpose of keeping their jobs. And they at least sometimes appropriate the organization's resources for their personal use. Therefore, you need a free press to keep your eye on them in precisely the same way you do with regard to secular politicians. A long-serving LSA member in Phoenix recently stole $70,000 from the fund, and this was only discovered when another LSA member finally reported on her. Wouldn't it have been better to have more vigilance earlier from the whole community?

>My concern is that we deal then with > the Baha'i institutions in exactly the same manner as with a western > government.

Assuming that every Baha'i administrator is an angel would be a tragic miscalculation. The Baha'i faith is a small and little-known movement, and is not closely watched by the rest of society. Its administration vaunts itself as divinely guided and above all criticism. Its administration is therefore the perfect place for persons of a cult-like turn of mind to hide out, and from which to abuse believers either psychologically or materially. Many Baha'i administrators, of course, are honest, nurturing, upright persons. But they need not fear, then, a free Baha'i press.

> I mean, let us assume that Baha'u'llah is from God, and that what He has > created is created by God. If that is so, then the UHJ that Baha'u'llah > created is what we see today, because it was the Will of God.

These propositions are full of logical fallacies. Baha'u'llah was from God, but he did not create Douglas Martin or Robert C. Henderson. They claim to be his followers. They may or may not really be his followers. I'm not ready to blame Baha'u'llah for any mistakes they may make. Are you? Baha'u'llah did create the institution of the Universal House of Justice. But he never said it was infallible. Moreover, he strictly forbade it from interfering matters like individuals' personal theology, which would fall under `ibadat in Ishraq 8. Shoghi Effendi also points out that the UHJ is not to attempt to interpret scripture authoritatively.

So, let us look at this logically. There is no Guardian. The guardianship was the sole institution authorized to interpret scripture. So, when a national spiritual assembly demands the right to vet what you want to publish about the Baha'i faith, on what basis is it doing so? If it says your interpretation is incorrect, is it not illegitimately claiming the right to interpret scripture authoritatively? And to whom could you appeal, since no body has that right at present? You can't blame 'literature review' on Baha'u'llah. He did not create it and never mentioned it. And while `Abdul-Baha or Shoghi Effendi, as authorized Interpreters, were within their rights to devolve some of that interpretive authority onto NSAs in their lifetimes, they were secure in the knowledge that an appeal would come to them, i.e., to a person with standing.

(Otherwise

> we must say that the Baha'i faith, which Baha'u'llah promised us, has > failed, and therefore God has failed.) Let us assume this anyway.

All or nothing arguments are always a form of logical fallacy. It may be that the Baha'i faith has failed to mature as quickly as Baha'u'llah would have liked. That wouldn't be his fault, would it? It would be ours. Nor is an overly slow pace of development a complete failure. It is an indication that the pace should pick up.

> Now look at the fate of previous religions, which were torn apart not by > the teachings of the Messengers of God, but by the blindness of mortals > who thought they knew better what was intended by the Messenger.

In other words, by priests and popes and ayatollahs--the officials of the religion. And, of course, the equivalent in the Baha'i faith are counselors and the Universal House of Justice. Catholics believe that the popes are infallible, even though many of them committed great crimes. Baha'is believe that the UHJ is infallible, even though it has demonstrably acted at times in ways that contravene Baha'u'llah's basic principles. This doesn't mean we should abandon all hope in it. It does mean we should work for ever greater implementation of Baha'u'llah's principles of tolerance and justice.

> Proposition:

> Is it not therefore conceivable that the UHJ is in fact protecting the > faith from the fate of all past Dispensations, and that efforts to > undermine the UHJ in this respect are in fact working against God?

The UHJ has managed to bring in 2,000 Frenchmen into the Baha'i faith, a similar number of Germans, a few hundred Spaniards and Portuguese and Dutch. Partially because of its policies the real number of Western Baha'is in the US has been stagnant for 20 years. If it were having a really great success in developed countries, you could say that one shouldn't tinker with a winning formula. But with this kind of record, it seems to me it is time for someone to point out what isn't working.

> I do not say that this is so, I simply ask whether the proposition is > possible. If so, then then it bears close examination. If not, then it > brings into doubt the validity of Baha'u'llah's Dispensation.

I think a concern with schism is a non-trivial issue. But when it gets to the point where people are looking for covenant breakers under the bed or when major academics like anthropologist Linda Walbridge are being called up late at night by counselors at the behest of the UHJ and threatened with being shunned for their email messages, then you've taken this concern too far. In fact, the best hope for unity is a big tent. If you make room for Baha'i liberals and for freedom of expression, you can hope to keep the movement united in its diversity. If you go about alienating Baha'is of a particular stripe, you in fact lose their respect and loyalty. Because all of us liberals are loyal to the principle of unity and abhor schism, nothing bad has happened. But it could be only because Baha'i liberals are sincere and are bewildered at being persecuted by their own institutions.

cheers Juan

--
Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan, jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==-----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Burl Barer <burlb@bmi.net>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: shunning and the law
Date: Friday, June 05, 1998 2:23 AM

Burl:

Have a good and safe trip, Burl, and godspeed.

As for me, the time is rather past for tact. In 1982 I was a young, sincere, devoted Baha'i graduate student at UCLA. I had become a Baha'i ten years earlier, and had immediately begun learning Arabic in order to read the writings of my beloved in the original. I had pioneered in Lebanon during the 5 year plan, and the behest of the Universal House of Justice, and tried my best to stay there to fulfill the plan goal even though the civil war had broken out. In 1982 I was doing a degree in Islamics at UCLA in order better to understand the background of the faith, and was planning to do my research in India, in part because I knew my stay there would also allow me to do some travel teaching (which I did end up doing among villagers in Bengal and elsewhere). In 1981 at ABS's request I had made time to write that essay on the 'Concept of Manifestation' for them.

In 1982 Doug Martin pulled aside John Walbridge and told him, "Juan Cole is a covenant breaker." He backbit me. He lied about me. He launched the gravest of accusations against me without the least authority to do so. I was still in my twenties, stars in my eyes, worshipful of the Baha'i faith and its administration. I had no idea such things went on routinely behind the scenes. He may as well have reached into my chest and pulled out my heart, bloody and still beating. Remember that this is 1982. No Dialogue, no Talisman. I hadn't ever broken a Baha'i law, or shown the slightest disrespect or disobedience to a Baha'i institution. I had never caused any trouble in any community to which I belonged. I hadn't even so much as met Doug Martin. And when Martin managed, after years of subtle campaigning, to get himself elected to the House in 1993, he had within 3 years found a means of having me at last formally charged with contravening the covenant. And you know what my real sin was? That he disagreed with my point of view. This in a leader of a religion that is supposed to preach love and tolerance and the unity of the peoples of the world. He couldn't even tolerate another Baha'i with a different point of view.

So, I have rather lost my sense of tact in regard to some people, and I'd like to see an apology before I even think about regaining it. `Abdul-Baha was right that one shouldn't put one's faith in other human beings, and also that we human beings need to pull together despite our differences. But that lays responsibilities on religious leaders not to gossip and backbite and create division with false charges and bullying. And no amount of exhortation to good will is going to produce harmony if a religion's leaders consistently mistreat their followers.

cheers Juan

>so my server doesn't get clogged by >the plethora of brilliant, tactful, and tasteful posts flowing to Talisman?
>If so, thanks.
>
>Your tactful friend (for real)

>
>Burl

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi'ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/WalbridgeL.htm> Obituary 2002
by Juan Cole

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu> Subject: Re: Some thoughts Date: Tuesday, February 02, 1999 12:10 AM thanks for saying this, Matthew.

Actually, the tally goes this way:

Denis MacEoin was leaned on or threatened in some way in 1979 or so by two members of the UHJ and had some sort of conflict with Abu'l-Qasim Fayzi, as a result of all of which he felt forced out of the Baha'i faith. He was the first Western Baha'i to do a Middle East studies Ph.D. at a major university (Cambridge), with a dissertation on some aspect of the Faith.

Those academics on Talisman who were threatened with being shunned included Dr. Professor Linda Walbridge, an authority on Shi'ite Islam and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, Steven Scholl, who did graduate work in Islamics at McGill and is now an important publisher of books on spirituality; an M.Phil. in African history from UCLA whom I will not name; another prominent Middle East studies specialist at a major university; and myself. A prominent specialist in the Baha'i faith in South Asia resigned in disgust at this pogrom. For it to be suggested that no academic has been thrown out is so close to a falsehood as to pass for one.

The one individual who resigned after 2 years, spent that 2 years being relatively silent on email, and certainly did feel the pressure during all that time, and I presume finally decided that being on permanent heresy trial was not a way to spend a life. Nor will you find any academic worth his or her salt who will put up with this sort of thing.

There are not really large numbers of college professors in the humanities and social sciences who are Baha'is, and even fewer in Middle East Studies; and even fewer bother to be active in any way. These charges did indeed affect a significant number of active and committed Baha'i academics, either directly or indirectly.

It is not clear exactly what the house of justice's motives were. Stephen Birkland, who delivered the bad news, afterwards claimed that there had been no intention to threaten these individuals with shunning, only to deliver a "head's up". It does seem clear that there was an intent to interfere with the college professors' freedom of inquiry and speech. Burl Barer reported back from a visit to Haifa that house of justice members were representing themselves as surprised and saddened at the academics' resignations.

I don't really want to talk about this old past history, which I think in any case may well be a chapter drawing to a close. The folks in Haifa haven't done anything similar for a year and a half now, and I can only think it is because they have rethought their approach and decided that such heavy-handed interventions are after all not a good idea. I don't think it serves a good purpose to harp on the past incidents, and feel it is best to move forward. Every set of religious leaders makes mistakes. The institutions tend to survive them. (Well, not all do; Manichaeism's leaders pretty much ran that one into the ground).

I only posted this because an attempt was made to muddy the actual historical record. If there aren't such attempts, I'm glad to talk about something else.

cheers Juan

In article <792rn8$2ov$1@camel29.mindspring.com>,
Matthew Cromer <matthew_cromer@iname.com> wrote:
> In article <19990131185049.01114.00002374@ng-ch1.aol.com> Smaneck, > smaneck@aol.com writes:
> >To date, not a single academic historian has been expelled. Michael was the > >only one kicked out and he is a fiction writer.
> >warmest,
> >
> >Susan
>
> Susan, this does not become you.
>
> The record is clear that these academics were told in no uncertain terms > that they were on the verge of being declared covenant breakers, which > would mean in most cases shunning by family members and friends.
>
> Now if someone under such duress resigns, I consider that being kicked > out. Perhaps others differ.
>
> Matthew
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
https://www.dejanews.com/ Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Re: The Most Right Scholar
Date: Sunday, June 27, 1999 2:09 AM

Robert:

You are being completely illogical. First you say that difference must be preserved and each one of us is free to interpret for ourselves.

Then when I interpret for myself differently from you, you accuse me of trying to force my opinion on you and set myself up as an interpreter. But when did I ever do that? When did I say that my interpretation is special and superior to anyone else's? Isn't it the fact that this accusation is false, and is simply a ruse whereby you can prevent me from expressing my difference and from engaging in an interpretation with which you disagree?

Make up your mind. Either diversity is good and we have freedom to interpret for ourselves, or uniformity must be imposed and I don't have the same freedoms you do because I differ with you on some points.

And if the idea is to prevent the growth of priesthoods who can tell people what they have to believe, why are counselors going around browbeating, interrogating and threatening ordinary Baha'is? Aren't the counselors and the UHJ members themselves becoming a sort of priesthood? Isn't it possible that they are attacking thinking people precisely for the same reasons as other priesthoods, to retain their priestly perquisites and authority? Where does it say in the Writings that Counselors and the UHJ can Interpret authoritatively?

Incidentally, the structure of your argument is precisely the one used by the McCarthyites against American communists. The McCarthyites argued that communists had forfeited their civil liberties and first amendment protections because they wished to force their views on people.

The only difference is that a lot of communists really were Stalinists. Whereas I have in the past 3 years run a number of email groups where I have allowed a great range of Baha'i opinion to be expressed, and even allowed myself to be attacked. What Baha'i institution can make the same claim?

You seem a nice enough person. But you are being misled down a road that leads to intellectual repression and a sort of Peace Fascism. I plead with you to rethink it all.

cheers Juan

In article <712tje$2bh$1@nnrp1.deja.com>, rlittle95@my-deja.com wrote:
> Dear Friends

>

> The enormous diversity of humanity is key to unity, I believe. We all > have much in common, yet we are all unique, see and understand > differently. This "difference" must be preserved, and the way to do > that is by ensuring that each one of us is free to interpret and > understand in our own way. This is perhaps one of the reasons that > Baha'u'llah appointed 'Abdul-Baha' to be His only interpreter, and > why 'Abdul-Baha' continued this by appointing Shoghi Effendi to be

the > Guardian, a most interesting title. Their interpretations were > authoritative, but not restrictive. They gave us understanding without > binding us narrowly to a rigid mindset, like some army of robots.

<snip>

Independent investigation of > truth, and the abolishment of the priesthood are elements of this > assignment of responsibility for spirituality which God has today given > back to each individual.

<snip>

> As I understand it, some few individuals, working either separately or > collectively, have been attempting to coerce the Baha'i community into > believing that they know what Baha'u'llah means, and that the Universal
> House of Justice does not. They seem intent on becoming a group > of "interpreters" who can decide for us what Baha'u'llah wants for us > to think and say and do. We would become the "mundane" Baha'is, the > sheep who are herded here and there at the whim of the self-elected > spiritually and intellectually superior.
>

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience

Date: Thursday, February 04, 1999 9:36 AM

Not all religious bodies are based upon conformity of speech. Some, like Sufis or Unitarians, allow very wide latitude in what a member may say publicly. Others, like Roman Catholicism, tend to limit the speech mainly of church officials--priests and monks and teachers of Catholic theology. Others, as in Shi'ite Iran, limit everyone's speech, so that it is actually a criminal offense to question the infallibility of Supreme Jurisprudent Ali Khamenei. Similarly, cults in the West toss out anyone who questions the group's supreme leader.

So, the question is not whether religious groups limit speech, but where they fall along a spectrum. The Baha'i leaders in recent years have behaved far more like the Shi'ites than they have like either Roman Catholics or those to RC's left. That is, had Michael McKenny been a lay Catholic who came on email and argued for women's ordination and ultimately for a female pope, nothing would have been done to him by the church. It is true that had he been a Dominican monk and done so, he would have been disciplined. On the other hand, had Michael McKenny been a Shi'ite in Iran who published newspaper op ed pieces calling for women to be allowed to become Shi'ite mujtahids and questioning Ali Khamenei's infallibility, he would have certainly been jailed, if not assassinated.

The Baha'i authorities don't presently have the ability to jail anyone. But their structure of reasoning is just like that of Shi'ite authorities in Iran. Speech, even by powerless laypersons, that publicly and persistently questions officially sanctioned policy is criminal speech and must be punished.

`Abdul-Baha's Will and Testament and his other writings, on the other hand, envisage a situation in between that of Unitarians and Roman Catholics. That is, he envisages that those with legal authority (mujtahids or LSA members able to open the door of ijtihad and rule idiosyncratically with legal force against the wishes of the house of justice) are bound by the official legal pronouncements of the house of justice. But laypersons are free to express their individual views and conscience as they will (azadigi-yi vujdan, by the way, is a 19th century loan term from European languages meaning freedom of conscience in the contemporary sense; the phrase did not exist in classical Persian, and the words did not mean the same things in ancient times. Azadigi meant 'nobility'!)

The attempt to read the Will and Testament so as to extend the ban on free expression beyond practical legal rulings to mere statements of opinion on policy, and to extend it so as to be applicable to Baha'is like Michael who had no official position and no authority, is to Khomeini-ize the Baha'i faith. It is to warp and distort `Abdul-Baha's clear intent in his Persian Tablets on these issues. It is to put ordinary Baha'is in precisely the same position as ordinary Shi'ite Muslims in Iran, with the sole difference that Baha'i authorities don't yet control the machinery of state and so must impose symbolic rather than physical punishments on people.

People in Iran aren't happy with the Draconian limits on freedom of conscience and speech there. The Iranian Baha'is certainly aren't. They will only put up with them as long as Ali Khamenei has the police and military behind him. In the West, almost nobody will put up with those restrictions. You will note that there is no large Khomeinist religious body anywhere in the West, despite the large number of Iranian expatriates.

If the Baha'is move in the Ali Khamenei direction, even with only symbolic punishments, they will not only profoundly betray the spirit and letter of the teachings of the Baha'i holy figures, but they will doom themselves to many further decades of tininess and insignificance. It is not an accident that there are 2,000 French Baha'is in a country of 55 million, or a similar number of German Baha'is in a country of 85 million, or only a handful of Dutch Baha'is. In the US and Canada the faith has had more success, but still competes in numbers with things like Scientology and the American Communist Party. Even in Iran the number of Baha'is and close sympathizers has plummeted from about a million in the 1920s to probably something on the order of 150,000 now. What the Baha'i authorities are trying to sell is control. Virtually nobody will put up with this level of interference in their lives and behavior. If that was the message that they had to sell by scripture it would be one thing. But they are selling a message based on a misunderstanding of what their holy figures were about. And for that reason they are limping along in the niche of a 'small religious group' instead of fulfilling their potential. The vast majority of Westerners have never even heard of the religion.

There must be non-Baha'is reading this list. Why don't you tell us if you would really like to spend the rest of your life with our resident Nags, telling you constantly whether you were being covenantal enough for them?

cheers Juan

In article <l4CldIAo4Uu2EwXv@breacais.demon.co.uk>,

Chris Manvell <chris@breacais.NOdemonUCEPLEASE.co.uk> wrote:

> On talk.religion.bahai, Matthew Cromer (mailto:matthew_cromer@iname.com)
> wrote:

> >I think this emphasis on top-down authoritarianism is a terrible mistake.
> > I'm not convinced that the present direction and attitude of the head of > >the faith is what Shoghi Effendi had in mind, and most certainly it is > >not consonant with the express words of Baha'u'llah and Abdul-Baha' > >about how the Baha'i Religion is not a religion of dogma, absolutism, > >etc. but rather freedom of thought and speech.

>
> Dear Matthew,

>
> What WOULD you have? If a religion is not based on the teachings of its > Founder (and, by explicit Writings, its leaders) who would define its > basic tenets? One only has to look at the factionalism of some other > religions to see what happens. Yes, free speech is a fundamental right > of any Baha'i or non-Baha'i but if that individual expresses opinions > that are basically counter to the teachings it can mean (in my limited > understanding) one of several things, viz, that they are a Covenant > breaker, that they have not understood (or been told about) some basic > principle of the Faith, or that they have not really understood the > station of Baha'u'llah. I am sure there are many other reasons, but > those seem to be the basic ones.

>
> Best wishes,

>
> Chris.

>
> BTW, I notice in the news this morning that a homosexual group (Pink > Triangle?) is taking a Roman Catholic bishop to court for doing exactly > what we are talking about here -- using his right to free speech in > speaking against a pro-homosexual rally, thereby attacking their right > to free speech! I for one would hate to live in a country where the > defence that one is using one's right to free speech would be the excuse > for putting out racist propaganda or slandering individuals. Yes, > 'Abdul-Baha defends the right to free speech, but he then goes on to > define the responsibilities -- responsibilities that some are happy to > forget about.

> --
> Chris Manvell, Isle of Skye, Scotland. Tel.:+44(0)1471-822 317

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The importance of this email can not be overstated.

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Friday, February 05, 1999 12:45 AM

Schaut did not 'see' anything on Talisman because the repression did not occur online. Even Birkland wasn't that stupid. And Maneck was not even online till it was all over.

I don't know why Schaut seems to think I've been reticent about telling my story. From my point of view, I became a devoted Baha'i in 1972 at the age of 19 at the Bashir fireside in Fairfax Virginia, having read the Kitab-i Iqan and especially the Tablet of the True Seeker, which set my soul on fire. I read Advent of Divine Justice that summer and took the Guardian's advice to study comparative religions, Islam, and Arabic even as an undergraduate at Northwestern.

When the five year plan goals were announced, they included a call for two American Baha'is to go to Lebanon, and I went there as a pioneer slash student. Despite the outbreak of the civil war, I on and off attempted to be at my pioneering post, putting my education on hold at one point to work as a translator for a newspaper so as to be able to be in Beirut in 1978-79. Some have mean-spiritedly suggested that my being in Lebanon was for career-building purposes. I can only say that none of my colleagues who were building careers in Middle East studies at the time stayed in or returned to Beirut the way I did, mostly because I think they thought getting blown up was a poor way to make a career. I was there because of the UHJ's five year plan. While in the Middle East I carried out two tasks for the NSA, one of going to a conference and doing travel teaching in India in 1976, the other of helping local Baha'is with elections in Senegal and Gambia in spring, 1979.

In 1979 the NSA of the Near East let me know that the situation was deteriorating and it was best if I left Lebanon. So I went on to UCLA for graduate work in Islamic Studies, again, in order to be able to study the background of the faith and to serve it. I worked there with Amin Banani, professor of Persian and son of the Hand of the Cause. In 1981-1983 I carried out dissertation work on Shi'ism in India, and simultaneously pioneered, doing traveling teaching work in Bengal and elsewhere.

In 1984 I came to Ann Arbor as a professor of history and have been here ever since. I translated two books by Mirza Abu'l-Fadl and published them. I did some translating for the house of justice at its request. I published some journal articles on the faith that reflected well on it. In 1985 I attended a conference at the State Department on human rights and religious minorities as part of an NSA delegation, and did some lobbying for the Iranian Baha'is with officials. As far as I knew I was a Baha'i in good standing.

In 1994 the talisman@indiana.edu listserv started up. I had nothing to do with its having been established, but I was an active poster there. It is now forgotten that I spent a lot of time doing things like helping with the slow read of the Most Holy Book. I never questioned the legitimacy of the house of justice, and always granted that its ruling were the law as long as they stood. I did occasionally suggest that some issues had been poorly handled in the past by Baha'i institutions, and tried to make constructive suggestions for improving the situation, in the spirit of consultation. It was never suggested to me that I was by my postings engaged in an illegal activity in Baha'i law, nor was I ever accused of contravening any specific Baha'i law.

In spring, 1996, Counselor Stephen Birkland came to my house for what he represented as a friendly consultation, a sort of 'get to know you.' In fact, as usual, the meeting turned into a series of accusations. These were largely theological in nature. He asked me how I could say I believed in Baha'u'llah when I spoke of him as a historical personage. He asked me if I believed all Baha'i scripture needed to be contextualized to be properly understood. He asked me if the Baha'i faith had not done rather well out of histories like Nabil's Narrative and was it really wise to question it. He asked me if I thought 'literature review' (prepublication censorship) was influenced by Iranian cultural norms (yes).

It has been suggested that my thought crimes were not so much theological or academic as 'political'. However, this was never suggested to me by Mr. Birkland and when someone inquired of the house of justice it also said that interfering in administrative matters was not the main issue. I appear to have been seen as guilty of having a 'low theology' of Baha'u'llah and of employing a contextualizing hermeneutic or interpretive apparatus. Such sins.

Two months later Birkland called me up rather late one weekday night and ominously informed me that the counselors resident at the international teaching center in Haifa had concluded that I had made 'statements contrary to the covenant' on talisman@indiana.edu. He said, "I'm sorry. I had liked you." As though I were dead.

This was, in Baha'i-speak, a threat to have me shunned if I did not fall silent. It was obvious to me (and I had friends connected in Haifa who could confirm) that this threat was coming not from the ITC (of which I had barely heard), but from a subcommittee of the house of justice staffed by Farzam Arbab, Doug Martin and Ian Semple.

Insofar as I had chosen a life of the mind and of free and unfettered inquiry, as a college professor, I clearly could not allow myself to be silenced in that way. My email traffic on discussion lists is an extension of my research and findings, and it would be ethically wrong for me to allow a third party to dictate to me how or when or where I wrote history for the public. I am paid by the public, and must owe it my primary loyalty. Moreover, how could I teach my students to be ethically upright and courageous in their research if I was not, myself? Could I deduct points from their term papers when they failed to cite relevant evidence, if I myself allowed relevant evidence to be suppressed?

Moreover, the sort of charge launched at me was impossible to defend myself from in the Baha'i system. What could you say? "No, I didn't"? Not only was I charged, but five of my dear friends received similar threats, some of them prominent academics and publishers. It seemed to me obvious that there is only one kind of religious organization that treats its thinkers and professors in this way, and that is a cult-like religious organization.

It later became clear to me that the Baha'i authorities use these threats of shunning all the time to silence or chase out anyone who becomes 'prominent' with whom they disagree.

Of course, it was necessary for me to dissociate myself from the Baha'i administration, given that these were its techniques of control. And as a long-time, sincere Baha'i who knew he had done nothing wrong, I was at the time very wounded to be treated in that summary fashion. Finally, I did not want to be in a position of fighting the house of justice as an enrolled

Baha'i. I was a very sincere believe and horrified that I should be considered by anyone on the wrong side of a covenant to which I had given my life. But I could not do as they were asking me to do and remain an ethical person, and surely the Baha'i faith does not need any unethical members.

The one thing I regret is that when I withdrew, I disavowed Baha'u'llah in terms I now think were too strong. After all, I had found him in my heart at the age of 19 via the Kitab-i Iqan, and Baha'i administrators were all quite irrelevant to that mystical experience I had, nor could they invalidate it by their actions. I would now phrase things differently. But I don't see how I could agree to allow the Baha'i authorities to dictate to me how to write history or or critiques of the situation or when and where I could share my thoughts on such issues, and therefore it seems clear to me that I am by temperament unsuited for membership in the current form of the Baha'i administration.

Since I had loved the faith a great deal, and had made certain sacrifices for it, and still have great admiration for its core values, all this was at one time painful for me. But I am a person of a naturally sunny disposition, and, like Patch Adams, 'excessively happy,' and I am back to being quite joyful.

The thing I regret most of all is that I know as a historian that this episode will forever besmirch the name of the Baha'i faith, just as the Vatican's excesses or the Shi'ite excommunication of Shaykh Ahmad al-Ahsa'i besmirch those religions. The Baha'i faith deserved better from its leaders. But then, new leaders will eventually come along.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Friday, February 12, 1999 8:53 PM

Dear Milissa:

Shunning is the marker of a cult. It is instrumental. Leaders have people shunned to achieve their objectives, and they don't care whom they hurt. The Jehovah's Witnesses, Amish, some Mennonites, and others all do this. If Baha'is are happy to be in that company, fine and well. But note that these are all relatively small cults and none of them will ever really amount to anything in mainstream society.

I think shunning is a human rights abuse. It may be legal (in non-tort situations), but then, lots of human rights abuses are legal. I don't see the difference between the Mafia organizing a conspiracy to have someone's restaurant boycotted unless he pays protection money, and a religious organization threatening to prevent someone from seeing his coreligionist relatives at reunions unless he is blindly obedient to them. Both are forms of coercion that invade privacy and detract from the autonomy and dignity of the individual.

cheers Juan

In article <7a21l9$olm$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>,
Milissa Boyer Kafes <mbkafes@bestweb.net> wrote:
> Hi Susan--

>
> when I wrote:
>
> > >The thing I don't get, however, is that if the true purpose of shunning is > > >protection of Baha'is, then her voluntary withdrawal should have been > > >sufficient.
> >
> > The problem is that if she is now under the influence of Covenant breaking > > ideas, she is likely to spread them to other Baha'is. Again, you do not have > > to deny Baha'u'llah to leave the Faith. But if your only reason for leaving > > is to avoid being declared CB it is possible your resignation will not be > > accepted on > > those grounds.
>
> But given this definition, anyone can be declared a CB, can't they? You can > be declared one even if you leave, and even if you were never Baha'i. Given > this definition, what is preventing Baha'is from shunning the Baptist minister > and his congregation?
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Saturday, February 13, 1999 2:52 PM

Dear Jayliz:

`Abdul-Baha was facing a temporary and extraordinary situation in which a serious and plausible schism had developed among Baha'u'llah's sons. He dealt with it the only way he knew how, by urging his partisans to avoid partisans of the schismatics. He did not intend for this practice to become a permanent feature of Baha'i life (when's the last time you met a partisan of Mirza Muhammad `Ali?)! Nowadays powerful glaze-eyed cultists have grabbed power in the Baha'i faith and want to extend shunning beyond schism to simple expressions of individual conscience. This makes a caricature of `Abdul-Baha's universalism and tolerance, to the point where Baha'is on email lists are being scrutinized and measured for covenant breaking charges merely over their non-authoritative opinions.

So, what I would say is that `Abdul-Baha was employing a tactic, which is not cult-like in the context of the period 1898-1921 or so, but that the institutionalization of shunning as a feature of everyday life and the extension of its targets to virtually all members of the community including non-schismatics with new ideas, is certainly taking the religion in the direction of a paranoid and authoritarian body very similar to the Watchtower. Anyone who seriously thinks that is the sort of future `Abdul-Baha imagined for his religion, has radically misread him. Jehovah's Witnesses Baha'is and Amish Baha'is, indeed. (The Amish and Mennonites, by the way, are having the same sorts of disputes about the legitimacy of open discourse on the Net as are conservative Baha'is; the difference is that at least the former are producing food and furniture for us).

cheers Juan

In article <7a37vd$o8c$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>, jayliz77@my-dejanews.com wrote:

> Hello Dr. Cole,

>

> In article <7a2lue$ad5$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>,

> jrcole@umich.edu wrote:

>

> > Shunning is the marker of a cult.

>

> If this is the case, how are we to understand 'Abdul-Baha's instructions in > His Will and Testament:

>

> "And now, one of the greatest and most fundamental principles of the Cause of > God is to shun and avoid entirely the Covenant-breakers, for they will utterly > destroy the Cause of God, exterminate His Law and render of no account all > efforts exerted in the past."

>
> Peace,
> JayLiz
>
> ===== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
> <https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

===== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Sunday, February 14, 1999 1:50 AM

Dear JayLiz:

My position when I was enrolled was that avoiding (not shunning) schismatics was socially justified for the sake of maintaining unity, with schismatics defined as individuals who claimed or followed those who claimed to be Guardians after Shoghi Effendi. On the other hand, I had CBs in class and I taught them just like anyone else, saw them in office hours, etc. One wrote a rather good paper on Secret of Divine Civilization. But I wouldn't have invited that student out for coffee unless I was doing so for the whole class.

Unfortunately, the very existence of a category of 'covenant breakers' and the practice of shunning has created a dynamic where all Baha'is are always on heresy trial at the hands of the conservatives in the community. Just as inspectors at uranium mines have geiger counters to measure radiation, these rightwing Baha'is have covenant-monitors. They constantly shine them on you and your words to detect if any covenant-breaking is coming from you. And they define covenant-breaking as thinking for yourself rather than slavish obedience to the 'institutions.'

When a conference was held at Wilmette in 1995 on the Kitab-i Aqdas, a number of Baha'i academics gave papers on it to a general Baha'i audience. A number of Baha'is accused them informally of being 'covenant breakers.' Here, the term appears to have meant that the academics' understanding of the significance of the Most Holy Book differed from that of the rightwing Baha'is. A number of the speakers were very hurt by these accusations. This sort of thing is not atypical, but rather has become routine and even taken hold in administrative practice to some extent, as we saw on the old talisman.

I consider this second use of 'covenant breaking' charges and threats of shunning against ordinary, loyal Baha'is to be pathological, and feel it is extremely damaging to the fortunes of the community. It means that the lowest common denominator defines orthodoxy, and anyone with an original idea is liable to being attacked and insulted and threatened. I think some rightwing Baha'is, like Birkland, actually make their careers on covenant-baiting, sort of the way Richard Nixon made his early career by communist-baiting. There is a very real parallel between American McCarthyism and the mindset of the covenant-infected (it is sort of a disease). I think a very large number of people have left the Baha'i faith over covenant-baiting, whether because they were victims of it or because they disapproved of it when they saw it happen to others. Since these people tend to simply disappear into the crowd, we never hear back from them about their disappointments.

It is my feeling that unless this Baha'i McCarthyism can be put aside and overcome, the Baha'i community in this country is unlikely ever to amount to much.

cheers Juan

In article <7a56o6$9as$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>, jayliz77@my-dejanews.com wrote:

>
>
> Hello Dr. Cole,
>
> In article <7a4l5t$r7q$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>,
> jrcole@umich.edu wrote:
> >
> >
> > Dear Jayliz:
> >
> > `Abdul-Baha was facing a temporary and extraordinary situation in which a > > serious and plausible schism had developed among Baha'u'llah's sons. He > > dealt with it the only way he knew how, by urging his partisans to avoid > > partisans of the schismatics. He did not intend for this practice to become > > a permanent feature of Baha'i life (when's the last time you met a partisan > > of Mirza Muhammad `Ali?)!
>
> Okay, notwithstanding the actions of certain Baha'is who may have the wrong > idea about who exactly ought to be shunned, should actual Covenant-breakers > today -- not those who have certain views about the Administrative Order or > rulings about the Universal House of Justice -- still be shunned (i.e.
> 'Orthodox' Baha'is, Baha'is under the provisions of the covenant, etc., who > we do run into frequently on the 'Net)?
>
> I mean, the House of Justice can't rule that 'Abdul-Baha's statement was only > referring to a temporary situation (because that would be interpretation, no?) > can it? And it can't rule that we no longer have to shun Covenant-breakers > because it has explicitly been ordered in the W&T, can it?
>
> Peace,
> JayLiz
>
> ===== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
> <https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience

Date: Wednesday, February 10, 1999 11:09 AM

Dear Kathy:

There is a third possibility you are not accounting for. It is that my information comes from an impeccable eyewitness whom I know was there and is completely credible; but that if I revealed the person's name, the Baha'i authorities would come down on her like a ton of bricks. The Baha'i institutions, including the counselors that say they have no authority, use threats of shunning and ostracism to control people. It can have serious consequences. What if this person were shunned or forced out of the faith and it broke up her marriage and badly affected her children? Why should I do that to someone, just to prove that what I am saying is credible? People who don't want to accept my credibility won't accept it anyway.

However, just because I cannot reveal my source does not mean I should not reveal my information. I know it is not gossip. The Baha'i electoral system at the national level in the U.S. has been subject to all sorts of manipulation for at least 30 years, and this is widely known by insiders and condoned by most of them. Dissatisfaction with this situation was one of the reasons that the house of justice basically threatened to dissolve the US NSA in May, 1994, if it did not shape up.

Journalists frequently go to press with information they are sure of, even when they cannot in good conscience reveal their sources. I am a full professor of history at a major university; my dossier was intensively scrutinized numerous times by academics at other universities and at my own in several divisions before I was put in my present position. I didn't get here by publishing false or unsubstantiatable information. And anyone who wants to disregard what I say is welcome to.

cheers Juan

In article <36e76943.381914935@news.newsguy.com>, kathy@scconsult.com (Kathy Pascoe) wrote:

> On Tue, 09 Feb 1999 05:24:50 GMT, jrcole@umich.edu wrote:

>

> > A high African-American official in Wilmette, I am reliably informed, once > > considered having Ms. Deas prevented from coming out on the stage at the > > National Convention before the vote, which would have been a signal to the > > delegates to elect someone else.

>

> I noted in another post that I feel a certain amount of inherent > sympathy for anyone questioning your actions, given that strong faith > won't be swayed. The reason you might have some difficulty swaying the > faith of others would be the use of unsupported innuendo. You need to > either name the person who shared that piece of information, or you need > to discard it as the gossip it is.

> --

> Kathy Pascoe ~ kathy@scconsult.com (at home)

> Confused about newsgroups? Visit <news:news.newusers.questions>

>

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
https://www.dejanews.com/ Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Saturday, February 06, 1999 10:25 PM

Schaut writes:

>

> I have no doubt that Dr. Cole believes his version of the events.

In other words, I'm not a liar after all.

>It's Dr.

> Cole's credibility that I've called into question. That doesn't make him a > liar. It just makes him a human being who is as subject to a skewed view of > reality as the rest of us.

This is logical gobbledegook. Are you suggesting that a full professor of History at the biggest research university in the United States, someone recognized by the press and government as an acknowledged expert on Middle Eastern religion, past director of the Center for Middle Eastern and North African Studies, and recently chosen editor of the International Journal of Middle East Studies, the flagship journal in the field, lacks credibility? And who exactly is calling this credibility into account?

Further, not all human beings lack credibility. Lots of them have credibility. So the final phrase about my being as fallible as 'the rest of us' makes no sense. Do the 'rest of us' all lack credibility? If so, Schaut, being among the 'rest of us' also lacks credibility. Then his calling into account my credibility lacks credibility.

Then there is this piece of illogic:

First Schaut says:

> I'm not aware of any sanctions having been applied to Dr. Cole, so why should > it be necessary to present any evidence of guilt?

Then he quotes me:

> >The point is that Fareed Akhtarekhavari, an enrolled Baha'i, has run a large > >scale campaign against policies of the US national assembly and he hasn't > been shunned. I never even referred to any of them by name, and I get > > > threatened with the Baha'i equivalent of Siberia.

Then he says:

> This is rather like someone who has blown up the house complaining because > someone who merely shot at it got a lesser sentence. It's a diversionary > tactic designed to focus our attention away from the real issues.

But it hasn't been established that I 'blew up' any 'houses' (huh?) or that in 1994-1996 I did or said something worse than or even similar to things that Akhtarekhavari was saying. And if I had 'blown up' any 'houses', then why weren't sanctions forthcoming?

And to top it all off, Schaut elides the fact that I was threatened with the ultimate sanction in the Baha'i system, despite the fact that all I did was share my thoughts by email and never broke any Baha'i law nor contravened the Baha'i covenant in any way.

> Read the following paragraph carefully. It's about _inquiries_, not findings > of guilt and/or innocence.
>
> >> Second, as I've stated before and will state again, I saw activities that > >> would warrant an inquiry and, perhaps, an outlining of the consequences if > >> the behavior continued.

Anyone who comes out here on the Net and advocates an Investigation of a professor for his email messages and hints around that the professor might well be punished ('consequences') for them is openly admitting to being a member of the Internet Thought Police. For an employee of MicroSoft to engage in this activity seems to me completely shameful and to reflect extremely badly on the company for which this individual works. Is that company in favor of persons being subjected to punishments for their licit email messages?

And anyone who openly admits to being a member of the Thought Police can expect to be flamed, ridiculed and otherwise deservedly roasted. Why don't we emigrate to any other Usenet list and explain what Schaut is about to people, and see what they say about him?

> >You're wasting your time with that software stuff, and this little Baha'i > dog > >and pony show, Schaut. I think you definitely have the mindset and the > >talent for the big time.
>
> To which Dr. Cole replies with some wonderfully vile invective.
> Congradulations, Dr. Cole. I believe you're finally beginning to master the > art of flamage. Unfortunately, flamage isn't evidence. > Regards, > Rick Schaut
>

Actually, I didn't use even one piece of invective. I simply pointed out that since Schaut has clearly said he is a member of the Thought Police, that he seemed to me to have too little ambition in restraining his activities to such a small canvas as the tiny Baha'i community, and that there were much bigger opportunities out there. If he doesn't like the idea of being a Mulla in charge of Iran's Ministry of Intelligence, which has also made inquiries into the views of college professors and punished them for their writings, then perhaps he might consider going to work in Yugoslavia for Slobodan Milosevic, who likewise needs goons to silence uppity college professors and inflict various punishments on them. I would be sorry, though, since I really would have liked to see Schaut in that huge black turban. I'd even let him bastinado me if he'd wear one. Hey--that should be Fred's next project--alt.bahai.S&M--we could invite all the counselors at the ITC on, and they could have virtual whips and black leather and make the covenant breaking humanist liberal intellectuals scream to their hearts' content.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Monday, February 15, 1999 6:03 PM

Dear Rachel:

The works of the Bab in the possession of the Baha'i World Centre in Haifa have been deliberately suppressed and any Baha'i who ever tried to arrange for their publication has been stopped from doing so on pain of being shunned. A few 'selections' from the writings of the Bab were published, but nothing like his whole corpus, and the couple volumes of prayers and 'selections' are not representative of his work.

There are large numbers of Babi and Baha'i chronicles and histories of the community in Iran that have never been published, and the publication of which has been blocked by the Baha'i authorities, even in the face of explicit instructions of `Abdul-Baha and Shoghi Effendi. `Abdul-Baha, for instance, ordered that Bayda's history of the persecution of Baha'is in Yazd be published, but it never has been. Shoghi Effendi made preparations to publish Ashchi's biography of Baha'u'llah, but the Persian text of it was suppressed by Haifa in 1982. The UHJ has forbidden the publication of the remaining volumes of Hand of the Cause Fadil Mazandarani's History of the Manifestation of Truth, a massive 9-volume history of the faith from its beginnings till the time of `Abdul-Baha, even though it was commissioned at the behest of Shoghi Effendi. Even some small chronicles of the Babi period by eyewitnesses that managed to get published in anthologies were taken out of subsequent volumes at the order of the Baha'i authorities.

About 15% of Baha'u'llah's writings have been published, and about 5% translated. Translations of the remaining corpus and its publication are blocked by the Baha'i officials within a Baha'i framework.

Even the vast majority of Shoghi Effendi's Persian letters have not been published, including especially those that say that all LSA's should be devoting a major portion of their time and money to philanthropical work, including charitable work for non-Baha'is.

I cannot entirely explain why this policy of suppression is in place. To some extent, the publication of the masses of primary sources would undermine the fundamentalist stance of most Baha'i officials, who can maintain it only if they suppress alternative evidence. And then, the Baha'i faith is mostly run like a family Public Relations firm, and it is easier to do PR for simple causes than for complex ones. Obviously, it is harder to maintain that all Babis and Baha'is have always been angels if you have the histories of conflict published. Finally, an emphasis in the Tablets of the holy figures and in the letters of Shoghi Effendi on pure charity would undermine the current stance that Baha'is should throw money at the 'institutions' and let others worry about doing good for human beings.

This suppression of primary sources is now definitively breaking down. For those who know Arabic and Persian see the Arabic and Persian digital library at: <https://h-net2.msu.edu/~bahai/index/diglib/arapub.htm>

and <https://www.bahai.com/> where several hundred pages of works by Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha have been posted.

For new translations see:

<https://h-net2.msu.edu/~bahai/trans.htm>

cheers Juan

In article <7a90d8$225$1@news4.svr.pol.co.uk>, <r.woodlock@bigfoot.com> wrote:

> ...speaking of the release of Baha'i scripture...

>

> My husband and I were discussing this and he was quite surprised to find out > that photocopies / scans of the all original texts in the possession of the > World Centre aren't freely available to all and sundry who ask (which was my > assertion). But I also know I am not speaking from experience (having never > attempted to gain access to an unpublished original) - therefore can anyone > set the record straight on what is the official policy regarding release of > copies of original texts? Surely if copies of the original are as freely > available as McDonalds restaurants, that would rule out some dark character > putting out her own mistranslations that are full of errors?

>

> Regards

> Rachel

>

>

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====

<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Ian Kluge <iankluge@netbistro.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: RE: institutions and circumstances associated with birth of Faith
Date: Monday, June 01, 1998 3:59 PM

Ian:

Thanks for the generous clarification, and sorry if I misread your position. I'm glad to hear that you don't dismiss historical contextualization as worthless. As for being imprisoned in it, no one is advocating that (except Judge Bork). My argument would be, however, that in order to know what Baha'u'llah meant by the things he said in the Tablet of the World, it is necessary (or at least highly desirable) to know that it was written in the summer of 1891 in response to the Tobacco Revolt in Iran. But I shouldn't get ahead of the book, which I hope you'll enjoy.

Since you have been so frank and forthcoming, let me be equally so. Many thinking people have been for the past two centuries giving serious thought to how to construct a new, global civilization that would transcend the tribalisms and narrowness and chauvinism of the current ones. The technology for global civilization is increasingly in place, so it has become possible. And it is increasingly urgent, what with ecological problems, nuclear proliferation, and the need for economic cooperation. We are concerned that the new global civilization preserve the best of what came before while providing a unified 'platform' upon which the planet can peaceably work out its differences and problems. Many of us think that both nationalism and religion are hindrances to this endeavor and must be jettisoned. Others among us think spirituality as opposed to religion a key heritage of humankind that must contribute to the efflorescence of the new world.

In my youth I abhorred organized religion for its self-righteousness, mindless conservatism, complicity with the rich and the warlike, and demands for conformity. I was for many years, however, persuaded that the Baha'i faith was different, was the organized religion for people who didn't like organized religion, and all the other fireside slogans.

In the end, of course, it became perfectly obvious to me that the Baha'i faith has deteriorated into a narrow organized religion just like all the others, with the same demands for conformity and blind obedience, the same cozying up to the rich and powerful, the same intolerance and bigotry. Of course, from inside an organized religion all of these values are seen positively. Intolerance is just drawing boundaries that protect the integrity of the faith, bigotry is just protecting the faithful from dangerous ideas or people. Any Jesuit could defend it to us without a moment's reflection. But the end result is bigotry, intolerance, demands for intellectual stifling and conformity, and no euphemisms can disguise it.

Of course, not all Baha'is have become wedded to such a vision of their faith, but the more powerful ones appear to have. And what this means is that the Baha'i faith, as an organized community, has become just another sectarian body, and therefore has decreased usefulness to those of us who wish to build the world civilization. Sectarian boundary-drawing is the very antithesis of global rehabilitation. Authoritarianism, papal infallibility, coddling of dictators, censorship, prejudice against gays and other subcultures, and shunning, all belong to the old world order, not the new we envision.

But very importantly, Baha'u'llah and some other Baha'i figures are most certainly not irrelevant to thinking about the new global civilization. He had a vision that can inspire. He disclaimed coming to impose laws; that had been the Bab's job. He disclaimed coming to impose an orthodoxy; rather, each must fare upon the spiritual path according to the state (hal), station (maqam), and perception (idrak) that he or she had thus far attained, and, he said, we cannot expect people to agree on dogmas because each is at a different station. He desired the end of prejudices, the end of shunning of some groups by others, the end of narrow sectarian boundary-drawing. Baha'u'llah wished to contribute to the new emerging global civilization not a religion, but Religion, true religion, spirituality. He did not mean to make rules about what you could say and still be a Baha'i. He did not think what people said had anything to do with being Baha'is. He thought that being a Baha'i meant universal love, tolerance, peace, and harmony with all. By those standards the self-appointed (and, O.K., sometimes elected) guardians of Baha'i 'orthodoxy' are not Baha'is at all. Or, rather, they are Baha'is with a capital 'B', Baha'is as others are Roman Catholics and Shi'ites. But they are not ahl-i Baha, the followers of the ideals of Baha'u'llah, which were intended to transcend narrow sectarian boundaries (just as most Christians are really followers of Jesus).

So if they wish to disfellowship and excommunicate all those who believe that gays should be treated like human beings, or that women really should have equal rights all the way through, or that Reason is a valid means of understanding what Baha'u'llah's message portended, then that is their choice as religious leaders. (One can imagine the placards: "NO PLACE FOR ELLEN DEGENERIS IN THE BAHAI FAITH"; "A WOMAN'S PLACE IS NOT ON THE HOUSE;" "MYSTERY, NOT HISTORY!" "CENSORSHIP IS CLOSE TO GODLINESS") But all it does is reduce their form of their religion to a sect, and make it inappropriate as the vehicle of World Civilization.

So, we globalists are interested in Baha'u'llah, and a contextualized understanding of exactly what he thought. We are not interested in the rather odd folk traditions and authoritarian sectarianism that grew up in the cultic milieu of Iran and the US over the 20th century, and which represent themselves as 'the Baha'i Faith.' The latter are useless to us in our quest for what is universal, global, tolerant, loving and harmonious. The former is not, and, indeed, could be a fountainhead of humankind's evolution toward greater maturity if only he could be freed from the cultic aura in which he has been trapped. Baha'u'llah is the heritage of all humankind, and it is the business of us globalists to reclaim that heritage from persons who have made him into a mere auctioneer.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: What is a Cult? and McKenny case
Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 5:47 PM

First of all, Michael McKenny did not break the Baha'i covenant, even by the rigid standards of the Extreme Orthodox, so it would have been politically difficult for the Baha'i authorities to have had him shunned. I'm not even sure that Canadian law would allow them to mount a conspiracy against him of that nature.

Second of all, Mr. McKenny did not break any Baha'i law. The Phoenix LSA member who embezzled $70,000 is still a Baha'i, though with rights removed. A former Canadian NSA member involved in a sex scandal is not only still a Baha'i but is drawing a salary from the Baha'i faith. Mr. McKenny led a spotless Baha'i life. And yet he is declared 'not a Baha'i.' On what grounds? Doug Martin doesn't like his views?

Third, in the Baha'i faith I once joined, you couldn't be removed from the rolls unless you renounced belief in Baha'u'llah. McKenny did not do that.

Finally, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights bestows on human beings the right to belong to any religion they choose. If Mr. McKenny felt he was a Baha'i, he had a right to be a Baha'i. If he broke a law, he could be sanctioned by having his administrative rights removed. Declaring him 'not a Baha'i' is a totalitarian imposition on his freedom of conscience. It would never have occurred before the 1990s, when the UHJ took its rightward swing.

But I'm now confused. I thought Schaut was maintaining things like this don't happen at all?

cheers Juan

In article <78svpi$75i@news1.newsguy.com>,
"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>
> jrcole@umich.edu wrote in message <78spc1$pjr$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
> >Just as one case, we can look at the treatment of Michael McKenny.
>
> Well, perhaps Dr. Cole can answer a few questions that he has, heretofore, > refrained from answering.
>
> Mr. McKenny was handed his membership card and told to go on his merry way.
> He wasn't even declared a Covenant-breaker. How does this compare to the > imprisonment and torture that are the substance of the investigations of > Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch?
>
> If the Universal House of Justice's intent was to remove the influence of Mr.
> McKenny's ideas on the Baha'i community, why didn't the Universal House of > Justice declare him a Covenant-breaker?
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut
>
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan

https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
https://www.dejanews.com/ Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: What is a Cult?

Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 5:23 PM

In article <78ss7d$514@news1.newsguy.com>,

"Rick Schaut" <RSSchaut@email.msn.NOSPAMcom> wrote:

>
> jrcole@umich.edu wrote in message <78qtni$6s6$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>...
> >> I have yet to hear any Assistant or ABM suggest I or anyone else be silent > >>about any issue.
>
> >You no doubt are not aware that it is fairly common for auxiliary board > >members and counselors to take Baha'is aside and warn them to be silent on > >certain issues.
>
> So common, indeed, that people who've been members of the Baha'i Faith for > over a quarter century have never heard of nor experienced it.

I had never heard of it very much myself for 23 years. This lack of hearing of it does not prove it does not happen. The Baha'i faith as an organization is set up so as to prevent the free communication of such information. No report of a Baha'i being drawn aside and silenced by an ABM or Counselor would be allowed to be published in the old days of print culture, when everything Baha'is said had to be vetted before being published. And only things that were published could become widely known. Baha'is still in the community who had been frightened into silence wouldn't want to bring it up in conversation, since after all their reputation would be sullied merely by having it known that they had been warned. And those persons who left the faith after being bullied simply melted away into the general population and one wouldn't encounter them or hear their story. In the print age information was expensive, and non-Baha'i publishers generally would not publish things like accounts by ex-Bahais of being bullied. The Baha'i community in the West is such a small affair, moreover, that most who leave are happy enough to leave the tiny number of Baha'is (neck and neck with the Taoists in the US) to their cavilling.

After the Information Revolution, when bytes are cheap and easy to share, these stories began to come out.

> >Of course, you don't hear about these events, because most > >Baha'is who are browbeaten in this way do fall silent, or else withdraw from > >the faith.
>
> Allow me to offer another explanation for what's going on. A person who is > unaware of some of the authoritative interpretations of Baha'u'llah's > Writings might well make a statement that demonstrates this lack of > understanding and knowledge. An Auxiliary Board member or Continental > Counselor, members of the institution of the learned whose duty is to raise > people's awareness of of these interpretations yet who have no authority over > people's decisions or conscience, attempt to point out how someone's > statements might be in conflict with some of these authoritative > interpretations. Their purpose is nothing more than to educate and advise.

Well, except that these individuals have frowns on their faces and make snide comments to you and warn you that if you don't fall silent you will be declared a covenant breaker. Moreover, these individuals are usually pretty ignorant of the Baha'i faith and are very seldom in a position to know more about it than the people they are accosting. What is really going on here is a power grab and an unwarranted imposition of theological authority by someone who has no theological authority.

> Dr. Cole says this as if Covenantal issues are limited to succession of > authority. However, someone attempting to set themselves up as some sort of > Baha'i "expert" whose interpretations should be given some authoritative > weight, even in a defacto sense, is as much a Covenantal issue as someone > claiming to be Guardian. Both are attempts to usurp an authority one does > not rightly possess.

Anyone who puts forth an opinion that Mr. Schaut does not like can be accused of a) contravening the covenant by disputing the divine understanding of the scriptures put forward by an Assistant to the Auxiliary Board for Protection and b) claiming authority insofar as the person is speaking his or her own mind and not kneeling in awe before the mighty Assistant.

While such charges and innuendoes can of course be manufactured, the fact is that what is really going on is that Mr. Schaut and his friends want to set things up so that they can only hear the sound of their own voices. Anyone who disagrees with their line is 'contravening the covenant' or 'claiming authority'. But of course this only masks the bare and obvious fact that the only one around here trying to tell people what they can and cannot say is Mr. Schaut and his like-minded friends. I'm here sharing my views and my studies. Someone doesn't like them, they don't have to accept them. Glad to debate them if they like. If they don't, that's fine, too. But they are welcome to express their conscience and declare their views.

But Mr. Schaut and his colleagues don't feel this way. They feel some views should not be expressed. Some opinions should not be heard. If they can, they prevent such speech by bullying the speaker. If the bullying doesn't work, then they vilify the speaker, backbite the speaker, or trump up charges against the speaker. 'He is claiming authority. His words contravene the covenant.' If they can't silence the voice, they try to put cotton in the ears of anyone who might hear it by making it taboo. Baha'is are not supposed to backbite, attack or vilify others. But it is all right, you see, if the Assistant doesn't agree with someone. Then all the apparatus of character assassination may be freely employed.

How absurd all this is, anyway, is easy to demonstrate. If I were a Methodist and a Professor of Bible Studies, do you think the Methodist Bishops would have come after me for posting email messages to a university listserv on Methodist theology? Of course not! I became a Baha'i because the Baha'i faith was supposed to be better than the Old World Order groups like the Methodists. Obviously, it isn't better, and certainly not for a thinking person.

> >The salaries of the five NSA > >members who are paid for their services are also not released, nor the value > >of the perquisites they receive.
>
> The total amount of general administrative expenses is less than 15% of the > National Spiritual Assembly's total expenditures. Compare this with, say, > the United Way or other charitable organizations, and it becomes quite clear > that there is nothing ontoward about the US National Spiritual Assembly's > financial dealings.
>
> Regards,
> Rick Schaut

15% of $25 million is $3.75 million. It is legitimate for Baha'is to know how exactly how this relatively large sum of money is being spent. Do the secretary's salary and perquisites come to $150,000 per year, as I have been told by someone who worked at the National Center? Is that the right salary for that job? How much do the other NSA members get? Who sets these salaries? What are they given out for? Why do some get them but others do not? Why is this information not made public? It is a non-profit incorporated body. By law Baha'is have a right to know.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: What is a Cult?
Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 11:58 AM

Dear Brian:

I am grateful for your open-mindedness and willing to discuss these matters, which, at least in the U.S., seem to me to have adversely affected the fortunes of the community of the most great name.

> Well, actually I am only comfortable dealing with events of which I have personal > knowledge.

This was the problem that the human rights community had in the early days. They would allege that a particular government was arresting writers and torturing them. The government would deny it. Other observers would say, we have no way of knowing who is right.

The way that Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, and others responded to this challenge was to do intensive interviewing with a wide range of victims of human rights abuses in a particular country and to publish case studies of these incidents. Over time, the emergence of lots of such narratives and cases and their publication made it clear that the human rights abuses were in fact occurring, and allowed other groups and governments to pressure the abuser.

Just as one case, we can look at the treatment of Michael McKenny. Beginning in spring, 1996, he began posting his views, as a Baha'i of 25 years, on issues like the desirability of women's service on the House of Justice and the need for continued independent investigation of reality within a Baha'i framework. He was drawn aside by an Auxiliary Board Member in winter, 1997, for a long interrogation as to his views. This ABM then wrote a report to Haifa, which Mr. McKenny was not allowed to see. As instructed by the ABM, he wrote a letter to the House of Justice in spring, 1997, which received a perfunctory reply. He mentioned that he would like to pursue the correspondence. In summer, 1997, the House of Justice wrote the Canadian National Assembly informing them that Michael McKenny was not a Baha'i. The Canadian NSA then unilaterally removed McKenny from its rolls, without bothering to ascertain as to whether Mr. McKenny considered himself a believer in Baha'u'llah. The arbitrariness and lack of due process of this entire affair, not to mention the clear interference in individual conscience, is striking.

This is a very public case. It is only one among many that I have documented in the past 4 years.

>Some years ago, in a country far from Hong Kong (I will not give >details
> of Counsellor or NSA) the committee of which I was a representative had difficulties > with the NSA.

The example you give of an intramural dispute between a committee and the NSA is not relevant, because this would be considered something private and out of the public eye, and would not normally attract the intervention of the authorities. It is the rise of cyberspace and the ability of Baha'is actually, in Shoghi Effendi's words, to "declare their conscience and express their views" in public that has so challenged the more authoritarian Baha'i authorities and led them to employ what can only be called inquisitorial methods on adherents.

Like you, I had never or very seldom heard of such a thing in all the time I was a Baha'i, and I was shocked to see it happen over and over again. I do not know whether these things were going on quite a lot behind the scenes and not receiving publicity, or whether the rise of cyberspace led otherwise tolerant officials to begin intervening on a large scale in the individual right of free expression. I suspect the former.

> >
>
> > Rightwing Baha'is would like to spread the aura of infallibility over pretty > > much all the Baha'i institutions, but especially the house of justice.
>
> Here the concept of having a "wing" to which a Baha'i may belong is, for me, after > 22 years of experience as a Baha'i, entirely foreign. I have lived as a Baha'i
in 4
> countries spanning Europe and Asia (including the USSR) and like to think that I
> have seen enough to know what is what in the Baha'i world.

I was in the community for a quarter of a century, 1972-1996, and continue to follow it, and I saw communities in South Asia, Africa, the Middle East and North America. Only in North America and the UK did I notice a division between right wing Baha'is and Baha'i liberals. And in those two venues I also noticed that the right wingers were almost always in power whereas the liberals were usually besieged.

Right wing Baha'is are firm theocrats, scriptural literalists, social conservatives, anti-intellectuals fixated on the "covenant" and quite willing to declare others 'covenant breakers' at the drop of a hat. They often dissimulate these beliefs in public, but pursue private vendettas aimed at ensuring their ideology triumphs in the central institutions of the faith. Unless you get close to the levers of power, it is not a struggle you could easily become aware of.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: What is a Cult?
Date: Friday, February 12, 1999 8:40 PM

Dear Danny:

Thanks so much for your observations. I agree that within the Baha'i faith no individual can claim to speak with authority. Before I was forced out of the Baha'i faith I was very careful constantly to underline that my comments were only those of one individual and wholly without any authority.

The problem is that if you speak publicly in a Baha'i context, and even if you disclaim authority, you can still be charged with 'gaining a following.' I'm not sure exactly what that means, but apparently it implies that lots of people agree on their own account with your non-authoritative individual views. This is such a vague charge and so self-contradictory that it is very destructive. Why should it be a bad thing that lots of people agree with what Danny posts?

The other problem is that there are powerful individuals in the community who do think they have the authority to tell you what you can and cannot say, and to forbid you from expressing views, even as a non-authoritative individual, with which they disagree. But I don't see how the counselor or NSA member who does this is avoiding a claim to authoritative interpretation. If you can't publicly disagree with them, aren't they saying that their interpretation is authoritative and silences you?

So, I have to confess that I (obviously) completely failed to understand the rules of discourse that appear to prevail in the Baha'i community.

What is really funny is that I was in fact forced out, am not an enrolled member, can't be elected to anything, and presumably am as good as a non-person for most Baha'is, and yet I still get accused of trying to speak authoritatively. This sort of charge against an unenrolled individual just seems to me silly. How could I have authority in a religion to which I don't even belong? It is downright weird. And if the Baha'i authorities are that insecure, then their hold on authority is really, really tenuous.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: What is a Cult?
Date: Thursday, January 28, 1999 7:00 PM

Dear Brian:

You wrote:

> I have yet to hear any Assistant or ABM suggest I or anyone else be silent about > any issue. I do hear that I should avoid reading CB material, or entering > discussion with CB, but that is another matter.

You no doubt are not aware that it is fairly common for auxiliary board members and counselors to take Baha'is aside and warn them to be silent on certain issues. Of course, you don't hear about these events, because most Baha'is who are browbeaten in this way do fall silent, or else withdraw from the faith. Frequently a dire overtone is adopted by the auxiliary board members and counselors indicating that the person being counselled is in contravention of the covenant and may end up being shunned if he or she continues to speak publicly on these issues. However, the issues concerned do not usually concern what most rational observers would consider 'covenantal'--i.e. they have nothing to do with 17th Guardians & etc. Lots of Baha'is have contacted me privately with their stories of such repression, and I have been carefully archiving these cases.

Among the hot button questions that seem to elicit this response are the question of women's service on the Universal House of Justice, the scope of the latter body's infallibility, the ability of Baha'is to dissent publicly from official policy, and even occasionally theological issues such as whether God is a person or an impersonal essence. One Baha'i professor was upbraided by a counselor for simply saying on the internet that Baha'i metaphysics has a background in Neoplatonism. Another man I know was investigated for renting a room to an unrelated woman. In another instance an NSA member threatened an LSA secretary for writing too many letters to National that did not display the proper tone. I have been informed of literally dozens of such incidents over the past three years.

It is true that usually such demands for silence are directed at persons in the community who are felt by the counselors and ABMs to be particularly eloquent exponents of views the latter dislike, who are 'prominent,' or who are felt to be provoking too much discussion by the expression of their views. Lots of ordinary Baha'is are never bothered in this way no matter what they say, and so they take away the impression that no one is ever bothered or silenced, which simply is not true.

>
> > 2) If a Baha'i body seems to you to be wasting the money you give it or is > > not being fully accountable for how it spends your money, don't give it any > > more. Restrict your donation to your local assembly if you think it is doing > > a good job, or restrict the donation to "charitable purposes" (Baha'i > > institutions are supposed to be doing way more charity work than they do).
>
> Juan - really - this is just what Baha'is have always done, at least in my > experience in 3 continents and a lot more communities.

I think it is scandalous that no full budget is published annually by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, which is thereby in contravention of the expectation of the Illinois law on incorporated nonprofit organizations that members of the organization will be apprised if they so desire of how their money is being spent. The salaries of the five NSA members who are paid for their services are also not released, nor the value of the perquisites they receive. Don't you think this lack of candor on budgetary issues is suspicious?

The unwillingness of some Baha'i institutions to be candid about budgets allows speculation to occur more easily, as when a member of the Phoenix LSA embezzled some $70,000 in the 1990s before finally being reported by a fellow member of the LSA (the community would never have known about it! And what if the other LSA member had been less upright?).

> > 4) If someone suggests to you that you cannot disagree with some policy you > > think is wrong because the author of the policy is infallible, tell that > > person that only God is infallible and all human beings make mistakes, > > including the Baha'i institutions.
>
> The only infallible one in this dispensation is Baha'u'llah. Has anyone suggested > otherwise?

Rightwing Baha'is would like to spread the aura of infallibility over pretty much all the Baha'i institutions, but especially the house of justice.

>
> So you compare the Baha'i administration with Jones and Deaths Gate?? I have yet > to see anything unethical recommended by any Baha'i body on which I have served > or with which I have worked.

I didn't compare anything with anything. I simply said that a wise person does not surrender his or her individual conscience and autonomy to supposedly 'infallible' leaders and then do unquestioningly whatever they command. That way lies Jonestown, however noble the initial pious impulses.

I do know Iranian Baha'is who feel that the Universal House of Justice's policy of ordering the Iranian Baha'is to stay in Iran after 1983 was tantamount to commanding them to commit suicide. Certainly, it is shameful that Iranian Baha'is who did manage to escape were often punished administratively for having put 'Muslim' on their application for an exit visa. But if a Jew had managed to escape Hitler by pretending to be a Catholic (isn't this sort of thing implied in the film "The Sound of Music"?) should that Jew have been punished? Isn't this pretty monstrous?

> Would you perhaps explain to me what scams you have experienced? I do respect > your views and your learnedness, but I wonder at your objectivity. Then again, > I do not know you, and need to hear more about your stance.

Perhaps my answer to your previous questions has given you some idea of the sort of thing I mean.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: What is a Cult?
Date: Wednesday, January 27, 1999 10:41 PM

Dear JayLiz:

I don't think that most of the problems in the community affect most Baha'is most of the time, and that is why there is not more of an uproar (besides, people tend to vote with their feet by just leaving).

I would make the following suggestions:

- 1) If an Assistant or an Auxiliary Board Member or a Counselor calls you to a meeting to insist that you fall silent about some issue, simply firmly tell him or her that Shoghi Effendi said Baha'is have the right to declare their conscience and express their views. And then post a full account of this attempt to browbeat you right here on the Net.
- 2) If a Baha'i body seems to you to be wasting the money you give it or is not being fully accountable for how it spends your money, don't give it any more. Restrict your donation to your local assembly if you think it is doing a good job, or restrict the donation to "charitable purposes" (Baha'i institutions are supposed to be doing way more charity work than they do).
- 3) If you are a writer, insist on publishing without Baha'i prepublication censorship.
- 4) If someone suggests to you that you cannot disagree with some policy you think is wrong because the author of the policy is infallible, tell that person that only God is infallible and all human beings make mistakes, including the Baha'i institutions.

Basically, just don't allow yourself to be boxed in to a very authoritarian situation, where if some Baha'i body ever actually does order you to drink poisoned coolaid or do something unethical or be silent about something unethical, you are still in a psychological frame of mind where you can tell them to jump in a lake.

I myself dissent from the idea that the problem in any way resides in one ethnicity more than another. Lots of Iranian Baha'is have seen all the scams the AO types pull and are far more chary of them and canny about them than a lot of earnest Americans.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
Subject: Shoghi Effendi believed 1963 would be the calamity year
Date: Thursday, July 08, 1999 1:56 AM

I note that we have come into some solid evidence of Shoghi Effendi having believed that the Calamity would come in 1963, in the form of an interview he gave A. E. Suthers around 1933, and which was published shortly thereafter. S.E. said that "70 years" of the 100-year interval before the onset of the Calamity had passed, which means that he thought the clock began ticking in 1863. The expectation that 1963 would be the big year was widespread in the Baha'i community in the 1930s-1950s, and was reflected in the version of Esslemont then in use.

Of course, one has to decide whether Suthers was a reliable reporter of what S.E. said. I personally think he was, and that it is highly unlikely that an outsider could have made up the numbers invoked, whereas 1863-1963 have obvious significance for Baha'is. The interview is on the Web, and I quote it below

<https://bahai-library.org/articles/bahai.pontiff.html>

A BAHAI PONTIFF IN THE MAKING By A. E. Suthers, Ohio Wesleyan University Moslem World, Volume 25, January 1935

" . . . Ultimately we returned to the car upon the beach, and speeding back to Haifa I put some questions to my kind host.

"You are a university man?" "Yes, I am a graduate of the American University of Beirut, and I spent also a year and a half at Oxford studying political economy." "Did you ever take up psychology?" "No!" "Or philosophy?" "No! I am not interested in abstract thought."

"An illuminating admission, I thought, explaining in part the paradox of his own person, that he could hold essentially abstract notions about divine effulgences to the extent of impersonating divinity without sensing either its futility or its humor. One would not expect specialization in political economy or, as in the case of his assistant and cousin, Ruhi Afnan, law, to be particularly pertinent in preparing one for a hypostatic role.[6] 'Religion' he added, 'is to be a social idea.'

"I asked if he did not think a full-rounded and efficacious religion should speak with confidence concerning sin, forgiveness, God, immortality, and was immediately assured that Bahaism does all of that – that it differs from other faiths not in fundamental principles, for therein it agrees with all, but in its application of certain social laws, which were divinely revealed to Baha'u'llah, thereby placing him on a different and unique pedestal among God's prophets, as the last to come.

"This revelation he has sent down in a book in Arabic, not yet translated, 'because the time is not yet ripe, the world is not yet ready to receive it. When it is translated, which will be after the economic and spiritual catastrophe foretold by Baha'u'llah to occur within a hundred years, seventy of which have passed, it will revolutionize society. After that cataclysm Bahaism will come into its own.'"

This exchange helps contextualize and make sense of the vaguer pronouncements of Shoghi Effendi on the issue, e.g. in Messages to the Baha'i World (p. 103) in the 1950s:

"Against the background of these afflictive disturbances--the turmoil and tribulations of a travailing age--we may well ponder the portentous prophecies uttered well-nigh fourscore years ago, by the Author of our Faith, as well as the dire predictions made by Him Who is the unerring Interpreter of His teachings, all foreshadowing a universal commotion, of a scope and intensity unparalleled in the annals of mankind. The violent derangement of the world's equilibrium; the trembling that will seize the limbs of mankind; the radical transformation of human society; the rolling up of the present-day Order; the fundamental changes affecting the structure of government; the weakening of the pillars of religion; the rise of dictatorships; the spread of tyranny; the fall of monarchies; the decline of ecclesiastical institutions; the increase of anarchy and chaos; the extension and consolidation of the Movement of the Left; the fanning into flame of the smouldering fire of racial strife; the development of infernal engines of war; the burning of cities; the contamination of the atmosphere of the earth--these stand out as the signs and portents that must either herald or accompany the retributive calamity which, as decreed by Him Who is the Judge and Redeemer of mankind, must, sooner or later, afflict a society which, for the most part, and for over a century, has turned a deaf ear to the Voice of God's Messenger in this day--a calamity which must purge the human race of the dross of its age-long corruptions, and weld its component parts into a firmly-knit world-embracing Fellowship --a Fellowship destined, in the fullness of time, to be incorporated in the framework, and to be galvanized by the spiritualizing influences, of a mysteriously expanding, divinely appointed Order, and to flower, in the course of future Dispensations, into a Civilization, the like of which mankind has, at no stage in its evolution, witnessed."

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>
To: <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: station of scholars and historians in the Baha'i faith
Date: Thursday, June 10, 1999 1:52 PM

Quotes from Shoghi Effendi:

"Bahá'í scholars and writers will, no doubt, gradually appear, and will as promised by Bahá'u'lláh lend a unique support to the Faith."
Directives, pp. 75-76

Shoghi Effendi surely hopes that before long the Cause may produce scholars that would write books which would be far deeper and more universal in scope, but for the present this is the best we possess to give a general idea as to the history and teachings of the Faith to new seekers. Dawn of a New Day, 38.

It is for the future historian to appraise the value of the mission of each of the four chosen messengers of `Abdu'l-Bahá who, in rapid succession, were dispatched by Him to pacify and reinvigorate that troubled community. His will be the task of tracing, in the work which these deputies of `Abdu'l-Bahá were commissioned to undertake, the beginnings of that vast Administration, the corner-stone of which these messengers were instructed to lay--an Administration whose symbolic Edifice . . . WOB 82-83

The historian of the future, viewing more widely and in fuller perspective the momentous happenings of the Apostolic and Formative Ages of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, will no doubt be able to evaluate accurately and to describe in a circumstantial manner the causes, the implications and the effects of these Divine Messages which, in their scope and effectiveness, have certainly no parallel in the religious annals of mankind. Promised Day is Come, 29-30

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrc@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrc/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

"Ratcheting further and further toward being similar to Scientology" 1999

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole68.htm>

Compare Juan Cole on Baha'i Takfir

https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Juan_Cole_On_Bahai_Takfir.html

"Refuse to set up once again a sect similar to that of the Shi'is." --Baha'u'llah

(Cited in 2002 by "Giangiacomo" <janji@aruba.it>)

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Techniques for saving Iranian Baha'is: and for saving the Baha'i community

Date: Wednesday, August 04, 1999 4:47 PM

I'd like to raise the question of whether we don't see an implicit model for social action in the way the Universal House of Justice and the External Affairs Office of the National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S. has dealt with the issue of the persecution of the Iranian Baha'is.

Let us consider the problem. Under Khomeinism, Iranian Baha'is have been persecuted ruthlessly, though Khomeini's successors preferred jailings, harassment and exclusion from universities and good jobs rather than the more brutal and explicit technique of simple execution, used extensively in the 1980s.

Baha'is are pledged to obey the government in power. So they had to disband their institutions at the command of the Islamic Republic. What could be done?

Well, first, secret contacts were made by leading members of the Baha'i community with the more moderate ayatollahs, pleading for an end to the pogrom. However, many of those moderates, like Shariatmadari, themselves fell out of favor, and these pleadings were decisively rebuffed by Khomeini.

In the second stage, the Baha'i institutions began providing information on persecution to Amnesty International, the European Parliament, the United Nations High Commission on Human Rights, and the US congress. This information, provided as part of a concerted lobbying campaign orchestrated by a hired Public Relations firm working for the US NSA, resulted in widespread and frequent condemnations of the Iranian government for its treatment of the Baha'is in the late 1980s. These condemnations were among the reasons for which Rafsanjani, on becoming President after Khomeini's death, backed off the executions. I think only one Baha'i was executed in all the time he was President, 1989-1997.

Of course, Baha'is continued to face discrimination in the 1990s, and the Baha'i institutions have publicized these facts. Note that they do so in direct defiance of the Iranian state, which has repeatedly condemned Iranian Baha'is for sharing information with UN investigators, and the execution of one in 1992 appears to have been largely for this "crime." The Baha'is are actively if peacefully disobeying the government in this regard.

So the model of social action I see being endorsed here by the Universal House of Justice and the US NSA is something like this:

When a group of persons encounters significant long-term injustice at the hands of duly constituted authorities, their first response should be privately to contact those authorities, lay out the facts, and make a formal complaint. If the complaint succeeds, then no need for further action.

But what if the complaint fails? The extreme-orthodox faction in the Baha'i community would have us believe that there is no recourse if the duly constituted authorities, governmental or religious, decline to offer redress for injustice.

But that isn't what our dear brothers on the House of Justice did, in the face of the recalcitrance of Supreme Jurisprudent Ali Khamenei, who in 1991 worked out a scheme to prevent Iranian Baha'is from going to university or ever having good jobs.

They continued to defy the Iranian government, holding press conferences, assiduously lobbying the UN, the European Parliament, and the US Congress, simply by politely making information available. When newly-elected President Muhammad Khatam in 1997 spoke of guaranteeing the rights of all Iranians, the US NSA wrote him a cheeky open letter asking him if he would include the Baha'is. They knew very well such a letter would be unwelcome and would put Khatami on the spot. They were defying him.

This model of social action has been relatively successful in curbing the worst abuses, though our dear friends among the Iranian Baha'is still suffer many outrageous disabilities.

But it seems to me that this model of social action has implications within the Baha'i community, as well. If Baha'is feel deprived of fundamental rights by the Baha'i institutions, I think their first duty is to seek contact with those institutions, to explain themselves, and to seek redress. But if the institutions insist on continuing to act in a flagrantly unjust manner, then I think that should be publicized to the outside world and within the community. This is the only way to prevent the faith from ratcheting further and further toward being similar to Scientology in its treatment of adherents, given the absence of a Guardian.

It seems to me sheer and unmitigated hypocrisy to say that this model of social action cannot be applied to the Baha'i community. If it is applied by the Baha'i community to an elected and duly constituted government in Iran, then it is being put forward as a legitimate form of social action. And it is one of which I approve.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, <https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i

<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0231110812/qid=933798168/sr=1-1/002-1144549-0047403>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>

Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

See also Nima6.htm on Scientology and the Baha'i Faith

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Baha'u'llah against tyranny
Date: Friday, January 29, 1999 5:37 PM

Dear Paul:

I have never understood what critics of Baha'u'llah meant when they called him tyrannical.

Baha'u'llah denounced tyranny. Repeatedly. He condemned absolute monarchy and despotism. He said the best form of government is a parliamentary democracy. And he said he had no desire to intervene, or to have his religion, intervene in civil governance. Calling him tyrannical is like saying James Madison had secret Monarchical tendencies. It bewilders me.

And it simply is not true that he imposed dogmas on people. He repeatedly refused to do that. He said everyone is at a different maqa:m or spiritual stage, with different perceptions (idra:k), so that you couldn't expect people to agree on doctrinal beliefs.

Here is what he wrote about political absolutism, probably with regard to the Ottoman empire in the late 1860s, from:
<https://h-net2.msu.edu/~bahai/trans/vol2/sultah/sultah.htm> :

Translations of Shaykhi, Babi and Baha'i Texts, vol. 2, no. 3 (May, 1998)

Tablet of Baha'u'llah to Ibn-i Asdaq decrying Absolutism

trans. Juan R. I. Cole

Baha'u'llah/Ibn-i Asdaq, n.d.

O Pen, mention when we dispatched our Tablet entitled "the Cry" to the leader of the people. He sent it to those renowned for their knowledge, and once they had read it they were bewildered and spoke forth according to their selfish passions. In truth, your Lord is All-Knowing, All-Encompassing.

One among them said, "He desires absolute power!"

Say: Woe be to you, who are heedless and remote from God! We have commanded [even] the monarchs to toss it behind them, and to advance toward God, the Glorious, the Beauteous. We affirm the appearance of Reason [al-`aql] among all human beings. Therefore, you will see absolutism (as-sultah al-mutlaqah) discarded upon the dust, nor will any approach it. Thus was the matter decreed in a manifest tablet. Say: It [despotism] is the most degraded of stations in my view, though you might see it as the most exalted station. Open your eyes, so that you might recognize the one whose Pen rules over all who are in the heavens and the earth.

Original Arabic Text

Source: Muhammad `Ali Faydi, Khitabat-i Qalam-i A`la dar Sha'n-i nuzul-i Alvah-i Muluk va Salatin, (N.p., 113 B.E.), pp. 69-70.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

For Dr. Linda Walbridge, a prominent anthropologist of Islam, an authority on Shi`ite Islam, and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, also see the following links

"Critics chafe at Baha'i conservatism" By IRA RIFKIN
February 27, 1997, Religion News Service

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/CChafe.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/wrongs.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou2.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/anonymou3.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole38.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole7.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole18.htm>

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/WalbridgeL.htm> Obituary 2002
by Juan Cole

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: Ian Kluge <iankluge@netbistro.com>
Cc: talisman@umich.edu <talisman@umich.edu>
Subject: Freedom of Conscience and Women's Service
Date: Thursday, June 11, 1998 1:57 PM

Dear Ian:

Now you're just being silly. The next dispensation, indeed.

The 1988 decision of the house of justice that it did not have the authority to rule on the issue of women's service on that body was unexceptionable jurisprudence. They are the court of last resort, an issue was brought to them, and they felt it belonged in the realm of interpretation, not in that of legislation; and that the interpretive texts made it impossible to admit women.

There is nothing wrong with any of that. They were given the authority of istinbat or jurisprudential reasoning ('elucidation') by `Abdul-Baha in the Will and Testament. As long as this is their position, it is Baha'i law. Fine. If Vahid Rafati or Mark Hellaby at the Research Department helped with the research, that is fine too. They are very erudite gentlemen and I consider them old friends.

However, the universal house of justice by the explicit text of Baha'u'llah's 8th Ishraq is not bound by the rulings of its predecessors. It may change its rulings. Future houses of justice may decide that the 6th house of justice of 1988 was in error on the woman issue. The laws and ordinances and jurisprudential reasoning of the house of justice are not set in stone. Baha'u'llah deliberately wanted an institution that would not cling to tradition for tradition's sake, but would be alive to the need for changes to meet changing conditions. Given that only 5% of Pakistani women are literate, this may not yet be the time, in world terms, for women to be admitted to the house of justice. Fine. Maybe in 25 years that statistic and others like it in Africa, etc., will have changed dramatically. Then we can talk.

Moreover, in a free society such as the U.S., when the Supreme Court makes a jurisprudential ruling, that also becomes the law of the land. But the decision can be analyzed by professors in law journals. The facts can be looked at again. New interpretations can be put forward by legal scholars.

The Supreme Court is not obliged by any of this to change its mind. Justices sometimes are persuaded they were wrong by a Law Review article. But they don't have to be. They can stick to their guns. And as long as they do, the justices' original ruling is the law, and everyone recognizes that. The Law professors' articles remain so much paper bound on dusty shelves in libraries.

In a totalitarian society, however, once the Politburo has made a ruling, not only does it become the law, it becomes off limits for public comment by others. Law professors don't write articles analyzing the decision or critiquing it or looking again at the evidence. Or at least if they do, they are put in jail.

Now, that is my problem with the Sixth and Seventh universal houses of justice (elected in 1988 and 1993). They lost their moral bearings. They not only delivered the 1988 ruling, but they attempted to make that ruling off limits for public discussion. They censored and suppressed other writing about the issue. They accused Linda Walbridge of making statements contrary to the covenant over it, and summarily tossed Michael McKenny out of the Baha'i faith over it.

The reason this is so terrible is that it contradicts basic Baha'i principle. `Abdul-Baha promised freedom of conscience and speech. He recognized that Baha'i scholars would write on jurisprudence, but insisted that their opinions did not have the force of law unless adopted by the house of justice. Of course he wanted everyone to acknowledge the legitimacy of the house of justice's decisions at any one time, and to follow the law. But the only way to break the law with regard to the 1988 decision would be for a national spiritual assembly member to vote for a woman (some do). Writing research papers about the issue and considering alternatives does not break the law.

Of course, if one conceived of the Baha'i faith as a totalitarian system, then the actions of the 6th and 7th international houses of justice make perfect sense. It is just the same old Politburo censorship. The Politburo has spoken, everyone else must be silent. I don't believe anyone who reads Secret of Divine Civilization, Traveller's Narrative, and Promulgation of Universal Peace with any understanding at all can conclude that what was wanted was a totalitarian system. But that is what the current house of justice is assiduously building. And what is even more frightening is that they are not satisfied to impose this dictatorship and tyranny on Baha'is. They want to become your civil government and impose it on everyone.

These policies are contrary to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights: The Universal Declaration insists that "Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion" (Article 18) and adds that "everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression" (article 19).

And, of course, `Abdul-Baha said,

"Just as in the world of politics there is need for free thought, likewise in the world of religion there should be the right of unrestricted individual belief. Consider what a vast difference exists between modern democracy and the old forms of despotism. Under an autocratic government the opinions of men are not free, and development is stifled, whereas in a democracy, because thought and speech are not restricted, the greatest progress is witnessed. It is likewise true in the world of religion. When freedom of conscience, liberty of thought and right of speech prevail--that is to say, when every man according to his own idealization may give expression to his beliefs--development and growth are inevitable."

As for male chauvinism, I wouldn't have said it necessarily motivated the 1988 ruling of the 6th house of justice. They may have genuinely felt bound by their understanding of the texts. But some subsequent actions seem to me certainly male chauvinist pig-ism. The image of nine men having Dr. Linda Walbridge--a prominent anthropologist of Islam and former associate director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University--accused of 'making statements contrary to the covenant' and chased out of the religion for saying that women should be allowed to serve on the universal house of justice is more eloquent than any argument I could make.

cheers Juan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jricole@my-dejanews.com <jricole@my-dejanews.com>

Subject: destroying intellectuals

Date: Wednesday, January 20, 1999 12:49 PM

In a recent message, Susan Maneck quoted me as saying that "this thing is a totalitarian cult" and that "it destroys any intellectual who gets involved with it."

This message, I would like to point out, was a purely private one sent in the summer of 1996 when the Baha'i administration was investigating and threatening large numbers of my old friends. Obviously, I was over-wrought, and Susan at that point was an old friend who represented herself as sympathetic. Even then, the referent in my own mind of "this thing" was not the Baha'i faith as a whole, but rather its elite power structure.

Unfortunately, Susan Maneck has now turned herself into the Linda Tripp of the Baha'i faith, and is quite unconscionably employing my old private conversations with her as a means of attempting to undermine my credibility. Posting a private message without my permission is a violation of my copyright, and so she is breaking the law as well as being unethical. What she does not realize is that she is simply proving my point. The people giving her her instructions did destroy me as a Baha'i intellectual, and now they have also succeeded in suborning her. Of course, in employing private communications to discredit people, she is just doing what Baha'i administrators like Firuz Kazemzadeh did to the Dialogue editors. It is not a new thing among those people.

I continue to deny that in the period 1972-1996 I ever contravened the Baha'i covenant in any way. I continue demand that any credible evidence be presented that I ever did so. I continue to affirm that the UHJ had me accused of doing so in April of 1996. In so doing, all they did was reveal what kind of organization they are running.

cheers Juan Cole

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network =====
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Juan Cole - Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Cole.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

To: house@usq.edu.au <house@usq.edu.au>

Subject: Re: Baha'i backbiting

Date: Tuesday, February 23, 1999 2:03 AM

Dear Ron:

There is nothing to be puzzled by. Right wing Baha'is only like to hear the sound of their own voices (which are the only voices they will admit to being "Baha'i" at all).

Obviously, the world is so constructed that they cannot in fact only hear their own voices. They are forced to hear other voices that differ from theirs. This most disturbs them when the voices come from enrolled Baha'is or when the voices speak of the Baha'i faith.

The way they sometimes deal with the enrolled Baha'is is to summon them to a heresy inquiry and threaten them with being shunned if they do not fall silent.

With non-Baha'is or with ex-Baha'is, they deal with their speech about the faith by backbiting, slandering and libelling the speaker. You will note that since I've been on this list I have been accused of long-term heresy, of "claiming authority," of out and out lying (though that was retracted, twice), of misrepresentation, of 'playing fast and loose with the facts,' and even of being 'delusional.' I have been accused of all these falsehoods by Baha'is, by prominent Baha'is. I have been backbitten by them.

This shows that all the talk about the danger a sharp tongue can do, all the talk about the need for harmony, for returning poison with honey, for a sin-covering eye, is just talk among right wing Baha'is. No one fights dirtier than they when they discover a voice they cannot silence and cannot refute.

Paul Johnson has seen all these things, as well, for the past five years. He can explain it to you.

cheers Juan

In article <36D10800.2B8A3286@usq.edu.au>, Ron House <house@usq.edu.au> wrote:
> jrcole@umich.edu wrote:

> I must admit I am quite puzzled how this dispute started. I acknowledge > it is probably my failing for not following the thing closely enough, > but I now feel impelled to ask: is there any way we can either come to a > clear understanding or else shelve the whole thing?
Clearly we readers > who don't have an administrative axe to grind would much rather discuss > your wonderful translations and other contributions than see your and > others' energies sapped in this manner.
>
> --
> Ron House house@usq.edu.au
>
> You can only be right if you have the courage to be wrong.
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: bickering intellectuals or why can't the UHJ read texts?
Date: Sunday, January 31, 1999 2:23 PM

It their reply to Susan the universal house of justice quoted `Abdul-Baha as saying,

"In the religion of God, there is freedom of thought because God, alone, controls the human conscience, but this freedom should not go beyond courtesy."

In other words, `Abdul-Baha thought Baha'is should be able to express their conscientiously held views politely as much as they liked. Which is all the Walbridges, McKenny, Scholl, myself and their other victims did.

The rest of the letter Susan quoted goes on to abrogate that right on all sorts of vague and arbitrary grounds, contradicting the clear text of the Master. As someone who reads texts for a living, I continue to be astonished that these people think they can get away with playing such a hypocritical shell game.

They say:

>"conscience is never to be coerced, whether by other individuals or >institutions.

These are the people who sent their man to my own home to interrogate me and then had me (a well known professor of Middle East Studies at a major university!) threatened with being shunned unless I fell silent! If that isn't the coercion of conscience then I don't know what is!

Then they say:

>As to the thoughts of the > Baha'is themselves -- that is those who have chosen to follow the religion > of Baha'u'llah -- the institutions do not busy themselves with what > individual believers think unless those thoughts become expressed in > actions which are inimical to the basic principles and vital interests of > the Faith.

In other words, whenever these people in Haifa don't like something that is being said by an enrolled Baha'i, they can arbitrarily charge her with the expression of heretical thoughts inimical (in their view) to the basic principles of the Baha'i faith. I.e. they are claiming the right of authoritative Interpretation of the Baha'i scriptures and the right to impose their interpretation on Baha'i individuals, in direct contradiction of the Guardian's explicit text. And then they say that they don't coerce consciences!

It is also worrisome that they had to look in the dictionary to find the meaning of conscience, and that they don't seem too comfortable with the results of their foray into the lexicons.

Well, as Machiavelli said, it takes luck or skill to get into power in a theocracy, but once you're ensconced there you don't need either luck or skill to remain in power.

cheers Juan

Juan Cole

History, U of Michigan

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

See also:

Making the Crooked Straight - Reviewed by Denis MacEoin posted on H-Bahai, 2001

See also Cole on Denis MacEoin

From: Juan Cole <jricole@my-deja.com>

Subject: Re: Book recommendation

Date: Friday, July 09, 1999 5:31 PM

Denis MacEoin is from a middle class background in Belfast. He became a Baha'i around 1965 and quickly emerged as a rising young star in the movement. He was among the active youth invited to the Holy Land in 1968 for the commemoration of Baha'u'llah's advent there and the revelation of the Tablet of the Kings. Denis thereafter asked the Universal House of Justice whether it would be better if he went pioneering or went into the academic study of the faith. That first House of Justice, bless their souls, wrote him back that both were valuable to the cause and the choice was his.

Denis did an MA in Islamics at Edinburgh, then a Ph.D. in Persian at Cambridge. He wrote a magnificent dissertation, From Shaykhism to Babism, which was foundational for academic studies of the religion for the subsequent generation. He learned near native fluent Persian and good Arabic, and was poised to become a major figure in Middle East and in Baha'i studies.

However, as Denis became more and more knowledgeable about the historical realities of the faith, he began to question fireside pieties. The tiny UK Baha'i community of only a couple thousand, then, was extremely conservative (in all senses of the world-those people mainly voted Thatcher later), and they began attacking Denis for not repeating the same-old same-old party line. He co-taught a summer school with A.Q. Fayzi, where the latter, whose family are mostly mullas in the seminary city of Qum in Iran, was outraged by Denis's academic approach and attacked him viciously. Finally David Hoffman and Ian Semple of the UHJ met with Denis and were "harsh" to him; I presume he was threatened with ostracism, as have been most Baha'i academics who went into Middle Eastern studies and who dared actually write something solid.

Denis went off to Morocco in 1980-81, and while there became so filled with despair about the secretive cult-like aspects of the faith, which had led to the attacks on him merely for thinking and researching, that he resigned from it while there. The Saudis later had him fired from his academic position at Newcastle, because of his Baha'i background and interests, so his career was twice martyred for the Faith, once by Haifa and once by Riyadh.

He became a fine novelist, writing as Daniel Easterman and Jonathan Aycliffe, and continues with that role today. His unfortunate experiences with the Dark Side of the Baha'i faith, its extreme anti-intellectualism and prejudice against thinking people, deprived him of his faith altogether, in the end.

He did continue to publish some excellent scholarship on the Babi and Baha'i movements, of which Rituals is possibly the best. The rituals MacEoin discusses are those prescribed by Baha'u'llah, even though it is true most Westerners don't practice them.

There are several complete ignoramuses among the Baha'is running around Europe claiming the title of "Members fo the Institution of the Learned" who don't know a hundredth what Denis MacEoin knows about the Baha'i faith. He was the truly learned one. And he was made to drink the hemlock for it, by the narrow-minded, which is the fate of most thinking persons who become active in the Baha'i community.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity & Millennium: Genesis of Baha'i
<https://www.kalimat.com/>

Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/>
Share what you know. Learn what you don't.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck1.htm>

See also Susan Maneck, Baha'i scholar:

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Maneck8.htm>

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>

Subject: Re: Ms Maneck, Dr Cole

Date: Sunday, February 21, 1999 2:32 AM

I would like everyone to take note that I was accused of lying (again), and this is now being retracted (again), although I am still accused of playing fast and loose with the facts (which I don't and haven't). I am also accused of being "delusional" because I am suspicious of the motives of posters I don't know in cyberspace, when in fact it would be a sign of dysfunction if one wasn't. As for Maneck's relationship to the Baha'i authorities, she has herself boasted to common friends of ours of corresponding with House members about how to 'deal with Cole', and she served as a spy on an academic editorial committee for counselor Ghadirian, passing over to him detailed reports on confidential discussions, one of which she accidentally shared with an editor. And now she wishes to make my revelation of this role itself a reason for which I should be thought delusional?

Denis MacEoin once said on British television that if the rightwing Baha'is ever got into power they would put dissidents in mental asylums, just as the Soviet authorities had. When you have highly connected Baha'i ideologues going about trying to smear people as 'delusional' for daring to disagree with the party line, you begin to see what Denis was talking about.

cheers Juan

In article <19990220214934.07234.00000793@ng-ch1.aol.com>,

smaneck@aol.com (Smaneck) wrote:

> Dr. Cole writes:

>

> > Susan's response to you once again contains > > an accusation that I am "lying." Whenever I have confronted her on this, she > > has backed down and agreed that I believe what I say to be true. So has > > Schaut. So both have admitted that in fact they don't believe me to be > > lying, which is usually defined as voicing a deliberate falsehood (something > > I've never done about the Baha'i faith).

>

> Okay let me put it this way. Dr. Cole is uttering > things that are false when he has evidence > that runs in exactly the opposite direction. He also deliberately presents > materials in ways he knows are misleading such presenting rumors of why the > deep south teaching was stopped in such a way that those not familiar with the > members of the NSA would be left with the definite impression that members of > that body like Dr. Khazemzadeh were racist.

>

> I think, none-the-less that Dr. Cole does believes that the gist of what he > says is accurate, so much so that the does not think it wrong to play fast

and > loose with the details in order to prove it. Also, when he starts ranting

about > my getting "marching orders" from the World Centre or talks about secret

cabals

> running the Faith, or just now, starts insinuating that even non-Baha'is might > be working for the AO, one does begin to wonder if there isn't some genuine > delusions involved.

>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==-----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Obedience, humanism, etc
Date: Saturday, April 24, 1999 7:54 PM

Dear Adelard:

It is very bad for the Baha'i community to capitulate to the sort of unthinking infallibilism you have proposed. It leads to rigidity and stagnation, and it places an unfair and impossible burden on our ordinary, every-day human brothers in the faith, the members of the House of Justice, who cannot possibly live up to those sorts of expectations and should not have to try.

I have to say that there was a time I was really angry with them because they bungled the advent of Baha'i cyberspace and the advent of Baha'i academia. But on mature reflection I see that it was unreasonable for me to expect them to deal unerringly with these new and unfamiliar phenomena, especially since they were outside both the expertise of the individual members and the purview of the House's sphere of authority. Let's not ask so much of them, let's not be so inhumane.

Baha'u'llah most assuredly never called the Universal House of Justice "infallible." There is a difference between being generally fortified by inspiration and never being wrong. Moreover, he did not give its members the charge of doing any blessed thing that comes into their heads. In the 8th Ishraq it is written:

"Inasmuch as for each day there is a new problem and for every problem an expedient solution, such affairs should be referred to the House of Justice that the members thereof may act according to the needs and requirements of the time. They that, for the sake of God, arise to serve His Cause, are the recipients of divine inspiration from the unseen Kingdom. It is incumbent upon all to be obedient unto them. All matters of [leadership (siyasat)] should be referred to the House of Justice, but acts of worship ('ibadat) must be observed according to that which God hath revealed in His Book."

He said they were solely in charge of matters of siyasat, not of matters of `ibadat (Ishraq 8). Now, siyasat has two main meanings in 19th century Persian, leadership and imposing sanctions on wrong-doers. It doesn't have anything to do with a fatuous phrase (and gross mistranslation) like 'affairs of state,' for heaven's sake. `Ibadat, on the other hand, refers to matters of worship, which I take to be rituals, prayer, theology and other faith-related things. There is no point in Baha'u'llah's going to the trouble of saying the House of Justice has charge of one thing but not the other if Baha'is are going to turn around and put it in charge of everything. That clearly was not the Prophet-Founder's intent, or He would have said so. He delineated a legitimate sphere of authority for the House of Justice, viz., siyasat (leadership or enacting laws punishing wrongdoing). Since there is no longer a Guardian who can keep them on the straight and narrow, they may sometimes stray into matters of `ibadat/worship, like individuals' theological views, but when they do it should be firmly and politely pointed out to them.

In World Order of Baha'u'llah (147-50) Shoghi Effendi is very straightforward that the House of Justice has had limitations placed upon it as to its authority:

"Severally, each [the Guardianship and the House of Justice] operates within a clearly defined sphere of jurisdiction; each is equipped with its own attendant institutions--instruments designed for the effective discharge of its particular responsibilities and duties. Each exercises, within the limitations imposed upon it, its powers, its authority, its rights and prerogatives." WOB

He then goes on to spell out what the House of Justice cannot do:

"From these statements it is made indubitably clear and evident that the Guardian of the Faith has been made the Interpreter of the Word and that the Universal House of Justice has been invested with the function of legislating on matters not expressly revealed in the teachings. The interpretation of the Guardian, functioning within his own sphere, is as authoritative and binding as the enactments of the International House of Justice, whose exclusive right and prerogative is to pronounce upon and deliver the final judgment on such laws and ordinances as Bahá'u'lláh has not expressly revealed. Neither can, nor will ever, infringe upon the sacred and prescribed domain of the other." WOB

I should think nothing could be clearer than Shoghi Effendi's statement. The Universal House of Justice does not have the authority to Interpret the Baha'is scriptures authoritatively. And, if these quotes were not enough, the House of Justice wrote me, personally, in the early 1990s affirming that they did not have the right to Interpret.

So, Derrick is perfectly correct here.

cheers Juan

In article <924986719.213.26@news.remarQ.com>,

"Mike C" <seascape@scruznet.com> wrote:

> Derrick,

>

> It is so sad to see that you can question the UHJ. Don't you know > that Baha'u'llah promissed guidance to the UHJ. Don't you know that if you > question the UHJ , its means you are questioning God. Don't you > know that this is a part of covenant established by baha'u'llah.

> Let me know if you need to know about that, i will love to give or > tell you where you can find it .Otherwise, > if you knew about that,you will be questionning Baha'u'llahah, himself, i > will tell you to investigate again the station of baha'u'llah, his > authority ,in brief who is he for mankind in this day

>

> I think you worry a lot about Bahai administration,Those worries have > be happenning since hundrends and hundreds of years by believers of > differents religions (multitudes of sects were born since the passing of > their leaders or prophets).

> This day is the day of God , there is no worry any more for those who > know and believe in this faith, the UHJ have been promised to be guided in > all its decisions.(the scriptures of past says that in this day ,God > will come down and reign with mankind).

>

> Adelard R

>

> >> >Dear Melissa,

> >> >

> >> > I will repeat, yet again, the House does NOT have the right of > >> >Interpretation! Period! And the Office of the Secretariat _certainly_ > cannot > >> >abrogate the clear Texts of the Central Figures (God knows they've > tried!).

> >> >If you wish to ignore the clear Writings and choose to obey letters > written > >> >by ordinary Baha'is, then please do so. If I were a Baha'i, I could not;

> for
> >> >I would be a Hypocrite. Darrick Evenson
> >> >
> >>
> >
> >-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==-----
> ><https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own
>
>
--
Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-4036721-8058448>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network ==-----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: sanctions for email
Date: Tuesday, February 23, 1999 1:16 AM

Dear Kathy:

Within the Baha'i administration there are "Auxiliary Board Members" or "Counselors", who are appointed by the elective institutions to impose orthodoxy and encourage proselytization. Although they are said to 'have no power', in fact they wield the most powerful tool of all. They are influential in advising the elective bodies that a Baha'i should be disfellowshipped, ostracized, expelled or shunned. All Baha'is know that being investigated by an ABM or a Counselor could be the prelude to losing a lifetime of friends and family, and are usually quite frightened at the prospect.

Since the rise of email, there have been a number of instances in which individual Baha'is have been summoned to meetings with these officials and accused of heretical views expressed in their email postings, with demands that they recant these views and henceforth fall silent. Frequently a sheaf of archived email messages to which exception has been taken is sent along to the poster. I was myself investigated for my email postings and threatened with being sanctioned over them, but I am only one of dozens. Typically, those threatened want to hush it up, and aside from emailing me (I have a vast archive of such incidents) they simply fall silent. You will no doubt yourself see that some of the more liberal voices on this forum gradually disappear as they are identified and threatened. Or most likely you won't notice that a regular has mysteriously disappeared.

Such a meeting was held on Monday in a Midwestern state with an old friend of mine who is accused of holding the wrong theology about Baha'u'llah among other things. (He is not an academic, by the way). This is an everyday occurrence in the Baha'i faith, at least in North America. I have come to think about the Baha'is as an odd sort of Mennonite or 7th Day Adventist. They are skittish about certain kinds of technology, especially printing and the Internet, just as the Mennonites saw the telephone as a menace. Rightwing Baha'is are sort of like a peace church, which seeks to control conflict by the threat or reality of shunning, and which demands lack of "ego" from the individual Baha'i.

Thinking of them like this, despite the admitted 'stretch' involved, helps me to put into perspective the very controlling aspect of the community as well as its admirable devotion to peace and world-mindedness. (It is no fun to be a nonconformist among the Amish, either; you end up being shunned; ditto with Watchtower). One difference is that the Baha'is on the whole have managed to have the controlling aspect of their community not foregrounded in the consciousness of mainstream U.S. society, and it can even remain hidden from a lot of ordinary Baha'is. After all, if you've never been personally threatened; and if those in your community who have been threatened are concerned enough about their reputations to keep it to themselves; then you would never know it had gone on, would you?

cheers Juan

In article <7as8vu$s4c@drn.newsguy.com>, Kathy Pascoe <kathy@scconsult.com> wrote:
> In article <7antko$V8e$1@nnrp1.dejanews.com>, jrcole@umich.edu says...

> >
> >There have been people who pleaded with me to confide in them, saying > >they were 'objective' or were 'friends' and then immediately forwarded > >my messages to officials.
>
> Except in limited cases [1], the use of someone's email or newsgroup > postings against him or her in Real Life is repulsive to me.
>

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: jrcole@umich.edu <jrcole@umich.edu>
Subject: Re: Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Freedom of Conscience
Date: Wednesday, February 03, 1999 9:17 AM

From the Universal Declaration of Human Rights:

Article 18.

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

Juan Cole
History, U of Michigan
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

-----== Posted via Deja News, The Discussion Network -----
<https://www.dejanews.com/> Search, Read, Discuss, or Start Your Own

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: <jricole@my-dejanews.com>

Subject: service and its prerequisites

Date: Thursday, May 13, 1999 7:33 PM

I think you have to make a distinction, which I know a lot of Baha'is feel it difficult to make, between questioning the legitimacy and integrity of the Universal House of Justice and questioning any particular action that any particular House of Justice has taken.

There are lots of people who know a fair amount about the Baha'i faith and who simply reject it altogether, including rejecting both Baha'u'llah (as a fraud or misguided, etc.) and rejecting the Universal House of Justice along with him. I should think that is the most extreme "questioning" of the authority of the UHJ.

Then there are people who accept Baha'u'llah but who reject the legitimacy of the Universal House of Justice. The mainstream Baha'is call these alternative Baha'is "covenant breakers." This is also a pretty extreme calling into question the legitimacy and authority of the UHJ.

Then there are mainstream Baha'is who accept the legitimacy of the Universal House of Justice but who differ about some of the policies it adopts at any one time. Most Baha'is at least privately have some questions about some such policies, so this is not unusual.

Then there are knee-jerk loyalists who think it wrong ever to question any least pronouncement, policy or action of the UHJ. Shoghi Effendi referred to such individuals as the "extreme orthodox," and condemned them. But they are very powerful in the current community. Many of them are essentially cultists.

It isn't logical to ban questioning of policies. After all, the composition of the UHJ changes over time, and so do its policies. Baha'u'llah instructed the UHJ to make constant inquiries into the views and needs of the community. If it stood above the community so exaltedly as the "extreme orthodox" imagine, it would not need to do so.

Some policies change for the bad, and then we have to let the UHJ know this. I can't remember the UHJ saying "boo!" to Baha'i academics in the 1960s and early 1970s, whereas in the 1990s it has deliberately tried to force a number of them out of the faith (and largely succeeded in this). There is a difference between the 2nd House of Justice, 1968-1973, which had liberals like David Ruhe and Hugh Chance on it, and the archconservative 7th & 8th Houses of Justice, of 1993-1998 and 1998-, on which deeply conservative individuals, many of whom are former Inquisitors as Counselors for Protection, predominate.

Now, Shoghi Effendi said quite plainly that without a living Guardian, the UHJ would not have the means of precisely defining its legitimate sphere of action. That is, a guardianless House of Justice would occasionally blunder into an area not under its jurisdiction, and would have no living Guardian to rein it in. Shoghi Effendi was also explicit that occasionally the Guardian and the rest of the UHJ would differ on policy, and that the Guardian was not to arbitrarily over-rule the UHJ except when it strayed from Legislation into Interpretation.

Members of the current, 8th UHJ are convinced that the Baha'i faith is a dogmatic religion, and that the UHJ has the authority to determine the dogma, which it may then impose on individual Baha'is. If these believers decline to be imposed upon, the UHJ may order the individuals silenced, sanctioned, or shunned.

But Baha'u'llah was quite clear that the religion he was creating was not a religion of dogmas! Nor was he creating a vehicle for the silencing, sanctioning or shunning of members of the human race. He explicitly forbade the UHJ in Ishraq 8 from interfering in `ibadat or matters purely pertaining to scripture, and worship and private belief. He said they should concern themselves with matters of leadership or legalities (siyasat). The Guardian explained further that the scope of the UHJ was solely legislation.

Thus, according to the explicit Baha'i texts, the UHJ is not to interfere in matters of worship, is not to intervene against a believer merely for conscientious speech, and is to stick to making laws. I am not aware that the UHJ has in fact made any laws at all, though that was supposed to be their function.

Instead, they have done things like chase academics such as Dr. Linda Walbridge, a major anthropologist, out of the Baha'i faith for a few harmless emails; they have expelled Michael McKenny for his thoughtful and conscientious emails; they have attempted to dictate to Baha'i academics concerning academic methodology (even though none of the members of the UHJ has the slightest idea what that might be). They are clearly blundering around in the print world and in cyberspace like a bull in a china shop, making a mess of things and harming the reputation and fortunes of the Baha'i faith. And it is because they refuse to recognize that they are a mutilated body in need of the guidance of a living Guardian, which will be forever denied them. When we all accept that, we will be adults standing on our own two feet, exercising our portion of Universal Reason, just as Baha'u'llah predicted and desired.

The policies of the UHJ have prevented literally hundreds of intelligent, capable, devoted Baha'i writers from arising to serve the faith with their pens. They have interfered with Baha'i artists and musicians in ways that discourage them from serving the faith. Dialogue magazine was a major service to the Cause, in the destruction of which the 4th UHJ played a major and sinister role.

Well, the papacy has done a lot of stupid and sometimes criminal things over the centuries, too, but Catholicism survives and there are a lot of Catholics who forgive the past and try to work on the present and future. That the UHJ, a young institution less than 40 years old, shouldn't have found its footing yet, isn't really surprising. And, of course, the rigidity and narrow-mindedness of a lot of Baha'is tends to cause the more liberal-minded and capable ones to leave on a rolling basis, so you have a real problem of the recruitment pool for these institutions being rather limited, with often poor-quality candidates, some of whom are little more than secret cultists.

So the point of my messages is never to "undermine" the Institution of the Universal House of Justice. It was ordained by Baha'u'llah, and when it legislates it should be obeyed. My purpose is to consult about rather severe problems in the deepening and evolvment of the community. There should be a place in the Baha'i faith for college teachers who actually say something interesting about the religion, rather than remaining silent or at risk of being forced out. How can you have a vibrant intellectual life that way? I once wrote the UHJ making this point, and they said they agreed with me. But then they went on to do enormous, though reparable damage, to this very process.

My argument is that consultation is the basis of the Baha'i institutions in Baha'u'llah's teachings, not blind obedience (taqlid). Baha'u'llah promotes consultation, but condemns blind obedience. Baha'u'llah goes so far as to say that the very basis for the authority of the houses of justice is that they are consultative bodies.

So, when a house of justice goes off arrogantly and half-cocked without consulting with the community, and especially with the most relevant or informed or affected portions of the community, it is undermining its own authority in the terms Baha'u'llah sets out. It is this consultation with the community that is the only hope of helping replace the guidance of a living Guardian. The Consensus (ijma`) of the living, contemporary Baha'i community must be recognized as a source of law and policy, and only in this way can the UHJ begin keeping its own activities within the legal bounds of its legitimate sphere of authority. Cyberspace has come along at precisely the right moment to allow such global consultation on the pressing issues facing the community.

Of course, older Baha'is used to a more authoritarian style of administration will resist such freewheeling consultation, and attempt to preserve a top-down, dictatorial approach to authority. They will attempt to shut down open public discussion, depriving themselves, in the process, of the very views Baha'u'llah instructed them to seek out. But such flailing and thrashing about, complete with bluster and threats, the chasing out of capable, devoted believers, and other tragic mistakes, is a passing phase. The genie is out of the bottle, and the Baha'i faith will be a much better place as a result.

cheers Juan

--

Juan Cole, History, U of Michigan, jrcole@umich.edu
<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>
Buy Modernity and the Millennium: The Genesis of the Baha'i Faith at:
<https://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ISBN%3D0231110812/002-403>

--== Sent via Deja.com <https://www.deja.com/> ==--
---Share what you know. Learn what you don't.---

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Juan Cole and Ron House on individual conscience

Doug Martin & individual conscience menu....
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/DMartin.htm>

----- Original Message -----

From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Sent: Sunday, May 12, 2002 10:00 PM
Subject: Re: Individual conscience...

Hi, folks. I don't check this board too often, but I happened to, tonight.

The original discussion was more important than the one you've gotten off on.

But I just did want to intervene to express outrage that Baha'u'llah's writings were so wretchedly misused to attack the importance of individual conscience. Baha'u'llah himself speaks of the centrality of the latter. What do you think he means when he attacks blind obedience and insists that justice consists of seeing things with your own eyes. That's the individual conscience at work. It is called d.ami:r and wujda:n in Arabic and Baha'u'llah has nothing but praise for its working. `Abdul-Baha also praised it.

The quotes condemning "self" by Baha'u'llah are not condemnations of the individual conscience. The word for "self" in the original is

"nafs." The Muslim mystics spoke of various kinds of "self," good and bad. The worst is an-nafs al-ammarah bi su', or the self that is at the command of evil. It is, in other words, the self of carnal passions, unbridled desires. That is the "self" Baha'u'llah condemned. The word for individual would be quite different, as would the word for conscience.

In fact, conscience is the exact opposite of the "self" condemned by Baha'u'llah, since it is the working of ethical reasoning inside the individual.

So, to quote Baha'u'llah condemning self and passion and to equate that with a condemnation of the individual's ethical conscience, is an absolute travesty. The horrible thing is that there are Baha'is who read the scriptures in this insane way, and maybe even a lot of them.

Douglas Martin hates individual conscience because he is a cultist. Cultists want to control people, and don't want any pesky objections when they behave dictatorially. Conscience leads people to object when they witness injustice.

As for backbiting people, here's a beaut. In 1982 when I was a pioneer in India, doing travel teaching for the Indian NSA and also doing some translation work for the House of Justice, Doug Martin told more than one person that he considered me "a covenant breaker." These persons later became my friends and told me what Martin had said. They are persons of absolute integrity, and I have no doubt that they have spoken correctly. It is no accident that it was after Martin got himself elected to the UHJ in 1993 that the attitude of the House changed so dramatically toward Baha'i thinkers like myself, who had earlier been encouraged, and we started receiving secret visits from Martin's cronies threatening us with being declared CBs if we did not fall silent. Martin has long had a cultic attitude, and now he is in a position to implement it at the highest levels of the Baha'i institutions.

So, dear friends, not only have I been backbit, I've been turned in the eyes of perhaps a majority of US Baha'is into a cartoon villain whom it is perfectly alright to backbite in the most vicious way. And it all started with Martin's viciousness and tyrannical impulses, his narrow-minded fundamentalism, as far back as the early 1980s.

cheers Juan Cole

----- Original Message -----

From: "Juan Cole" <jricole@my-deja.com>

Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai

Sent: Monday, May 13, 2002 2:27 PM

Subject: Re: Individual conscience...

Dave, these things are difficult to discuss in the abstract.

Individual conscience (vujdan, damir) is ethical reasoning.

Revelation contains the ethics. Conscience is how you apply them in your individual life.

The more cult-like elements in the Baha'i faith want you to give up your individual ability to reason ethically once you enter the faith.

Thus, if you see Baha'i officials repeatedly doing something wrong, and you also see that appeals to the higher-ups are stonewalled so that the wrongdoing continues, you are expected just to keep your silence about it all. (Remind anyone of the pedophilia scandal in the Roman Catholic Church?)

Anytime any group of people tells you that 1) you are not allowed publicly to criticize their power elite and 2) that you must give up your individual ability to reason ethically and just fall lockstep behind whatever the infallible leaders decide--then you are dealing with a cult.

Any time a person buys into propositions 1) and 2), he or she has become a cultist. Any time he or she buys into all this and then tries to hide the fact, or obscure it for others, or engage in misdirection by launching stock accusations at anyone who won't go along, then that person has him or herself become a cultist. That is only one step away from the People's Temple in Guyana or the Koreishites at Waco. Once someone gives up the right to use his or her individual conscience, there is no reason not to drink the poison coolaid, or not to set the children on fire.

It is for this reason, to protect the Cause of God from slipping into cultism, that Baha'u'llah and `Abdul-Baha so heavily praised seeing with your own eyes and not with the eyes of others (i.e. not with the eyes of the NSA or the house of justice), and that they so heavily praised freedom of conscience and forbade Baha'i institutions to interfere with it.

Douglas Martin wants to repeal that part of the Revelation that sanctifies the conscience of the individual believer. He wants to do so because he gets more power and possibly more wealth that way. Trying to repeal part of the Revelation for your own

selfish purposes is a form of treason to the Faith.

cheers Juan

----- Original Message -----

From: "Ron House" <house@usq.edu.au>
Newsgroups: alt.religion.bahai,talk.religion.bahai
Sent: Wednesday, May 15, 2002 10:50 PM Subject: Re: Doug Martin, member of bahai universal house of justice - "Dangerous Delusion from Christianity" = Individual Conscience

Freethought110 wrote:

**>
> Ron,
>
> You once stated here (or was it talisman9) that Peter Khan said something > similar to you.

Indeed. I don't doubt at all that Doug Martin expressed sentiments along the lines of those reported. I just doubt that he used those _exact_ words in expressing them. In other words, whilst I think that criticism of the general viewpoint is justified, I don't agree that it is valid to make an argument that hinges on the precise words in the passage (unless we can get verification that it was transcribed from a tape, thus eliminating an important source of error). I know most commentary here isn't doing that, but the one comment seemed to do so (to my mind, at least).

Likewise, I am prepared to testify in any court that Peter Khan expressed that same viewpoint (very forcefully, in fact), but I cannot testify to the precise words he used when he did so.

For the record, the general thrust of Khan's statement
was:

1) When you become a Baha'i, that is the end of your independent search for truth;

(shortly after, in response to a question on conscience:)

2) (Repeated the question, then responded) In the Baha'i Faith, the writings are our guide, and the directions of the House take precedence over our consciences. (Explained further at some length.)

Now the above is ONLY the general thrust of the discussion; the words used are mine, as this was two decades ago, except that I am close to certain he used the phrase "end of your independent search for truth" or something almost identical to it. That phrase stuck because it was quite theatrical the way he did it, leaving it hanging there some seconds for maximum shock value before proceeding.

--

Ron House house@usq.edu.au

<https://www.sci.usq.edu.au/staff/house>

"Every time you manage to close the door on Reality, it comes in through the window." - (Unknown).

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@u...>
Date: Thu Dec 5, 2002 2:41 am Subject: Re: [talisman9] Problems with Facts

No, I cannot publish anything at all in Baha'i-run "journals." I have tried and been told no. The issue is not what I might have to say but who I am. The allegation that if only I tried I might succeed functions as a smokescreen to any outsiders or gullible insiders who might be listening. It is a falsehood pure and simple. It is like saying Alison could publish in Baha'i Studies Review (now under new, less troublesome editorship). She can't.

The Baha'i system works in an Orwellian way. Very strict behavioral limits, often somewhat arbitrary, are set up. And if someone trips over them, they are required to allow themselves to be shafted without protest. If they kick up a fuss they become non-persons for official purposes. There is a difference between being a non-person and being shunned. I am not officially shunned (as if I would care one way or another), but I am an official non-person.

The purpose of having this system where it is so easy to turn insiders into outsiders is to maintain very strict control over the community by its leaders. The idea is that everyone still on the inside will fear being made a non-person or being ostracized or being shunned, and so will keep quiet and let the leadership do as it pleases with them. Silent suffering of tyranny and injustice from one's leaders is the actual definition of a Baha'i in good standing.

Of course, this requirement is cult-like. As with Roman Catholicism, where excommunication plays a similar if far less Draconian role, it produces a system full of corruption and unsavory practices that are hidden from the ordinary believers. Unfortunately the Baha'i faith is not important enough for the press to take an interest in it. Otherwise there are as many juicy stories in Wilmette as in Boston.

Anyone who has "trust" that the so-called universal house of justice would be any better at running people's affairs than Cardinal Law and the Vatican have been is in for a rude surprise. Infallible religious leaders aren't good for people. They literally screw them over.

And, of course, none of this social control has anything at all to do with poor Baha'u'llah, who believed in democracy and freedom of speech and giving people their heads. Makes a person believe in the 2nd Law of Thermodynamics.

cheers Juan

www.juancole.com

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Newsgroups: talk.religion.bahai, alt.religion.bahai
From: Juan Cole <jric...@my-deja.com>
Date: 2000/06/27
Subject: high Baha'i divorce rate

<https://groups.google.com/group/alt.religion.bahai/msg/ffae03c44b6bd7f2?hl=en&dmode=source>

[I posted this to another list. But since Mr. Fiorito brought it up here I thought it may as well be posted for all to make up their minds about.]

An internal Baha'i household survey done in 1987 found that the divorce rate in the U.S. Baha'i community was higher than that in American society as a whole. The report was never released to the public.

My own suspicion is that the high divorce rate has several causes. First of all, Baha'is are encouraged to utopian ways of thinking. Two young people with little in common save that they are recent converts to the faith will be encouraged to marry. I have seen this sort of thing over and over again with my own eyes. This utopianism is widespread in the faith and is the same reason for which so many other Baha'i enterprises end up doing damage to people. That both are "Baha'is" is not a basis for a marriage. One may be a liberal and the other a fundamentalist; current norms against such labeling make it difficult for people to identify one another on that basis, but you'd better believe the difference would show up in a marriage!

Young married Baha'is are also encouraged to pioneer, whether abroad to places like Haiti and Nicaragua, or homefront. Being uprooted from their social networks and families and isolated in a strange environment is not good for them as young marrieds.

In smaller communities the Baha'i committee work is a killer, and may isolate the two spouses, who spend less time together just cocooning and watching t.v.

And it is my estimate that from a third to a half of U.S. Baha'is are what the sociologists would call marginal people--persons with poor social skills who are emotionally needy and who join the faith because they are love-bombed and find a high proportion of other marginals in it. A high rate of marginality is fostered by the cultists who have infiltrated the administration, since only such individuals would put up with being ordered around summarily or would eat up conspiracy theories about bands of dissidents seeking to undermine the administration. Marginals would have higher than normal divorce rates, obviously.

Finally, the Baha'i faith encourages a great deal of ego inflation in the individual. Each Baha'i thinks he or she is saving the world and is a linchpin in the plan of God. This inspires in them great (and often quite misplaced) confidence in their own judgment--I've seen them pronounce authoritatively on astronomy, biology, Qajar history, and many other subjects on which they are woefully ignorant. Such ego inflation and over-confidence in personal judgment would not be good for a marriage.

cheers Juan

[P.S. I should have also included that the exclusiveness of the Baha'i community, non-attendance of non-Baha'is at Feast, pressure to convert spouses, etc., was also probably a contributing factor to Baha'i divorces where only one spouse was Baha'i.

P.P.S. Milissa- I said I thought about 1/3 of Baha'is were lacking in social skills, not all of them. This is a common phenomenon that sociologists have found in New Religious Movements. I'm not sure why you think the statement of it offensive, but I don't know how you can have been around and not met a fair number of such folks.]

Cf. "The very real threat of being declared a Covenant breaker meant my wife had to face the decision of joining me as a heretic or divorcing me so that she could maintain her relationships with her family and other lifelong friends." --Steven Scholl Click his name for his entire letter.

The Baha'i Technique - Slander & Shunning

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/technique.htm>

Compare Shunning > Menu

<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/Shunning.htm>

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

From: Juan Cole <jrcole@umich.edu>
To: bahai-faith@makelist.com <bahai-faith@makelist.com>
Cc: talisman <talisman@umich.edu>; FG@hotmail.com <FG@hotmail.com>
Subject: Re: fw from Poland (was: censorship)
Date: Wednesday, June 10, 1998 3:44 PM

Dear Miguel:

You wrote:

>>The internet is more universal than you imagine.

I am, of course, well aware of how universal the internet is. What I said was that the vast majority of its users are in literate countries and that they tend to be educated. This is true of users in Poland and Germany. I also said that the Baha'is on the internet are in terms of numbers very predominantly in such countries and have such a profile, which is true. There are about 60,000 adult Baha'is in the U.S. (a third of whom are probably interested enough to actually check out the faith on the Net), and about 13,000 adult Baha'is in Canada (ditto). [I am not counting 'mail returns' and 'Baha'is' no one can find].

My point was that to run a Baha'i Usenet group with strict censorship of a sort practiced in Communist China makes no sense, given either the profile of the Net or the profile of the Baha'is on it.

>>I am also a professor at a university, mind you, only an assistant >>professor. No one's threatened me from the Baha'is.

There are lots of things wrong with this way of looking at things. First of all, you don't get threatened unless you are considered 'prominent' and unless you are saying something some Rightwing Baha'i Big Cheese does not like. Does the fact that you haven't been threatened prove anything at all? The question is, is it right for anyone to be threatened? Even in a dictatorship like Nigeria there are intellectuals who haven't been threatened or jailed. Does that mean no one has, or that the regime (R.I.P.) is not a repressive dictatorship?

>>For me the Baha'i Faith >>is first and foremost a religion, and not a university subject. People who >>wish to push the Faith in their own direction, will not win the love and >>respect of the Baha'i institutions, and certainly not of the Baha'is. I am >>quite frankly amazed at the audacity of someone who wishes to take the >>reins of the Faith in their hands.

Are you suggesting that the Baha'i faith is off-limits for academic study? Why in the world did Shoghi Effendi so strenuously encourage the study of comparative religions, Islamics, and history in order to better understand the faith if he did not want Baha'i professors to use those tools to write about it? What kind of weird state of mind produces a conviction that for a Baha'i professor to write academically about the Baha'i faith is an attempt to 'push' it in some 'direction'? How can studying it 'push' it? And if the status quo can't withstand it being studied, isn't there something fishy about the status quo?

>>That is not to say that criticism is not allowed in the Faith. Criticism, >>if it is constructive is not only the right but the obligation of every >>Baha'i, provided that it does not undermine the authority of the Baha'i >>institutions, which were, after, not man-made, but from Baha'u'llah >>Himself, as you no doubt well know, seeing that you are a university >>professor, and that you have written much about the Baha'i Faith.

Criticism of administrators or administrative actions is strictly prohibited in the Baha'i faith. It may be voiced only at Baha'i-only meetings such as Feast, where it can be quietly buried, or in letters to Baha'i administrators, who can refuse to be responsive. 'Prominent' public critics are ruthlessly silenced with threats of being sanctioned or shunned. There is a Party Line in this administrative dictatorship, and everyone is expected to toe it Or Else.

Compare that situation to 'liberal' politics, of which contemporary Baha'is are so disdainful. President Clinton is the most powerful man in the world. But I can write an op-ed piece for a major newspaper and publish it tomorrow publicly criticizing his Middle East policy. He can't and won't punish me for doing so. But your supposedly humble and nice Baha'i administrators would come down on a Baha'i who did the equivalent thing to them like a ton of bricks, have him ostracized, and engage in a global campaign of backbiting against him. So who is better, morally flawed Clinton, or the Baha'i tinpot dictators who are so sanctimonious about their piety? And by the way, the society `Abdul-Baha envisages in Secret of Divine Civilization looks a lot more 'liberal' than current 'Baha'i' practice.

>>Anyway, Baha'is do not quickly put anyone out of the community for >>covenant breaking.

This is a false cover story, Miguel. In fact, Baha'is are routinely accused of covenant breaking by other Baha'is, over mere differences of opinion, in ways that can ruin their reputations. Auxiliary Board members and Counselors routinely spread false rumors about people they don't like as being infirm in the covenant. They call Baha'is of whose views they disapprove to private meetings for interrogations and intimate to them that if they don't fall silent they will be declared covenant breakers. The Baha'is are so terrified as a result that they do just fall silent, and you never hear about the bullying. In late '96 in New Zealand a new Baha'i of 6 months was declared a covenant breaker for refusing to break off an old friendship with a non-Bahai from among Shoghi Effendi's relatives. This person had only been a Baha'i for 6 months, so how long really did she have to respond to the Baha'i authorities' threats? And under such pressure she resigned from the Baha'i faith but was declared a covenant breaker after the fact anyway! All this sort of cult-like behavior is carefully hidden from the outside world and also from naive Baha'i intellectuals.

The whole concept of 'covenant-breaker', which might have some validity with regard to schismatics like Remey, has been expanded to become a control mechanism used to manipulate all thinking Baha'is.

I wrote that many Baha'is >>>believe cities are about to be evaporated, believe women should be >>>subordinate to the men on the uhj, believe that all of modern biological >>>science, based on Darwin is wrong because scripture says so, and in >>>general often behave in ways that are intolerant and narrow-minded, >>>chasing people out of the religion, so that it remains tiny. >>

You said:

>>Well if this is the Baha'i Faith then I don't want it either. How about >>providing some references from the Baha'i writings that support what you >>have written above. You are a university professor, so you have to support >>what you write. Otherwise, your academia falls into question.

I did not say that the Baha'i writings support these beliefs, though `Abdul-Baha is critical of Darwinian biology and Shoghi Effendi in his letters of the late 1940s seems especially apocalyptic. I said that these are widespread beliefs of the actual Baha'is. And they are not nice when you demur from these beliefs, let me tell you. Check out the archived discussions on talisman@indiana.edu on my Web site if you want to see the flaming over such issues.

<https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai.htm>

>>There are 450 Baha'is in Poland. Poland formed its first National >>Spiritual Assembly in 1992. We were allowed to teach the faith here since >>1989. Just under 3 years and boom a National Spiritual Assembly. Not bad >>eh?

I just hope that the Polish Baha'is, having suffered under totalitarianism for so many years, can create a Baha'i community more like that envisaged in Secret of Divine Civilization than like that envisaged by the often quite fascist current Baha'i administrators.

As for your naive assumption that Baha'i administrators don't want power over people, I can only suggest that you keep your eyes on them. Farzam Arbab does have a Ph.D. in economics, but he never did anything professionally with that degree of note. He never bothered even to learn Arabic or Persian. He did pioneer in Latin America, but lots of people have pioneered under difficult conditions. Baha'i friends of mine who had anything to do with him found him arrogant and highly anti-intellectual. He has advocated 'writing off' the Baha'i intellectuals of the West. When he was elected to the house of justice in 1993, the first thing he did was to throw a tantrum over the Baha'i Encyclopedia, a huge project involving hundreds of Baha'i thinkers throughout the world. He pronounced its draft a piece of 'secular humanism' and 'materialism' (borrowing code words from the Christian Fundamentalists). He insisted it all be rewritten in fundamentalist fashion, and went about lambasting everyone who had been involved in its production. These included many devoted Baha'i Ph.D.'s in history, philosophy, and other fields. Arbab set himself above all of them, attacked them, sullied their reputations, made all their work useless, and the rest of the House members let him do it because he cared so much and they didn't really.

So I haven't had a good experience with your nice humble Dr. Arbab. As far as I can see, he's arranged for a large wood-panelled office for himself in Israel, a country with a per capita income of $17,000 a year, with a good view of Haifa's beautiful bay, and is spending $200 million of your money on marble facades for the buildings in which he works. What is his salary, by the way? How is that chauffeured Mercedes paid for? And how did he get appointed to the ITC, from which he was elected to the House, in the first place? Whose client was he? To whom does he owe favors?

I wouldn't have any problem with all this if he hadn't demonstrated himself a tinpot tyrant and gone about ruining the lives of my friends by slandering them, forcing several of them out of the faith with threats of shunning, for daring complain about how he treated the Encyclopedia issue. Very humble. Very nice. Yes.

cheers

Juan Cole
Professor
Department of History
University of Michigan

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

In his book Modernity and the Millennium, published by Columbia University Press in 1998, Professor Cole observes the Baha'i administration has increasingly come under the control of fundamentalists, "stressing scriptural literalism . . . theocracy, censorship, intellectual intolerance, and denying key democratic values (196)." [Available on Amazon.com]

"I am reporting a major shift in the Baha'i faith similar to the take-over of the Southern Baptist convention by fundamentalists in the 1980s and 1990s...."

Conclusion

"While persons with a sectarian outlook certainly came into the faith in the 1970s, so too did many religious liberals from the youth culture. The latter for a time created many local liberal communities and contributed to liberal Baha'i publishing enterprises, but most eventually left the religion, out of frustration with the conservative national and international administration. At the turn of the twenty-first century, the tendency of the movement is less open. Fundamentalists in the international center and their appointees in the "institutions of the learned" dislike the democratic system of governance, are committed to establishing an ultimate Baha'i theocracy, and wish to prohibit academic modes of discourse about the core areas of the religion. All of these themes, if widely adopted, would bring the religion into greater tension with the surrounding U.S. society. (The U.S. is after all a democracy committed to the separation of religion and state where nearly half of citizens go on to some form of higher education). Demands that liberal members avoid discussing their personal views of the faith on public email lists, and threats or sanctions launched at those who demur from the fundamentalist orthodoxy and become "prominent," all point to an increasing exclusivism more characteristic of the sect than of the church. Whereas `Abdu'l-Baha had forbidden in the tolerant Baha'i faith the Muslim custom of issuing rulings that a believer had departed into disbelief, and whereas Shoghi Effendi had insisted that believers be extensively counseled before being punished, the current leadership has initiated a new practice of summary expulsion from the rolls. The community is becoming more ready to exclude, impelled by developments in the religion's world center, by the increasing influence of fundamentalism in American religion generally, and perhaps also by the influx of immigrants, especially some Iranians, from the Third World, as well as by the transparency and consequent open conflict introduced into community discourse by the internet. The community is small and needs its resources, and so the purges have centered on a few vocal individuals rather than being more general, apparently in hopes that the remaining liberals will take the hint and keep their silence in public. In a church, a member born into it might be punished but there would never be any question that he or she was a member. In a sectarian organization, membership is dependent on strict doctrinal and behavioral criteria. In the contemporary Baha'i community, those criteria increasingly consist of assent to, or at least avoiding public dissent from, the fundamentalist tenets discussed above."

Professor Juan R. I. Cole, University of Michigan,
"Fundamentalism in the Contemporary U.S. Baha'i Community,"
Religious Studies Review, Vol. 43, no. 3 (March, 2002):195-217:

[https://www-
personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2002/fundbhfn.htm](https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/2002/fundbhfn.htm)

Originally published in The Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, Volume 37, No. 2 (June 1998): 234-248. The Baha'i Faith in America as Panopticon, 1963-1997
Juan R. I. Cole

https://www-personal.umich.edu/~jrcole/bahai/1999/jssr/bhjssr.htm

Conclusion

Baha'i authorities exercise a great deal of control over discourse in the community, maintaining a virtual monopoly on mass media with a Baha'i audience. This control is felt necessary in part to prevent electioneering and coalition-forming, which are formally barred (despite the informal campaigning discussed above). It is perhaps not incidental that the controls on electioneering and other forms of communication have the side effect of ensuring that criticism of those in power cannot achieve wide circulation, and that the incumbents who exercise that control are reelected every year. Incumbents act aggressively against Baha'i owners of media who demonstrate too much independence. They monitor the speech of individuals extensively through a system of informants, and intervene behind the scenes to silence dissidents with threats of sanctions. They require prepublication censorship of everything Baha'is write about their religion. They intervene in the private businesses of believers where they think the interests of the administration are at stake. They tell private Baha'i publishers what books and even what passages in books they may and may not publish. They employ the threats of loss of administrative rights, humiliation in the national Baha'i newspaper, and even of shunning, in order to control believers.

Having Baha'is inform on their co-believers allows the administration to discover nonconformists who might not toe the party line, and to monitor their activities. The system operates so as to maintain the "orthodox" ideology in power and prevent the election to that institution of dissenters through identifying them and ensuring that they do not become visible in the community. The practice of informing creates a panopticon, as described by Michel Foucault in his discussion of Jeremy Bentham's ideas on penal reform (Foucault 1979). Bentham argued that putting the criminal constantly under observation would deter him from further criminal acts, and would even cause him eventually to internalize the sense of constantly being watched, thus becoming permanently reformed. Conventional Baha'is often never discover the informant system, since they never trip the wire that would lead to their being informed on. The independent-minded, however, usually discover it fairly early in their Baha'i careers, and then have to decide whether they wish to live the rest of their lives in a panopticon. This practice, like many other control mechanisms, discourages spiritual entrepreneurship and keeps the religion from growing in the West.

Homepage

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

The Baha'i Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience
<https://fglaysher.com/bahaicensorship/>

The Bahai Faith & Religious Freedom of Conscience

Project Gutenberg Etext Concerning Christian Liberty, by Luther
#6 in our series by Martin Luther

Concerning Christian Liberty [1520]

by Martin Luther

October, 1999 [Etext #1911]

Project Gutenberg Etext Concerning Christian Liberty, by Luther
This file should be named clbty10.txt or clbty10.zip**

Corrected EDITIONS of our etexts get a new NUMBER, clbty11.txt
VERSIONS based on separate sources get new LETTER, clbty10a.txt

Project Gutenberg Etexts are usually created from multiple editions, all of which are in the Public Domain in the United States, unless a copyright notice is included. Therefore, we usually do NOT keep any of these books in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Concerning Christian Liberty

by Martin Luther

CONCERNING CHRISTIAN LIBERTY

LETTER OF MARTIN LUTHER TO POPE LEO X

Among those monstrous evils of this age with which I have now for three years been waging war, I am sometimes compelled to look to you and to call you to mind, most blessed father Leo. In truth, since you alone are everywhere considered as being the cause of my engaging in war, I cannot at any time fail to remember you; and although I have been compelled by the causeless raging of your impious flatterers against me to appeal from your seat to a future council--fearless of the futile decrees of your predecessors Pius and Julius, who in their foolish tyranny prohibited such an action--yet I have never been so alienated in feeling from your Blessedness as not to have sought with all my might, in diligent prayer and crying to God, all the best gifts for you and for your see. But those who have hitherto endeavoured to terrify me with the majesty of your name and authority, I have begun quite to despise and triumph over. One thing I see remaining which I cannot despise, and this has been the reason of my writing anew to your Blessedness: namely, that I find that blame is cast on me, and that it is imputed to me as a great offence, that in my rashness I am judged to have spared not even your person.

Now, to confess the truth openly, I am conscious that, whenever I have had to mention your person, I have said nothing of you but what was honourable and good. If I had done otherwise, I could by no means have approved my own conduct, but should have supported with all my power the judgment of those men concerning me, nor would anything have pleased me better, than to recant such rashness and impiety. I have called you Daniel in Babylon; and every reader thoroughly knows with what distinguished zeal I defended your conspicuous innocence against Silvester, who tried to stain it. Indeed, the published opinion of so many great men and the repute of your blameless life are too widely famed and too much revered throughout the world to be assailable by any man, of however great name, or by any arts. I am not so foolish as to attack one whom everybody praises; nay, it has been and always will be my desire not to attack even those whom public repute disgraces. I am not delighted at the faults of any man, since I am very conscious myself of the great beam in my own eye, nor can I be the first to cast a stone at the adulteress.

I have indeed inveighed sharply against impious doctrines, and I have not been slack to censure my adversaries on account, not of their bad morals, but of their impiety. And for this I am so far from being sorry that I have brought my mind to despise the judgments of men and to persevere in this vehement zeal, according to the example of Christ, who, in His zeal, calls His adversaries a generation of vipers, blind, hypocrites, and children of the devil. Paul, too, charges the sorcerer with being a child of the devil, full of all subtlety and all malice; and defames certain persons as evil workers, dogs, and deceivers. In the opinion of those delicate-eared persons, nothing could be more bitter or intemperate than Paul's language. What can be more bitter than the words of the prophets? The ears of our generation have been made so delicate by the senseless multitude of flatterers that, as soon as we perceive that anything of ours is not approved of, we cry out that we are being bitterly assailed; and when we can repel the truth by no other pretence, we escape by attributing bitterness, impatience, intemperance, to our adversaries. What would be the use of salt if it were not pungent, or of the edge of the sword if it did not slay? Accursed CF. MANECK ET AL. is the man who does the work of the Lord deceitfully.

Wherefore, most excellent Leo, I beseech you to accept my vindication, made in this letter, and to persuade yourself that I have never thought any evil concerning your person; further, that I am one who desires that eternal blessing may fall to your lot, and that I have no dispute with any man concerning morals, but only concerning the word of truth. In all other things I will yield to any one, but I neither can nor will forsake and deny the word. He who thinks otherwise of me, or has taken in my words in another sense, does not think rightly, and has not taken in the truth.

Your see, however, which is called the Court of Rome, and which neither you nor any man can deny to be more corrupt than any Babylon or Sodom, and quite, as I believe, of a lost, desperate, and hopeless impiety, this I have verily abominated, and have felt indignant that the people of Christ should be cheated under your name and the pretext of the Church of Rome; and so I have resisted, and will resist, as long as the spirit of faith shall live in me. Not that I am striving after impossibilities, or hoping that by my labours alone, against the furious opposition of so many flatterers, any good can be done in that most disordered Babylon; but that I feel myself a debtor to my BRETHREN, FOR THEM brethren, and am bound to take thought for them, that fewer of them may be ruined, or that their ruin may be less complete, by the plagues of Rome. For many years now, nothing else has overflowed from Rome into the world--as you are not ignorant--than the laying waste of goods, of bodies, and of souls, and the worst examples of all the worst things. These things are clearer than the light to all men; and the Church of Rome, formerly the most holy of all Churches, has become the most lawless den of thieves, the most shameless of all brothels, the very kingdom of sin, death, and hell; so that not even antichrist, if he were to come, could devise any addition to its wickedness.

Meanwhile you, Leo, are sitting like a lamb in the midst of wolves, like Daniel in the midst of lions, and, with Ezekiel, you dwell among scorpions. What opposition can you alone make to these monstrous evils? Take to yourself three or four of the most learned and best of the cardinals. What are these among so many? You would all perish by poison before you could undertake to decide on a remedy. It is all over with the Court of Rome; the wrath of God has come upon her to the uttermost. She hates councils; she dreads to be reformed; she cannot restrain the madness of her impiety; she fills up the sentence passed on her mother, of whom it is said, "We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed; let us forsake her." It had been your duty and that of your cardinals to apply a remedy to these evils, but this gout laughs at the physician's hand, and the chariot does not obey the reins. Under the influence of these feelings, I have always grieved that you, most excellent Leo, who were worthy of a better age, have been made pontiff in this. For the Roman Court is not worthy of you and those like you, but of Satan himself, who in truth is more the ruler in that Babylon than you are.

Oh, would that, having laid aside that glory which your most abandoned enemies declare to be yours, you were living rather in the office of a private priest or on your paternal inheritance! In that glory none are worthy to glory, except the race of Iscariot, the children of perdition. For what happens in your court, Leo, except that, the more wicked and execrable any man is, the more prosperously he can use your name and authority for the ruin of the property and souls of men, for the multiplication of crimes, for the oppression of faith and truth and of the whole Church of God? Oh, Leo! in reality most unfortunate, and sitting on a most perilous throne, I tell you the truth, because I wish you well; for if Bernard felt compassion for his Anastasius at a time when the Roman see, though even then most corrupt, was as yet ruling with better hope than now, why should not we lament, to whom so much further corruption and ruin has been added in three hundred years?

Is it not true that there is nothing under the vast heavens more corrupt, more pestilential, more hateful, than the Court of Rome? She incomparably surpasses the impiety of the Turks, so that in TURKS very truth she, who was formerly the gate of heaven, is now a sort of open mouth of hell, and such a mouth as, under the urgent wrath of God, cannot be blocked up; one course alone being left to us wretched men: to call back and save some few, if we can, from that Roman gulf.

Behold, Leo, my father, with what purpose and on what principle it is that I have stormed against that seat of pestilence. I am so far from having felt any rage against your person that I even hoped to gain favour with you and to aid you in your welfare by striking actively and vigorously at that your prison, nay, your hell. For whatever the efforts of all minds can contrive against the confusion of that impious Court will be advantageous to you and to your welfare, and to many others with you. Those who do harm to her are doing your office; those who in every way abhor her are glorifying Christ; in short, those are Christians who are not Romans.

But, to say yet more, even this never entered my heart: to inveigh against the Court of Rome or to dispute at all about her. For, seeing all remedies for her health to be desperate, I looked on her with contempt, and, giving her a bill of divorcement, said to her, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still," giving myself up to the peaceful and quiet study of sacred literature, that by this I might be of use to the brethren living about me.

While I was making some advance in these studies, Satan opened his eyes and goaded on his servant John Eccius, that notorious adversary of Christ, by the unchecked lust for fame, to drag me unexpectedly into the arena, trying to catch me in one little word concerning the primacy of the Church of Rome, which had fallen from me in passing. That boastful Thraso, foaming and gnashing his teeth, proclaimed that he would dare all things for the glory of God and for the honour of the holy apostolic seat; and, being puffed up respecting your power, which he was about to misuse, he looked forward with all certainty to victory; seeking to promote, not so much the primacy of Peter, as his own pre-eminence among the theologians of this age; for he thought it would contribute in no slight degree to this, if he were to lead Luther in triumph. The result having proved unfortunate for the sophist, an incredible rage torments him; for he feels that whatever discredit to Rome has arisen through me has been caused by the fault of himself alone.

Suffer me, I pray you, most excellent Leo, both to plead my own cause, and to accuse your true enemies. I believe it is known to you in what way Cardinal Cajetan, your imprudent and unfortunate, nay unfaithful, legate, acted towards me. When, on account of my reverence for your name, I had placed myself and all that was mine in his hands, he did not so act as to establish peace, which he could easily have established by one little word, since I at that time promised to be silent and to make an end of my case, if he would command my adversaries to do the same. But that man of pride, not content with this agreement, began to justify my adversaries, to give them free licence, and to order me to recant, a thing which was certainly not in his commission. Thus RECANT indeed, when the case was in the best position, it came through his vexatious tyranny into a much worse one. Therefore whatever VEXATIOUS TYRANNY has followed upon this is the fault not of Luther, but entirely of Cajetan, since he did not suffer me to be silent and remain quiet, which at that time I was entreating for with all my might. What more was it my duty to do?

Next came Charles Miltitz, also a nuncio from your Blessedness.

He, though he went up and down with much and varied exertion, and omitted nothing which could tend to restore the position of the cause thrown into confusion by the rashness and pride of Cajetan, had difficulty, even with the help of that very illustrious prince the Elector Frederick, in at last bringing about more than one familiar conference with me. In these I again yielded to your great name, and was prepared to keep silence, and to accept as my judge either the Archbishop of Treves, or the Bishop of Naumburg; and thus it was done and concluded. While this was being done with good hope of success, lo! that other and greater enemy of yours, Eccius, rushed in with his Leipsic disputation, which he had undertaken against Carlstadt, and, having taken up a new question concerning the primacy of the Pope, turned his arms unexpectedly against me, and completely overthrew the plan for peace. Meanwhile Charles Miltitz was waiting, disputations were held, judges were being chosen, but no decision was arrived at. And no wonder! for by the falsehoods, pretences, and arts of Eccius the whole business was brought into such thorough disorder, confusion, and festering soreness, that, whichever way the sentence might lean, a greater conflagration was sure to arise; for he was seeking, not after truth, but after his own credit. In this case too I omitted nothing which it was right that I should do.

I confess that on this occasion no small part of the corruptions of Rome came to light; but, if there was any offence in this, it was the fault of Eccius, who, in taking on him a burden beyond his strength, and in furiously aiming at credit for himself, unveiled to the whole world the disgrace of Rome.

Here is that enemy of yours, Leo, or rather of your Court; by his example alone we may learn that an enemy is not more baneful than FLATTERY a flatterer. For what did he bring about by his flattery, except evils which no king could have brought about? At this day the name of the Court of Rome stinks in the nostrils of the world, the papal authority is growing weak, and its notorious ignorance is evil spoken of. We should hear none of these things, if Eccius had not disturbed the plans of Miltitz and myself for peace. He feels this clearly enough himself in the indignation he shows, too late and in vain, against the publication of my books. He ought to have reflected on this at the time when he was all mad for renown, and was seeking in your cause nothing but his own objects, and that with the greatest peril to you. The foolish man hoped that, from fear of your name, I should yield and keep KEEP SILENT silence; for I do not think he presumed on his talents and learning. Now, when he sees that I am very confident and speak aloud, he repents too late of his rashness, and sees--if indeed he does see it--that there is One in heaven who resists the proud, and humbles the presumptuous.

Since then we were bringing about by this disputation nothing but

